THE FINAL ROUND UP.

Hale's Finger Moves to Write.

Majority of the Delegates to Chicago Will Be Elected This Week.

High Prophecies Indicate the End of Roosevelt Is Not Far Away.

The Primary Results in Illinois May Give the Cue to Other States.

BY SUMNER CURTIS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] State conventions and State-wide primaries to elect delegates to the Republican National Convention will be held in 19 States next week. In the order some of the most important states in the Union, with respect to the manner in which the Republican choice for the Presidential nomination will be taken shape. Here is the schedule:

April 6—Louisiana convention.
April 9—Illinois primaries.
April 9—New York State convention.
April 10—Maine State convention.
April 10—Vermont State convention.
April 10—Kentucky State convention.
April 11—Michigan State convention.
April 13—Pennsylvania primaries.
April 13—Nebraska primaries.

DEMOCRATS SIDE ISSUE.

In the States where primaries are to be held under legislative acts delegates also will be elected to the Democratic National Convention. At present, however, the interest even in the Democratic side is centered largely on the terrific war for place that is waging on the Republican side with its series of fierce battles about to be fought.

Many district conventions in addition to the State-wide events are scheduled for various parts of the country and a total of 220 delegates to the Chicago convention will be chosen during the week.

It is conceded that the continuance of the Roosevelt movement as a militant force in the preliminary struggle for the Presidency depends largely on the results effected between Tuesday and the following Saturday. The eyes of all the politicians in Washington are turned particularly on Illinois, which will send to the Republican National Convention fifty-eight delegates, the third greatest number of any of the States.

EXTRAVAGANT CLAIMS.

Claims that generally would be regarded as extravagant are being made by the Roosevelt leaders with respect to Illinois. They concede only two delegates to Taft. The Taft forces here, on the other hand, declare that such claims are being exploited merely to stir up enthusiasm

TAFT HAS OVERWHELMING LEAD IN DELEGATES SO FAR ELECTED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A careful and unprejudiced canvass by the New York Herald of the political situation in the country, from Republican and Democratic sources, shows that President Taft has an overwhelming lead in the delegates so far elected and will probably be elected on the first ballot. The results of a poll of the delegates elected up to date give the following significant figures:

THE COLONEL AS AJAX.

Defies the Lightning of an April Shower and Throws a Javelin at the Heel of Lorimer.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SPRINGFIELD (Ill.) April 6.—With a dozen speeches and an encounter with a slashing April storm, Col. Roosevelt put in the day on the first half of his tour of Illinois. He made the first speech in Rockford and his last one in Springfield. Although in several towns the persons who listened did so at the cost of a drenching, Col. Roosevelt was met everywhere by crowds.

His principal speech was delivered in Springfield this evening. In it Col. Roosevelt attacked Senator Lorimer of Illinois in emphatic language. He took issue with Joseph Choate and other New York lawyers who formed an association to combat his ideas in regard to the judiciary and expressed his opinion about what he termed the "nice exclusive persons" of great wealth, who, he said, are easily frightened, "especially by the bugbear of majority tyranny."

The formation of the Lorimer-Lincoln Republican League, which is opposed to Col. Roosevelt, furnished the theme for the colonel's remarks about the Senator.

"It is an infamy and an outrage," said he, "that Lincoln, who stood for honesty in politics, as well as in every other phase of our national life, should have his name desecrated by its use in connection with Lorimer and his associates. They stand for and they typify all those evils against which Lincoln's whole life was a protest."

It was when the Roosevelt train reached Amboy that the rainstorm was at its height, but until the train drew away he remained speaking, the rain streaming down his face.

On the way to Springfield the colonel spoke in Rockford, Freeport, Polo, Dixon, Amboy, Mendola, La Salle, Winona, Minonk, Pontiac and Bloomington.

Triumphal Tour Through the San Gorgonio Pass Is Feature of Day.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BANNING (Cal.) April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The enterprising women of Banning, the town that was placed so firmly on the map when the delegates to the good roads convention at Phoenix selected the Banning route for the proposed national highway, marched into the ranks of the Ocean to Ocean Highway Association today with the first women's auxiliary corps. Headed by Mrs. C. O. Barker, who was chosen president, 100 women pledged themselves members of the newest division to be formed.

This action of the women was a complete surprise and was the feature of today's triumphal tour through the San Gorgonio Pass, where a section of the great highway is probably to be built. Miss Jessica Bird is the secretary and Mrs. George Wing is the treasurer.

This auxiliary is to be one of several thousand to be formed along the Santa Fe Trail.

BURST OF ENTHUSIASM.

The women came into line with a burst of enthusiasm which made today's run one of the most successful since The Times car was started on its organization tour.

With the sands of the desert only fifteen miles away two divisions of the Ocean to Ocean Highway Association were formed today and rousing cheers were given. The Times pilot car as it reached the edge of the wilderness.

The hood of the big car is facing the stretch of 200 miles between Banning and Yuma tonight and another 2077 members of the Highway Association have pledged themselves to build the California end of the proposed nationa lhighway.

Banning and Beaumont are on the map. Two more links in the long chain which is to stretch from Los Angeles to New York were formed today by President John S. Mitchell and Secretary J. S. Conwell.

AT BEAUMONT.

At Beaumont 501 members were marshalled into line. This division is to make the first sortie in the battle for a road to the Colorado river at the California-Arizona boundary line.

Flags and banners floated in the streets of Banning this afternoon as The Times car reached here. The reception given the officers was unique. A banquet was served at the Alta Vista Hotel and over 500 hard-headed business men of Banning joined the ranks of the road builders. Crowds thronged the streets of

WARD OF A MILLIONAIRE MAY WED AN AMERICAN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Emilie Grigsby, the ward of the late Charles T. Yerkes, who was much in the limelight during the coronation festivities last year, is back in London, staying at Claridge's.

It is understood that she has given up the idea of taking a house for the coming season. Instead of this, an apartment at Claridge's will meet her requirements. That she intends living a quiet life so far as publicity is concerned is apparent from the following signed statement given to The Times correspondent this week in response to a request for an interview:

"What I do or do not do is of no interest to anybody but myself. My life is private and utterly insignificant to the public and the only way you can serve me or them, is to ignore me. E. B. GRIGSBY."

There is a report that Miss Grigsby is contemplating matrimony, the lucky man being a well known American who has been much in her company recently.

DRAW ON ARMY STORES TO RELIEVE FLOOD VICTIMS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The War Department has ordered five officers to the flooded districts to investigate the needs of the people and to report to Washington.

Capt. H. R. Hegeman reported from New Madrid, Mo., today he would need supplies for about 1000 persons a day. He was directed to draw ten days' supplies from the St. Louis army depot. The War Department plans to buy most of the food supplies from merchants in the flooded districts. By patronizing them at a time when their ordinary trade is paralyzed, the government feels it will confer a real benefit upon the distressed communities.

Commissary-General Sharpe today placed $30,000 at the disposal of the officials in the flood districts.

The Red Cross officials are in close touch with the War Department in relief work. It is possible the organization soon may take upon itself the entire conduct of the relief work. Director Bicknell will go to the Mississippi Valley.

The Wells-Fargo Express Company today notified the Interstate Commerce Commission, in conformity with the law, that it would transport free of charge donations of tents, supplies, money, food or clothing for the flood sufferers. This applies also to government supplies.

Interruption of the mail service in the Mississippi Valley is the most serious in the history of the postal service, Postmaster-General Hitchcock said today. Scores of towns in the lower valleys are isolated completely so far as mail communication is concerned, and the situation is growing worse.

Two more important Mississippi River levees broke today, flooding a large area in addition to that already inundated as the result of the onward rush of the ever-increasing volume of water. The worst of these breaks was at St. Claire, Ark., which let the water into the St. Francis River and back into the Mississippi near Helena, Ark.

Great damage and much suffering doubtless will result. The St. Claire break already has inundated the twenty square miles near Marion. Water from the Wyanoke break is sweeping over a large sparsely-settled area.

The big levee at Golden Lake, Ark., several miles above the St. Claire break, is expected to go out any minute. For two days every available man has been helping in the hard fight against the break, but it seemed they had lost, when last night a hurry call for 40,000 bags of sand was received. Transportation conditions preclude a removal of the sand there soon.

The St. Claire levee simply crumpled away. As the break was expected inhabitants had prepared for the flood. The Wyanoke break was more sudden, and last night the breach was a mile wide.

At Reelfoot the greatest loss has been to livestock that could not be moved rapidly when the lowland dwellers were warned the levee had gone out.

The situation at Hickman was greatly improved yesterday. The Mississippi fell eight inches in twenty-four hours. Refugees still arrive there from other places, but provisions also are coming in regularly, and there is no suffering. No distress is reported from other places.

Aside from the unconfirmed report of the drowning of two children at Reelfoot, no loss of life was reported today.

After a talk with President Taft, Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, Chief of Staff, predicted today that more than 40,000 persons would be made homeless and more than 10,000 others would have to be fed as a result of the Mississippi River flood.

Gen. Wood based his prediction on reports received from army officers in the field.

President Taft sent letters to Chairman Fitzgerald of the House Committee and Senator-elect James of Kentucky today bearing on relief measures for the Mississippi flood sufferers.

"I do not think it wise to make any appropriations for the purpose of buying food and other supplies until officers reach the ground and give us some idea of the amount needed and the extent of the suffering and destitution," said Mr. Taft in his letter to Mr. Fitzgerald. "Meantime, before an appropriation is made," he continued, "the Secretary of War will not hesitate to make use of army supplies for whatever is immediately needed, and I have no doubt that he has near at hand a sufficient amount to relieve such suffering as can be relieved in that way."

The letter to Senator-elect James contained practically the same information.

"I beg to assure you," it read, "that so far as action of Congress is concerned, whatever action is taken, the furnishing of supplies by the War Department will not be for a moment delayed as soon as it is learned what is needed to relieve the people there.

Zapatistas Ambush Federal Train.

Engineer Slain by Initial Volley and a Terrific Battle Begins.

Loyal Troops Virtually Exterminated, No Quarter Accorded Them.

Passengers Are Murdered and Women Robbed Without Discrimination.

BY W. D. HORNADAY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CUERNAVACA (Mex.) April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of the most desperate and bloody engagements of the revolution which Emiliano Zapata is carrying on in Southern Mexico took place a few days ago twenty miles north of here on the Cuernavaca division of the National Railways of Mexico. Few acts of barbarity ever exceeded those which the Zapatistas committed upon the defenseless non-combatants in this fight. For many months the passengertrains running between the City of Mexico and Balsas have been attacked almost daily by bands of rebels. So common have become these assaults that the traveler upon these trains is always constantly facing death. Through all these disturbances, however, the American conductors on the line have remained faithful to their duty and have braved the dangers that menaced them.

It was left, however, for Charles F. Lossing, one of the conductors, to go through an experience and be a witness to acts of carnage which are unsurpassed in the revolution annals of Mexico. His train left the capital in the early morning of March 30. Attached to the regular coaches were two cars filled with Federal troops, consisting of forty men belonging to the Thirty-fourth Regiment, under command of Capt. Carlos Melo. Shortly after the train had left Tres Marias, a little town situated upon the summit of the mountain range that divides the Cuernavaca Valley from the Valley of Mexico, it was brought to a stop by a pile of rocks upon the track. The first intimation that it was an ambush by Zapatistas was when a volley of shots was poured into the cab of the locomotive, killing the engineer. Then began an engagement that lasted for more than an hour.

As soon as the fighting started the Federal soldiers in the coaches began detraining, firing as they reached the ground upon the rebels, ensconced behind stone fences on each side of the track. A few of the soldiers remained in the coaches firing from the windows. On the train was Paymaster Angel Carranza. He was in the baggage car, having in his possession $3000 to pay off troops in the State of Guerrero. When the attack was started he quickly put on the uniform of a baggageman and hid the money. This action on his part not only saved his life but prevented the money from being taken by the Zapatistas.

COURAGE OF DESPERATION.

The Federal troops displayed marvelous bravery in resisting the attack of the rebels. They seemed to realize from the beginning of the fight that there was no show for them to come through it alive and they fought with a courage born of the utmost desperation. Time after time wounded Federals faced the relentless fire of the Zapatistas in order to get in a telling shot.

In front of the two cars which were occupied by the soldiers was the first-class car, which was well filled with passengers, including two Americans and a number of Mexican young ladies, who were on their way to Cuernavaca to attend school.

Gradually the rebels overcame the resistance of the Federals by practically exterminating them. When the firing from the train and alongside it finally died out the rebels made a rush for the coaches, swarming over the dead bodies of their former antagonists and terrorizing still further the passengers who occupied the first-class car.

MURDER TEN PASSENGERS.

Not satisfied with having killed thirty-two of the soldiers and wounding eight so badly that they were believed at the time to be dead, the heartless followers of Zapata shot and killed without the slightest cause ten of the passengers, including two Spaniards. One of the passengers was a Mexican student who was accompanied by a younger brother. One of the rebels was in the act of robbing the youngest boy when his brother protested. Without a word the rebel turned his pistol upon the older youth and dropped him to the floor of the car with a bullet through his brain. The rebels robbed all the passengers of the money and valuables they possessed. One of the Americans was taken for a Spaniard and was about to be shot when he managed to convince his would-be slayer that he was a "Gringo." The women passengers were grossly in-

POLL RENOMINATES TAFT ON THE FIRST BALLOT.

Impartial Canvass Made by the New York "Herald" Shows that Roosevelt Is Losing Ground Fast, Notably in California, Oregon, Nebraska and South Dakota. ..La Follette Making Inroads Into Colonel's Following.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] President Taft making steady gains and apparently certain of a majority in the first ballot.

Theodore Roosevelt showing remarkable strength in some sections, but losing ground in several States.

Senator La Follette cutting into the Roosevelt following in some parts of the West.

That, seventy-four days before the Chicago convention, is the situation in the Republican Presidential battle as shown by an impartial country-wide canvass made by the New York Herald.

While the Republicans are battling for advantage the Democrats are engaged in no less spirited a contest. Speaker Champ Clark, of Missouri, is easily in the lead so far as delegates are concerned. He has seventy-one, as against thirty-four for Gov. Wilson; thirty for Gov. Marshall and four for Gov. Harmon. Unbiased reports indicate that Gov. Wilson is well in the lead of the other candidates as far as popular support is concerned.

THE WEEK'S RETURNS.

During the week just passed, President Taft added eight to his list of delegates. Mr. Roosevelt's list was swelled by four, while Senator La Follette, the feature of the week, walked, or ran, off with the entire twenty-six delegates from Wisconsin, his native State. Since he has come out of his retirement, following his recent physical collapse, many of the original La Follette men who had swung over to the Roosevelt standard, have returned to fight under his banner again. This is noticeable in California, Nebraska, Oregon and South Dakota.

The Taft men are jubilant over the La Follette activity, believing that practically every follower he gets will be one less in the Roosevelt camp.

One of the most important contests will come Tuesday when the Presidential primaries are held in Illinois. Here the lines are sharply drawn. President Taft occupies first place on the ballot, Mrs. Roosevelt is No. 2, and Senator La Follette No. 3. Politicans the country over will watch this contest with the keenest interest. Its result will finally determine the minds of most Republicans regarding the outcome of the Chicago convention.

Mr. Roosevelt won a close contest

WILSON FORCES REPEL HEARST.

Meeting Furnishes W. R. a New "Dressing."

Ex-Mayor Phelan Calls Him "Political Chameleon."

All Speakers Join in Reading Him Out of the Party.

The Woodrow Wilson ante-primary campaign began last night in Los Angeles with a very thorough dressing-down of that somewhat variable champion of Democracy, William Randolph Hearst, by James D. Phelan, former Mayor of San Francisco, who was the principal speaker at a meeting in the Walker Theater. Phelan alluded to Hearst and his element as "political chameleons."

Mr. Phelan was preceded by George S. Patton of Los Angeles, who also dressed Hearst some. Mr. Patton was introduced by Charles Wellborn, president of the Southern California Wilson League, who gave Hearst a moderate dressing. And before this Timothy Spellacy intimated that an anonymous man ought to be dressed.

The meeting was attended by about 600 men and women who were very decorous—all but one, who said he was a Clark man and who demanded that Phelan tell "how Hearst drove Tammany Hall out of business in New York." Phelan responded by stating that Richard Croker was quoted in Hearst's papers as being for Champ Clark, the Hearst candidate.

The meeting was not enthusiastic until Patton declared that a "progressive democracy had taken the progressive standard of Thomas Jefferson and placed it in the hands of William Jennings Bryan." Then the crowd broke into wild applause, indicating that, while Wilson may be all right, the heart of the Democracy still beats true to the Peerless One from Nebraska.

Alluding to Hearst, Patton said he was too late a return to the Democratic ranks and too suspicious a visitor to give advice to Democrats in this campaign.

"Wilson is against Clark in one State and against Harmon in another and against Underwood in another, but he is the same Wilson against somebody everywhere. We do not need nor want the advice being given us," said he.

Chairman Wellborn brought out the ghost of the Independence League as a basis for reproving Hearst's Democratic enthusiasm.

Phelan's address was a review of the Wilson campaign, particularly as to its difficulty in making an impression on the Democratic State Committee. He said when the name of Wilson was offered as a true progressive Democrat an element, which he called the "old machine," met secretly and sought to have California's vote tendered to Hearst. But no one at the secret meeting was willing to father this so the element decided on Harmon. It also decided to demand a "no preference" ticket of delegates so that California could be free at the Baltimore convention, unpledged to any candidate. This Phelan said was defeated by a very narrow margin and the next day the element met and found no difficulty, under the lead of M. D. Tarpey, in rallying to Clark.

This allusion to Tarpey led Phelan to say that with or without the knowledge of the Democratic candidate for Governor in 1910, Theodore A. Bell, the corporations at the last minute got behind Bell and turned thousands of Democrats away from him.

"Tarpey was chairman of the finance committee of the campaign and Tarpey is Hearst's representative; I do not know how it was brought about, but these two facts are significant," said Phelan.

He asked any one in the audience to tell him one thing that Clark stands for. He declared there is no principle that Clark is bound to. On the contrary he showed Wilson's long study of governmental problems, his support of popular reforms and popular rule, and his particular independence of any corporation backing. He told how Wilson had rebuked the bankers of San Francisco because they had used commercial credit to control political support and how he had, poor though he is and deficient in campaign sinews, refused the financial aid of Thomas F. Ryan or the support of the "interests for which George Harvey stands," when both were tendered.

CONTINUES TO SMASH ITS OWN REMARKABLE RECORD.

The World's Biggest Newspaper, "The Times," Printed More Advertising in March Than Ever Before in Its History.

Struggling Local Contemporaries, as Usual, Left Far in the Rear.

That it is impossible to stop the growth of The Times is indicated by its constantly increasing advertising patronage.

The people who depend on advertising for the sale of merchandise, real estate, automobiles and the success of business ventures generally, are thoroughly acquainted with the publicity value of the newspapers that solicit their patronage. They know by study and experience that the circulation of The Times among the buying classes is much greater than that of any other local paper. This fact is responsible for this journal's persistent, year in and year out, world-wide advertising supremacy.

In March The Times printed a grand total of 124,534 inches of advertising, including 79,113 separate "Want Ads," or 26,984 inches, and 24,055 "Want Ads" more than its nearest local contemporary.

The Times gain in March, 1912, of 19,782 inches of advertising over the same month of last year was not only greater than the gain of any other Los Angeles paper, either morning or afternoon, but during the month mentioned, this paper printed 10,690 more "Want Ads" than the two other morning papers put together.

The best test of the popularity of a newspaper among all classes of people is the extent to which its "Want Ad" or "Liner" section is used.

Judged by this standard, or any other, The Times towers above its local competitors like a giant above pigmies. It is only by using The Times advertising columns that the maximum of publicity and the greatest degree of effectiveness can be obtained at the minimum cost.

sulted and were robbed along with the rest.

After having killed outright most of the Federal soldiers the rebels put an end to a number of the wounded in the most horrible manner. When they had reveled for more than two hours in the carnival of blood the attacking party withdrew. They were seen to mount their horses and ride into the mountains.

WOMEN KNEEL IN PRAYER.

The little group of young women in the car spent the time while the battle was going on kneeling upon the floor praying. When the engagement was over they gathered wild flowers from the mountainside and strewed them upon the bodies of the dead soldiers and passengers.

Besides the thirty-nine who were killed by the Zapatistas the losses of the latter were more than thirty. Dead bodies of rebels were strewn along the stone fences on each side of the track for some distance.

Shortly after the Zapatistas had withdrawn, a freight train came up and its engine was hitched to the passenger coaches and a return trip was made to the City of Mexico. The interior of the coaches which the soldiers had occupied presented a gruesome sight. It was strewn with the dead bodies and the seats and floor were soaked with blood. The windows and sides of the car were shattered with bullets.

CONDUCTOR INJURED.

One of the pitiful incidents of the attack was the assault which one of the rebels made upon Conductor Lossing. The latter was ordered to give up his valuables, and when he protested against delivery of his watch he was struck a terrific blow upon the head by a pistol in the hand of the rebel. This blow so dazed the conductor that it is considered doubtful that he will ever recover from its effects. His mental condition has unfitted him for duty and he will soon go to his old home in the United States to recuperate from the terrible experience which he went through.

The territory all along the Cuernavaca division of the National Railways of Mexico has been infested for more than a year with bands of Zapatistas which are made up largely of former brigands. They have committed innumerable outrages upon the people of the ranches, farms and unprotected communities. The government sent large forces of troops into the turbulent region, but they have done little to better conditions. Since the decree was issued by President Madero suspending the constitutional guarantee of offenders against the nation the rebels have increased their ferocity and heartlessness towards not only the Federal soldiers but against non-combatants. Crimes of the most unspeakable nature are committed daily. The terror of the people is beyond description. The situation is growing worse instead of better.

ANOTHER FIGHT DUE NEAR CORRALITOS.

JIMENEZ (Mex.) April 6.—Fighting between the Federals and rebels may occur at any time at the same place where the two armies began the four days' battle which resulted in the Federal defeat near Corralitos two weeks ago.

A force of government troops, numbering approximately 1000, has moved north from Torreon and its advance guard is reported not more than ten miles south of Escalon. Reinforcements will be sent to the rebel force already in the vicinity of Escalon. This force of liberals is commanded by Gens. Campa and Argumendo.

Concentration of rebel forces here and south along the route to Torreon is the next point in the programme of Gen. Orozco, but it is not improbable that another battle will have to be fought in the neighborhood of Escalon. Unofficially it is reported that government troops are preparing another expedition into rebel territory from Torreon, where there are said to be some 1500 Federals and approximately the same number of volunteers.

The advance guard is said to be at Deavalza. Unless an unexpected clash with Federals alters his plans, Orozco probably will hold Jimenez as a general base of operations against Torreon for some time, since between here and there there is no suitable place, the region below Escalon being little better than a desert. Gen. Salazar will be occupied for a few days in his chase of Col. Villa, who fled from Parral towards Rosario. Villa, however, is no longer feared, since it is known that he had such a small body of troops. Thomas Urbina, formerly with him, is believed to be united with Gen. Trucy Aubert. Railway traffic with Parral will begin tonight.

PARRAL LOOTED WITH BATTLE IN PROGRESS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARRAL (Chihuahua) April 6.—In the battle between rebels and Federals, various parts of the city were damaged. The Banco Minero was burned. When the Liberals entered the city they found it completely looted.

Foreigners say the looting was done by Villa's defenders and by natives.

The loss by looting before the liberals arrived will total $400,000 as follows:

Ricaud and Company, $100,000; Fishbein Brothers, $70,000; Leonardo Garcia, $30,000; Carlos Flohr, $10,000; Jesus Soto, $30,000; Banco Minero, $10,000; miscellaneous, $50,000.

No places flying American or British flags were looted, but other flags were not respected. Ricaud is Frenchman and Flohr and Fishbein Brothers are German.

Arnulfo Martinez, a leading citizen, and his brother were murdered Thursday night, presumably by Villa's men, as their bodies were found on the street near the church occupied by Villa's men where they could not have been reached by Liberal bullets.

Homer Nush of San Antonio, Tex., was shot while passing through the street Friday, but not fatally.

The first act of Salazar was to close all saloons, destroy all liquors and throw all inebriates in jail.

KILL FORTY REBELS AND CAPTURE SIXTY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, April 6.—Forty rebels were killed and sixty prisoners taken by Federals today near Necaxa, in the State of Puebla.

Col. Hernandez, in command of the Federals, placed several rapid-fire guns so as to command the rebels' route to Necaxa, which is 100 miles northeast of here. The ambush was successful and the Federals captured much arms, ammunition and dynamite, according to reports.

Col. Nestor Pino Suarez, brother of the Vice-President, Jose M. Pino Suarez, was killed in a battle near Pericos, State of Sinaloa. He was leading 400 Federals against many rebels, of whom more than 100 were killed in the battle, while the Federals had fifty killed.

CAPITAL OPTIMISTIC OVER WAR SITUATION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, April 6.—Although admitting they still were without information tonight regarding the Federal evacuation of Parral, government officials said they were encouraged over the revolutionary situation. They appeared to regard the retirement of Col. Villa as related in Associated Press dispatches from rebel territory as far from being a severe reverse, in as much as with a small force he had been able to stand off a greatly superior force and made good his retreat. News from other parts of the republic, received at the Department of the Interior, was all favorable to the Federal army. A small engagement was reported to have occurred at Artega, near Saltillo, Coahuila, in which the Federals killed three rebels, captured several prisoners and a quantity of dynamite and ammunition, with a loss of one wounded.

Gov. Naranjo of Morelos reported trains in operation and everything quiet in that recent hotbed. He also reported that twelve of those who attacked the Mexican-Cuernavaca train March 20, killing a number of persons on board, had been executed.

Brushes with rebels, all of small consequence, were reported to have occurred within a day or two in Vera Cruz, Tamaulipas, Zacatecas and Jalisco.

Oaxaca was said to have no uprising against the government originating in itself.

The bands which were marauding in certain portions were driven out of Morelos, and were being driven from place to place by Gen. Robles.

FORMER PRESIDENT IS NOT A SELF SEEKER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VERA CRUZ, April 6.—Francisco de la Barra, who arrived here from Europe today, received delegations which came to welcome him. In an interview he said regarding Gen. Pascual Orozco's alleged proposal of himself for the Presidency, that he could not accept any post in opposition to the principles of the Constitution. He said he was not affiliated with the Catholic party. He did not announce the date of his departure for the capital.

WASHINGTON REPORTS IN FAVOR OF MADERO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 6.—With one small exception, the reported capture of Topias by the revolutionists, the general trend of reports that reached the State Department over night from its consular officers in Mexico was in favor of the Madero government.

At least three consuls, those in San Luis Potosi, Guanajuato and Zacatecas, wrote that the popular sentiment seems to be more favorable toward the Federals. The districts of Saltillo, Ensenada, and Guadalajara, where there has been more or less turbulence, are now reported to be quiet.

In Sonora revolutionists are beginning to appear and it is thought most of them have come from Chihuahua, which is the center of the rebellion. After some delay, owing to te interruption of communication, the State Department has found out there was no warrant for sensational stories that American miners at Lluvia de Oro were in danger from the revolutionists.

PULLMAN CONDUCTOR ARRESTED IN MEXICO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NOGALES (Sonora, Mex.) April 6.—James Harris, a Pullman porter running out of Los Angeles, was arrested aboard his car today by Mexican customs officials and charged with being an agent of the rebels in this State in the smuggling of munitions of war. The arrest was made after the officers had discovered secreted in Harris's car a large quantity of rifle cartridges and several rifles.

The county through which the lines of the Southern Pacific of Mexico run is alive with rebellious bands. There have been but few outbreaks so far, however.

RAILROAD MEN REJOICE.

Easter Brings to Them a Large Measure of Gladness in that It Marks End of Severe Winter.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There are no men to whom Easter brings a greater measure of joy than to railroad men. To them it means emancipation from drudgery, lessening in exposure to countless dangers and relief from suffering. This year the coming of the Eastertide will be particularly welcomed. Even veterans in the service hesitate when asked to recall a more severe winter than the one through which railroad workers have just passed. It has been marked by innumerable snowfalls, a plentiful supply of blizzards and long stretches of severely cold weather that taxed the endurance of even the most hardy. The winter of 1911-12, meant for the railways an expenditure of millions of dollars for the removal of ice and snow.

The local secretary announced that the invading army will conduct a mass meeting on the plaza and distribute literature. A peaceful session is assured by the local official.

Brakeman's Wires Get Crossed Through Train Wreck and Publicity.

[A. P. NIGHT NEWS REPORT.]

LA CROSSE (Wis.) April 6.—It was an unlucky wreck for Bert A. Bond, brakeman on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, which caught him in a smashup at Newport, Wis., two weeks ago and sent him to the hospital at La Crosse. Bond was living here with one wife. Today Mrs. Bert O. Bond, No. 2, who had heard of the wreck and thus located her husband, arrived from Burlington, Ia., and swore out a warrant for his arrest on a charge of desertion. Today's mail also brought a letter to the railroad company from a women near Quincy, Ill., who claims to be Bond's wife. Hearing that he had been killed in a wreck, she asked that his clothing and other effects be sent to her.

Senator James said the President probably later would send a special message to Congress asking the reimbursement spoken of in his letters.

SITUATION IN CAIRO.

RIVER STILL RISING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CAIRO (Ill.) April 6.—The Ohio River, which with the Mississippi River surrounds Cairo, showed fifty-four feet on the government's gauge tonight and it had a rising tendency. The conditions here, however, are believed to be more favorable than they have been since the danger mark was passed.

Reports from New Madrid, Mo., say the water fell three inches there today. The force of levee workers around the city was doubled tonight, and 100,000 sandbags were distributed for repairs in case they are needed.

There is not a dry acre on the east side of Mississippi county, Missouri, and the Mississippi River is sweeping through the country with great violence. Distress and destitution are reported among the poorer classes.

THE REELFOOT FLOOD.

THOUSANDS DRIVEN OUT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TIPTONVILLE (Tenn.) April 6.—Hundreds of refugees from the flooded Reelfoot Lake territory have gathered at Ridgeley, where there is high ground. Practically all the live stock on the lowlands of Lake county has been drowned, and it is believed two children of refugees lost their lives as they fled last night.

Five hundred persons from the northwestern counties of Tennessee, made homeless by the flood, are seeking shelter here. Comparatively few houses were swept away in the flood's rush, they report, but scores of them now are under water. Refugees arrived here in boats, riding the crest of the flood wave.

Reports that there will be a big death list in the Reelfoot territory are not credited here. While many persons have been marooned on house tops, on anchored rafts and possibly in tree tops, it is thought they will be rescued.

There are 400 refugees at Ridgeley, eight miles south of here. Shelter has been provided for the homeless in both towns. There probably will be a shortage of food and the supply of bed clothes is short.

An appeal has been sent to Gov. Hooper asking that the State help feed the refugees and that supplies be sent to the highlands, where hundreds of cattle were driven before the Hickman levee broke.

The gradual spread of the water in Lake county is seen in a recorded rise of not more than four inches in the Reelfoot Lake last night at Tiptonville. The highest point, it is expected, will be reached today.

All of Dyer county, between Lake and Dyer, Tenn., is submerged, but the people escaped, most of them, it is said, with their live stock.

Three villages in Lake county are entirely under water and have been deserted by their inhabitants. They are Hathaway, Reelfoit and Bessie.

No mail has been received at Tiptonville for seven days.

THE SNOW MELTING.

ANOTHER RISE PREDICTED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LA CROSSE (Wis.) April 6.—Heavy rains north of here and melting snow again have swelled the tributaries of the Black, Chippewa and Mississippi rivers, and another rise is coming down the Mississippi. The second flood follows closely on the first in the upper Mississippi Valley, coming within 48 hours after the waters started to reced. A rise of at least two feet is expected here by tomorrow.

FLOOD IN MEMPHIS.

DESPERATE SITUATION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MEMPHIS, April 6.—"The situation is desperate, but we are still hopeful"—O. N. Killough, president of the St. Francis levee board.

"Extremely serious, but if the weather continues favorable we may be able to prevent crevasses."—Maj. Clare S. Smith, U.S.N., corps of engineers.

That is, the Mississippi River flood situation as reviewed by men directing the fight from the Missouri State line to the mouth of White river in Arkansas, that stretch of levee bearing the brunt of the battle with the waterway today.

CAIRO SURROUNDED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CAIRO, April 6.—The river gauge registered 54 feet here this morning, a rise of .4 feet in 24 hours and the greatest height that is predicted the rivers will reach. Although the city is surrounded by water, no alarm is felt by the residents. The levees remain firm, each foot of them being watched by paid and volunteer workers.

WILL SHIP FREE.

SUPPLIES TO SUFFERERS.

General Superintendent Jones of Wells Fargo & Company, yesterday received a telegram from Vice-President Crisjeson notifying him to accept for free transportation all donations of tents, food, clothing, money or other supplies for the flood sufferers in the Mississippi Valley, when consigned to regularly-authorized charitable institutions or municipal authorities.

Talks on Te

You Must Have T

A man must have teeth.

He can go through life minus legs, eyes, ears, hair or any portion of his anatomy and live, but he must have teeth or he will die.

Teeth prepare the fuel for the man engine — and if this fuel is thrown into the firebox, which in this case is the stomach, without preparation and without being ground fine then it is going to put the fire out.

You must have teeth.

When a man or woman is so unfortunate as to lose nearly all their teeth, because of disease or dentistry, it is time to listen to what we have to say.

Delays are dangerous.

If the stomach is abused it will stand the abuse very long.

Then come the worst of all trouble—dyspepsia.

When a man's stomach goes back on him he has lost his best friend. He deserves pity. The whole trouble in nine cases out of ten is that he has not been masticating his food because he has lost his teeth. There are dark days ahead for him.

You must have teeth.

Now for the bright side of the picture.

By our Rex method of alveolar extraction, as perfected by Dr. Rankine, we supply real teeth in the place of those that are lost—and put them in the mouth so they will act and feel like nature's teeth. We won't have to file the gums or hurt you. The work is practically painless. All we need is one, two or more teeth in either jaw.

If you have had the misfortune to loose all of your teeth, we can supply you with plates that will be serviceable and comfortable.

OUR CHARGES ARE REASONABLE.

We do not ask any fancy prices for our work. Just a fair fee—a reasonable sum — just what anyone will gladly and willingly pay for high grade work such as we invariably execute. Remember that you can always consult us free of charge regarding your teeth troubles, and there is no obligation incurred by your part in so doing.

POLL RENOMINATES TOM

in the First District of Maine, giving the President by a vote of 8 to 144. But, as stated, the Roosevelt boom has lost ground in many districts and in Texas, where it was very strong early at first, it has apparently fallen flat. Republican party managers declare that the battle is practically over. They add that it would be impossible for the President to get from the 720 delegates yet to be chosen the 263 needed by him to carry out his majority of 548. If anything were needed, they say, to insure the nomination of the President, it is the re-entry into the race of Senator La Follette.

The managers of the Roosevelt boom are not at all enthusiastic over their predictions, although they are by no means given up. What remains is to be a fight to the finish. Some of them, who see nothing but defeat ahead, say Mr. Roosevelt will be nominated by the convention which he has fifty or 700 delegates on the first ballot.

ROOSEVELT'S STATUS.

Gauged by the reports, Roosevelt is farther behind the President than he was a week ago. In California he has been weakened by the La Follette coup. The Wisconsin Senator has not been figured on of late in the race out there, but since he announced that he would go to California and make a campaign a new complexion has been placed on the situation. Standing for him is Rudolph Spreckels of Oregon the insurgents are depending between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. La Follette, and President Taft appears to be in the lead.

In Nebraska La Follette has changed things around also, it is stated that he will run third in the primaries, but will greatly hurt the Roosevelt strength.

In Illinois the center of interest during the forthcoming week will be has been some drifting away from Roosevelt and to Taft. Predictions are that Mr. Taft will have three of the twenty-five districts in addition to the eight delegates-at-large. Radicals are strong for Mr. Roosevelt and he has a large following among union labor men and farmers. There seems to be little doubt that Mr. Taft will carry a majority of the districts.

In Ohio there is a merry fight, both sides claiming victory. Southern Ohio apparently is enthusiastic for Mr. Taft, while some of the Roosevelt counties look to Roosevelt. The indications are for a Taft victory in the primaries.

In Iowa Mr. Taft has been gaining. There it is largely a struggle between Mr. Taft and Mr. Cummins, the favorite son. He now has two delegates in Iowa and Mr. Taft four. The outlook is for Taft control.

Little Girls Set Adrift by Mother Are Reclaimed.

Sent to Father Who Had Long Sought Them.

Starving, Are Picked Up by Children's Society.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Stillwell children—two girls, the elder eight and the younger four years of age—found in a tent here last January half starved, and turned over to the Children's Home Society, have been sent to their father in New York, who is a prosperous man and who has searched for them for many months.

Instead of begging for bread now, the little girls will have all the luxuries that an indulgent father can think of.

It seems that the girls' mother eloped from New York with a peddler, taking the children with her to spite the father. The peddler brought them to California and treated both mother and children shamefully.

In this city, the elder girl went from house to house selling the peddler's goods, and finally, when hungry and physically exhausted, she told her story to a pedestrian, who in turn notified the police, with the result that the peddler was arrested and put in jail and the girls provided for.

Sees a Young Man Save a Girl from Drowning and Now They Are Married.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Information was received here today of the marriage in Hanford of Arthur Waltz, son of D. L. Waltz, a wealthy sheepman of this city, and Miss Berenice Johnson. The marriage was a complete surprise to the parents of both, who, however, were not opposed to the match.

The romance began in the local High School when the happy pair were in the same class. At a bathing resort near this city last summer Miss Johnson came near drowning and was rescued by Waltz at the risk of his life. After that, Cupid did effective work.

Miss Johnson left home several days ago to visit friends near Visalia and was followed by Waltz as a part of a pre-arranged plan.

Rich Portland Hotel Man Whose Disappearance Caused Sensation Sees Decree Given to His Wife.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Theodore Kruse, the rich restaurant and hotel man whose disappearance from Portland last August caused a nine days' sensation, was for the fourth time divorced today. Kruse returned to Portland last month.

In her complaint Mrs. Kruse charged cruel and inhuman treatment, and her testimony at the trial, given behind closed doors, went to substantiate her charges.

Every effort was made by court officials and others to keep the case secret, but the facts became public today. Mrs. Kruse is given a substantial cash settlement by her former husband, but the amount was not recorded.

Each of Kruse's three preceding wives obtained divorces from him on grounds similar to those of the present case.

Kruse disappeared last August just after signing up a lease for the new Carlton Hotel, and as a result lost that lease and later the Hotel Belvidere and Louvre restaurant, which he owned. He went to his parents' home in Germany, and after a time wrote to friends here, disclosing his whereabouts. His return last month was as sudden as his leave-taking.

Boy Who Sustained Injuries from High Tension Electric Wire Gets Twenty-five Thousand Dollars.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, April 6.—John Bruce Fairbairn was awarded $25,000 judgment against the American River Electric Company today for the loss of both legs and one arm as the results of an electric shock from one of the high voltage wires of the company.

A year ago last summer, young Fairbairn, who was not then 18 years old, with his father and brother and a hired man, was moving a hay-loading derrick. Effort was made to take the derrick under the power wires. Either the derrick touched one of the wires and completed a circuit to the earth through the derrick, or it came near to the wire and the current jumped to the derrick and formed a circuit. Young Fairbairn was so badly that both legs and one of his arms had to be amputated. His brother, Russell, also was burned, his injuries resulting in the loss of an arm. The case brought by Russell Fairbairn, by his guardian, against the company, for damages, has not yet been set for trial.

STATUS OF THE MARMONS.

Highest Birth Rate and Lowest Death Rate of Any People—Los Angeles Man Elected.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SALT LAKE (Utah) April 6.—An unusually high birth rate and low death rate were claimed for the Mormon people by Apostle H. M. Smith, the principal speaker at the second session of the Mormon Conference today. He addressed an audience of nearly 7000 in the Tabernacle.

"The records show," said the apostle, "that the birth rate among the members of the church for the last year was thirty-eight to 1000. While this is a higher rate than among any other people that we have a record of today, it is not high enough. We should have more children, and we should care for them."

The mortality in the church, he said, was 8.6 per cent. in the last year. To raise the birth rate and reduce the mortality, Apostle Smith urged the campaign to observe the church laws against alcohol, tea, coffee and tobacco.

With uplifted right hands the members of the vast congregation sustained the general authorities of the church this afternoon. This ceremony is equivalent to a re-election. One vacancy, that of Presiding Patriarch, was filled by the election of a Los Angeles man, Hiram G. Smith, to succeed his father, the late John Smith.

SMALLPOX CASES APPEAR.

STATE BOARD HAS REPORTS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, April 6.—Two hundred cases of smallpox have been reported in the State of California since January 1, according to figures and reports on file in the office of the State Board of Health. In the latest cases are one reported today from Berkeley, one reported yesterday from Oakland, and one reported from San Joaquin county. This is the largest number of cases reported in California in an equal length of time for many years.

FIRE MAYOR'S EFFIGY.

FROLIC IS SUPPRESSED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BURLINGAME (Cal.) April 6.—An attempt to burn in effigy Mayor Eric Lang of this town was made early today. The torch was set to a dummy closely resembling the Mayor and bearing a placard "Our Mayor" on its breast, but J. M. Kearse, a night watchman, put out the flames and chased away two masked men. He fired three shots at them, but they escaped in a buggy. Mayor Lang is president of the Good Government League, which yesterday won its fight for school trustees. His political opponents are members of the Home League. Municipal elections will be held here next Monday. The police believe they know the identity of the two masked men and arrests are expected.

La Follette's Manager Says California Executive Underwent Change of Heart in Three Days.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Walter L. Houser, La Follette's campaign manager, is in Stockton making arrangements for the Senator's appearance here after the Oregon primaries. He has held several conferences with leaders of the local La Follette Club.

Houser is very much aggrieved at the treatment the Wisconsin Senator received at the hands of Gov. Johnson. He declares that Johnson's sudden shift of fidelity from La Follette to Roosevelt presents a remarkable situation in this State and one which the Governor will find difficult to explain. He states the Governor underwent a complete change of heart in about three days, that he became hypnotized, as it were, when he recently visited Roosevelt and immediately threw down his fordmer friend in Wisconsin.

OVERCHARGE REFUNDED.

COUNTY RECEIVES CHECK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, April 6.—Upon the demand of the Gallaway grand jury, through whose expert the inroads into the county funds by the printers of Sacramento was uncovered, the H. S. Crocker Company today paid into the county treasury $546.40, which it is claimed had been overcharged the county in the printing of tax receipts for the county tax collector. A check for this amount was given to County Auditor Williams, and together with a statement from Williams that it should be placed in the general fund of the county, it was turned over to County Treasurer Curtis.

CAREFUL OF SUICIDE.

LAFAYETTE (Ind.) April 6.—Before seeking his own death by asphyxiation, James Hall protected his absent family from a possible explosion and when they returned home early today they found pinned on the front door a note, "don't strike a match." In an upstairs room was Hall's body and the house was filled with gas from a jet he had opened. His motive for suicide is not known.

DENTIST.

"He Never Hurt a Bit."

All that is keeping you away from my office is doubt.

But just so long as you are not skeptical I don't care, for an honest doubter is one who usually does some investigating.

A skeptic sticks to his unbelief.

I Don't Hurt a Bit

when extracting, filling, crowning, or restoring teeth without plates.

You may doubt the truth of this statement, but WILL YOU BE AN HONEST DOUBTER AND INVESTIGATE MY CLAIMS?

That's only fair.

If you stand afar off and say, "I don't believe a word of what Horn says"—it does us both a great injustice, for if I can do what I claim, you want my work, and I desire your patronage.

Am I right?

REOPENS CASE OF SAN JOAQUIN.

District Officer Ordered to Estimate the Cost.

Likelihood of Improvement Is More Apparent.

War Department Hearkens to Pleas of Needham.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Representative Needham is considerably elated over his success in his fight to get the War Department to reopen his case for the survey of the upper San Joaquin River, with the view of determining whether it is more valuable for navigation or irrigation. Maj. Cheney, the local engineer officer, decided adversely on the proposal to make a survey, but the board of engineers has taken the mater up at Needham's solicitation and, with the approval of the chief of engineers, has sent to Capt. Stokey a letter, saying that "before submitting its report on this subject the board recommends that the district officer furnish an estimate of the cost involved and the amount of local co-operation that may be expected in making a comprehensive survey covering the following points:

"(1.) Low water flow at various points on the section under consideration.

"(2.) Normal flow that could be expected under proper control of the present irrigation system to prevent waste.

"(3.) Relation of the volume abstracted from the river for irrigation and the volume returned through seepage.

"(4.) Cost of improvement by slack water, and by regulation with an estimate of the possible period of navigation.

"(5.) Possibility of storage and a supply from Lake Tulare.

"(6.) Present acreage irrigated with an estimate of the possible and probable irrigation.

"(7.) Cost of the improvement.

"Finally, in general, a complete investigation of the whole subject of irrigation and navigation on the San Joaquin River, above Stockton and a determination of the several questions involved, including co-operation."

TONGUELESS MAN SPEAKS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CINCINNATI, April 6.—Joseph Monague, 48 years old, had the alternative of forfeiting his life or having his tongue extirpated several days ago because of cancer on that organ. He chose the latter and today surprised the nurses and internes at the City Hospital by suddenly regaining the powers of speech after the doctors had told him he would be bereft of his voice. Physicians explain that the vocal cords are still intact and by concentrating all his energy in the effort of making these cords and the mouth perform the functions of the tongue Monague is able to articulate. In this he is being aided by the nurses, literally being taught to talk all over again.

DIES AFTER BITTER FIGHT.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 6.—Less than a week after being victorious in her fight to have her daughter Marlese admitted to the United States by the immigration authorities at New York, Mrs. Schulie Lipsitz is dead. Mrs. Lipsitz was 76 years old. She came here from Russia. On reaching New York Mrs. Lipsitz was told her daughter could not be admitted because the daughter was dumb. Weeks of worry followed, and then, as if by miracle, the girl regained her speech. Broken in health, Mrs. Lipsitz arrived in Chicago with Marlese a few days ago.

BOY HOLDS RUNAWAY RECORD

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 6.—For the seventy-seventh time in eight years, the police last night were asked to search for Raymond Williams, 13 years old, who ran away from home. Raymond disappeared for the first time when he was 4 years old. In the following seven years he departed seventy-five more times. This is the first time he had strayed away for more than a year, and his mother thought she had cured him of the affliction. "He's up to his old tricks," she told the police, "still I can see a change in him. Before he left this time, he failed to eat a big meal. That's the first time he ever overlooked such a thing."

FALSE REPORT STIRS CITY

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 6.—A story that the walls of the Illinois tunnel had caved in and that a flood was raging beneath the downtown district was spread last night by a supposed crank. The alarm, which proved to be false, caused tenants of big buildings to move hundreds of tons of merchandise from basements. A man dressed as a laborer who said he was employed in the tunnel visited several skyscrapers warning engineers. The engineer of one of the big hotels said it was the third time he had received the same warning.

CAN'T STAND HER HUSBAND.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 6.—Mrs. John Brick will go before Municipal Judge Maxwell and ask to be sent to the city workhouse for a year in order to get away from her husband and neighbors, if arrangements made at the Chicago-avenue police station last night are carried out. Mrs. Brick came to the station accompanied by her husband and told her story to the desk sergeant. The husband stood in silent approval. Brick said he would be on hand and tell the court he was agreeable. "My husband is always quarreling with me and the neighbors all agree with him," Mrs. Brick told the sergeant. "I can't stand it any longer."

WIFE IS TOO AFFECTIONATE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 6.—Too much display of affection by Mrs. John Reckinger toward her husband has brought the couple into the Court of Domestic Relations. Reckinger told Judge Goodenough that his wife was not content to caress and listen to his repeated declarations of love at home, but she followed him to his office. Not only did she interfere with his business, but her continued display of affection became "very tiresome to him, declared Reckinger. So he left her and their two children. Mrs. Reckinger asked that her husband be forced to return home. "All I can do," said Judge Goodenough, "is to see that he provides for your support and that of your children. No wife ought to interfere with her husband's business by following him around. On the other hand, a husband ought to jolly his wife as much as possible." Reckinger was ordered to pay his wife $30 a month. As he left the courtroom his wife clung to his arm.

SLEEPY JUROR ESCAPES.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 6.—John W. White, a juror in the Municipal Court, was excused from service yesterday because of his inability to keep awake during the progress of a trial. He went to sleep three times in an hour and had to be awakened by bailiffs. "Sitting here in this warm room listening to these lawyers makes me sleepy," he said.

CUPID AID IS SUCCESS

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANSAS CITY, April 6.—Forty-eight engagements and one marriage are the fruit thus far of the matrimonial guild of Father William J. Dalton, pastor of the Catholic Church of the Annunciation here, who began his work of encouraging members of his flock to wed by starting a class in matrimony three months ago. The class meets at the priest's home each week. Father Dalton said today: "I am expecting London and Kansas City to span the ocean and join hands in the culmination of a romance started a quarter of a century ago, and if the hearts that were estranged then are united now, it will mean that our efforts have been responsible for a well-known professional man of Kansas City marrying his boyhood sweetheart. I received a letter from a woman in London soon after the papers there contained an account of our venture," Father Dalton continued, "asking if I could find a man of a certain name in Kansas City. She said they had been engaged twenty-five years ago; that an estrangement had come and that he had left for America. She said she still loved him and asked me to find him for her. I found him. I am hoping soon to hear of their marriage."

CO-EDS FIND HUSBANDS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MADISON (Wis.) April 6.—That its women graduates seldom become old maids is a statement issued by the University of Wisconsin today in the new alumni directory. Of the 1037 women graduated at Wisconsin between 1867 and 1911, fully 63 or 64 per cent. have married. Most of the unmarried are recent graduates who will mate later. The figures show that 43 per cent. of the women graduates have married alumni of the same university.

ORPHANS' "HOME" RAIDED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 6.—Investigators from the State's Attorney's office last night raided the Hudson Orphan Home, took the "Rev." J. H. Hudson, a negro, into custody, and sent twenty-six children found in the institution to charitable institutions and private homes. Representatives of the Juvenile Court say they will prosecute Hudson. He is accused of having bitten and otherwise abused the children. Although he derived from $50 to $150 a day from their begging on the streets, it is charged he underfed them. Parents of the children say they believed Hudson was giving them "industrial training." In the basement of the "home" were found many brooms which the children are said to have manufactured. Clothing and other property the children had obtained in the name of charity also were found in the house.

LONG WAIT FOR NOTHING.

Federal Officials Notify Landseekers That North Yakima Allotment Will Be Made by Chance.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 6.—A vain vigil was that of the land seekers, who have stood in line in the North Yakima, Washington, land office since January, waiting the opportunity to file for irrigated fruit lands in the Tieton project. The Reclamation Service today announced that no advantage would be gained by early filing.

According to the announcement all the forty farms in the third unit at Tieton, soon to be thrown open, will be disposed of by lot. These farms are among the finest fruit lands of the Pacific Northwest, some land in the same project selling as high as $1200 per acre.

The Reclamation Service announces that all persons who file may designate the farm they want and all applications for each farm will be put into a box, shaken up and the lucky applicant decided by the drawing of a name.

STILL ON THE JOB.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NORTH YAKIMA (Wash.) April 6.—Eighteen men and women were camped before the door of the United States Land Office here, when the news was brought to them that their long vigil had been in vain. Of this number sixteen had kept their places in line since December 26. They maintained their places in the hope that the government would change the method of assigning lands and that the first to file application for homestead would win first choice of the Tieton lands.

THE REPUBLIC OF LOVE.

King Alfonso Gives an Actress a Couple of Sparklers and an Auto Like His Own.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A magnificant pair of solitaire diamond earrings sparkled in the shapely ears of the fascinating Julita Fons when she apreared on the stage of the Estava Theater in the comic opera "La Republica del Amour" (The Republic of Love). They are valued at $5000 and are intended to be a gift from King Alfonso, whose admiration of the actress is a matter of common knowledge. The jewels are the envy and despair of the fair sex, who nightly throng the Estava Theater.

Julita caused a fresh sensation by appearing in an automobile precisely like the King's fastest touring car. It is currently reported to be a gift from the royal garage.

BOSTON, April 6.—[By A. P. Day Wire.] Capt. William Daly, the last male member of a theatrical family of that name, died Thursday at his home in Reve, "Capt. Bill" was one of four brothers, who, with three sisters, were on the stage at the same time, a record, said to be unequalled by any other family. Capt. Daly had been retired from the stage for some time. The late Dan Daly, was a brother, and the late Mrs. Margaret Vokes was a sister. Another sister is Mrs. Lucy Daly Ward, wife of "Han" Ward. Capt. Daly was 55 years old.

William Dick.

NEW YORK, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William Dick, the eighty-nine-year-old philanthropist and art connoisseur, often referred to as the "father of the sugar industry," died Friday at his home in Williamsburg. Dick's estate is estimated at $40,000,000, and he was one of the largest stockholders in the American Sugar Refining Company.

JEWS WILL NOT VOTE.

Adhering to Their Doctrine on Passover, Orthodox Members Will Stay Away from Chicago Polls.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] More than 14,000 Jews will be deprived of voting at the primaries April 9, because of the refusal of the election board to allow election clerks or judges to enter booths with them to mark their ballots. It is said every orthodox Jew in Cook county will remain away from the polls.

April 9 is the last day of the feast of the Passover, which is held sacred by Jews all over the world. It is a written law of the Jewish church that during the festival no writing of any kind be done.

About two weeks ago a large delegation of orthodox Jews presented a petition to Judge Owens of the County Court praying permission to vote by proxy.

OBSERVE DEAN'S DECREE.

First Marriage to Be Performed Under Hygienic Requirement Will Take Place in Chicago This Week.

CHICAGO, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The first hygienic marriage under Dean Walter L. Sumner's requirement of medical certification will be performed in the Cathedral Saints Peter and Paul, Wednesday, April 10, when Miss Ruth Palmer will become the wife of A. W. Bode.

Both the prospective bride and the bridegroom were required by the dean to bring certificates from reputable physicians showing that they were not physically nor mentally deficient and that they had neither incurable nor contagious maladies. Mr. Bode and his bride-to-be both presented such a certificate and the bans were read. The third and last reading was today and the ceremony will be performed Wednesday, probably by Dean Sumner himself.

ILLINOIS FIGHT MUCH INVOLVED

Twelve Minutes Necessary Mark a Single Ballot.

To Count Them All Eighteen Hours May Suffice.

Contests So Confused the Forecasts Are Difficult.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The hardest fought and most involved combination of primary contests that has ever confronted the voters of Illinois will be settled Tuesday. As a result of the record-breaking number of candidates and the offices for which nominations are to be made the ballots will have the appearance of a Chinese puzzle. Democratic ballots in Cook county will be two feet six inches in length and twelve inches in width while the Republican ballots will be nineteen inches in length and fourteen inches wide. Twelve minutes will be required to mark a ballot. It is estimated that it may take as much as eighteen hours to count the ballots which will mean that the complete returns will not be available the first night.

The situation never was more chaotic, or the results more difficult to forecast. The party factions which existed at the time of the Deneen-Yates gubernatorial primary four years ago are broken up in several new ones. The old organizations in both parties have suffered from recent defeats and it is expected that none of the factional slates will go through intact.

Enactment of a preferential primary law a week ago by the General Assembly caused the Presidential contest to be the center of interest during the final days of the campaign. With Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson touring the State in special trains and the editors sounding the praises of President Taft, Senator La Follette and Champ Clark the voters have been thoroughly stirred and it is expected the vote will be representative of the sentiment of the State.

District delegates are to be selected by the Republicans in congressional conventions on April 17, while Democratic district delegates will be elected along with delegates-at-large in the State convention. Delegates to the congressional and State conventions are to be named by precinct committeemen, who will be elected directly by the voters on Tuesday.

Separate ballots have been provided for the Presidential candidates. The names of President Taft, Theodore Roosevelt and Senator La Follette will appear on the Republican ballots, while the names of Champ Clark and Woodrow Wilson will be the only ones on the Democratic ticket.

Both the Taft and Roosevelt forces are in hopes of carrying the plurality vote of the State and a majority of the twenty-five districts. It is expected Senator La Follette will get a good sized vote in many sections. On the Democratic side it is believed Champ Clark will prove the stronger candidate in the sections adjacent to Missouri. Many Chicago Democrats, who are supporting Edward F. Dunne for Governor, are with Wilson.

There are four Republican candidates for United States Senator. Hugh S. Magil of Princeton, the insurgent candidate, has the advantage of first place on the ballot. Senator Sheldon M. Cullom comes second on the ballot with Lawrence Y. Sherman, former Lieutenant-Governor and now president of the State Board of Administration, third. William Grant Webster of Chicago, a perennial candidate, who also is running in the Seventh District for Representative in Congress, is fourth.

James Hamilton Lewis is the only Democratic candidate for United States Senator. There are eight Republican and four Democratic candidates for the gubernatorial nomination. Gov. Deneen heads the Republican ballot, with Len Small, the Lincoln-Lorimer League candidate, second. State Attorney Wayman comes third, with Charles F. Hamburgh of Galesburg, fourth; John J. Brown of Vandalia, fifth; Walter Clyde Jones, insurgent candidate, sixth; J. McCan Davis of Springfield, seventh, and former Gov. Richard Yates, eighth.

Ben F. Caldwell of Chatham, Sangamon county, is at the top of the Democratic gubernatorial candidates. Samuel Alschuler is second; George E. Dickson of Will county, third, and former Mayor Edward F. Dunne, fourth. The Sullivan Democrats are divided between Caldwell and Dunne.

Mr. Oglesby is opposed by Reuben B. Tiffany of Freeport, and Kinnie A. Detwig of Lee county. Some of Governor Deneen's friends are with Tiffany for Lieutenant-Governor, although the State Executive has taken no sides in the contest. Secretary of State James A. Rose, Auditor of Public Accounts James S. McCullough and Atty.-Gen. William H. Stead all are seeking nomination on the Republican ticket.

Chester W. Church of Chicago, now a representative from the Eleventh Congressional District, is the only candidate against Secretary of State Rose. Mr. Church voted for Senator Lorimer and expects the support of many of the Senator's friends. Mr. Rose has served for sixteen years, having been elected four times.

SIOUX CITY (Iowa) April 6.—[By A. P. After several verbal clashes between leaders from both wings of the party the Wilson men bolted and held a separate convention. Each convention named a set of delegates to the Democratic State convention.

REGISTER NOW, IS CALL TO TAFT REPUBLICANS.

REPUBLICAN voters, men and women, can only vote for President Taft at the Presidential primary election May 14 if they are registered as Republicans. If they are registered without having stated their party affiliation they will be disqualified from participating in the primary, which is purely a partisan affair.

While the registration of the past survives it qualifies only those voters who stated their party affiliations before. In the last municipal campaign many thousands registered and did not state their party. Thousands of women did this. Party designation was not then required. It is now necessary.

To be absolutely sure that every Taft voter is properly qualified each should re-register and state that he is a Republican. This will have to be done anyhow for all future elections, as the law permits the registration of the past to survive only until the Presidential preference law is over May 14.

Taft voters have until next Saturday, April 13, at midnight, to properly qualify for participating in the primary election and casting their ballots for President Taft and the twenty-six delegates selected to cast the vote of California at the Chicago convention in June.

Registration deputies are at the Taft Republican headquarters, Room 323 Angelus Hotel, and at the Woman's Taft headquarters, on the seventh floor of the Merchants' Trust Building. Any voter may register at either place—preferably the men at the men's headquarters in the Angelus and the women at the woman's headquarters.

If you are interested, call the Taft headquarters at the Angelus—Home 10041 or Main 8890—or the woman's headquarters—Home A1133 or Main 6336—and they will tell you how to register or will assist in registering in any way. The women are anxious to co-operate with those Taft women who choose to give registration teas or luncheons.

SETTING STAGE FOR HOT FIGHT.

MICHIGAN REPUBLICANS LOOK FOR LIVELY CONVENTION.

Roosevelt Contingent Has Named Contesting Delegations at All Points Where Defeated by Taft. Former Secretary Newman for Temporary Chairman.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LANSING (Mich.) April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Although it is practically certain that the Taft forces will be in control of the Republican State convention at Bay City next Thursday, it is apparent that the stage is being set for the warmest political battle witnessed in Michigan in many years. Wherever the Roosevelt adherents have been beaten in the conference they have elected contesting delegations. The committee on credentials apparently will have a busy time of it, as the Roosevelt men declare they will fight to the last ditch to secure recognition.

It is planned to make Truman H. Newberry of Detroit temporary chairman of the convention. This would give the Roosevelt forces a big advantage at the very beginning, as Newberry was a Cabinet officer during the colonel's administration and is one of the leaders of the workers in Wayne county.

From the upper peninsula the delegations will be composed of Taft delegate with the exception of Chippewa county, the home of Gov. Osborn. Wayne county is expected to send a delegation that will be solid for President Taft, while Saginaw and Bay will contain but few Roosevelt votes.

In Kent county, the home of Senator William Alden Smith, the Roosevelt forces are in the majority, and the same condition exists in Jackson county, the home of Senator Charles E. Townsend.

Wayne county will have 192 delegates in the State convention, and with the largest county voting in conjunction with the upper peninsula, and the numerous districts that have already expressed a preference for President Taft, it is not thought that the Roosevelt adherents stand much chance of electing any of the six delegates-at-large.

Engrossing.

"OLD GUARD" IN CONTROL.

EMPIRE STATE CONVENTION IS FOR MR. TAFT.

Barnes Has a Programme to Disarm the Roosevelt Men and Give Them No Chance to Shoot Off Firecrackers by Withholding a Resolution to Indorse Anyone.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Whether it will be peace or war in the Republican State convention next week is a question engrossing all New York. With the "Old Guard" in control an effort will be made to put through a cut and dried programme without arousing the pugnacity of the Roosevelt supporters.

William Barnes, Jr., of Albany, has a programme laid out. He would have the convention choose four delegates-at-large, adopt a conservative platform and adjourn without any instructions to the national convention in Chicago.

At the meeting of the State committee this week there was opposition by the Roosevelt faction to the re-election of Barnes as chairman. But the other officers, who are in sympathy with him also were re-elected. This gave the Taft faction control of the party machinery.

President Butler will preside over the State convention temporarily and will deliver the "Key note speech."

Contrary to custom the approaching convention will last two days. Most of the delegates from the up-State districts are uninstructed and it is not known how much Roosevelt sentiment may develop among them. It is possible a surprise will be sprung on the convention and that the Roosevelt sentiment may get so strong as to upset some of the plans of the machine leaders.

If the present programme is carried out, no effort will be made by the "Old Guard" to pass resolutions indorsing President Taft for renomination and this may disarm the opposition. Barnes will take the stand that the platform is the important thing, and that the candidate is but an incident.

THE FINAL ROUND UP.

for the former President. Others say that the whole situation in Illinois is so complicated by the factional troubles that have prevailed the last few years as to render it impossible to make definite calculations.

Anti-Taft men here profess to believe that an Illinois victory for Roosevelt, especially if followed by other important victories during the week, will have an influence upon the southern delegates, who nominally are for Taft, but whose main idea is to be with the winner. The Taft leaders are not borrowing any trouble on this account. They declare the southern delegates are true blue and that nothing that can happen in Illinois will affect the general national result.

Maine and Vermont seem to be heavily in the control of Taft forces, despite the strong claims made by Chairman Dixon of the Roosevelt Executive Committee. As matters now stand, New England seems likely to be practically, if not absolutely, solid for Taft. In Massachusetts, where there is a preference primary, all the delegates are claimed for Taft.

THE MICHIGAN SITUATION.

Michigan is bound to create special interest next week by reason of the contest affecting delegates to the State convention. These contests are likely to result in the election of rival delegations to Chicago as the situation is understood in Washington. At one time Michigan was practically conceded to the anti-Taft forces, but the situation has changed materially during the last few weeks. The Taft forces are the regulars and the Roosevelt followers the bolters of the situation.

Nebraska is likely to supply some surprises next Saturday. Senator La Follette is there, stumping every corner and the division of anti-Taft forces between him and Roosevelt may give the State to the President. Taft surely will have some of the Nebraska delegates.

Pennsylvania may be another hot battlefield, especially if Roosevelt wins in Illinois. The Republican State leaders formerly conceded Roosevelt only six of the seventy-six members of the Keystone delegation, but Roosevelt, it is understood, has a desire to follow success in Illinois with an invasion of the second largest State.

In Louisiana National Committeeman Pearl Wight is conducting the Roosevelt fight. The State undoubtedly will send contesting delegations to Chicago, or else break all precedents. This time the Taft delegates will be the "regulars."

The Kentucky situation is rather interesting, with a hot fight put up by the "anything to beat Taft" folk. The administration forces, however, have the best of it.

Setback.

SEES DANGER IN ROOSEVELT.

CLARK SAYS STEEL TRUST IS BACK OF HIM.

Names Perkins and Munsey as the Two Stockholders Who Are Financing What the Professor Calls a Back-fire to Kill Off the "Progressive Movement."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "If Theodore Roosevelt should be elected President of the United States it would set back the cause of the national 'progressive' Republican movement a quarter of a century."

This statement was made today by Prof. H. S. Clark of the University of Chicago, who has been campaigning for Senator Robert M. La Follette, whose name will appear on the Republican Presidential ballot Tuesday along with those of President Taft and Theodore Roosevelt.

"The leaders in the Roosevelt campaign are not, and never have been, known as leading progressives," said Mr. Clark in a statement issued from the La Follette headquarters.

"If Theodore Roosevelt were a genuine progressive he would place the management of his campaign in the hands of progressive Republicans.

"The Roosevelt movement here, as elsewhere, was started and has been maintained as a back-fire to combat progressive sentiment that politicians saw sweeping the State."

YOU WILL WONDER WHAT BECAME OF ALL THAT STOMACH DISTRESS

If your stomach is sick, sour, gassy and upset now you can surely get relief in five minutes.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; your head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Diapepsin and in five minutes you truly will wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

Verbal Shrapnel.

WILSON SHOWS VITAL PUNCHES.

Gives Opponents a Touch of High Life in Illinois.

Adroitly Pays Respects to Mr. Hearst's Papers.

History Would Make Him Praise Foreign-born.

CHICAGO, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Scattering verbal shrapnel right and left, Gov. Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey arrived in Chicago tonight on the last lap of his two days' race through the State, and in four speeches placed his candidacy before Illinois voters.

The Democratic candidate for President did not mince words. He began planting knockout punches with his first speech in the station at Galesburg early in the morning, and as his special train journeyed toward Chicago he was delivering them more fiercely. By the time he reached his Chicago night speeches he had not only answered his critics but had laid bare his record to the searchlights.

Some Wilsonisms delivered during the day were:

REPRESSES CONTEMPT.

As to William Randolph Hearst's charge that he was a political infidel—"It is difficult to hold oneself back from outspoken confessions of contempt."

On "big business"—"I'm not jealous of any profits made so long as the public is served, but when the public is not served, I'm in favor of ending such business. I'm not afraid of big business. Not only that, but I believe 'big business' men who defy the law should be given a chance to reflect on their misdeeds behind the wall of a penitentiary."

In reply to Hearst's charge that Wilson is an enemy to labor—"Any man with a brain can't be opposed to labor. At the same time I'm not with labor as against any other class. I believe they should be brought together on a common basis and to a common understanding."

On Democratic and Republican standpatters—"They ought to be listed and made to go off by themselves somewhere so we can get down to business."

On the tariff he said—"Tariff revision is a joke."

On the preferential primary to be held Tuesday, he said: "Citizens of Illinois have a great and rare duty to perform Tuesday. The new primary law marks the beginning of a purifying movement in politics. It marks a real awakening. Legislative scandals such as Illinois has experienced result in the people getting their full rights and nominate and elect their own Senators."

On the charge that he is the candidate of Wall Street he said: "No true, honorable man should be tied up by promises. If I thought any single individual or individual interest was behind my candidacy I would quit."

As to the charge that the Clark, Underwood and Harmon forces have combined to beat him, he said: "There are rumors that a combination has been formed against me. It will be a great influence on the vote. If such is the case I'm not afraid of the people's verdict."

DEMOCRATS IN SESSION.

HELENA (Mont.) April 6.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] The Democratic State Central Committee, which met here today, decided to hold the State convention to select delegates to the national convention in Butter, May 29. No effort was made to indorse any Presidential candidate, and the question of the preferential primaries was not mentioned.

"Just Couldn't Wait to Take My Hat Off."

"O, O, glory, what a feelin'! Wonderful what TIZ will do for your feet!"

Just take your shoes off, and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, achy, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a TIZ bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy. They'll look up at you and almost talk, and then they'll take another dive in that TIZ bath! Yes, TIZ is life to feet!

The man or woman who says there's anything like, or as good as, TIZ never had a foot in a TIZ bath.

When your feet ache, get tired, swollen, tender or sore, just try TIZ. Your feet will just feel fine; also your corns, bunions and callouses will disappear. You'll be able to wear smaller shoes, too; your feet will keep cozy; they'll never be frost-bitten, never chilblained.

TIZ operates under a new principle, drawing out all the poisonous exudations that make feet sore, corny and tired. There's nothing else like TIZ, so refuse any imitation.

TIZ, 25 cents a box, sold everywhere, and recommended by all drug stores, department and general stores. Write today to Walter Luther Dodge & Co., 1223 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., for a free trial package of TIZ by return mail, and enjoy the real foot relief you never felt before

McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure

Chicago, Ill., April 8, 1894.
Mr. W. F. McBurney,
Los Angeles, California.

Dear Sir: It affords me pleasure to testify to the efficacy of your Kidney and Bladder Cure. I have been troubled with my kidneys and bladder for over four years. I have been treated by the best physicians of this city during that time. (I mention two who stand at the head of the profession viz.: Dr. C. A. Purdy and Dr. Frank Walla, the latter being my son.) I regret to say they did me no good. I was advised to spend the winter in your glorious climate and try the ocean baths. I visited San Diego, Santa Monica and Santa Barbara, but received only temporary relief from the baths. On the night I left home I got a bottle of your medicine. The first dose did me good, and I was well when I reached home, and I can say in conclusion that I am grateful to you. If this letter is of any use to you, use it.

The Greatest Thing in the World

(An Easter Sermonette)

by

J. Bilsland

I hold the light of the Universe.

¶ My torch burned the black mantle of ignorance that hid Life's secrets from you.

¶ I brought you the keys to the mysteries of health, happiness and progress.

¶ I showed you that fear, folly, and intolerance are foolish.

¶ I am greater than the Bible, yes I took the Bible from the hands of a select few and gave it all to you.

¶ I gave you free libraries, free schools—the store houses to the records of the past.

¶ I brought you Ambition, Advancement, Civilization and Information—

¶ —the Telegraph, Telephone, Wireless, Newspaper, Magazine, Locomotive, Steamship, Books, Music, Art, Respect for yourself, and System.

¶ If it were not for me, you could not have your morning's "Shredded Wheat," and read over it the exact words used by the greatest man on the other side of the world a few hours before.

¶ If it were not for me, you would never know there is "another side" of the world—neither would you be on this side of it.

¶ I at last buried a phrase coined sixty generations ago by Julius Caesar, as he strode across the Roman Forum—"Caveat Emptor"—(let the Buyer beware.)

¶ I gave you redress for SHORT Weight, Count and Quality.

¶ I raised Business to a basis above Barter and Haggle to HUMAN SERVICE between friends who have confidence in each other.

¶ I gave you the right to demand that you have the privilege to return whatever you buy— —if it doesn't come up to Representations or your expectations.

¶ I brought the first Advertising—and now HONEST Advertising—which you believe in—and which compels the manufacturer to give you better, and better merchandise—at a lower percentage of profit with the increased output—place his name on his merchandise—back it up—pay employees better wages, and give them shorter hours, and a happier, healthier, cheerier environment to work in—and bring what were Luxuries for the rich ten years ago, within the reach of every laboring man.

¶ If it were not for me, Hart Schaffner & Marx could never make the kind of all wool, guaranteed hand tailored, splendid clothes they do to sell at $18 which 20 years ago would have been, not only a bargain at $50, but impossible from a tailoring point of view. (Nor would 3,000,000 men be wearing these clothes.)

—Stetson their famous Hats.
—Manhattan their Shirts.
—EVERWEAR their guaranteed Hosiery.

¶ Nor would there be "the Store with a Conscience"—an institution of Six Busy Stores with the phenomenal Purchasing Power it has—the guarantee it makes on all merchandise—the service it offers you—the reputation it enjoys—and the record of from nothing, increasing in a natural way 20 per cent. faster than the city of Los Angeles for the past 18 years.

¶ Nor would there be a city the size of Los Angeles.

¶¶ Who am I?

¶¶ I am the invention of the PRINTING PRESS—my heart throbs are the heart throbs of progress in Civilization—Commerce—and Happiness.

¶¶ I am the resurrector of Progress—the greatest thing in the world.

¶¶¶ And this is the Easter message from "the Store with a Conscience."

Thawing Out Mysticism.

ADD BIGAMY TO CHARGES.

Annulment of Divorce Leaves Tufts in Hot Water.

Attorney Digs Up Evidences of Crooked Work.

Actions of "Church of God" Leader Investigated.

Gorham Tufts, Jr., founder of the East Indian cult known as the "Church of God," and posing as a master of strange schools of mysticism, who is in the County Jail facing a series of indictments in connection with misappropriating $100,000 of his wife's money, may now be accused of bigamy.

A decree of divorce obtained by the missionary-financier from Mrs. Tufts No. 1 was annulled yesterday in Cook county, Illinois, on the ground that it was obtained by deception, fraud and misrepresentation. Following the decision, information was forwarded to Sheriff Hammel by the Sheriff of Cook county.

FLEECED THE NATIVES?

Attorney Boland, who has been here for months investigating the accused man's life in India and other oriental countries, yesterday received information from representatives in Calcutta, tending to show that Tufts fleeced natives, Englishmen and missionaries out of large sums of money through ingenious financial manipulations.

Boland says that Tufts induced Mrs. Tufts, a wealthy Englishwoman, to give him $30,000 to finance one of his pet corporation schemes in India and today she is wandering about that country without friends or protection. It is alleged that she has demanded an accounting from Tufts on numerous occasions, but that he always refused.

Tufts was supposed to own a tea estate in India which he secured from an English gentleman but which, it is reported, he did not pay for. The matter is now tied up in the India courts. Tufts even embarked in a furniture factory enterprise in the Himalaya Mountains and interested scores of foreigners in his project, which failed.

Boland has a letter from one of Tufts's missionary associates stating that he never was a religious worker but that he was practicing high finance in India with other people's land and money.

It appears that Tufts brought suit for divorce in Cook county in December, 1909, against Mary Housekeeper Tufts, in which he swore that she abandoned him on August 12, 1904, in India. The complaint asked for the custody of their three children.

SAY'S FALSE.

On this evidence Judge Dupuy granted him a divorce giving him the custody of the three children, Allis Warner C. and Gorham Fletcher Tufts. Boland says evidence secured by Burns operatives in his employ shows that Tufts accompanied his wife to Liverpool in July, 1906. Upon arriving there he took her to a lodging-house, excused himself for a short time, and she has not seen him since. She learned the following day that he had sailed for America and she was left penniless. She remained a few days in the boarding-house and was taken ill and sent to the poor house and from there to the Ranchili Insane Asylum where she remained a year. She had been taken to the asylum because she had a habit of praying aloud, which one of the customs of the "Church of God" which her husband founded.

In June, 1909, her aunt, Miss Lawrence, of Washington, sent her passage money and the first knowledge she obtained that Tufts had divorced her was through a letter from a friend.

"KNEW IT ALL THE TIME"

"Tufts knew all the time where she was in England," said Boland, and wrote her a series of letters promising to help her financially.

Tufts is still in the County Jail in default of $20,000 bonds.

St. Louis Doctor Tells American Pathologists That the Day of Its Efficacy Has Dawned.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Nonchalently relating how he had proved that a preparation of hydrophobia virus was safe to give to a human being "because I used one thousand units of it upon myself when I was accidentally infected in the laboratory," Dr. D. L. Harris of St. Louis today told Dr. L. Harris of St. Louis today told to the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists of experiments which prove without a doubt that a successful immunising preparation for rabies can be prepared, and whose inoculating powers will last at least five months.

Dr. Harris has proven that his preparation of virus can be carried around in sealed tubes and be employed much in the way of the usual toxic extract used in other diseases, thus placing a Pasteur institute for the cure of hydrophobia at the command of every country doctor who cares to procure the extract.

Gorham Tufts, Jr.,

Whose decree of divorce from Mary Housekeeper Tufts, his first wife, was annulled by the Superior Court of Cook county, Illinois, yesterday, on the grounds that he obtained it by fraud and misrepresentation. He may now have other troubles than the charge that he misappropriated more than a hundred thousand dollars of his second wife's fortune.

SAN DIEGO BILL PASSES.

Lower House in Arizona Adopts Measure Creating Exposition Commission.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) April 6.—The bill proposing a commission to represent Arizona at the San Diego exposition in 1915, passed the lower house of the Arizona Legislature today. The measure has already passed the Senate, and now goes to the Governor.

The house also passed the Senate resolution ratifying the income tax amendment to the Federal constitution, which the Senate acted favorably upon a week ago.

The attempt of the followers of Gov. Woodrow Wilson, in the assembly, to put through a resolution asking him to address the Legislature, resulted in a stormy scene for a few moments. So many adherents of Speaker Clark jumped to their feet to offer protests, that Speaker Bradner immediately ordered the resolution referred to the resolutions committee.

On Monday the recall amendment and the equal suffrage amendment will be matters of special order. The recall resolution has passed both houses, but was recalled by the Senate to correct a few minor details. It is expected the amendment will go to the Governor on Tuesday. After the measure had been in the house several days, the Senate learned that it had incorporated in the bill only the proposition of submitting the amendment to a vote of the people. It is understood the Senate will reenact the measure with an amendment setting forth the approval of the judiciary recall principle which was left out of the bill originally.

ALLIS-CHALMERS INVOLVED.

Receivers Appointed for Big Machinery Company By Federal Court on Application of Creditors.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) April 6.—Receivers were appointed today for the Allis-Chalmers company by Judge Sanborn of the United States District Court. The receivers are D. W. Call, president of the company, and Gen. Otto B. Falk of this city, a manufacturer and president of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association.

The appointments were made on the application of the First National and Wisconsin National banks here, both creditors of the company, and W. W. Nichols of New York, a bondholder and stockholder.

The present capitalization of the Allis-Chalmers company consists of $15,000,000 bonds, of which $11,148,000 are outstanding; preferred stock, $25,000,000, of which $16,150,000 is outstanding; and common stock, $25,000,000, of which $19,820,000 is outstanding.

Physically the company's plants are said to be a magnificent proposition, but there never has been business enough to keep them running full. One of the great drawbacks to the company has been its lack of working capital. The company has expended something like $10,000,000 for new construction and the value of its plans and other assets are estimated at around $20,000,000.

FILE BRIEF FOR FRICK.

Pittsburgh Attorneys Appear for Him in Union Pacific Merger Before the Supreme Court.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The earnestness with which the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific merger suit is to be fought in the Supreme Court of the United States became apparent today when D. T. Wathon and H. F. Stambaugh, both of Pittsburgh, filed a brief in behalf of Henry C. Frick, the steel magnate, and one of the defendants.

The attorneys claim that the charges against Mr. Frick narrow down to the fact that he owns stock and is serving as a director of several of the defendants' railroads, "which are to some extent competitors."

Sixty-second Congress.

CHARGE STARTS BITTER DEBATE.

Several House Members Take Up Randell Statement.

Resent Aspersions Cast Upon Their Integrity.

Texas Congressman Says He Meant No Reflection.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 6.—One of the most acrimonious debates heard in the House this session was precipitated today, when Representative Randell of Texas (Dem.) explained that he meant no reflection on members when he intimated in his speech of Thursday that a majority of the members of the House were engaged in employment that his anti-corporation retainer fees bill would stop. Applause greeted the replies of Representatives Edward and Bartlett of Georgia; James of Kentucky; Clayton of Alabama, Democrats, and Hamilton, of Michigan, Republican, who virtually declined to accept his explanation.

Mr. Randell insisted that his language as it appeared in the Record could not be construed either as insulting to members or as questioning their integrity. He referred to the printed record and read the statement that had aroused criticism.

"This is what I said," explained Mr. Randell, "and I submit that nothing in it reflects on any member. I have no doubt that an investigation would show that a majority of the members of this House and of the Congress are engaged in employments today which the passage of that bill would stop. I believe it is true that nine-tenths, or perhaps a larger percentage of those employments are absolutely innocent themselves, but the situation is there. There is the connection of the agent with his principal. There is the connection of the attorney with his client."

Mr. Edwards called sharply on Mr. Randell to produce his proofs of any such illegal employment of members, and to name both the members and the corporation they served. He was applauded when he resumed his seat.

Representative James declared sharply that the Texan's explanation did not explain and declined to accept his contention that his statement had been misinterpreted.

Mr. Garner of Texas, likewise declined to accept the construction his colleague sought to place upon his words.

Representative Clayton, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, before whom the bill was pending, made a vigorous reply to Mr. Randell's insinuations and characterized his measure as "ridiculous."

"The rules of this House," he said, "and probably an undue regard for the feelings of the gentleman from Texas, prevented the committee from making a statement concerning this matter. Let me tell you what is the matter with this House; it is not that members are crooks or dishonest men; but that there are too many cowards. We all vote for measures of doubtful propriety, because we are afraid the folks back home would misunderstand."

Most all the bill's provisions, he said, were to be found in existing law.

An effort by Representative Henry of Texas, chairman of the Committee on Rules, to make reply to Mr. Randell was defeated by the desire of the House to close the incident. He gave notice, however, that he would discuss it at some future time.

DEAFNESS

SUCCESSFULLY TREATED. By the Simplest Method Yet Discovered.

Ninety-five per cent. of the cases of deafness brought to our attention are the result of chronic catarrh of the throat and middle ear. The air passages become clogged by catarrhal deposits stopping the action of the vibratory bones. Until these deposits are removed relief is impossible. The inner ear cannot be reached by probing or spraying, hence the inability of specialists to always effect cure. Neither can ear drums cure deafness. But there is a scientific treatment for deafness and catarrh which is demonstrated every day by the use of Actina. The vapor generated in the Actina passes through the Eustachian tubes into the middle ear, removing the catarrhal obstructions and loosens up the bones (hammer, anvil and stirrup) in the inner ear, making them respond to the vibration of sound. Actina has also been very successful in relieving ringing noises in the head. We have known people afflicted with this distressing trouble for years to be entirely relieved by a few weeks use. Actina has also been very successful in the treatment of hay fever, asthma, bronchitis, sore throat, weak lungs colds, headache and other troubles that are directly or indirectly due to catarrh. Actina will be sent on trial, postpaid. Write us about your case. Our advice will be free as well as a valuable book—Prof. Wilson's Treatise on Disease. Pianos Damaged in Blizzard Wreck

To Be Sold at Once Regardless of the Enormous Sacrifice Involved.

Railroad Takes All Responsibility for Loss

Everybody knows about the great wreck of the blizzard-bound train coming to Los Angeles loaded with pianos. Everybody is talking about the sensational prices now being quoted on pianos of the very finest workmanship. But not everybody realizes that this train contained nothing but the best pianos made in America today. Mr. Eilers had gone into the great Eastern piano markets and had bought their finest instruments from scores of the most famous piano and player piano makers.

Some of these magnificent instruments were wrecked beyond repair. But most of them were very slightly injured. Scratches, checks, slight mars on highly polished surfaces were the extent of the damages in the majority of cases. We guarantee to repair these pianos so that will be absolutely as good as new, and so that no one but an expert could detect any flaw in them whatsoever. And in their tone and action there will be none.

WE HANDLE ONLY THE BEST pianos in their respective grades, and no other kind was on the wrecked train. We represent none but the most responsible manufacturers, and we are satisfied only when we know we are giving more money-value to purchasers than anybody else can. Our facilities to do this are now better than ever. "BETTER PIANOS FOR LESS MONEY" is our guiding rule.

WE ARE GRATEFUL to the people of Los Angeles for the liberal patronage they have given to us during this big sale. With better facilities this week for handling the crowds of enthusiastic buyers we can promise even more to piano buyers than it was possible to give last week.

Slightly Scratched Now $144

Several Special Designs at Less Than Half

In this big shipment were half a dozen pianos, made-to-order after special designs, for some of the finest homes in the country. We have remaining one $1200 art grand, top slightly checked, for $534; one $1150 special upright, front panel cracked, $312; one $1250 player piano, scratched, $648.

NAME YOUR OWN TERMS

Every Piano goes at once regardless of cost

We will make it an object to you to pay cash for these pianos, but if you are unable to do that bring $50 and choose your instrument. If that is too much, bring $20, or bring $10, or bring $5. Every instrument in this store has got to go at once. The Railroad Company pays the loss. If you are unable to pay any more, simply pay the cartage and take them away. Use them free for a couple of months. The railroad says they must be moved out of here at once.

End Marred Now $125

If You Ever Expect to Own a Good Piano, Here's Your Chance ACT NOW!

We are making prices now on instruments of the highest grade, which will make it impossible for other dealers to sell pianos while we are holding this sale at the expense of the railroad company.

We are absolutely determined to put a grand, upright or player piano into every single home in Southern California that needs one. But, even shipping pianos as we are, at the rate of a score a day, we find ourselves absolutely compelled to sell more pianos in order to close out all damaged instruments at once, and we have, in consequence, cut prices more drastically this week than ever before.

Notable Tribute to Memory of Maj. Henry T. Lee.

Honors seldom accorded any layman in the church characterized the funeral of Maj. Henry T. Lee, yesterday afternoon, at St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral.

The full choral service with a vested choir was given while the bishop and nearly every clergyman in this Episcopal diocese participated in the services.

One of the most distinguished gatherings of prominent men ever seen in Los Angeles assembled to pay the last respects to the dead.

There were men who had been with him on the "ridge" at Gettysburg when Pickett's terrible charge thundered up the hill upon their division; there were other men who fought the long, bitter legal fight that gave Los Angeles its water system; other men who had been his companions in the California Club, and at the jinks, and the intellectual feasts of the Sunset Club, his colleagues of the Bar Association and his fellow music lovers of the Ellis Club.

That gathering bore striking testimony to the varied activities of Maj. Lee.

PRAYER SERVICE.

The services began with a brief prayer service at the residence of the family, No. 414 West Adams street. Only the family and most intimate friends were present. The heavy, black casket was almost buried in floral pieces of the most exquisite design, while across the top was draped the Stars and Stripes—the fitting shroud for a soldier.

The body was then carried to the Pro-Cathedral, the family and eight of the active pallbearers attending.

As the casket arrived at the church, a procession was formed at the diocese offices and entered the edifice in the following order:

First came the bishop and the vested choir and the staff of clergy; then the rectors of nearly every Episcopal church in the diocese. Maj. Lee was accorded this undsual honor as the chancellor of the diocese.

THE PALLBEARERS.

Then came the following active pallbearers, with the body: George H. Wigmore, Geoffrey O'Connell, Bonner Richardson, Walter M. Munday, John Elliott, Jr., L. G. Garnsey, Raymond Stephens, Walter L. Allen, Merrick Reynolds, Jr., J. R. Pinkham, Hayes Macneil, E. D. Lyman, Edward Johnson, N. W. Howard and Harry Carr.

Following the bier came the following honorary pallbearers: Capt. H. E. Osborne, Frank Burnett, James Gamble, Thomas R. Bard, Mark Sibley Severance, J. M. Elliott, William Mulholland, Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, Judge Walter Bordwell, Maj. E. F. C. Klokke, J. R. Scott, Albert M. Stephens, James Slauson, Henry O'Melveny, C. A. Sumner, J. Shankland, Judge J. W. McKinley, Dr. E. R. Smith, Joseph O. Koepfli, Spencer Smith, Dr. A. C. Rogers, Mayor George W. Alexander, William J. Washburn, Dan McFarland, Lyman Stewart, W. B. Mathews, J. C. Merrill and Leslie Hewitt.

THOSE IN LINE.

In order came the vestry of the church, the members of the Public Service Commission, Companions of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, a delegation from the G.A.R., members of the Bar Association, the Chamber of Commerce, Sunset Club, Ellis Club, California Club.

The choir was augmented by some of the best singers in the Ellis Club and the services were memorable for their beauty and dignity. Bishop Johnson and Archdeacon True officiated.

At the conclusion of the services the active pallbearers, the bishop and two representatives of the family accompanied the body to Rosedale Cemetery, where it was cremated.

ROOM FOR DAMBS, ALSO.

Survival of the Fittest Would Only Leave Wolves, Says Dr. Jordan in Address.

"Social Darwinism," which would select only the physically fit to survive and only the superior of races for continuity, is not approved by Dr. Jordan of Stanford. There is room in the world, he said to the Academy of Sciences at Blanchard Hall, yesterday afternoon, for a hundred lambs to one wolf, and gentleness is quite as important as brute strength.

Prejudices against races, Dr. Jordan considers to be stupendous stupidity. In his opinion the only process by which a nation's standards could be lowered would be a preponderance of the wrong kind of immigration, the wholesale exodus of its best blood through immigration and the removal of the lid in the social and moral sense.

He thinks that war is an enemy to the species in that it sends the best types out for slaughter and leaves the least fit at home to perpetuate the race.

In discussing heredity, Dr. Jordan was most optimistic. Children, he insisted, do not carry over the surface qualities of their forbears, but only their potentialities. The whims, experimental idiosyncracies and special developments of parents count for nothing to their children except inasmuch as they express certain root traits.

The test of each man is his own development of unit qualities. The only originality there is in the individual is the peculiarity of combination. Nature breaks the die with each separate act of creation. No two germ cells are alike and no two persons are similar. After a man realises that the material he has to use is subject to his own choice of elimination and application he begins a revision of self which amounts to yet another creation.

Modern life demands mastery of its complications and these multiple evidences of material progress will ever increase. Intensification of individual powers, therefore, lies in rational correspondence with all that is outside of the individual. Men must stand on the shoulders of the great who have gone before if they would obtain mountain-top views of existence.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box means a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

SAY RAILROADS MAY BRING BUT HALF WAY.

President of the Rock Island Predicts Break in Overland Freight Transportation Upon the Opening of the Panama Canal if Interstate Commerce Commission Should Lower the Present Rates.

THAT the Rocky Mountains will be the dividing line between steel rails and the Pacific Coast—meaning that the roads coming from the East will not transport freight farther west than Denver when the Panama Canal is opened—was the cold-storage prediction of Henry N. Mudge,, president of the Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, who arrived in Los Angeles and registered yesterday at the Alexandria.

This prediction of President Mudge is contingent on many things that may or may not come to pass. The president of the Rock Island did not appear overly optimistic in regard to his prediction.

That the Panama Canal is destined to take at least twenty per cent. of the present traffic away from the transcontinental roads, and that Los Angeles is to become one of the great ports of the world, was vouchsafed by President Mudge, but he declared that the canal could not wield a club over the railroads, and that if it did, the railroads would simply retaliate by making their terminal points the first city east of the Rocky Mountains, which would mean Denver.

President Mudge declared that he was not predicting, in any way, disaster for anyone, but he asserted that the present freight tariff, canal or no canal, cannot be lowered.

SAYS COULDN'T COMPETE.

"If they are lowered," said Mudge significantly, "then the railroads cannot carry freight to the Pacific Coast."

Asked what was meant by this statement, Mudge declared that if the Interstate Commerce Commission made freight rates any lower in the West, it would be impossible for the railroads to compete with the canal.

"While there is a wide and diversified opinion regarding freight rates at the present time," said Mudge, "any railroad man will tell you that rates for hauling cannot be lowered between this coast and the East. The railroads at the present time are making little or no money on the long coast hauls. The rates, in some instances need revising. For instance, in some cases, there is too much charged for the hauling of a certain kind of freight, but on the other hand there is too small a charge for freight of a certain class. At the present balance, the railroads can barely maintain an even schedule. That is, they just about pull out with a small margin of profit. The cost on some freight should be reduced, but on the other hand, the cost on other freight should be increased."

Mudge declared that the Panama Canal will take from the railroads the great bulk of the heavy traffic in freight which weighs a great deal, but which produces little in the way of transportation charges. He intimated that the railroads may be able to stand this loss in traffic, but that they could not stand a cut in their present rates.

"We would rather give up—in fact all the roads would have to give up their traffic to the Pacific Coast—rather than consent to a decrease," said the head of the Rock Island.

Mudge stated that the only benefit that would accrue to the railroads through the canal would be coast traffic.

By coast traffic he meant that the cargoes which would come into Los Angeles and other ports in California would have to be transported to the interior, and that in this way the railroads would benefit.

LOS ANGELES GREAT PORT.

"Los Angeles will undoubtedly be a great seaport," said Mudge. "If things are adjusted equably, then the railroads can live and the Panama Canal can also be a great blessing to the people on this coast."

Mudge did not express any opinion regarding ship subsidy, saying that he would leave that to the people at large. He said, however, that he did not believe that the United States was obliged to grant a subsidy, as the canal would take care of that part. He said he is in favor of making all ships, American and others, the same rate for passing through the canal.

Regarding the extension of the Rock Island lines into California, Mudge said that so long as the system continues to have friendly and advantageous connections with the Southern Pacific, it will not seek a direct line into California.

Of the Rock Island Railroad, who makes dubious predictions regarding overland freight traffic after the opening of the Panama Canal.

Strange Discovery.

BURIED TWO SCORE YEARS, IS PERFECTLY PRESERVED.

SANTA BARBARA, April 6.—Buried for forty-one years, the body of Pedro Mazzini was exposed to the view of relatives, who declared that it had not changed a particle, every feature having remained the same as the day the body was placed in the casket.

The grave was disturbed as the result of a request made by Mrs. Margaret Mazzini, who before her death three days ago said she wanted the remains of her husband placed in a small box—supposing they had reduced to ashes—and her own body laid to rest in his coffin with his ashes at her side.

When the grave was opened in the presence of the five surviving children, an unexpected and surprising condition was found. The body of Mazzini, which had been buried in an air-tight steel casket, was in a perfect state of preservation. The children saw the features of their father as perfect as the day the body was laid away in 1871. Even the garments showed no wasting.

As a result of the find, the children were unable to carry out the expressed wish of their mother and they secured a vault in which her casket was placed. Mr. Mazzini died on his fiftieth birthday following an operation. The five children who gathered at the old grave yesterday were Mrs. A. N. Luker, Mrs. Simeon Foxen, Mrs. E. E. Arellanes, Antonio and Angelo Mazzini.

PLAN FESTAL OBSERVANCE.

Monrovia Will Spew Out Its Political Bile and Unite in Big Birthday Celebration.

MONROVIA, April 6.—Of secondary interest, for the time being, to the election campaign which has no local precedent for virulence, the festive observance, May 17, of Monrovia's twenty-sixth birthday is being skillfully planned by President Neelands and Secretary Krëmer of the Merchants' Association and members of the various committees of which the chairmen are John P. Dunn, W. P. March, F. A. Slick, W. J. Bailey, M. L. Hutchinson, J. A. Fraulob, Clyde Daniels and W. G. Black.

After the election, the antidote of necessary co-operation for the success of the carnival will smother in loyalty the factional strife and personal antagonism engendered in the municipal contest just drawing to a close. However vigorously the hatchet is wielded in partisan disputes is is always religiously buried and forgotten in a common cause and for this reason, if for no other, the promoters of the May festival are impatient to see election day enrolled among the "has beens."

In general intention, the festival is designed to promote closer relations with tributary and adjacent districts and with neighboring cities. All places of business except such as conduce to the entertainment of guests will be closed during the day, which will be devoted to merry-making in a happy combination of the "dolce far niente" of Southern Europe and the vigorous pastimes of Anglo-Saxon traditions.

The feature of the morning will be the royal pageant of the May queen reviewing her possessions from the eminence of a floral throne escorted by court retainers and flower-decked chariots. Marshal of the day and of the parade, W. N. Monroe, the city's founder, gray and time-scared and gentle, will play the role of prime minister to her youthful majesty.

The elimination contest for the queen will continue until April 20, when the five leaders will have been determined by popular vote. From that date until May 6 the election of the queen will continue. It is now proposed to hold the coronation ceremony from the noble approach to the library in Library Park, on the evening of May 16.

In the election of the queen each person is entitled to five votes in the preliminary and ten votes in the final contest. The elector pays a small sum to register each ballot and the proceeds thereof will be used to help defray the expense of the celebration.

Plans as to music and other forms of entertainment have not been worked out in detail but will soon be announced by the chairman of the several committees. In keeping with its customary liberal policy, the Pacific Electric, it is understood will grant for the dates special round-trip rates from Los Angeles and Pasadena and beach cities.

In the election of a School Trustee yesterday Monrovia women exercised their newly-acquired franchise for the first time and polled about one-half of the 603 ballots cast. Of the candidates Dr. L. D. Remington, who was the administration choice, polled 229 votes, W. L. Gaines and Norman E. Smith, "progressive" candidates, polled 139 and 35 votes respectively.

WOMAN ACHIEVES VICTORY.

Sierra Madre After Thoroughly Trying Out Male Gender Turns to Lovely Woman for Relief.

SIERRA MADRE, April 6.—Mrs. H. G. Flint was elected trustee of the Sierra Madre School district at yesterday's election, receiving 106 votes to 28 cast for Dr. L. L. Krebs. What had promised to be an exceedingly apathetic election developed into a spirited contest, even though it was somewhat one-sided.

There has been a strong sentiment for several years in favor of having a woman on the local school board and those who inclined to that idea worked vigorously with the result that the largest vote was cast which has ever been recorded at a school election here. Mrs. Flint is the wife of Cashier Flint of the First National Bank and is generally regarded as well qualified to fill the position. She succeeds Howard Hill who was appointed to fill a vacancy a year ago and declined to run again. It is reported that another member of the school board expects to resign soon and there is a movement on foot to have Dr. Krebs appointed as his successor.

NEWS BRIEFS.

City Attorney Bridges has presented his resignation to the city trustees. His successor will not be appointed until the formation of the new board of trustees following the municipal election next Monday.

Practically every organization and most of the society ladies in Sierra Madre are working zealously to make a success of the second annual Flower Festival to be given April 18, 19 and 20. The festival is held under the auspices of the Woman's Club at their club house. A large tent will also be erected to house the floral exhibits. In spite of the handicap caused by the lateness of the rainy season the festival committee hopes to have a very creditable showing. The festival committee is headed by Mrs. William J. Lawless, and the secretary is Miss Hersa Lea, a sister of Gen. Homer Lea. C. W. Jones, J. W. Kays and F. D. Moote represent the Board of Trade and city administration on the committee and Mrs. L. E. Steinberger is an additional representative of the Woman's Club.

Intercollegiate Series.

CALIFORNIA WINS FROM STANFORD IN GOOD GAME.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERKELEY, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] California won the second and deciding baseball game of the twentieth intercollegiate series from Stanford this afternoon in a well-played game on California Field. The final score was 3 to 1.

It was the best team that won. When the California players secured a one-run lead in the first and made it two in the second, they were never in danger. A much-questioned decision in the second inning saved the Cardinals from having another run chalked up against them.

Coach Schaeffer put Bill Forker in right field and worked Joe Conklin in the box. The youngster that got the best of U.S.C. in the second game played here about two weeks ago had everything on the Cardinal batters and no real hit was made off him until the fifth.

In the third frame Henshaw laid one down the third base line and Conklin was bumped in the nose when fielding it. After being out a few minutes, he went in again and got along well until he was touched up for a three-bagger and a single in the sixth. Terry got the long drive to right, and Gault singled, scoring the only run Stanford made.

The first score registered by the Blue and Gold came in the first inning when Goodwin banged one of Howe's offerings to deep center for a triple. Allen bounced one to Gault at third, but Obear missed the throw at first, Goodwin scoring. In the second Bill Forker dropped one in front of the plate and beat the throw.

He then stole second, went to third on Stoner's fielder's choice, and scored when Conklin slammed one through center.

The only other excitement came in the seventh inning, after Chapman had relieved Conklin on the mound. Halm hit on the third base line, then Agabrite drove a short one to right just out of Forker's reach. Forker threw to Goodwin and on the throw to the plate Halm was tagged out. Stoner was hit in the head but resumed the game. Henshaw bunted with Argabrite on third, but Stoner caught the runner by yards.

Terry was the particular star in the game of the Stanford line-up. He made a great assist of Rubke's grounder in the second and connected for a triple. Goodwin played a great game in the field for California, handling a lot of chances cleanly. Over 4000 witnessed the game, and between each inning rooting sections made things interesting, with cheers and band music.

In the training quarters after the baseball game Ralph Coame, a veteran for three years in left field, was elected to captain the varsity baseball team for next season.

LOS ANGELES GOLF TEAM WINS THE CHAMPIONSHIP.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

REDLANDS, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Los Angeles Country Club golf team today won from the Redlands Country Club seven and cinched the championship of the Southern California League.

The Angelenos can now rest on their laurels as they have but one more match to play and that is with San Gabriel, whom it is conceded they can defeat. Should they be so unfortunate as to lose that match, they would tie with the Annandale team and would have to settle the score with it. As the standing now is Los Angeles has won six games and lost but one, while Annandale has won six games and lost two.

When the last scores in the handicap medal play over thirty-six holes were recorded this afternoon the third invitation tournament of the Redlands Country Club came to a close. The tournament has been a great success and the visitors went away pleased with the hospitality that had been extended to them by Redlands.

The eleven cups were very well distributed among the clubs, E. S. Armstrong of Annandale being the only player to annex two cups. He received one as the winner of the first sixteen defeated eight and also the cup of handicap medal play over thirty-six holes today.

The winners of cups were M. McLaughlin of Annandale, J. A. Jevne of Los Angeles, E. S. Armstrong of Annandale (2), E. B. Howe of Riverside, A. E. Sterling of Redlands, M. S. Phillips of Redlands, E. Williams, Jr., of Redlands, R. D. Osborn of Riverside and H. G. Pattee of Riverside.

GREAT HOCKEY.

Played at Vineyard Yesterday for the Neil Nettleship Trophy and the Ladies Championship.

The cup match for the Neil Nettleship trophy and the ladies' hockey championship of Southern California was won by Duarte yesterday afternoon by a score of three goals to none by Los Angeles. The match was played at Vineyard.

It is questionable whether such a stubbornly contested hockey match has ever been played in the Southland. After fifty minutes of the most grilling play, neither side could claim an advantage or break through the impregnable defense of the backs and goal-keepers.

The last ten minutes of play decided the match and gives Duarte the tremendous lead of five games, to the single victory of Los Angeles over Santa Monica last Saturday.

Miss Marjorie Maddock, Miss Alice Scott and Mrs. Gordon Maddock, were the spectacular players of the champions, while Miss Marguerite Millier, Miss Cocks and Miss Mytton upheld the honors of the home eleven.

With two teams so evenly balanced and where all the players are so skillful and aggressive, it is hard to draw comparisons. Every member of the Los Angeles team worked like slaves and proved that they have a team to be reckoned with for the remaining cup matches.

This victory over the locals does not give the cup to Duarte by any means, as there still are five more games to be played. But having won five games straight, Duarte requires only one more win to cinch the pennant and the cup.

Miss Marguerite Millier and Miss Alice Scott, the rival captains, "bulled-off." The Duarte skipper passed the sphere to Miss Lorraine Handyside, but it was as promptly taken away from that player by Miss Crosby, who rushed it to the wings.

Had it not been for Miss Marjorie Maddock, who kept the locals at bay by her clever dribbling and passing, Los Angeles would undoubtedly have scored in the opening ten minutes of play.

So aggressive were Miss Alice Scott and Miss Enid Handyside, that Miss Millier and Miss Avery were obliged to keep close on their heels and mark their every play. Miss Cocks and Miss Mytton proved of inestimable value and gave the visitors some hard thinking to do at critical stages of the game by their forceful and tricky passes.

Twice during the first half, the locals' goal was in jeopardy, but Miss E. Barnes was there all the time and only her watchfulness averted a larger score. With Miss Avery on the right, Miss Crosby at center and Miss Cocks at half, the visitors found it difficult to make much headway.

Miss Enid Handyside nearly scored from a hotly contested scrimmage in front of the home goal. Had it not been for Miss Crosby, and Miss G. Barnes, who rushed to her teammates assistance, Duarte would have drawn first blood just before half-time. Miss Wien and Miss Proutz placed the sphere out of all danger by a series of rushes and swift passes.

After the "bully-off" in the second half, both teams went after the ball in double-quick time. So eager were several of the players to score that penalties were awarded first to one side and then the other for "sticks" or off-side.

After fifty minutes of the most strenuous play Duarte scored. Mrs. Gordon Maddock hit the ball from the center of the striking line. There was some discussion as to whether the ball was really hit from that position, as Miss E. Barnes, Miss Crosby and Miss G. Barnes made no effort to stop the ball from passing through the posts. The referee however, allowed the point.

Miss Marjorie Morgan put all doubt aside as to which side was entitled to the victory by scoring a second goal just two minutes before the call of time. Miss Alice Scott made it three straight and so cinched the match and practically the pennant. Following are the names of the players: Los Angeles—Miss Marguerite Millier, captain; Miss M. Crosby, Miss L. Avery, Miss G. Barnes, Mrs. Blomfield, Miss E. Barnes, Miss Irene Millier, Miss A. Proutz, Miss Cocks, Miss Mytton, Miss B. Wien. Duarte—Miss Alice Scott, captain; Miss Marjorie Maddock, Miss Marjorie Morgan, Miss Dolly Scott, Miss Lorraine Handyside, Mrs. Gordon Maddock, Mrs. M. Graham, Miss Enid Handyside, Miss Edith Morgan, Miss Milly Scott, Mrs. Scott Boyd, J. W. Allan and G. Young acted as referees.

REDLANDS EASY FOR POMONA TEAM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLAREMONT, April 6.— [Exclusive Dispatch.] Pomona college opened the intercollegiate season in this part of the country today by defeating the University of Redlands team by a score of 5 to 1.

The game was hotly contested until the sixth inning when the home team put it on ice by bringing in three runs and getting the Redlands team generally up in the air.

The feature of the game was the pitching of Dodge. If his support had been better and he had had a little luck he would have won with ease, for he had the sagebrush artists eating out of his hand. He had ten strikeouts to five for both of the Pomona pitchers. It was only by taking chances and hitting the ball at the right time that the home team won.

The scoring was started in the first inning by Pomona when Shutt singled to center, stole second went third on a wild pitch by Dodge and came home on Kingman's single to left. In the third Wight walked, went to third on Shutt's grounder to first and came home when Kingman hit the ball for the only double of the game.

In the sixth, the team got Redlands moving and two bases were emptied when Daniels knocked a hot one through North. Daniels came home on Durrell's hit. The Redlands team had to stop at the end of the seventh inning in order to catch the train.

STANFORD VICTORIOUS.

California Tennis Players Defeated for the First Time in Several Years.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERKELEY (Cal.) April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] For the first time in five years the University of California was defeated on the tennis courts this forenoon, when Capt. Murray of Stanford beat Charlie Rogers of California, and Ben Frees was defeated in straight sets by Morgan of Stanford in the first single match.

Although the Rogers brothers won the first doubles match for California, the loss of the three singles cinched the tournament for Stanford. Charlie Rogers made a good showing against Murray, and won the first set 6 to 4, but in the two following sets Murray played a remarkably consistent game, and won 10 to 8, 7 to 5.

Ben Frees was expected to beat Morgan in the first singles match, but last year's competitor for the Blue and Gold did not get going at all until the second set was 5 to 2. He managed to run the set to 10 to 8. The first set was 6 to 3.

Morgan played in the best form he has ever shown in an intercollegiate tournament.

The double match between Murray and Morgan versus Harry and Charlie Rogers was the best tennis of the whole day. Although the Cardinal players got away with the first set, the Los Angeles players came right back and won the match, 2 to 6, 6 to 2, 6 to 3, 4 to 6, 6 to 2.

IOWA CITY CHAMPIONS.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Iowa City High School won the championship of the United States in the Intercity High School Rifle League by defeating Deering High School of Portland, Me., in the shoot off of the tie between the two schools, 972 to 958.

Nationals Win Series.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) April 6.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] The St. Louis National League team defeated the local American League team, 9 to 7. The Nationals won the spring series by four games to two. In the sixth inning, Harry Steinfeldt of the Nationals, coaching at third base, and Jimmy Austin of the Americans, met in fisticuffs. Steinfeldt hit Austin, who then knocked Steinfeldt down. Police interfered and later the players shook hands. Score:

Nationals, 9; hits, 15; errors, 1.
Americans, 7; hits, 12; errors, 2.

GAY SOCIETY AMID THE ORANGE GROVES.

The Observations of a "Times" Writer at Riverside.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

RIVERSIDE, April 6.—Social entertainments have been quiet and informal this week, the last of Lent, but next week will see an outburst of gaity all over the city, commencing on Monday, with Mr. and Mrs. Orrick's dance at the Victoria Country Club.

In the meantime the chief event of the week was Mrs. Otis Baldwin's reception on behalf of Miss Ethel Lyman-Smith, the charming bride-to-be, who becomes the wife of Lieut. Ralph Haines, U.S.N., next month.

The guest of honor, looking very happy these days, was presented with a large Japanese basket of, ostensibly, roses, which, however, turned out to be deftly-folded handkerchiefs of the finest cabinet linens.

Among the many guests were: Mrs. P. D. Willard from Minnesota, Mrs. Charles F. Waite, Mrs. W. T. Henderson, Mrs. C. L. Macfarland, Mrs. F. P. Taylor, Mrs. S. W. Holmes and Mrs. de Witt Hutchings.

The many pretty young girls present were the Misses Belle Randall of Berkeley, Edith Jordan of Stanford, Helen Plimpton, Pauline Darling, Elobee Gandrum, Mary and Helen Norton, Eva and Adele Sawyer, Gertrude Seger, Irene Hunter, Florence Philips, Eva Badger, Jean Adair, Bonnie Rockhold, Martha Waite, Ethel Lyman and Alice Baldwin, all of Riverside.

Society Golf.

Golf and society seem inseparable nowadays, and the Golf Club is invariably the center of social interest. Thus, on Monday commences the ladies' golf club championship, which will be made the occasion of numerous luncheon, dinner and dance parties throughout the week.

Some twenty-five society ladies are competing, but as everyone plays from scratch, the ultimate honors probably rest between Mrs. Harry Kearne, the present club champion; Mrs. Martin Chase, who is playing a better game than ever before; Miss Newell, a tall, slender girl who plays a graceful and rapidly-improving game; Mrs. Howe, wife of W. E. Howe, who is capable of very good golf, and yesterday proud winner of the Bain cup, or Miss Greta Wyatt, also a Bain cup heroine.

Golf Widows.

And talking of golf—Riverside, too, has her golf widows. One of the saddest cases is that of the attractive (and, be it observed, ultra-exclusive,) Mrs. R. D. Osborn, whose husband, "Bob" Osborn, is one of golf's most ardent devotees. He eats, drinks, thinks, talks and sleeps golf—and Mrs. Osborn, alas, finds life holds many other subjects of greater interest! At a recent dinner Mr. and Mrs. Osborn and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Chase were the dramatis personae and Mrs. Osborn the only non-golfer! Try as they would, golf proved the only possible subject of conversation, and the pathetic sight was witnessed of a charming leader of Riverside society hopelessly dumb! And Mrs. Osborn is not alone—Riverside, yes, and all California, just teems with golf-widows, and debutantes should be warned in time and take up golf with all their might.

To Tour East.

Mrs. H. P. Bowen and her daughter, Pauline, will leave for a visit to eastern friends and relatives early in June and will remain away about six or eight months, during which period Mrs. Bowen's delightful house here will be loaned to her brother and his family, from Arizona.

On Thursday Mrs. Bowen entertained at a tea party in honor of Mrs. Alma Whitaker, who is visiting here from Los Angeles. The affair was very delightful and informal, concluding with music and dancing.

Visitors.

Two attractive young ladies, the Misses Flora and Jean Kennedy, are visiting here from Long Beach, as the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Troth and their daughter, Margaret. They remain for some days.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Symonds of Sydney, Australia, are also here on a visit—part of a series that embrace the world. From here they go to San Francisco, Chicago, New York and then on to Europe, and back to Australia via Africa. John is a celebrated Australian engineer who has carried through several of Australia's big bridge and harbor projects.

Mrs. Clara S. Folts's visit here in connection with the Taft campaign created wide interest and many society women who had not previously been interested in politics, have now taken up their political education in earnest pending next voting time.

Many Los Angeles visitors have been in evidence here this week owing to the Redlands golf week, many of them staying at Riverside and motoring over each day. C. N. Wright and A. S. French of the Annandale Country Club, and Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin and Mrs. and Miss Moffat have all been here. The latter leave for Del Monte today—for more golf.

A Golf Luncheon.

Golf, too, was the raison d'etre of Martin Reymayne's (well known polo writer and player) luncheon party on Friday. A match was ranged between E. W. Flowers and Roy Holland (the latter just returned from England,) and Mrs. Harry Kearne and Mr. Redmayne, and a luncheon party at the club afterwards was the natural sequence. They were joined by F. Dishey Hudson (who is affectionately known as Dizzy, of course,) St. A. S. Holden, Mrs. Harold Whitaker and others.

The Bain Cup.

On the same day the lady golfers were playing in the Bain cup contest, which took place here last Friday. This is a very handsome cup put up by H. A. Bain, which must be won three times for permanent ownership. So far, the winners have been Mrs. H. G. Pattee, Mrs. Halsted, Miss Greta Wyatt, Miss Newell, Miss Gilliland and Mrs. E. B. Howe, and those competing are Mmes. Harry Kearne, Darling, Dougal, Misses Lowentrout, Marjory and Greta Wyatt, Mrs. Percy Crump, Mrs. Daly, Mrs. H. P. Bowen, Mrs. Joselyn, Mrs. Martin Chase, Mrs. Gaylord, Mrs. Hewett (the captain,) and the Misses Hervey, Bettner, Pierce and Chance.

Engagement.

A betrothal that is occasioning much interest is that of Miss Anna Gage and Henry Schuyler Montgomery. Miss Gage is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gage and is a very charming girl. There are whispers that her most intimate friend is also engaged and that a double wedding is imminent, but the second affair has not been officially announced yet.

Billiard Champion.

PHILADELPHIA, April 6.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Edward Ralph of Hightstown, N. J., won the national pocket billiard championship by defeating James Maturo of Denver in the final round of the tournament for the championship, by 150 to 130.

WOMEN ARE BOOSTERS.

Beaumont and soon surrounded the car as W. J. Dwyer, president of the Board of Trade, greeted President Mitchell. At the mass meeting which followed the crowd swung into line with a rousing cheer for the movement, which was followed by a stirring address from J. R. Smoot, who was chosen president of the Beaumont division.

"Gen. Fremont came through the San Gorgonio Pass years ago, and brought the civilization of the East to the wilds of the West," said President Smoot. "Now thanks to the generosity of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis and The Times, The Times car, with John S. Mitchell, president of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highwoy Association, J. S. Conwell, secretary, and Bert C. Smith of The Times, is about to go through that same San Gorgonio Pass on the great mission of carrying a national highway to the East.

"Fremont came with swords, guns and cannon. The Times car goes on an errand of peace, but will accomplish just as much as the great Fremont did when he opened California to the world."

This stirring address was greeted by cheers for Gen. Otis and the movement which the Beaumont and Banning people are sure will result in the building of a great macadam highway from Los Angeles to New York.

MITCHELL'S ADDRESS.

"One of our biggest jobs," said President Mitchell, "is to make the road from Banning to Yuma passable. We might as well take Banning and Beaumont with the other valley towns off the map unless we build this highway. We have started something that we must finish, the publicity you receive through this movement means much to your towns.

"When Gen. Harrison Gray Otis telegraphed us at Redlands that he would send a car across the continent at his own expense, the tour of organization was started in earnest. The Times has no desire to control this situation; in fact, that great daily invites and has gained the co-operation of other great newspapers in this movement. The Pathfinder sent out by the Los Angeles Examiner is now mapping out the course for The Times car, which will organize divisions in every city and town along the Santa Fe trail.

"I'm in this thing to win, I'm going to stay with the proposition and see it through. The Times is back of the big plan, and is ready to map out the route for the proposed National Highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, which will surel be built."

THROUGH TO NEW YORK.

"By the great generosity of Gen. Otis and The Times, the Times car will go through to New York on its great mission," said J. S. Conwell. "We now have the support of the people and of the press. This combination has never failed in any undertaking thus far. We are sure of success in the great fight for a National Highway that means so much to each one of us. We are all heartily ashamed of our roads. I firmly believe, however, that within three years we will have a highway over which we can bring a great automobile tour from the East to the West.

"We have formed eleven divisions. We are ready for more work. This car will pass through ninety-one counties before reaching New York. Between this point and St. Louis 101 divisions are to be organized and between St. Louis and the streets of New York ninety-one other towns will be visited.

"We have requests from every one of these places that we form divisions there. We are ready to organize thousands into this great movement which is to mean a highway from ocean to ocean.

ALL GET TOGETHER.

"We must get together in favor of a road to Yuma," said Supervisor Carlton of Riverside. "As you may know San Diego has the best bunch of boosters of any town in the world, unless it's Los Angeles, where they helped us to win for the Banning route.

"Remember, if we get State aid, half the battle for the Ocean-to-Ocean highway is won. Remember, the home of the State engineer is in San Diego.

"We have nearly 100 miles of this road in Riverside county. We must get right into the work at once."

SCOTTISH THRIFT.

"Our old patriarchs in the olden days went up into the mountains to pray," said Dan Johnson at Banning. "It is no fable that in the mountains we are more free from sin and disease. In order to be good, we must be surrounded by good things. You have beautiful homes, fruitful orchards now. From a moral and a civic standpoint, you are warranted in spending all the money necessary to build roads.

"I am Scotch. Because of our race and our previous condition of servitude, we hate to part with a dollar, yet I was one of two Scots who servitude, we hate to part with a dollar reluctantly. It looks like a cart wheel to us. Yet we cast our bread upon the waters and it always returns on the incoming tide, after it has swelled to ten times its original proportions.

"Since the movement was started Colton has been on the first page of our great dailies. There is not enough money in all the valley towns to purchase the advertising we have received through this ocean-to-ocean highway movement."

NO GREATER HELP.

W. B. Clancey of Riverside, boiled down a good speech to saying: "I don't know of anything we can do that will help more than to build good roads. I helped make the fight at Phoenix to steer the road through the San Gorgonio Pass. I'm proud of what we have accomplished."

Frank A. Miller of the Mission Inn, said:

"You must bring all the pressure possible to bear upon your friends and others to build this highway. If Riverside was placed as squarely on the map as Colton, I could be as poetic as some of our speakers today."

After President Smoot took charge at Beaumont, Fred C. Martin was chosen vice-president, F. B. Campbell, secretary, and E. D. Reynolds, treasurer, of Beaumont division, No. 10.

AT BANNING.

At Banning, the Methodist Church was crowded tonight for the mass meeting. Almost half of the audience was composed of women who are back of the first auxiliary of the ocean-to-ocean movement. Men of the thriving city vied with each other in praise of the movement.

C. O. Barker, who was chosen president of Banning division, No. 11, electrified the Banning boosters by contributing $100. This fund was increased by Mrs. George Wing, treasurer of the Banning Ladies' Auxiliary, who also gave $100. The fund was quickly swelled to $1000.

G. A. Nehrhood, of the little desert town of Cabazon, six miles out from Banning, jumped into the ring with a $500 check which came as a complete surprise and swelled the day's total to $2077, making today's one of the banner runs of the valley tour.

Nehrhood, clad in his working clothes, made an eloquent speech of seven words which brought the audience to its feet. He placed his town squarely on the map with a pledge of $1000. This makes Cabazon division No. 12, with a membership of 500.

BANNING, TOO.

Banning is on the map with 1077 members. Miss Frances Ethelwyn Smith, a tiny Los Angeles baby, became the youngest member of the Beaumont and of the Banning divisions, when her father secured two Ocean-to-Ocean Highwaycinblems for his baby girl.

Mrs. R. H. Coombs of Banning is the first woman officer of an Ocean-to-Ocean Highway division. She is vice-president of the Banning division. C. D. Hamilton is secretary and J. M. Westerfield, treasurer.

MASS MEETING OF VOTERS.

Women's League Calls the Conference and Propounds Six Questions to Candidates for Trustee.

REDONDO BEACH, April 6.—A mass meeting, called by the Woman's Progressive League, was held this afternoon in the City Hall, at which the candidates for office for the municipal election Monday stated their platforms.

Six questions regarding the government of the city and the well-fare of the city were submitted to the six candidates for the office of trustee by members of the league. E. T. Thompson and O. N. Tomlinson, candidates for Trustee on the Citizen's ticket, answered the questions in person, giving their views of the city government. W. J. Hess, the other candidate for trustee on the ticket, was not present.

Henry Raby, J. S. Hunt and Carl A. Pettersen, candidates for Trustee on the Socialist ticket, sent their views in writing to the meeting.

George Cate and Mrs. Mary Gulliver, candidates for Treasurer, and W. A. Anderson, candidate for City Clerk, stated briefly their platforms or views regarding the work of the two offices.

Following the addresses of the candidates Harry Brolaski gave a short talk on "The Needs of Redondo Beach." He spoke of the necessity for good people for the city offices rather than professional politicians and stated that this would come about as the women came into power more. He also spoke of the need of a public park for the city for which bonds should be issued and urged the need of an effort to secure an appropriation from the government for a breakwater.

EASTER SERVICES.

Special Easter services will be held Sunday morning in all of the local churches. The annual egg hunt for the children at the Christ Episcopal Church, which will follow the children's carol service at 9:30 o'clock, will be a pretty feature of the services at that church. Rev. Father deGarmo and the Sunday-school teachers have arranged the egg hunt in the church gardens.

SLUGGED BY ROBBERS.

Man Found in Westlake Park in Unconscious Condition With Valuables Gone.

Suffering from a severe cut on the back of the head, W. F. Reed, an electrician living at the Knox Hotel on Fourth street, near Hill, was discovered in an unconscious condition in Westlake Park last night, and later was removed to the Receiving Hospital for treatment.

Upon recovering his senses the patient said that he had been attacked by two masked men who had subsequently stolen his money and valuables and fled before he was able to give an alarm. Both robbers were armed, he said, and had acted in the usual style of a "bad man" from the West.

Although an investigation was made by the detectives no one could be found who had heard or seen anything of the supposed thieves, and it is believed that the attack was prompted by other motives than robbery.

After having his wound dressed the victim insisted on leaving the hospital and was allowed to go.

ATTELL TO FIGHT.

MORE COSTLY THAN WARFARE.

Millions Lost to England by Union Miners' Strike.

Resumption of Work Ordered by the Federation.

Extremists May Cause Split in the Organization.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, April 6.—The decision of the Miners' Federation today to order the men to resume work has brought intense relief to the whole country. The termination of the coal strike virtually amounts to raising a ruinous siege of the nation's industries, which has inflicted financial loss far larger than would have been caused by war with a great power of similar duration.

In Scotland the miners will return to the collieries on Monday, but as that day is a holiday in England and Wales the strikers there will not return until Tuesday. In many mines three or four days more will elapse before repairs can be completed. By the end of the week, however, it is expected that every colliery will be in full swing.

The decision of the federation was reached after a controversy which was intensely bitter, the extremists denying executive pusillanimity in recommending the men to resume before the district boards had yielded to the miners' schedule of minimum wages. The moderates, however, carried the fight, arguing that with 600,000 men already working and with public that number ready to resume Monday, it would be hopeless to carry on the war. The resolution accepting the recommendation was carried by 640 to 125 votes.

Some of the extremists threaten that the miners in the north, who still have plenty of funds, will break away from the federation and refuse to resume work until the minimum-wage schedules have been granted. This would mean, it is said, a breach in the solidarity of the Miners' Federation, which has enabled the miners to paralyze half the trade of the United Kingdom for the last month, causing misery to millions of persons at a cost to the colliers themselves of $50,000,000.

There was a further accession today to the number of miners working in the collieries in various districts of the United Kingdom. After the Easter holidays it is thought there will be an almost complete resumption of work.

There were a few isolated cases of disorder today, the strikers appearing at the pit mouths of the mines where non-unionists are working and endeavoring to persuade them to desist.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

TULARE, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Presumably killed by the accidental discharge of a double-barrel shotgun, Lee Weaver, a well-known rancher, was found dead in a field near his house this noon. Weaver had left his home early in the morning, telling his family that he was going to shoot crows. The charge from the gun punctured his lung. Weaver was lying on his back, and the gun was by his side. Death is supposed to have been accidental, as there are no indications of a motive for suicide. The rancher leaves a wife, three daughters and two sons.

HEADQUARTERS AT FRESNO.

FRESNO, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The fight for the nomination of Senator La Follette in California will be directed from Fresno. This announcement was made today by Walter Houser, La Follette's campaign manager, before his departure for the North. Houser declared he had excellent workers in San Francisco and Los Angeles, and would direct the fight from the center of the State.

HEAD-ON COLLISION.

Two Machines Demolished and Four Men at Least Injured—Others Fled from the Scene.

In a head-on collision between two high-powered touring cars, four men returning from an outing at the beaches were more or less painfully injured on the Venice road, a few miles west of the city limits, late last night. Immediately after the collision the occupants of the second car disappeared and it is not ascertained whether they escaped injury.

The car coming toward the city was driven by J. C. Jones of Laguna and was coming at a rapid speed when, without warning, the front left wheel locked with those of the car going west, bringing both machines to a quick stand.

Jones was severely injured in the ribs by contact with the wheel. Gilbert Walley of the Metropolitan Hotel had the flesh torn from a leg below the knee and was removed to the Receiving Hospital in a semi-conscious condition. Charles Rolley of the St. Elmo Hotel and C. Ritch of Laguna were thrown from their seats and severely shaken up.

MAY PLEAD GUILTY.

Sells Alleged Chinese Medicines and Is Arrested by Board of Pharmacy Inspectors.

Surrounded by a large crowd of eager buyers anxious to invest $1 for a package of alleged Chinese medicines, J. W. Myers, head of the so-called Oriental Medicine Company, No. 225 East Fifth street, was arrested last night by Inspector Boden of the State Board of Pharmacy on the charge of preparing and selling drugs without a license.

Despite the protests made by members of the crowd who had not yet been able to spend their money, the place immediately was closed and the "doctor" was brought to the Central station, where he deposited $100 cash bail for his appearance in police court tomorrow morning.

When questioned regarding the medicines, Myers declared that he knew that he had been doing wrong, but that the American people were such "easy marks" that he was unable to resist the temptation of separating some of them from their hard-earned money by offering to sell "$11 worth of real Chinese herbs for the insignificant price of $1."

So great was the demand for the herbs that the officers experienced considerable difficulty in pushing their way through the crowd.

Myers declared later that he probably would plead guilty to the charge and intimated that he had made enough to pay a fine and have something left to tide him over.

GIVEN TEN YEARS.

FRESNO, April 6.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Jose Manuel Carpio, a Mexican wood-chopper, was today sentenced to ten years in Folsom after having been found guilty of manslaughter. Judge Church scathingly denounced the prisoner and declared that the jury had shown much leniency. Carpio last January killed Marcel Mareno, a countryman, near Mendota. The murderer, after wrestling a shotgun from his foe, frightfully mangled the victim with a willow club four feet long and twelve inches thick.

COALINGA.

COALINGA, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] John Ryan, a driver in the oil fields, was instantly crushed to death this afternoon under a wagon loaded with sacks of wool. Ryan in some manner slipped from the seat and the wheels passed over his body. The eight horses continued down the road. Ryan's body was found by a tramp.

JAPANESE CONCERT.

The Los Angeles Japanese Musical Association gave a concert in a hall at No. 635 Maple avenue last night, which was attended by a large number of Japanese, and proved a fine success. The officers are: President, M. Magaharo; vice-president, J. Kodama; secretary, M. Okamura.

SEND CHILDREN TO METROPOLIS.

Tactics of the Strikers in Passaic, N. J.

Armed Deputies Escort the Workers to Mills.

Haywood, Threatened With Arrest, Leaves City.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PASSAIC (N. J.) April 6.—Arrangements are being made to send to New York more than 1000 children of the 30,000 operatives now on strike for union recognition, higher wages and shorter hours in the textile mills in this city and vicinity, according to an announcement by strike leaders here tonight.

It is thought improbable that the exodus of the children will be interfered with. Several well known women in New York have been collecting funds, it was reported here tonight, for the support of the children and have arranged for their shelter. Today passed in comparative quiet. Employees of several mills, who refused to strike, were escorted to and from the mills by armed deputies and no attempt was made to interfere with them.

William D. Haywood, the Industrial Worker-of-the-World organizer, who was threatened with arrest by the authorities of Garfield if he again made his appearance among the mill workers there, has gone to Chicago, it is said, but is expected to return to this city before Tuesday.

John Fleming, a special deputy Sheriff, who participated in the riot yesterday in which the deputies used their clubs and fired over the heads of the silk mill strikers, was arrested today and sentenced to serve thirty days in jail on a charge of assault.

"Black Hundred."

EUROPEANS PROTEST TO CZAR ANTI-JEWISH RIOTS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The reported efforts of the band known as the "Black Hundred" and of other Russian secret societies to incite the Russian populace to anti-Jewish riots have aroused many of the most eminent thinkers of France to send in a petition of protest to the Russian government against the horrible means said to be used by the Russian anti-Semites. For instance, it is said that most of these agitators deliberately spread the report among ignorant peasants that the Jews sacrifice Christian babies at certain mysterious religious rites. A case in Kiev, named Beilies Youchtschinsky, is accused of participating in the so-called murder rite. Naturally, there is absolutely no proof to sustain such charges, but a popular outcry is said to be sweeping through all of Russia.

The resolution of protest, which is to be circulated in the chief countries of Europe, is signed by Anatole France, Octave Mirabeau, Henri de Regnier and other noted writers, and also by the Sorbonne professor, Dr. Andler, Ch. Seignobos, Gabriel Seailles, Charles Gide, Dr. Langevin and L. Havet. It reads as follows:

"The undersigned, friends of Russia and not allied with the Jewish faith, denounce before public opinion as absurd the accusation of taking part in a murder rite made against the Jew, Beilies Youchtschinsky, in Kiev.

"We beg to recall, first, that far from drinking blood, the Israelite religion forbids its use in the ritual as food. This prohibition is rigorously respected by all Jewish sects.

"In the second place, we call attention to the fact that in all times and places religious minorities have been victims of this identical calumny from the time of the early Christians under the Roman emperors to the present day among the Christian missionaries in China.

"It is ardently hoped that such accusations will never again be given credence in a civilized country."

Still Runs Wild.

WHOLE DETECTIVE FORCE SEEKS JACK THE SLASHER.

EVERY available detective in the city was detailed to duty along the principal business streets last night in an effort to catch the notorious "Jack the Slasher" who again made his presence known in the city by destroying a number of ladies' gowns with a razor.

Officials acquainted with the peculiarities displayed by the degenerates do not believe that the cult is actuated by a sense of jealousy, but that he takes a keen delight in using the razor on women's wearing apparel.

The latest victims of the "slasher" reported to the police that they had been attacked while walking along Broadway by ruining fine dresses in a similar manner. Despite the fact that elaborate traps were laid for the "slasher" disappeared and had not been heard of until he began operations again last night.

Probably the most flagrant case reported to the police last night was that of Miss E. M. Winn of No. 103 North Hope street, whose dress was cut entirely across the back and completely ruined by one fell sweep of the knife blade.

When her attention was called to the destruction of her gown Miss Winn waxed indignant and called upon the police to run down the wretch who was responsible. As four similar complaints had been received earlier in the evening, Lieut. Adams decided to concentrate the entire plainclothes force in an effort to effect the criminal's capture.

A few months ago presumably the same man created considerable havoc along Broadway by ruining fine dresses in a similar manner. Despite the fact that elaborate traps were laid for the "slasher" disappeared and had not been heard of until he began operations again last night.

An Appreciation.

LAUDS COURAGE, ABILITY AND PATIENCE OF TAFT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Secretary of the Interior Fisher, in an interview today, urged the renomination of President Taft. His statement, which was issued from the Taft national headquarters, said:

"It would be false modesty for me to ignore, or to expect others to ignore, the fact that the judgment thus expressed is the opinion of a member of the Cabinet, subject to such conscious or unconscious influences as arise from that association; but I hope the personal note will be excused when I say that the appointment was not sought, but was offered under circumstances that compelled acceptance and imposed no political obligations of any kind; that no such obligations were then, or have ever been, suggested, and that the personal and official association has at least afforded the opportunity to form an accurate opinion of the character and the capacity of the President and of his ideals and methods."

AN AVOWED PROGRESSIVE.

Secretary Fisher said the people of Chicago "do not need to be told that he is and has been an earnest advocate of progressive policies;" in fact, "enough of a progressive to have been denounced as a radical."

"No department head," said Secretary Fisher, "could ask from the Chief Executive a more intelligent appreciation, a more helpful co-operation or a more uniform and unswerving support," than he had received from the President.

Taking up the argument in favor of President Taft, Mr. Fisher said that the nation faced problems of the greatest difficulties and "that the people are determined that old abuses shall no longer be endured."

"Whether the remedies will be wise or unwise, constructive or destructive, depends largely on the choice of the next Chief Executive of the nation," said Secretary Fisher. "Most of all, I think it depends on the choice of the Republican nominee.

ENUMERATES REASONS.

"I believe that the nominee should be President Taft.

"First, because he believes in popular government, to be achieved through the principles of representative democracy, only by means of which genuine and enduring popular government can be secured for the people.

"Second, because he has demonstrated constructive ability at a time when constructive statesmanship is needed as never before since the republic was founded.

"Third, because, on the principles which he has advocated, and on the progress he has achieved, the Republican party must stand at the election.

"His whole ambition has been and is to render disinterested and effective public service. His ideal of public service is the promotion of the welfare of the whole people. Under the most adverse conditions, in spite of misunderstanding, misrepresentation and abuse he has demonstrated courage, patience and ability and has made real and definite progress both in legislation and administration.

HE SEEKS TO CURE.

"He has shown that he is more interested in curing evils than in denouncing them, in moving steadily and surely forward than in talking about the desirability of moving forward. These, it seems to me, are the qualities peculiarly needed now in the Presidential office."

Secretary Fisher said Taft "had not contented himself with reserving coal fields and timber lands and water power sites," but had followed such withdrawals with efforts to secure effective conservation laws.

"He is a conservationist who appreciates that conservation will be a useful and enduring policy only to the extent that we make it a practical and constructive policy," said the secretary.

Secretary Fisher reviewed the attitude of President Taft on the tariff to show that he "had done more than any other man" to establish a scientific revision of schedules; and he cited his advocacy of the amendment of the railroad laws and his enforcement of the anti-trust laws as indicative of his thorough administration of corporation laws.

DOCTOR DECLINES TO SIGN.

Death Certificate in Case of Mrs. Jester Without Signature Until Coroner Makes Investigation.

The Coroner conducted an investigation day before yesterday in the case of Mrs. J. E. Jester, reputed wealthy Atlanta woman, who died in a barkeeper's room at the Cumberland Hotel on South Bunkerhill avenue early in the morning, and found that death was due to valvular heart trouble.

Dr. S. O. Coolidge, who was called in but a short time before death occurred, and too late to render aid, refused to sign the death certificate because there were apparently doubtful features about the case. Under the law, physicians cannot sign death certificates in cases of heart failure unless they shall have been in attendance upon the patient twenty-four hours or longer. The report that Dr. Coolidge signed the certificates was an unfortunate error.

CATARRH EASILY CONQUERED

Germs Destroyed; Discharge Stopped; Sore Membrane Quickly Healed—Often Restores Hearing.

HYOMEI, a pleasant antiseptic, germ-destroying, vaporized air breathed over the entire membrane of the nose and throat and deep into the lungs over the bronchial or air tubes will kill catarrh germs; soothe and heal the sore catarrhal spots and stop the discharge of mucus in a few days.

Sprays, douches, snuffs or ointments won't end catarrh because they and not penetrating enough to get where the germs are.

So surely does HYOMEI (pronounced High-o-me) clear up the head and penetrate into the innermost recesses of the entire nasal tract that it very often drives out the catarrhal conditions in the tubes that connect the ears with the nose and by so doing restores hearing to persons who believed they were destined to be deaf for life.

If you have catarrh, dear reader, do not forget that HYOMEI is a wonderful remedy for catarrh and is free from cocaine, or any other injurious drug.

A complete outfit, which includes a hard rubber pocket inhaler, costs $1. If you already own an inhaler you can get a bottle of HYOMEI for only 50 cents at pharmacists the world over.

CAUGHT AFTER RUNNING FIGHT.

Portland Police Run Down Alleged White Slaver.

Patrolman Injured, but Persists in His Pursuit.

Two Other Accused Men Are Taken in Raid on Hotel.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Harry Kelly, an alleged white slaver, was arrested early this morning after an exciting chase of three blocks in which Patrolman Niles injured himself and caught Kelly only after the latter was checked in his flight by a fusillade of bullets from Niles's revolver.

Kelly was captured after Sergeant Klanlen and Patrolmen Hutchins and Niles had raided the Bomaine Hotel, arresting Kelly and Jack Doyle for holding Ruby Booth and Etta Shields in bondage for Chinese slavers. The girls were taken into custody.

Kelly made a desperate effort to escape and dashed down the stairway after being arrested. Niles was at his heels but fell while on the stairs, spraining his ankle. Despite the injury Niles continued the chase three blocks firing as he ran. When he caught Kelly he fell in a faint and had to be taken home in a patrol wagon.

It was through two Chinese who were approached by Doyle and Kelly that the police secured the tip that terminated in the arrest. It is alleged that Kelly and Doyle tried to have the Chinamen buy the girls outright and on their hesitation, induced the celestials to visit the rooms of the girls to negotiate the deal. The girls both declare they were to have been sold to Chinese.

MISSION PADRES GREET PRINCESS.

STAR OF M'GROARTY'S DRAMA IS IN LOS ANGELES.

Lazarovich and Her Royal Husband Arouse New Interest in Great Historical Play Which Will Be Staged at San Gabriel the Last of This Month.

The presence in Los Angeles of the Princess Lazarovich and her royal husband has resulted in arousing deep interest in the Mission Play written by John S. McGroarty, and which is to be staged in a special auditorium at old San Gabriel Mission on the 29th inst. for the first time.

Princess Lazarovich won the very highest distinction on the European stage, from which she retired permanently several years ago, when her marriage to Prince Lazarovich took place. Her triumphs in Paris and throughout France as well as in England, especially in London, have been complete. In coming to California to participate in the Mission Play and to aid in its artistic production, she does not return to the professional stage, but engages in a labor of love. The Princess, a woman of talent, culture and personal charms, is a native Californian, and has held and still holds a keen interest in the history and traditions and good name of the State that gave her birth. She has crossed the world to take her place in this great pageant drama which is to commemorate the labors and the sacrifices of the pioneers and the Franciscan padres, and her mission is highly commendable. Her work in the forthcoming representation is not "theatrical" in the usual acceptation of that term, but is of a different type and of a distinctly high and unique order.

In another week the Mission Play Theater at San Gabriel will be completed down to the last detail. Rehearsals of the play will begin tomorrow. Princess Lazarovich will be busy for many weeks to come, but she will receive friends and acquaintances at her apartments in the Alexandria each Tuesday afternoon between 4 and 5 o'clock.

The Princess paid a ceremonial visit to San Gabriel on Thursday, inspecting the new theater building and conferring with Herr Henry Kabierske, director of the play. She was greatly astonished and immeasurably pleased over the new structure, and was unstinted in her expressions of admiration for Herr Kabierske's work.

"This is the most unique and perhaps the most beautiful theater in the world," she declared.

A pleasant incident of the visit of the Princess to San Gabriel was the welcome extended to the lady by the padres of the mission. They received her in a body and escorted her through the ancient edifice, with its relics and sacred memorials of the past. Finding that the padres were fluent conversationalists in French, that language was used. Prince Lazarovich accompanied the party and was profuse in his praise of all he saw. The Prince is a soldier and a Servian patriot, but declares that he is not now an aspirant to the Servian throne.

MANGLED BY AN EAGLE.

Man Set Upon by Huge Bird in New York and Severely Injured Before Others Effect Rescue.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GLENNS FALLS (N. Y.) April 6.—Milton Steives of this city was nearly killed in a fight with a bald eagle this week near North Creek lumber camp. He was rescued, badly wounded, by a fellow lumberman.

Steives came upon two eagles devouring the carcass of a calf and shot one of the birds. Before he could reload his gun the other eagle attacked him. He struck at the bird repeatedly with his rifle butt, but the eagle, although one of its wings were broken, was getting the better of the battle, when a hunter killed the eagle with a club.

The bird weighed seventy-five pounds, and measured nine feet from tip to tip.

Thornet was covered with a gun by Deputy United States Marshal James Smith of Albuquerque.

VERMILYEA JURY CAN'T AGREE.

CHICAGO, April 6.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] The jury in the case of Mrs. Louise Vermilyea, charged with having murdered Richard T. Smith, a railroad man, was discharged by Judge Sullivan tonight, after members of the jury informed the court they could not agree upon a verdict. The jury from the first ballot stood 9 to 3 for conviction.

RECOMMEND RAKER'S BILL.

WASHINGTON (D. C.) April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Both the Department of the Interior and the Department of Agriculture have reported favorably on Congressman Raker's bill to establish a bureau of national parks, and Mr. Raker feels satisfied that the Committee on Public Lands will report it favorably to the House. Raker says he will oppose Senator Dillingham's immigration bill, as labor men in California allege it will nullify the provisions of the exclusion act.

BARBER SHOWS HEROISM.

Covina Man Captures Runaway Automobile and Rescues Woman from a Perilous Position.

COVINA, April 6.—Clinging to the radiator of her automobile, with her body dragging beneath the machine, Mrs. Jake Overholtzer, the young wife of a well-known rancher here, was dragged for a block along the main street of Covina this afternoon, and her life was only saved through the prompt action of a barber, who rushed from his shop, while others on the sidewalk looked on, and shut off the power, bringing the machine to a stop.

The automobile had gone "dead" on the tracks of the Pacific Electric Railroad, at the junction of Citrus avenue and Badillo street, and an electric car was bearing swiftly down upon her. Leaving her two little children in the machine, Mrs. Overholtzer leaped out to crank the machine, but neglected to shut off the power. The machine was in the low-speed notch, and when the crank was turned it bolted directly over the woman. Mrs. Overholtzer clung to the radiator, and, as the runaway car passed the barber shop of Hesseltine & Lewis, a barber, Roy Goodell, sprang out of the door, into the machine and shut off the power. Beyond a few slight bruises the woman was unhurt.

SITUATION IS TENSE.

Venice Voters After a Campaign of Unprecedented Bitterness, Are Ready for the Polls to Open.

VENICE, April 6.—The political pot is calling the kettle black today, following the school election of yesterday; and meantime, the armor is being girded for the supreme conflict of Monday, when the force of the City Club will meet the Good Government Organization in one grand engagement.

The preliminary bouts being out of the way, the ropes are being stretched for the big event, which is to determine whether the city will be governed during the next two years by the friends or enemies of Abbott Kinney. Although there are no party platforms, Abbot Kinney is the one issue. His cause is championed by the Good Government forces. The speaking end of the campaign was brought to a close tonight with illuminated mass meeting held under the auspices of each entrenched army, but the campaign of education is still on and "literature" already strews the sand, which serves the purpose of lawns, here by the sea. Some of the tracts read as if civil war were near at hand and indicate that something more deadly than hymn books would be the weapons.

Without the use of quotation marks, the arguments advanced include such words and phrases as nefarious tactics, dastardly attempts to coerce, corporation-ruled candidates, mire of dirty politics, foul means, stuffing the ballot box, with the illegal votes of unregistered electors, ungentlemanly acts and criminal and unfair practices. The blank cartridges being fired from behind other breastworks make appeals in the name of the flag, the people, a clean deal with a fresh deck, loyalty and justice.

Unprejudiced judgment by unbiased bookmakers tonight is that it is a toss-up as to the winners Monday. The victors in the contest of yesterday see a repetition of the fight and are already placing orders for red fire to be burned when the votes shall have been counted. But the opposition knows no discouragement, arguing that with the Australian ballot, the vote at the municipal election will be a different story. Both sides to the conflict readily agree that the laws governing school elections, at least so far as relates to the purity of the ballot, are lame, weak, halt and blind. Campaign workers are permitted near the polls, practically all who offer their ballots are permitted to vote, and the form of the ballot may be whatever the campaign committees see fit to make it.

Foreign Marines Landed Keep Peace in Swatow.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PEKING, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Outer Mongolia's determination to maintain its independence the most remarkable development the history of the country since the days of the Great Khans. It is manifestation of the new spirit that is stirring all Asiatic peoples.

The Independent Mongolian government in Urga has bought 18,000 rifles from a Japanese firm at the price of $34,000, payable in three annual installments. The rifles, which were captured by the Japanese at Port Arthur, are of the old Russian pattern.

The Urga government is raising money by selling mining concessions to Russians firms. The Lumikoff Brothers, of Kiatka, have already worked their mines and obtained gold.

Chinese troops sent from Kalgan toward Urga returned to Kalgan upon hearing that a large and well-armed Mongol force was coming against them. The Kalgan troops telegraphed to Peking for instructions and President Yuan Shi Kai sent Gen. Hsu Yuan to command a republican expeditionary force, which will be sent from Kalgan soon.

GEN. HO'S UGLY MOOD.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SWATOW (China) April 6.—It was Gen. Ho, not Gen. Wu Sum, as first reported, who landed here at the head of 3000 Cantonese troops yesterday. Gen. Ho has established headquarters on board a Chinese warship lying off the city.

The commanders of the United States, British and Japanese warships here jointly requested an interview with Gen. Ho today, which he refused. The foreign commanders consequently sent marines on shore and these are now guarding the foreign consulates and offices.

The local troops under the command of Gen. Ling, who, until Gen. Ho's arrival had full control of the city, now occupy the police stations. Their leaders demand a heavy indemnity and transportation to the city of Canton as conditions for the evacuation of Swatow. The Chamber of Commerce refuses to accede to these demands and hostilities between the Cantonese and the local forces are imminent.

Experiments to be Made in Paris With Wireless During Coming Eclipse of Sun.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 6.—A series of noteworthy experiments in wireless telegraphy are to be tried in Paris April 16, during an eclipse of the sun which will obscure four-fifths of the sun's rays. It has been noticed by scientists that the distance over which wireless messages can be dispatched varies greatly according to the time of day and the direction. A message sent by rapid vibrations, which will not carry more than 700 miles in the day, can be sent two or three times that distance at sunset, especially toward the south. When slow vibrations are used it can be transmitted further in the day.

It is believed that these curious facts are due to the activity of the so-called ultra-violet rays of the sun, the theory being that these rays are a powerful factor in the energy of the Hertzian waves. The eclipse, when a great part of these rays will be suddenly cut off, will be an ideal occasion for decisive tests and the wireless station on the Eifel tower will send messages continuously from a little before the eclipse until a little after it, in several directions.

LAUNCHING ARMY LEAGUE.

Achievements of Similar Organization on Behalf of Navy is Incentive for Extending the Idea.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Such great success has attended the work of the Navy League, a purely voluntary organization, in promoting the efficiency of the navy, that steps are being taken to organize a similar league in the interests of the army. Retired army officers, members of Congress, and others interested, entered plans for the organization at a conference last night. Gen. Robert Shaw Oliver, assistant Secretary of War, presided over the meeting. Frederick L. Huidekper, who has attracted much attention by his magazine articles dealing with military subjects, was made secretary and R. Johns, a newspaper man of Cleveland. Gen. Oliver, Lieut. Gen. John C. Bates, retired, and ex-Senator Charles Dick were appointed a committee on organization.

It is proposed to organize branches in every State of the Union and to hold a national convention in Washington next December. Special efforts will be made to bring the militia into the association which, it is believed, will have influence in educating the public in regard to the needs of the army.

SALT LAKE CITY, April 6.—The attack of smallpox will be no bar to social activities in Utah hereafter, so far as the law is concerned. Under a policy announced by the State Board of Health today, the hospital known as "pesthouse" will be closed, sufferers from the disease may hold receptions or promenade the streets.

A resolution adopted by the Association of Health Officers of the State in session here advocating the discontinuance of the quarantine against smallpox, called forth the statement from Dr. T. B. Beaty, secretary of the State Board of Health, that the board already had issued such orders.

Figures are to be put up on houses where patients are under treatment.

QUARANTINT ELIMINATED.

It Is Like With Medical Conclusions. Unjust Restrictions in Smallpox Cases Are Ended in Utah.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SALT LAKE CITY, April 6.—An outbreak of smallpox will be no bar to social activities in Utah hereafter, so far as the law is concerned. Under a policy announced by the State Board of Health today, the hospital known as "pesthouse" will be closed. Persons from the disease may hold receptions or promenade the streets. A resolution adopted by the Association of Health Officers of the State in session here advocating the discontinuance of the quarantine against smallpox, called forth the statement from Dr. W. H. Beaty, secretary of the State Board of Health, that the board already had issued such an order.

Rules are to be put up on houses where patients are under treatment, but the inmates may move about as freely as if the disease were whooping cough.

This extreme reaction from the "shotgun quarantine" of former years is in line with conclusions reached by national medical organizations.

Numerous bodies of physicians have recommended that smallpox quarantines be raised, but Utah is one of the first, if not the first State to make the experiment. It is maintained that the quarantine system has failed to prevent the propagation of the disease, and by giving the public a false sense of security, discourages resort to the more effectual preventative—vaccination.

MILLIONAIRE ASKS STAY.

Cadence Dayton Hillman, Convicted of Using Mails to Defraud, Denied Time to Adjust Affairs.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, April 6.—Clarence Dayton Hillman, the millionaire real estate dealer, sentenced to the Federal penitentiary for using the mails to defraud, petitioned the Federal Court of Appeals in Portland today for a stay of thirty days, that he might get his business affairs in order before entering McNeil's Island penitentiary. The court refused.

Hillman's action was a surprise to the Federal officials, as he had given them to understand that he wished to enter his new home as soon as possible. Owing to the absence of Judge Hanford from the city, Hillman's commitment papers cannot be issued until April 16.

Pasadena.

FAIR WEATHER, NEW BONNETS.

Fashionable Pasadena Ready for the Annual Parade.

Splendid Concerts Arranged by Various Churches.

Woman Struck by Bicycle and Seriously Hurt.

(Office of The Times, 33 N. Fair Oaks avenue.)

PASADENA, April 7.—With a forecast of fair weather, hundreds of new bonnets, not to speak of other articles of spring apparel, ready for a first appearance, with the churches decorated as only Southern California churches may be garnished with flowers, and with inspiring sermons ready to be preached; today will probably be the most brilliant Easter Sunday Pasadenans have ever awakened on.

The Masons will assemble at 3 o'clock in the afternoon at the Congregational Church, where the Pasadena Commandery, Knights Templar, will hold customary Easter services. Rev. Daniel F. Fox, pastor of that church, will officiate.

Some music will be played by the Pasadena municipal band, at Central Park this afternoon. Mrs. George Mulford, wife of the director, will sing Gounod's "Divine Redeemer."

This afternoon also, an organ recital will be given, at 3 o'clock, by Prof. Arthur Blakeley, at the First Methodist Church. It will be a benefit for the music fund of that church.

IS SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Mrs. William Smith, wife of an employee of the Pacific Electric Railway Company, who lives at the corner of California street and Pasadena avenue, last night lay unconscious at the Pasadena Hospital. Early yesterday afternoon she was struck and knocked down by a bicycle on East Colorado street, east of the Santa Fe track. The wheel was ridden by P. Witherby. The woman's condition is critical.

She attempted to cross the street and coming out from between two automobiles failed to notice the approaching bicyclist. He also fell heavily to the pavement, but was not injured.

Mrs. Smith was taken to the Receiving Hospital at the police station, and later removed to the Pasadena Hospital. She is believed to have sustained a fracture of the skull.

A SAD AFFAIR.

Over 800 persons, 200 of whom were school children, assembled at the Santa Fe depot yesterday morning to pay a last tribute over the body of Calbraith P. Rodgers, the aviator, which Mrs. Rodgers took East for burial. It will be laid to rest in Rock Creek Cemetery, Washington, D. C., beside that of the illustrious grandfather, Commodore Matthew Calbraith Perry, and the father, Capt. Calbraith Perry Rodgers, late of the Seventh Cavalry, U.S.A., who was killed while fighting Indians.

The casket was draped with the flag that was spread over the young aviator's shoulders when he was lifted from his aeroplane seat upon arriving at Tournament Park last fall after crossing the continent in the air.

The pall-bearers were Stewart L. DeKrafft, Philip Parmalee, J. Clifford Turpin, Frank Schaffer, F. C. Wiggins and D. M. Linnard.

DRAWS TO A CLOSE.

Delegates who are attending the California Young Men's Christian Association convention, in session here, are indefatigable workers. They followed up a busy day last Friday with a still busier one yesterday. Meeting followed meeting, with hardly a gap between, and an unbelievable amount of speaking and consideration on this subject and that was crammed into the time.

Six meetings and a luncheon made up the morning programme. The afternoon opened with an automobile ride about the city, with a State council meeting at 2:30 o'clock, and a baseball game at 3:30 o'clock. A swimming exhibition that was planned was called off. There was a supper at 6:30 o'clock, and in the evening J. S. Tichenor and Dr. Edward A. Steiner spoke at the First Baptist Church later. Miss Helen Gould attended the meeting.

Trustees to serve for the ensuing year were elected yesterday. Thomas R. Reed, of Huemene, and T. R. Beard, of Modesto, are the new members of the board. Those re-elected are Wallace M. Alexander, of Oakland; Frank Miller, Riverside; A. B. Cass, Los Angeles; C. Z. Merritt, Oakland; H. J. McCoy, San Francisco, and George W. Marston, San Diego.

The new executive committee is made up of Dr. Solon Briggs, of Pasadena; D. E. Luther, Los Angeles; George B. McDougal, San Francisco; George W. Marston, San Diego; H. J. McCoy, San Francisco; A. L. Munger, Fresno; Dr. E. E. Kelly, Pomona; B. B. Wilcox, Oakland; C. A. Maywell, San Francisco, and J. G. Warren, Los Angeles.

After a "quiet hour" at the association building the delegates will attend services this morning at the various churches. There will be a meeting for men at the association building at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The speakers will be Dr. R. A. Torry, Dr. Lyman B. Sperry and Raymond O. Hanson. Harry N. Holmes will address a meeting for women. Deputation meetings will consume the remainer of the afternoon, and tonight farewell services will be held at the First Presbyterian Church. J. E. Sprunger will preside.

SEEK LOST BOY.

The police yesterday were asked to aid in a search for Raymond B. Jewett, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Jewett, of No. 1743 Norton avenue, who mysteriously disappeared from his home last Friday morning. He is a boy who has no wild habits. He was much interested in preparing for the part he was to take in an Easter song service at the Episcopal Church today, and his parents are plunged into wild anxiety for his safety.

When the boy left his home he wore brown knickerbockers and black shoes and stockings. He is dark complexioned and has a dimple in his chin.

WILL BEGIN SOON.

According to Horace M. Dobbins, president of the Pasadena Rapid Transit Company, it is the expectation of the directors to begin work the middle of next summer on the proposed line that is to bring Pasadena within twelve minutes of Los Angeles.

Dobbins yesterday would neither deny nor affirm a rumor current in the city that an English syndicate has purchased $2,000,000 worth of the bonds.

TO OPEN OFFICE.

With the establishing of headquarters tomorrow at the corner of Fair Oaks avenue and Colorado street, the newly-organized Taft Republican Club of Pasadena today will enter actively into the campaign. It will occupy the rooms recently vacated by the San Gabriel Valley Bank.

Miss Attie Weigel has been appointed assistant secretary of the organization. She is a deputy County Clerk and will register all voters who call between 8:30 o'clock in the morning and 5 o'clock in the evening, daily.

CITY BRIEFS.

A meeting of the New Century Club will be held next Tuesday evening at the home of Dr. R. W. Reynolds, No. 564 East Colorado street.

Ernest Batchelder will read a paper on "Cathedral Building" before the Shakespeare Club next Tuesday afternoon.

Long Beach.

POLITICS NOW STRICTLY TABOO

Long Beach Club Perpetuates an Old Regulation.

Rodgers' Helper Buys Aeroplane for Future Flights.

President of Pike Association Would Stop Gossip.

LONG BEACH, April 6.—The City Club, organized to discuss in a nonpartisan way civic improvement propositions, last night by a good majority refused to amend its rule that no member of the club shall be either an office-holder or a candidate for office.

This rule has been one of the salient features of the club, and if a member came within either of these classes he automatically ceased to be a member. The action of the club indicates that its members want to remain out of politics. President Knight announced his board of governors as the following chairmen of committees: Public Utilities, A. C. Malone; Information, George B. Early; Legislation, F. H. Downs; Commerce, John C. Farman; Public Health, Dr. R. B. Sweet; Public Improvements, S. J. Abrams; Public Morals, D. M. Cate.

The club also indorsed the proposed Looff pier franchise and appointed a committee to take up with the Pacific Electric the question of universal transfers, from the main line such as exists in Pasadena.

MISSING TAILOR.

A son of James W. Russell, the missing tailor, who left home last Sunday with a younger son, today received a letter from his father dated at Ogden, Utah, and which stated that he was en route to visit relatives in Sedalia, Mo., and would return before long. No explanation was given of his sudden and unceremonious departure.

BUYS WRECKED FLYER.

Frank Schaffer, the mechanician of the late Calbraith Rodgers, today purchased the wreck of No. 27, the plane in which the aviator fell to death, paying $1500 for it.

The machine will be rebuilt and Schaffer will make the Chicago flights for which Rodgers had a contract. Charles Wiggins, the Dayton boy, studying under Rodgers, will go to San Diego and complete his study under Lieut. Rodgers, the dead aviator's cousin.

To quiet ugly rumors regarding Rodgers, S. F. Duree, president of the Pike Association, today announced that $100 would be given to anyone proving that Calbraith Rodgers "ever took a drink" in the convivial sense.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Easter Sunday afternoon the Pike Association will give a baby show and parade. Prizes are offered for the two prettiest babies and the prettiest set of twins, the choice to be determined by popular vote of those on the Pike.

Secretary Bisby of the Chamber of Commerce is in correspondence with Secretary of State Knox in an effort to secure him for a speech in Long Beach during his visit to California in May.

A deputy Sheriff today took possession on attachment proceedings of the offices of the Midway Southern Oil Company, because of a judgment of $5393 against the company by a drill manufacturing company. The Midway properties are located in Maricopa county.

Residents of Belmont Heights will on Monday start petitions asking the Council to call an election for a $50,000 bond issue for a pier at Devil's Gate. This proposition went down to defeat last week because it was saddled with the proposition to repair the Pine-avenue pier.

Justice Underwood this morning refused to be made the subject of an object lesson. A Mrs. Clayton had a man named Newton arrested for striking her boy, and leaning over the judge's desk, offered to show him how the blow was struck. She made a swipe at his judgeship, but Underwood dodged and remarked hurriedly that he was "not from Missouri," and that it was not necessary to show him.

Sewer Plans.

FOURTEEN CITIES SEND DELEGATES TO MEETING.

SOUTH PASADENA, April 6.—Fourteen cities of the San Gabriel Valley were represented at a meeting of the Inter-City Commission last evening, at the City Hall here, to discuss ways and means to construct an outfall sewer to solve the sanitation problems which one by one they are all required to work out. The Inter-City Commission had sent invitations to the representatives of other cities who met in Covina early this week, for the purpose of obtaining co-operation. In response there were present: L. L. Ratekin, E. P. Warner, J. L. Matthews, J. N. Wilson, Covina; C. E. Bayley, Pomona; Dr. L. W. Atkinson, M. J. Coffin, Azusa; J. W. Stone, W. G. Legg, Compton.

In brief, the sentiment of the representatives of each of the cities was summed up in the words of Dr. Atkinson of Azusa, "If there is going to be an outfall sewer, we want to be in on the ground floor."

At the outset, John D. Reavis, president of the Inter-City Commission, announced that the well-known engineer, S. B. Olmstead of Los Angeles, had been retained by that body for the purpose of making the preliminary reports, and at the close of the meeting it was agreed that one delegate from each of the cities should be named to form a committee to wait upon the Board of Supervisors and decide what legal steps would be necessary before starting the actual work of constructing the sewer. In this way there will be at least fourteen of the leading cities of Los Angeles county co-operating toward one end.

In outlining the work which the commission already had accomplished, for the benefit of the visitors, Mr. Reavis stated that in tentative discussions with Mr. Olmstead, the latter had expressed the opinion that eventually it would be found necessary to build levees to define the course of the San Gabriel River, and that the sewer could be built in these levees. He regarded the sewer not as something that could be built in a day, but one of the greatest engineering enterprises ever attempted in Southern California, and one which could not be completed within much less than four years. "We simply have started something and we want to see it finished," said Mr. Reavis. "We do not want glory, we want a sewer."

Mr. Ratekin of Covina stated that the recent meeting in that city had followed an intimation from the members of the Board of Supervisors that sewer farms were soon to be things of the past. Having heard of the work which had been done by the Inter-City Commission of Pasadena, South Pasadena and Alhambra, the other cities were desirous of ascertaining whether co-operation would not be of mutual benefit.

Mayor Bayley of Pomona furnished a concise idea of the position which that city would occupy in the general scheme, and told of how the system from his locality would work in the lower cities.

Mr. Warner of Covina suggested that the work could be done by the county as a whole, without the necessity of forming any new combination of the individual cities involved. His idea was for the county to build the main lines up to the city limits and let each city connect its system with these mains.

"We can build 300 miles of roads this way," he said. "Why cannot we build forty miles of sewer?"

Following is the personnel of the committee which will meet early next week and later call upon the Board of Supervisors: J. S. Collins, Azusa; Robert Jordan, Alhambra; E. P. Warner, Covina; J. W. Stone, Compton; Dr. F. H. Geer, Claremont; R. B. Bidwell, Glendora; Dr. J. E. Hubble, Lordsburg; Mr. Dunn, Monrovia; L. Matthews, Pomona; C. W. Rhodes, Pasadena; C. L. Compton, San Dimas; William Haslett, South Pasadena; J. B. Chaffee, Whittier; El Monte delegate to be appointed.

Arthur Noble was seated as a member of the commission from Pasadena, replacing Judge G. A. Gibbs, who resigned through lack of time to devote to the affairs of the organization.

Good Looking Crowd.

Delegates to the State convention of the Y.M.C.A. now in session at Pasadena bear the stamp of superiority. They are clear-eyed, keen-witted men. The above picture was taken in front of the Y.M.C.A. building, where the meetings are held.

The rush southwest is on. The steady march of progress and development in that direction continues. Nothing can stem the tide of such activity. That's why property in the southwest is good property to own.

YOUTH SENT TO REFORMATORY.

Admits Anarchistic Views to San Diego Court.

Customs Officers Seize Large Quantity of Opium.

Jury Discharged Because of a Loquacious Member.

SAN DIEGO, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charles W. Pinkham, aged 19, a confessed anarchist, was sentenced to the Whittier reformatory by Judge W. R. Guy, Juvenile Court, today... He will be confined until he reaches the age of 21. He had violated the ordinance prohibiting speaking at Fifth and E streets. Patiently and earnestly for a period of one hour Judge Guy tried to reason with the prisoner. He attempted to explain to the youth that laws are necessary and that the ballot is the means provided for the making of better laws or the repeal of bad ones.

Pinkham had come from his home at Spokane, Wash., for the purpose of violating the speaking ordinance. He left there a father whom he said he had not consulted about coming here. When asked by the court why he had come so far looking for trouble, he replied that some one had to do it. Pinkham had violated the parole granted him by the Police Court and had been rearrested. He told Judge Guy that he would violate the law again if released. He claimed the right to individually make or break a law. When sentence was pronounced he said he would be worse when he got out. Police officers say he is one of the most insistent and cold-blooded of the Industrial Workers of the World who have been arrested.

OPIUM SEIZED.

Customs officers this morning seized fifty-nine tons of opium with a foreign value of $10 a can, brought here aboard the American-Hawaiian steamer Columbian, arriving this morning from Salina Cruz.

Charles L. Young, the Chinese steward, who confessed that he brought the opium here, was arrested and sent to jail to await arraignment before United States Commissioner Sheridan on a charge of smuggling. A fine of $598, the value of the fifty-nine cans, was assessed against Capt. Theodore Colcord of the Columbian, for allowing the contraband article on his boat.

The opium seized is the kind already prepared for smoking and the accused Chinaman stated that he intended to land it at San Francisco. Inspection of the Columbian was made by Boarding Officer W. H. Woolman, assisted by Inspectors Hensley and Granger and Boatman Martin, who found the contraband opium in an abandoned stateroom used for storage purposes with a washstand drawn in front of the opening. The inspecting officers Young confessed that he was responsible for the opium being aboard the ship. The complaint charging Young with violating the opium act of February 9, 1909, was sworn to by Collector of Customs Walter T. Blake. He says that credit for the find, the capture and arrest of the smuggler belongs, besides to the local customs officials, to Collector Stratton of the San Francisco office, and to Inspectors Benninger and Huffaker, who were apprised of the concealed opium when the steamer left Salina Cruz. Special Treasury Agents Baker of Los Angeles and Walters of Washington, who are in the city, will conduct further investigations to ascertain if others are connected with the case.

DISCHARGES JURY.

Because a member of the jury disregarded court admonition by discussing with a fellow juror his opinion regarding the evidence, Judge Guy, in Superior Court, yesterday, discharged the entire jury trying the damage suit of S. G. Sohncke against the Los Angeles and San Diego Beach Railway Company for $11,000 damages. The court ordered a new jury and set the case for retrial next Monday. Sohncke was run down by a motor car of the defendant company. Sohncke was injured. The court gave as his reason for discharging the jury that two disputed violations of the instructions of the court were attributed to one juror by a fellow juror, whose conscience caused him to reveal the violations to the court.

ESTABLISHES LIBRARY.

The Board of Supervisors will establish a county free library July 1, at which time funds will be available. A librarian will be appointed to take charge of the work. Books will be kept at a central library in San Diego and sent to branches throughout the county. Books will be loaned by the State Library at Sacramento. In establishing a county library here the Board of Supervisors complied with petitions and letters from leading residents of every part of the county.

VICTIM OF AN ACCIDENT.

Small Upland Boy Shot While at Play, Is Buried at Bellevue Cemetery.. News Briefs.

UPLAND, April 6.—The funeral of Hilton M. Reed, the 8-year-old boy who was accidentally shot and killed while playing with some companions a few days ago, was held at the First Methodist Church, of this city, yesterday afternoon, and was conducted by Rev. S. S. Sampson, pastor. Interment was at Bellevue Cemetery.

SCHOOL ELECTION.

School election, both for the Upland and for the Union High School district, was held yesterday and resulted in the selection of Mr. Edward C. Harwood to succeed himself on the grammar school board, this city, and also of Messrs. Harry C. Kenney and Edward C. Harwood as the school members of the Union High School Board. The name of Byron J. Goodrich, a former member of the high board, was placed before the voters by some of his friends, but Mr. Harwood was chosen. A total of eight women went to the polls in this city to vote.

NEWS BRIEFS.

A number of the local real estate dealers are seeking the adoption of an ordinance by the Board of Trustees which will have for its purpose the doing away with the "curb-stone real-estate brokers" of Upland. The ordinance sought to pass will compel all real estate men to maintain offices, and to pay the usual license.

The Carnegie Library, plans as approved by both the City Trustees and the Chamber of Commerce directors, have now been forwarded to the agents for Mr. Carnegie for his acceptance or rejection. A fund of $10,000 is assured, with prospects for a possible $12,000 for the proposed building.

The woman's Literary Club, assisted by other local talent, presented the amateur operetta, "Merry Milk Maids," at the auditorium last evening, and a crowded house greeted the affair. The ladies will add a comfortable sum to their treasury by the play.

The organization of the Upland Taft Club is scheduled for next Tuesday evening at the rooms of the Woman's Literary Club, over the Commercial National Bank. Postals are mailed to all those members who have already signed the long list, and others who wish to officiate with the organization are asked to attend the meeting Tuesday night.

RIVERSIDE COURT SETS TRIAL FOR LAST OF MAY.

Bodies of Victims Are Sent to Riverside for Interment—Public Library Will Be Open to the Public Today for First Time in History of the Institution.

RIVERSIDE, April 6. — Frank Bauwaraerts, held here for the killing of Mrs. Harriet Guyot and Miss Julia Francois at Chuckawalla Springs, today entered a plea of not guilty to the charge before Judge Densmore. His trial was set for May 21, and a drawn jury of sixty ordered.

Richard L. North and A. H. Winder, attorneys appointed by the court to defend the Belgian, are making an investigation of the murder where it was committed in order to more intelligently defend their client.

A local undertaking firm today received the body of the elder woman from Imperial Junction, the nearest railroad point to the scene of the tragedy. The body of the girl was shipped to the Dalles, where a subscription of $225 was raised by her friends to pay for the expenses of the removal. She has no relatives there.

Letters written by both women, and believed to have been intercepted by Bauwaraerts, indicate that they were persons of good education. The letters were written in French to friends in San Francisco, and are held as evidence by Dist.-Atty. Evans, who has not revealed their contents.

OPEN LIBRARY ON SUNDAY.

Tomorrow the Riverside public library will be open for the first time on a Sunday. The board has decided on Sunday opening, between the hours of 2 and 9 p.m., for the next three months. If public sentiment indorses the innovation it will be made a permanent feature. The library has come to serve the needs of the community on many sides, and features have been installed which make it of great service as a public comfort station for women and children. The board believes that Sunday opening has much to commend it to the public.

GROVE BRINGS $50,000.

Dr. W. S. Woods of Kansas City has sold to L. F. Shaw his thirty-acre citrus property, located in the vicinity of Sugarloaf Mountain, east of Highgrove, for a consideration of $50,000. Twenty acres of the property is in full-bearing Navels, while ten acres is in young lemon trees. The transfer was effected through the agency of J. A. King.

The body of Mrs. Harriet Guyot of The Dalles, Ore., who was murdered in the Chuckawalla Mountains three weeks ago, was brought here today. The body of Miss Julia Francois, who was slain with Mrs. Guyot, was shipped to The Dalles last night. Frank Bauwaearts, a Pole, is in jail here, charged with the murder of the two women.

HUNTINGTON BEACH.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, April 6.—Dr. S. G. Huff, president, and Charles R. Nutt, clerk of the Board of Trustees of the Huntington Beach Union High School, were re-elected yesterday, Mrs. U. L. Kanawyer, the only opposing candidate receiving only a few votes. In the election for trustees of the grammar school to fill one vacancy Mrs. William T. Newland defeated Mrs. E. M. Franklin by a vote of 113 to 56.

Interest in the municipal election, which occurs here Monday, is growing stronger. It is generally admitted that two of the present City Trustees who are candidates for re-election will be successful, the only contest being for the third position, which is being sought by M. D. Rosenberger, John L. Gail and H. T. Sundbve. In the contest for the City Clerkship, the incumbent, C. E. Laverering, is being opposed by Mrs. Susie Whitmore, the woman's candidate.

USES HIS OLD RAZOR.

Negro Crawls Under House and Commits Suicide, Fearing to Be a Burden on Friends.

Because his mind gradually was failing and believing that he was about to become a burden to his friends, George Porter, a negro gardener living at No. 2722 Hines street, crawled under his house last night and cut his throat with a razor. When found by the police the negro had ceased to breathe, and the body was sent to the Peck & Chase morgue to await the action of the Coroner.

Early in the day Porter had threatened to make away with himself, but little attention was paid to his remarks until he failed to show up at supper time, and a search was made. A small stream of blood leading from a large pool under the house caused some of the neighbors to notify the authorities. Porter recently displayed symptoms of insanity.

MORE DAMAGE SUITS FILED.

Cement Concern Strikes More Rocky Road.

Ranchers Allege that Noxious Gases Injure Fruit.

Women Duped Through Perfidy of a Rascal.

SAN BERNARDINO, April 6.—Because Dr. Swain, expert of Stanford, after exhaustive experiments, demonstrated that the California-Portland Cement Company at Colton has been able to completely prevent the escape of cement dust fom its stacks, thereby raising the embargo placed by the court upon the operation of its new plant, eight orange growers in the vicinity of the plant this forenoon brought seven actions for damages against the company, and for a restraining order, setting up a new line of action. The aggregate damages asked for reach $127,000.

The complaints set forth that the company is permitting to escape a noxious, filthy and destructive deposit of dusty, ash-colored matter and vapor, which settles upon the trees making them unsightly, retarding their growth and injuring the fruit; that this matter also settles upon the land, poisoning the soil and rendering it less productive, and more costly to cultivate; that it gets into the houses, ruining furniture and tapestries, and is injurious to the health of the community.

The original suits, which were brought by the orange growers against the company alleged that cement dust escaped, and all the alleged destructive effects now charged up to the "ash-colored deposit of dusty matter" was originally laid up against the cement dust.

The company has completely checked the escape of cement dust by water sprays, and this has brought into existence a new chemical creation, discovered by Dr. Swain, the plaintiffs taking his description to work into their complaints, though it is thought that Dr. Swain held that the composition was non-injurious.

Of the plaintiffs, J. P. Isbell asks for damages in the sum of $14,300; J. E. Wilson, wants $18,800; Cornelius Peters, $33,300; Robert L. Rutherford, $17,500; Charles A. Payette, $12,000; Samuel C. Main and J. H. Stewart, $26,400; Peter M. Cassen, $10,700. Attorney Wesley H. Beach of Los Angeles and Waters & Goodcell of this city represent the plaintiff.

WOMAN DUPED.

Mrs. Anna M. Brown, of Legonier, Ind., swore to a complaint today, charging G. W. Keown with embezzling $3620. She was lured to California by him under promise of marriage, and after arriving here turned the money over to him, when he explained he wanted to purchase a stock of drugs and enter the pharmacy business. They were to go into partnership. He disappeared three weeks ago. After waiting in vain for his return the woman notified the officers. She is 65 years old, and is left destitute.

Mrs. Brown met the accused last August, through a matrimonial paper. He represented himself as being wealthy. She fell an easy victim to his wiles, selling her little home in Indiana, and with the cash followed him to San Diego. From there they came to this city. He negotiated with J. B. Gill, a lumberman, for the leasing of a building, representing that he had $10,000 and his bride-elect was worth $40,000. His dealings with Gill aided in misleadingthe woman, who regarded him as faithfully seeking to secure a location for their drug store.

It is believed Keown is the same individual who, three weeks ago, brought Mrs. Ida Wadworth and her two daughters from Newark, N. J., having married her there, and deserted them here, taking $5600 belonging to the woman. In that instance he gave his name as James B. Clarke. Mrs. Wadsworth met him through a matrimonial agency also.

WILL SINK WELLS.

Because the Riverside Water Company recently bought the Benson ranch, in this valley, and is supposed to be preparing to sink wells and divert the water to Riverside, water users here are agitating a move to bring suit to prohibit the diversion of the water. Under a decision of the Supreme Court the company was given the right to take a certain amount of water from the valley, the ranchers here having slept on their rights. But it is believed that by acting now the ranchers will be able to forestall any further acquisitions of water by the foreign water corporation.

Drink Habit Always Brings Disaster

Creates Craving Which Nothing Will Satisfy But More Drink.

To the average man habitual indulgence in intoxicating liquors is practically certain to result in disaster. It breaks down his nervous system. It unfits him for business. He loses caste. He loses money. The habit brings sorrow to his friends and business associates and poverty, misery and deprivation to his family.

When a man finds that the appetite and craving for liquor has become stronger than his will power he needs treatment. He is a poisoned man and not a sick man and needs treatment which will eliminate all alcohol and neutralize the functional effect upon the system. The Neal treatment will do this in three days, without the use of painful hypodermic injections. Investigate it by calling at the Neal Institute, 945 South Olive st., Los Angeles, or write or phone G. U. Neal, Mgr., for Dr. Neal's free book. Phone: Bdwy. 4602, A4072.

FREDERICKS TALKS TO RIVERSIDE REPUBLICANS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In an exceedingly forceful, logical and convincing address here tonight, Dist.-Atty. Fredericks of Los Angeles drew a striking comparison between the platform of Theodore Roosevelt, as announced in his recent speeches, and the achievements and tenets of President Taft.

The Woman's Clubhouse was filled, both auditorium and gallery, with the voters of both sexes, who gave the well-known prosecutor the respectful hearing that he deserved in his fair, if forceful, handling of the colonel.

"There are no Republicans except progressive Republicans," was one of the keynotes sounded in the address. "I have tried to find out what Roosevelt and Taft stood for," he continued. "It has been hard to keep our country from participating in the troubles that have beset Mexico. If Roosevelt had been President during the past six months your sons would today be tramping through the marshes of that unhappy land. We do not want a firebrand in the President's chair, we do not want the 'Big Stick,' the man who talks before he thinks."

The speaker took each plank in Roosevelt's programme of policies and showed that Taft stood for all of them that commend themselves to the people.

"Taft and Roosevelt part company," he declared, "when it comes to the policy of recalling the decisions of judges. Such a policy would wipe out our Constitution. Take either horn of the dilemma, the recalling of a decision of your Superior Court on a constitutional question must either make the Constitution for Riverside county alone or for every county in the State. Any brain that would give birth to such an idea should be looked into very carefully. If we want a monarch let's put the crown on. For myself I am afraid of the characteristics pointed out in the analysis of Roosevelt by the noted insurgent, Senator John D. Works."

Capt. Fredericks was preceded by S. S. Patterson, who paid his respects to the methods of the insurgents in this State in the election of a United States Senator and to the manner in which the last Republican county convention was conducted in this city in insurgent hands.

PERRIS.

PERRIS, April 6.—It is reported that a rich strike has been made at the Spencer mine, north of the Good Hope. The latest reports state that over $1000 in nuggets have been taken out this week.

The Chamber of Commerce met Tuesday evening in the City Hall. Secretary Canning read a number of letters, which he had received, requesting information regarding Perris Valley. A discussion followed as to the necessity for illustrated booklets and advertising in new papers. It was decided that it would be advisable that land owners and merchants should use letter paper and envelopes with views and descriptions of the valley.

At the school election, held this afternoon in the grammar school building, J. S. Lowery, Webster; E. J. Stalder, Lakeview; J. D. McMillan, Ethanac, were elected High School trustees. The grammar school trustees are Dr. D. W. Sheldon and Mrs. Harry Truax.

O. S. Billings of Redlands has accepted a position with the Perris Progress. Mr. Billings has been night editor for a number of years of the Redlands Daily Review.

SANTA ANA OFFICIALS ARE PLANNING GREAT SUBWAY.

SANTA ANA, April 6.—Mayor Frank Ey and City Engineer S. H. Finley, as a committee appointed by the City Trustees, have asked the Santa Fe railroad for an interview that they may go over the project of building a subway on East Fourth street at the point where the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific railroads cross. The project was first brought to public attention here by G. L. Dodds, a recent arrival from Winnipeg, Can., who declared that the city is in need of that improvement.

At first a good many people thought the subway was a joke, but the more it is thought of, the better it looks, and now there are many who are anxious to put their shoulders to the wheel and see what can be done.

To the east of the railroads lies a beautiful section of Santa Ana, reaching to Tustin, one of the show sections of the county. It is claimed with merit that the presence of the railroads, as their crossings are now maintained, is a positive detriment to the development of the eastern part of the city, which is now in walnut and orange orchards, open to subdivision and home-building as the city grows. A score of times daily, traffic is held up on the street by trains standing on the tracks, and although the street crossing is protected with gates operated by a watchman, there is always the element of danger that prevents some people from making the crossing any oftener than necessary.

The subway would obviate these difficulties. This is the argument put forward by the Winnipeg man, who says wonderful development of sections of his old home town followed the building of subways.

Col. S. H. Finley believes that the subway is feasible. He thinks that it should be taken up seriously. The time will come when it will have to be considered, and it ought to be handled now. He says that a subway forty feet wide will provide for a single track for the Pacific Electric and give plenty of room for all other traffic.

Col. Finley, who is a civil engineer and the city's adviser on engineering matters, has found that by running a pipe to the south three or four blocks the subway can be drained successfully.

"Of course," he said, "all of the details will have to be worked out. I think it would be a great convenience to the public to have the subway. I live east of the tracks, and many times in going to and from my home I have to waste time waiting for trains to clear the street.

"I have been informed that officials of the Santa Fe are in favor of the project. The committee of which I am a member wrote a letter yesterday asking that railroad for a conference upon the subway. We have not had time to get an answer to our communication."

Mayor Ey is open to conviction. He says that he is going to gather all the information he can on the matter before making up his mind what the city ought to do. One proposal that has been made is for the cost of the subway, which will be probably $50,000, to be borne one-quarter each by the Santa Fe, the Southern Pacific, the Pacific Electric and the city.

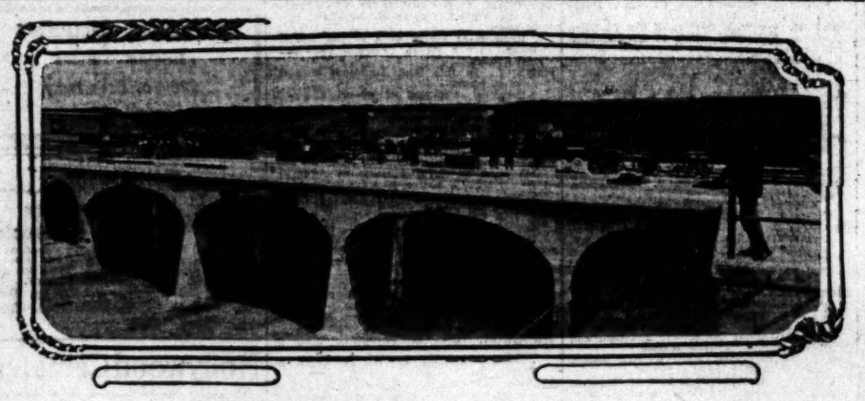
"I do not believe the city ought to pay any of the cost," said Ey. "It is not a project upon which we can expend our money. That is the way I look at it personally. If it develops that the subway should be built, I think the railroads ought to bear the expense. It would save them much trouble. At present they have to keep a watchman in the gates tower."

Col. Finley stated that he thought that some of the property owners east of the tracks would contribute to a fund to aid the carrying out of the plan.

Dodds declares that the subway would give the city room to grow to the east. He has an option on a twenty-acre orchard at the corner of East Fourth and Grand avenue, east of the tracks, and friends of his have recently bought in that vicinity.

Attorney Steele Finley stated that he believes Santa Ana should not hesitate in undertaking the subway. He said Chicago had gone through experience with the railroads in reference to crossings, and the railroads had found it economical in the long run to build subways rather than attempt to live up to stringent regulations imposed by the city for the maintenance of crossings.

"If the city does not have a subway," said he, "it ought to pass ordinances prohibiting the standing of cars across the streets."



Proposed Subway Plan

Santa Ana officials and business men have devised a plan for removing the danger which is ever present at grade crossings. Above is the model which they hope to duplicate

If otherwise dainty women could realize how a bad complexion appears to the experienced eye, they would as leave wear soiled clothes as possess a skin whose aspect is that of uncleanliness. It generally means a skin whose pores are clogged with destructive matter, or a weakened condition, caused by poor cuticle circulation, over which the thoughtless woman has spread powder, thinking to conceal its condition. A few of my ice facial treatments will put the skin in a healthy condition, and my witch hazel creams and astringent wash will keep it so. Sold only at my offices, 416-17 Fay Bldg. Anna Bergeron. GINGER IN THE CONTEST.

Fullerton School Election Was Replete With Sprightly Effort and Socialists Were Overwhelmed.

FULLERTON, April 6.—In a warmly contested election of high school and grammar school trustees here yesterday, the Socialist tickets were swamped by overwhelming majorities. In the Union High School election, Wm. Hale and L. B. Steward were elected and S. W. McCulloch and J. G. Launer tied. Three were to be elected. The official count next Saturday may untie the two for third trustee. In the grammar school election Albert Sitton was re-elected, defeating a Socialist candidate nearly seven to one. Many women voted and took part in the campaign at the polls.

Although the Socialists have a full ticket nominated for city officers, on account of their slim showing here yesterday their candidates have been placed in the background. The contest for City Trustees between Arthur Johnson and Gus Stern and E. S. Richman will be close. The latter two have the endorsement of the Chamber of Commerce.

SUBDIVISION PLANNED.

A real estate syndicate composed of R. S. Gregory, Sam Fuller, George Welton and others have purchased ten acres in the Central tract near the new high school, which will be platted and subdivided into a residence section.

PLAN BEACH HOTEL.

A modern hotel of one hundred rooms will be erected on a sightly lot in Seaside Terrace, Santa Monica, by Mathilda Livingston of Pasadena, who yesterday paid Carl F. Schader $10,000 for the site. Helen Gould Hides Her Face for a Good Reason.

But She Lets It Shine With Cheer at Reception.

Y.M.C.A. Delegates Receive Warm Handclasps.

Helen Gould dislikes to have her picture taken. She arrived in Los Angeles yesterday morning and in a few minutes her car was switched from the Southern Pacific road and hauled to the Hotel Raymond in Pasadena, and when she disembarked she laughingly dodged photographers until she reached her suite.

The reason of this is because the wealthy daughter of Jay Gould—she has more than $25,000,000 in her own right—shuns the gaze of the morbidly curious and those who beg of her and pester her to death when she walks the street.

REASONS FOR IT.

"If Miss Gould's face were as well known as the faces of Morgan or Harriman, she could not go into a department store to buy a pair of gloves without being followed by a of beggars, curious women and others," said J. S. Tichenor, senior secretary of the army and navy department of the international committee of the Y.M.C.A., who, with his wife, is accompanying the Gould party.

Therefore, when Miss Gould alighted from her special car, she hid her face from photographers. She was apparently in a high good humor as she laughed at the efforts of the photographers to snap-shot her and jumped lightly into a waiting automobile.

Afterwards, at the Raymonds, Miss Gould said that she had never seen a more delightful spot than Southern California. In her own words she described it as an "earthly paradise." She was delighted with her journey yesterday. At Monterey, upon the arm of an officer, she reviewed the marines, who lined up on the beach. It was the first time in America, it is said, that a woman had ever reviewed a company of United States marines.

GUEST OF HONOR.

Miss Gould, was the guest of honor at a reception at the Young Men's Christian Association building in Pasadena yesterday afternoon. For an hour, with a vivacity that did not diminish, the noted philanthropist stood and shook hands with each personal link of a seemingly endless chain of humanity moving in one door and out of another.

The attendance was limited to members of the Young Men's Christian Association of that city, the out-of-town delegates, who are attending a convention in session there, and organizations auxiliary to the Y.M.C.A. Several thousand men and women filed past her, and each was given some little expression or kindly word, uttered in a cordial tone.

Miss Gould was attired in a simple dark dress and black hat with lilac ostrich plumes. In the hollow of her left arm she carried an immense bouquet of pink roses, which was presented to her upon her arrival by Miss Drucilla Allen.

The reception took place in the lobby of the Y.M.C.A. building, the walls and ceiling of which were decorated with festoons of greenery and flowers. In an adjoining room refreshments were served, and there was orchestra music.

W. B. Fry, president of the Young Men's Christian Association of Pasadena, stood at Miss Gould's right in the receiving line, and introduced the visitors to her. Others in the line were Mrs. F. S. Wallace, president of the Pasadena Young Woman's Christian Association; Mrs. Theodora Coleman, president of the Women's Auxiliary of the men's association there, and Mrs. O. Shepherd Barhnum.

The committee which had charge of the reception consisted of Frank S. Wallace, Dr. Webster Merrifield, Charles Lee King and C. M. Campbell.

Miss Gould arrived in Pasadena yesterday morning in her private car, and is staying at the Raymond Hotel. She has ordered her automobile sent from the East, and will probably be there, or in Southern California, several weeks, although no definite announcement as to the length of her visit has been made.

Those who arrived with Miss Gould yesterday are Miss Anna Palm, a cousin; Mrs. Edward Shaw, Miss Agnes Stebbins and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Tichenor.

Life Insurance or Death Insurance—Which?
People willingly pay large sums for life insurance, which is really death insurance; but real life insurance frequently consists in taking Eckman's Alterative.
Can any "lung sick" person afford not to take the Alterative?
It sharpens the appetite, makes life look different, brings better health with greater earning power. Often persons are so much improved that they can work even before they are finally cured.
Investigate it, if you are broad minded enough to believe that there can be a cure for Consumption, which has not been sensationally exploited, or which is not based merely on climatic or diet restrictions. Mr. Webb's report follows:
Weldon, Ill.
"Gentlemen:—During 1905, my physician sent me to Texas, from there to Colorado. I became worse and was sent home to die. I heard of Eckman's Alterative, began treatment, and was cured. I earnestly recommend Eckman's wonderful cure for Consumption."
(Signed Affidavit) ARTHUR WEBB.
Fuller details of this case upon request.
Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. For sale by the Owl Drug Co.'s Stores, and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet of cured cases and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

DANGERS OF FAT
How Fat Affects the Heart

Fatty Degeneration of the Heart may well be a bugbear to all fat people. An excess of fat around the heart not only impedes its movements, but gradually changes the substance of the organ. The pulse becomes weaker; excitement or extra exertion causes throbbing in throat and temples; the breath is short and gaspy. When these symptoms come to the man or woman who is too fat, steps should be taken to remove the excess fat, not only from the suffocated heart, but from other parts of the body where it makes its unwelcome appearance. Many so called fat reducers are dangerous to the fatty heart, placing upon it an added burden by stimulating its action. There is but one sure, harmless fat reducer known, the now famous Marmola Prescription of a Detroit physician, and its more convenient form Marmola Prescription Tablets. By means of these harmless little tablets, thousands of over fat people have surely and safely reduced their weight at the rate of 10 to 16 oz. a day without exercise or dieting.
Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists, or the Marmola Company, 235 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., at 75c. for a large case.

Every now and then we hear of some brilliant young fellow blighted in his career because his eyes gave out. Parents should see to it that before permitting their children to take up any prolonged course of study the eyes are in condition to stand the strain, and the surest way to determine this is to have them examined by a competent optician so that if glasses are needed, they are worn before it is too late.

Who Will Help?

GLORIOUS MAY DAY FOR CITY'S POOR CHILDREN.

Tiny Unfortunates from Hospitals and Orphanages to Be Given Outing of Their Lives in the Open by the Sea. "The Times" Asks Automobile Owners to Be Hosts to the Little Ones.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

MAY DAY, and a joy ride! Won't that be some gleeful gad—some rapturous ramble? There aren't any gilt-edged invitations to it, but please believe me, there won't be any "regrets" either!

The second annual automobile excursion to the seaside, for poor children, arranged by The Times and given through the kindness of many automobile owners, will take place on Wednesday, May 1.

So please get your automobiles ready, good people!

Many children will take their very first ride in a machine that gladsome day; some will see the ocean for the first time.

The Times doesn't claim the credit. The Times is but the medium through which those kindly disposed people who love children and sympathize with unfortunate little ones, may have a chance to do just what they want to do, anyway—give the kids a good time. These people were once very young themselves—in fact, the people who are going to loan their autos on May Day are the people who never will quite grow old.

Don't you remember your own delight in a "buggy ride"—your joy when some kind neighbor picked you up in the one-hoss shay, and the old family nag—going as fast as five miles an hour sometimes—swung you out into the country, where the fresh air blew the color to your faces, and you tingled all over with the joy of it? Or when you used to hang on the tail of the ice-wagon till you fell or were pushed off?

Last year, when machines for 250 children were asked for, autos for 1000 were forthcoming! And the day is a never-to-be-forgotten occasion in many little lives. The town hasn't shrunk any since then, and neither have the hearts of the people.

And remember, anything from a limousine to a delivery truck looks good to the small boy. He doesn't need any fancy little electric, with plush insides and window vases full of orchids to make him happy. All he needs is to be GOING!

Bowling along over miles of glass-smooth roads, between the green fields and among the wild flowers, on to the shining sea, then dabbling in the ocean, and playing in the sand—the kids are destined to have the time of their young lives.

VENICE THROWN OPEN.

Venice will be thrown wide open to the little ones, too—scenic trip, young railway, whirl the rapids, and all—and it's safe to say no youngster will return home without having taken in all the thrilly imitation-dangers he has a chance at.

"Of course, I'll loan my machine," said a certain Man-About-Town, "and I expect the joyful jinks down there will make a three-ring circus look like a meeting of the Peace Committee of the old ladies' home."

It is the little city shut-ins, especially, that The Times is giving you a chance to make happy for one blissful day—the tiny orphans, shut in between the relentless walls of poverty, as well as the convalescent babes of the Children's Hospital, and the pupils of the deaf schools.

Over at the Children's Hospital, indeed, a dozen bright, eager little faces peeped at me from their pillows, as I told the nurses about the trip that is being planned for them. Wistful eyes followed me about, wistful hands stretched up to me—"Oh, lady, kin I go, kin I go?"

"May Day ride is better than chicking for dinner!" cries a bright-eyed little Italian cherub with paralyzed limbs; and Joe, a wistful-faced little urchin, with tubercular limbs, who has been in bed so long he's forgotten directions, is hoping to be able to go, and eagerly asks "which road you take to go to Venice."

Rosie, a merry little French girl, with brilliant dark eyes, who has had both pathetic little bowed legs broken, with the object of setting them on straight, next time, is nearly well, and tells you vividly of all the stunts she means to do when she gets to the beach—stunts that would wear out a coal-heaver—but she's having a good time in her mind, and after all that's the best we get out of the world, anyway, the philosophers tell us.

GLORIOUS OUTING.

Glen, rosy and bright-eyed, in spite of his year and a half in bed with a weight on his leg, last year wistfully watched the others depart on the memorable joy ride, but now he can move about a little, and joyfully told me that this year he hopes to go, too. And Frankie, the tiny Mexican hunchback boy, will probably see the ocean for the first time, and perhaps, alas, for the last—for Frankie is very frail. But oh, how eager he is for the trip—it was he who reached up his arms to me, crying—"Kin I go, lady? Kin I go?"

Rita, a dark-eyed, sweet-natured little girl of 6, says, when you ask her about herself, "Oh, I'm just a Mex!" but begs to go joy-riding, too, and Evelyn, a pink-and-white little blond with a broken leg, has not much hope of going, because the splints are still on, but loves to chatter about what the rest will do and see.

Over at the Orphans' Home, the children are just wild. Every mother's son and daughter of them—and a ruddy-cheeked, chubby-legged lot they are—will go or break something.

"Some nice to that ramble, believe me!" commented a youthful connoisseur in knickerbockers. "Hope I git there!"

Over at the Newsboys' Home, a tiny lad cried out, fresh as mountain air, "Me to de luxury wagon! Say, I sure will beg dat torch-light! Dey won't need no pin no vi'lets on me to know I belongs to de procesh. And we didn't have to sit up and beg fer it, either, did wes? Say, I'm sure all up-stage about dis yere May Day joy ride!"

Of course there's to be a May Queen, and it is whispered that beautiful Bessie Barriscale, the popular star of the Belasco, is to choose her sweet little high-mightiness. Also, there's to be a grand marshal, to lead the parade. Altogether, it's to be the "maddest, merriest day."

So please, as Mrs. Jarley would say, "Please step up—just step this way," and loan your automobile, for this "gladdest day of all the glad new year!"

Believe me, you'll never be sorry!

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS.

The Los Angeles section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will meet at the Hollenbeck Hotel on Thursday at 6:15 p.m., when a paper will be read by James M. Gaylord, on "The Mechanical and Electrical Work of the Reclamation Service." Gano Dunn, president, and Ralph W. Pope, honorary secretary of the American Institute, will be guests of the evening.

AT TEMPLE B'NAI B'RITH.

The outgoing of the annual Passover festival will be observed at the temple by service this (Sunday) evening at 8 o'clock and tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Dr. Hecht will conduct the services and preach tonight (Sunday) on "The Progress of Emancipation." He will also deliver an address on Monday morning. The musical part will be rendered by the Temple Quartette.

Little Faces That Turn to Sky and Sea.

All Ready for the May-Day Excursion,

Which is being arranged for the poor children of the city on the first day of next month. The great joy ride to Venice for the little tots is made possible to The Times through the generosity of the automobile owners of the city, whose guests the children will be. The number of boys and girls who can be taken will depend entirely upon the number of machines offered for the purpose. Last year 1000 children were given a glorious day in the open by the sea. This year it is the hope of The Times that the number can be greatly increased.

HE KEEPS HIS SECRET.

Youth Goes to Penitentiary Rather Than Reveal His Family History and Cause Grief to Invalid Sister.

Rather than reveal his family history and possibly cause the death of his invalid sister, Charles Baxter refused to ask for probation yesterday and was sentenced to serve two years and a half at San Quentin for burglary.

As he stood before Judge Willis in the Superior Court, Baxter's youthful face plainly showed his discomfiture. He is well educated and hasn't the look of a man born to crooked ways.

Baxter was arraigned on a charge of having robbed a house at Santa Monica on March 19. He pleaded guilty.

"If I apply for probation," he said, "I shall have to give my family history. I can't do this, for it would bring disgrace on innocent ones. I have an invalid sister whom I love, and if she hears that I have been arrested for burglary the shock might kill her. My secret is safe if I go to the penitentiary. I would like my freedom, certainly, but in view of the circumstances, I shall go to the penitentiary."

CORNERED AT EVERY TURN.

Warrant From Navy Department Awaits Release on Bond of "Gen." Mosby From Prison.

"Gen." Mosby,. onb of the leaders of the adventurers who made the foray into Mexico about a year ago, is still held in the County Jail because it developed that if he should give bond that he would be immediately re-arrested on a warrant from the Navy Department charging that he deserted from the Marine Corps in San Francisco two years ago, jumping the service to go into Mexico.

Three bondsmen for Mosby appeared yesterday, one of whom was his attorney's wife, but when the conditions were explained nothing was done. The District Attorney is willing to have Mosby taken to the County Hospital, where he would have the advantage of the out-door air, but Mosby does not seem to relish such a disposition of his case.

SEEKING HIS RELEASE.

San Pedro Boatman Contends That Evidence by Which He is Held is Not Corroborated.

Harry Lynch, the San Pedro boatman who was ordered taken to San Francisco on a charge of conspiring to bring Chinese laborers into the United States, is expected to seek release by a writ of habeas corpus, tomorrow, when the final order is to be prepared and executed by United States Commissioner Van Dyke.

The defendant will ask for an order of the court to review the decision of the Commissioner. The evidence against Lynch was mainly furnished by Francisco Cerise, owner of the Morning Star, captured at the Franklin street wharf, Oakland, with twenty-three Chinese contrabands aboard on the night of March 2. It will be alleged that the evidence of Cerise was not corroborated, which it is claimed is necessary in case of a co-defendant.

Who's It On?

CITY HALL PLAN ALL OFF AGAIN.

SHIFTING OF A DECIMAL POINT CHANGES THE OUTLOOK.

Carefully Laid Scheme of Senator Gates Gangs Aft Agley—Special Election Resolution Defective and Council Committee Must Go All Over It Again Tomorrow.

This is the short and disastrous tale of how a decimal point has blasted the City Hall special election resolution of the City Council. It was Senator Gates who did mysterious things with the decimal point, it was the City Council that took the decimal point for granted, and it was the Mayor, chuckling to himself and then out loud, who discovered that somebody—leaving it to be inferred who the somebody was—needed a few lessons in the elements of arithmetic.

Gates on Friday asked the Council to submit to the people a proposition of levying a tax of 1 cent on $100 to build a new City Hall on the Temple block site. "Ha! he said. "It will produce $350,000 a year and in three years we shall have the building up and paid for."

The Council welcomed the idea. John Topham, who oversees the accounts of the Sons of St. George and would not let a misplaced dot escape him; F. J. Whiffen, chairman of the City Council's Finance Committee, who knows to a cent just what the city's revenues are; and Judge Lusk, whose practice in probate cases has made him familiar with every turn and twist of figures—these three, members of the committee, all experts in figures, absorbed the Gates suggestion without the flutter of an eye lash. Then they adopted the plan.

And yesterday the Mayor grinned—actually grinned. "A 1-cent tax on $100 will produce $35,000 a year," he said softly to Topham, Whiffen and Lusk; "just $35,000 and no more."

It was too obvious. So there will be a special meeting of Topham's committee tomorrow morning to consider whether or not the proposition can be submitted as it was originally worded. And Gates is explaining that he meant 1 per cent. of the tax levy and not 1 cent.

HERE FOR TENNANT TRIAL.

Postoffice Inspector Knox is here from St. Louis to attend the trial of Frank E. Tennant, the alleged embezzling clerk of the Long Beach postoffice, set for the United States District Court, Tuesday morning. Tennant is charged with appropriating to his own use a number of personal holiday gifts passing through the mails, as well as various sums of money, that do not aggregate much. It is possible that on account of the congested condition of the calendar the case will go over until the next term of court.

PLANS FOR BOYS' WORK.

DUTY-CATCHING EXPERT COMES.

Federal Special Agent Says Port Will Be Great.

This Coast to Be Schooled Against Smuggling.

Authority Tells of Tricks of Crafty Ones.

Federal recognition of the rapid strides in the development of maritime business through the Port of Los Angeles, is attested by the calls here of a number of special agents, customs officials and others, who have been going over the ground very carefully with the local officials, in order to increase the efficiency of the service and make impossible extensive smuggling of any character. Yesterday, C. C. Wall, special agent, who, in the past two years has achieved distinction for his methods of collecting duties in New York, working as principal assistant to Collector of the Port William Loeb, Jr., arrived here, accompanied by Mrs. Wall, a former California girl. He instituted many of the methods in vogue and outlined many of the new plans when Loeb was given full hand to reform the customs system.

"When the Panama Canal opens you will have one of the greatest ports on the Coast," said Wall, last night.

Wall is one of the oldest of the corps of thiry special agents in point of service, but not in years. His duties have taken him through many countries of Europe, and he is a recognized authority on methods of smuggling. "This is a subject that has not needed a great amount of attention on the Pacific Coast," he said, "save in the matter of two things—the importation of Chinese and of opium. With the promise of a great increase in maritime travel and of foreign business on account of the canal, this coast is being schooled to its needs in anticipation of what may be expected from future smugglers.

"We have been gradually educating the public to the fact that smuggling is really a crime, a penal offense in the same class as larceny, and is punishable, not only with a fine, but imprisonment. For years the mention of the name of any petty politician in New York, even down to precinct captains of parties, assured the average New Yorker immunity from search on the part of the customs inspectors, who were ruled by these powers to a great extent.

"This some condition of affairs existed in other cities, and when Loeb took the position he did so with the understanding that there would have to be a change, a reform in methods which allowed many thousands of dollars of revenue slip through the hands of the customs officials. The day he gave the word to begin the rigorous enforcement of the customs collections was taken up, and the result has been an almost unbelievable increase in receipts from travelers who are bringing back luxuries."

TRICKS OF THE TRADE.

Wall told of the many different methods employed by persons in trying to evade paying duty. "The range is so wide and ingenious that it would take a book to enumerate them all," he said. "One little Jewish jeweler comes to mind who acted suspiciously, and who, when searched, was found carrying 120 diamond rings of large size on a string. The string was tied around the waist right against the skin and under all of his clothing. This concealed belt method is common, and is one of the first things a customs inspector looks for.

"The great attention paid one of the 'six best sellers' of bookdom by a society woman led to the discovery of a ten-carat diamond, unset, in the body of the book, where the pages had been cut into, to form the cavity. This cutting of books on the inside and inserting jewels is also very common. Another ordinary method of bringing in rings is to slide them over the garter. This article of wearing apparel is frequently a carrier for numerous rings and stickpins. Women hide things in their lingerie, forgetting that they must undergo the surveillance of women and not men. The shoes are frequent hiding places.

"One shoemaker in Amsterdam does little else than manufacture a Redlands.

KANSAS LIAR IS SO DENOMINATED.

SECRETARY OF THE REDLANDS BOARD WRITES LETTER.

Misanthrope from Sunflower State Takes His Pen in Hand and Cuts Fancy Figures in the Field of Fancy—Orange Shipments Compare Favorably With Last Year.

REDLANDS, April 6.—Secretary William Stowe Devol of the Redlands Board of Trade has added another name to the membership list of the Ananias Club. The action on the part of Devol was taken after he had been shown an excerpt from the Oberlin, Kan., Herald, which article is alleged to have been written by F. U. Harmon of Riverside, a former resident and at present a property owner of Decatur county, Kansas, of which county Oberlin is the county seat. The article is dated at Riverside, and reads as follows:

"The unusual dry winter hurt the rancher like a Decatur county drydout. As a general thing the owner of an orange or lemon grove is about the bluest thing you ever saw. The freeze (18 below zero) broke his heart and interest on inflated values is hard to meet. One man wrote to know what $1000 would do towards buying an orange grove. If any one should ask you about it, tell them, Brother Coldren, (on good authority) that $1000 would buy fertilizer and water for ten acres one season. It would require $20,000 more to own the grove. I still own my Decatur county land, and personally (let me whisper in your ear,) think Kansas a pretty good place to live.

"F. U. HARMON."

Secretary Devol has written an open letter to the editor of the Herald which he asked him to print in order to correct the impression given by the article. He began by stating that he had been the official weather forecaster for this district for fourteen years and that during that time, the lowest temperature ever reached in this city was 24 degrees above zero, and that was on December 26, 1911. This temperature was two degrees below the danger point but was not maintained for but a few minutes.

Regarding the statement about "inflated values," Devol cites the fact that never in the history of Redlands have prices been so high as at the present time, and the demand has exceeded by far that of any year. Instead of there being a depression here, at no time in the history of Redlands have so many orange groves changed hands and at advanced prices, so that instead of being the "bluest thing you ever saw" the Redlands orange grower is about the most optimistic being in existence.

ORANGE SHIPMENTS.

The orange shipments for the past week amounted to 222 cars and sixty-four boxes, as compared with 132 cars and 200 boxes for the same week last year. Shipments have been rather slow during the past month on account of the wet weather and the number of cars for the season is not nearly so great as it was at this time last year. Up to this time last year the shipments from Redlands amounted to 3289 cars and 281 boxes, as compared with 1992 cars and 121 boxes for this season to date. However, while the shipments have not been so great, the price has kept up and is now above the $2 mark, so that what has been lost in quantity has been made up partially by the advanced price.

The following table shows the shipments from Redlands during the present season, based on 284 boxes to the car:

CABAZON GOING AHEAD.

Point Formerly a Desert Flag Station Is Being Made to Blossom by California Enterprise.

CABAZON, April 6.—Development work on the new tract and townsite at Cabazon is going forward rapidly.

One year ago this place was a flag station on the desert, today it is a thriving little village taking on all the airs of a bustling, prosperous town. A postoffice has been secured, all arrangements have been made for the building of a schoolhouse, which will be ready for occupancy in September, and a large general store is now in process of construction by the Angelus Fruit-Land Company.

Arrangements have been made to bring the Los Angeles-Yuma good roads through the center of the townsite and this in itself will mean much to the community. The 2500-acre tract of land, which was put on the market a little over a year ago, has been sold out. A large force of men have been busily engaged for the past four months putting in a large distributing system for the water. It is estimated that this system, when completed, will cost about $40,000.

Ranchers are particularly fortunate in being possessed of water in abundance, which is brought down from Mt. San Gorgonio (Greyback) in a large cement ditch a distance of five miles and which, when the distributing system is completed, will be piped to the highest corner of every ten-acre piece. The water system is owned and controlled by the Cabazon Water Company, a mutual company, and is a gravity system throughout.

The Angelus Fruit-Land Company is planting 240 acres to olives and peaches, having determined after exhaustive investigation that the soil and conditions of this locality are best adapted to deciduous fruits and particularly to olive raising, which they are going into on a large scale.

Permanent residents are moving in rapidly and houses of substantial structure are being put up on all sides.

Mrs. Mercedes Dougherty

And her little son, who were accused of having stolen a twenty-five-cent collarette in a store, and now seek twenty-five thousand dollars damages.

THOUSANDS VERSUS CENTS.

Woman Who Says She Was Accused of Having Stolen Cheap Collar Brings Heavy Damage Suit.

Declaring that she suffered mental torture and anguish as a result of having been unjustly accused of having stolen a 25-cent collarette by a woman detective in a local store, Mrs. Mercedes Dougherty, daughter of the late Gen. Manuel Mari Gallegos of the Peruvian army, has filed suit in the Superior Court for $35,000 damages. The action will be heard the 19th inst., by Judge Wood.

Mrs. Dougherty, who resides at No. 1340 South Grand avenue, alleges in her complaint that while shopping two days before Christmas she was accosted by a woman detective, who charged her with having stolen the collarette.

The plaintiff avers that despite vehement denials the female detective escorted her to the manager's office, where she was thoroughly searched and no collar was found. She states that her 9-year-old son, Edward, who was with her at the time, was also searched and repeatedly asked if he had ever stolen anything in the store.

The complaint alleges that Mrs. Dougherty, who neither reads or speaks English, was forced to sign a paper, admitting that she had purloined the article. She says she did not know the meaning or purpose of the document.

According to the complaint she is seriously sick as a result of the treatment accorded her, and was under the care of a physician for some time.

Mrs. Dougherty is connected with high families of Ecuador. Her brother is a member of Congress there and conspicuous in political and diplomatic circles.

FIFTH ANNUAL TAG DAY.

Associated Charities Has "Woodchuck Case" on Hand; Is Preparing Ammunition to Fire at Public.

A large force of assistants is at work in the office of the Associated Charities preparing the 300,000 tags which are to be offered for sale on the street on Saturday, May 4, the fifth annual tag day of the society.

The organization has a big task on its hands taking care of the sick and indigent, most of whom are new arrivals in the city and have either become sick or used up their means before being able to secure work. Secretary Sewall explains this as a natural result of the continued great influx of people to the city. He refers to the case of a young couple who came here from Canada in December, in good health and able to care for themselves. The husband got work as a painter, but was taken with pneumonia which left him with tuberculosis. The secretary says:

"These people have no legal claim on Los Angeles. They are above the average in intellect and are not beggars. This organization is glad to be taking care of them, and will see them through, but it will take a lot of tags to pay the bill."

He says the sale of the tags is a "woodchuck case. Got to sell them—we're out of meat."

CONCERT LECTURES.

Stephall, Well-Known Artist, to Visit City Soon Under Auspices of Stanton W.R.C.

Sofia Stephall, the famous concert artist, will give three concert lectures in the Walker Theater April 29 and 30, under the auspices of Stanton Woman's Relief Corps No. 16, and the National Society for Broader Education, of New York.

"The Influence of Music," "Music and Childhood" and "Music and Life" will be the subjects of these popular concert lectures. Members of the W.R.C. are now selling tickets and meeting with great success. The entertainments are for the benefit of the W.R.C. fund.

The "concert-lecture" is the latest and best method by which to present the value and use of music to a general audience.

It was originated a thousand years ago, but came to its modern form and influence, through the efforts of the great popularizer of educational methods, Dr. Guy Carleton Lee.

It will be presented in this city by a remarkable woman, a vocalist equipped with thorough musicianship, Stephall. She combines the rare graces of the platform speaker with those of the prima donna.

The subject matter of her lectures is presented in such a simple and practical way, that the person who does not know one note from another can understand and enjoy the arguments and their illustration. Miss Berenice Lathrop will assist as pianist.

AUTOMOBILE MEN ACTIVE.

Committee Appointed to Take Charge of Motor Section of Shrine Floral Parade.

Leon T. Shettler, Ralph Hamlin, Earle Anthony, J. S. Conwell, Frederic Pabst and a member of the Automobile Club of Southern California yet to be appointed have been selected by Chairman Flint as a committee to assist F. J. Zeehandelaar in arranging the automobile section of the floral parade to be conducted on the visit of the Shriners.

It is planned by Zeehandelaar and his assistants to make this one of the most gorgeous pageants of the kind ever held and the autos are to be a big feature, as practically all the vehicles and floats will be motor-propelled. The committee is considering many unique features to be worked out.

DEATH OF J. W. FREY.

J. W. Frey, a resident of this city since, 1883, died at the California Hospital on Friday, of heart disease, aged 66 years. The deceased came here from Battle Creek, Mich., and engaged in the mantel business and continued in it to the time of his death. He was a member of the Recreation Gun Club and of the Chamber of Commerce. He leaves a widow and a daughter, Miss Lillian Frey, in this city, and two married daughters, Mrs. James Welch and Mrs. David Agnew, at Battle Creek. The funeral will be held at the chapel of Bresee Bros., at 10:30 on Monday.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR SERVICE.

Rev. Baker P. Lee will address the Knights Templar this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, in Christ Church, where they will attend in a body. Los Angeles Commandery and Golden West Commandery will assemble at their lodge-rooms at 2:45, in full uniform, and will proceed from thence to the church, at Twelfth and Flower streets.

RYAN TO GO NORTH.

The Governor of California yesterday granted request of the Governor of Washington for the delivery of John Ryan to representatives of that State for extradition on a charge of wife desertion. Ryan, it is charged, deserted his wife and two children, leaving them destitute and came to Los Angeles.

Where They Resemble.

[Boston Transcript:] "A man, like a watch, is known by his works," observed the epigram maker.

"And by the hours he keeps," added the wife.

"And by the spring in him," said the athlete.

"And by his being sometimes fast," remarked the reformer.

"And by the way his hands go up," put in the pugilist.

"And by his not always going when we want him to," finished the girl who'd been robbed of her beauty sleep.

Good Teeth Health

You cannot separate them. And bad teeth are as much a menace to business and social prestige as they are to good health.

A few years ago there were pretty good reasons for postponing the evil day of a visit to the dentist.

Today those reasons do not exist. My IMPROVED ALVEOLAR METHOD, the last word in advanced modern dental science, has banished them. It will replace bad and missing teeth with teeth that will do the work of sound natural ones with none of the defects and drawbacks attending more obsolete methods and work.

I do not promise impossibilities in order to secure your patronage. But I realize that the great majority do not know what great advances modern dentistry has made. I want these to investigate my ALVEOLAR METHOD and get my prices.

In cases where it is absolutely necessary to use plates, I have often succeeded in giving perfect satisfaction where others have failed.

I will put my time against yours for consultation and examination. I sincerely believe that you will go away with changed, better ideas concerning dental operations.

I do filling and extracting by the latest improved methods, with gentle and sympathetic operators.

REVOLT IS NOT ALL POLITICS.

At Least Part of Mexico's Trouble Is Criminal.

Uprising at Mazatlan Is no Worry of Madero's.

Mines of Republic Seriously in Need of Dynamite.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

NOGALES (Ariz.) April 5.—There is little appreciation abroad of the fact that the insurrection in Mexico is far from being an orderly proceeding and that far more than merely two parties are involved. Along the West Coast the government appears to be fairly well entrenched and whatever deviltry is raised is usually criminal in its character rather than political.

A case in point, showing that national politics has little to do with the subject, comes from Mazatlan, from which press reports lately were sent concerning the shelling of the city by a Mexican gunboat in the harbor, the gunboat being governmental, of course, and the attacking land force being credited to the anti-Madero forces. The truth of the story, just received and printed in the Oasis, is that the rebellion was not against Madero, but against the chief executive of the district, Gov. Renteria, and Col. Gonsales Ortega, the two officials named taking refuge on the gunboat Gen. Guerrero, which had done the bombarding. When the fight was over, they resigned their respective offices, and Carlos Echeverria was installed as provisional Governor, while Don Justo Tirado, who commanded the successful attacking party, was made prefect. The new State and district officials are reported in accord with the Madero government, and they have given out the information that they will proceed against all the bands of alleged Zapatistas who are overrunning the state, and will restore order. The shelling of the city was simply the accidental dropping of a shot near the Southern Pacific depot, as the gunboat was getting the range of a column of the local insurgents, approaching over a railroad causeway.

OBJECTS TO REPORTS.

Maj. Charles Hine, vice-president and general manager of the Southern Pacific of Mexico, has addressed to the authorities at Washington a strong protest against the news concerning alleged disturbances on the West Coast. In his letter Maj. Hine stated that within the week he had come from Mazatlan and Culiacan, where he had found everything peaceful and quiet, yet in American newspapers he read sensational accounts of battles which never occurred.

A report that arms and ammunition had been found by customs officials secreted in the private car of Maj. Hine at Nogales is denied, though a Pullman car on the same train was searched most thoroughly by Mexican soldiery, even mirrors being removed and the walls of the car investigated. Information had reached the Mexican authorities that a large shipment of ammunition had been made through the connivance of sleeping-car employees.

MINES NEED DYNAMITE.

A late order of President Taft prohibiting the shipping of explosives into Mexico has had a serious effect upon a number of mining companies, which had been receiving regular consignments of dynamite. A carload of giant powder consigned to the Fundiciones de Sinaloa at Guaymas was for a time held up in Nogales, threatening suspension of a large number of small mining enterprises south of this point. The same condition existed at Douglas, through which point are taken powder shipments for the great Montezuma mine at Nacozari and the Tigre mine. It is understood that the President has just modified his order, permitting the exportation of mining explosives under proper safeguards.

The unsettled civil conditions of Northern Mexico are responsible for the temporary abandonment of a large number of mining properties. This situation has been seized upon by predatory Mexicans and in a number of cases the mines are being entered for the purpose of extracting the richest of the gold and silver ores which then are smeltered in crude furnaces. One specific instance concerns the Cinco de Mayo mine of Col. Garcia, where the dump is said to have been robbed of a large quantity of rich ore.

TRACK-LAYING BEGINS. EXTENSION IS RUSHED.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) April 5.—Superintendent F. B. After November 1 trains Nos. 1 and 3 on the Southern Pacific, usually known as the Rock Island Limited and the California, will be directed over the Southwestern from El Paso to Tucson, through Douglas. In June, under the auspices of the Douglas Chamber of Commerce there will be an automobile tour from this vicinity to the Grand Canyon of Arizona, through Tucson, Phoenix and Prescott. The smallpox scare is entirely over in Douglas and the schools and theaters are reopened. The last case of the disease has been released from detention and the city is ready for a clean bill of health.

GIVE A GUESS.
If the Lord loveth a cheerful giver we wonder what His opinion is of the hard loser.

JEALOUS.
An eastern editor speaks with unbecoming flippancy of the "skyscraper folly." There isn't any building boom in his town.

BY THE ROOTS.
If a few sinners were ever as determined about getting rid of their faults as they are when they go to the dentists to have a bad tooth drawn the world might witness more reform that would stick.

A CLOSE CALL.
The woman proprietor of a restaurant at Kelso overruled a justice of the peace by striking him over the head with a piece of timber. Had the blow been a trifle harder the judge would have been recalled.

A GREAT FRAUD.
A convicted forger has continued swindling operations from his cell at Seattle, raising several thousand dollars since his incarceration. A man who could do that has a show to beat the devil from the grave.

THE BEST SCIENCE.
The Geological Survey will thoroughly explore the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. Scientists may find more agriculture than geology about this stupendous erosion, considering its contribution of rich silt to the green valleys far below.

UNPOPULAR.
Congress may do its worst in the elimination of free lunch from the saloons in Washington, but the rights of States can never be infringed upon to the extent of introducing this harsh measure outside of the District of Columbia.

SENATORIAL CLASS.
Chinese officials in Thibet started a row by shaving their queues and donning silk hats and frock coats. When the Chinese have been in the republic business a little longer they will discover that it takes more than a silk hat to make a statesman.

INVIDIOUS.
A special dispatch to The Times from Washington says the creation of a parcel post law is a foregone conclusion. We are glad of it—not that it will make any great difference to business, but that it will put an end to the everlasting comment as to England's superiority in this respect.

GOOD NEIGHBORS.
A hundred members of San Diego lodgemen came to Los Angeles last Thursday for a picnic. Almost every week that growing southern city sends some party on a merry junket into Los Angeles. The latchstring hangs on the outside, gentlemen; come as often as you will and stay late. The good will between California cities was never so great as it is now.

A RASH YOUNG MAN.
Henry M. Ashurst, the juvenile Senator from Arizona, has reached Washington and announces that he will introduce a bill for the recall of all judges excepting those of Supreme Court of the United States. The young man should be glad to leave freak legislation to the Legislature which elected him. The public at large may love Arizona without wishing to embrace its political heresies.

INDIRECT.
Newport society is planning a tea for dogs and cats. The four-footed animals are not to drink the stuff. They are merely to get the benefits of the proceeds in the form of a home for strays. We are glad to see the heart of Newport society so tender. Such practices in benevolence may prepare its members to do something in the same line for stray children, or even to welcome infants into their own homes.

A SPLENDID TYPE.
John Burroughs last week celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday, on which he had the satisfaction to reflect that during the past year he has accomplished the largest amount and the best quality of work achieved in the same length of time in his long and active life. In this respect he is a rare example to all men. The man who retains his working strength at that age has a wealth of experience and a finely-matured knowledge to inspire and sustain his efforts.

THE TSETSE FLY.
The sting of the Presidential bee is supposed to be dangerous to the aspirations of political leaders. It finished Bryan after a protracted struggle. But Col. Roosevelt is in another way more unfortunate. He is suffering from the bite of the tsetse fly. His robust constitution has enabled him to survive the fatal bite of this South African pest; nevertheless he has not got off scot free. It has changed his honored name of Theodore, which means "gift of the gods," to its present form of Meodore or "I-who-adore-myself."

So as the constant returns keep coming in from all parts of the country, showing how determinedly the minds of this people are set against the principle of a third term, Meodore feels the poison of the tsetse fly stirring in his veins. Soon we may hear him crying with the distracted King Lear:

"O let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven!
Keep me in temper—I would not be mad!"

SPECTACULAR BATTLE AND ITS "IFS."

Half a century ago yesterday and today—April 6 and 7, 1862—there took place on the banks of the Tennessee, at and near Pittsburg Landing, one of the most spectacular and one of the most remarkable battles of the Civil War, and one that has been the most troublesome to the historian and for the digestion of the general reader and military student.

Indeed, it was the only stupendous conflict of our sublime internecine struggle about which a warm dispute still rages. There is one thing upon which all agree, and that is that Shiloh (or Pittsburg Landing) was one of the three most desperate and important battles of the war. All previous actions, including even Bull Run and Mill Spring, had been skirmishes in comparison. There were thousands of raw troops on either side, many unskillful officers of all grades, and only that discipline engendered by sustained familiarity of the western and southern kind.

In view of this fiftieth anniversary, the elaborate and authoritative historical sketch in Part VI of today's issue will be found intensely interesting. The narrative of the stubborn battle will appeal to young and old. The fighting was dramatic, resolute, intrepid and effective. There were no intrenchments, so to speak, on either side, and few opportunities for splendid maneuvering; but two long lines of impetuous new soldiery stood up against each other for two days in an indescribably tempestuous duel amid a sublime thunder roll that was lost in reverberating diminuendos twenty miles up and down the serpentine shores of the Tennessee River.

This battle singularly illustrates how far the fortunes of war depend upon what we call accident. If Gen. Johnston had lived he would have pursued on Monday the aggressive policy of Sunday, and his army would have either won a magnificent victory or suffered a tremendous defeat. And that he did not live was due to accident. A stray shot cut an artery in his leg. An extemporized tourniquet would have stopped the bleeding. But half an hour earlier he had dismissed his surgeon-in-chief, who up to that time had accompanied him, to attend wounded Federal prisoners. There was no one present at the moment who knew enough to tie up the artery, and Gen. Johnston bled to death.

On the other hand, Gen. Grant, Col. McPherson and Maj. Hawkins, reconnoitering the field together, suddenly found themselves subjected to a sharp musket fire from a concealed battery. Maj. Hawkins lost his hat; Col. McPherson's horse was shot through the body and lived just long enough to take him out of danger; and the scabbard of Gen. Grant's sword was taken off by a ball. If the one ball had missed Gen. Johnston, and the other ball had struck Gen. Grant, the commander of the Federal forces, not of the Confederate forces, would have been changed, and the issue of the battle of Shiloh might have been altogether different. There is one other pre-eminent "If": for it has been unanimously conceded by Gens. Logan, Hurlbut, Ogilvie, McClernand and hundreds of other officers of the Army of the Tennessee, that if Gen. E. Bouton had not kept up a withering fire of canister and shrapnel from his battery long after dark, thus repelling an advance division of the Confederates, the terrible disaster to the Union army on the 6th might have become a complete rout, and would have made it impossible for the transportation of Buell's three divisions across the river.

What a glowing chapter on the eloquent impotence of military "Ifs!" And yet, what a magnificent contribution Shiloh has been to the achievements of war—the greatest game of military chess of any age!

A sketch of the battle of Shiloh, less elaborate than referred to here, appears in the issue of the Illustrated Weekly, which is a part of this Sunday's Times.

SOCIALISTS IN BUTTE.

The Anaconda Copper Company of Butte, Montana, some years since made a contract with the Miners' Union providing that, while copper is selling under 18 cents a pound wages for underground miners shall be $3.50 per day, and when copper reaches 18 cents the wages shall be $4 a day. Copper fell some years since to 12 to 13 cents, and remained there until recently, when it advanced to 14, to 15 and to 16 cents. The Anaconda company, which limited production during the era of low prices, is now entering upon an era of prosperity and has been increasing its working force.

A year ago the people of Butte elected a Socialist Mayor and a number of Socialist Aldermen. The Socialist officials have conducted a war against corporations, and especially against the Anaconda company. In their meetings they advocated the most drastic measures of violence against the company, because it proposed to abide by the terms of its contract with the Miners' Union, and declined to advance wages to $4 per day unless and until an 18-cent price for copper shall be reached. The company in self-protection was obliged to discharge these threatening Socialists from its employ, but did not supply their places with non-union miners.

Socialist leaders are in control of the Miners' Union. They have been active in urging the miners to repudiate their contract and demand $4 per day and, if refused, to retaliate by a strike and violence. Thus far the miners have refused to do so. If they should follow the Socialist counsel there will be troubled times in Butte for a time, for the different companies have entered into an agreement to resist the unions, and if the labor unions precipitate matters the companies will close, and that will mean a suspension of work at the mines.

In the meantime, the people of Butte have come to their senses. At the election there held on Monday, April 1, the Democrats elected their Mayor and three Aldermen, the Republicans elected five Aldermen, and the Socialists elected but one Alderman. The Socialist Alderman, Leuhman, boasts that during the campaign the Socialists did not "buy any booze." He said that they were "above it." But the Butte Record explains that in being "above" the booze they were only above buying it. They took it without buying. They "visited" the colored club, drank up the whisky and killed a colored member who objected to their benevolent assimilation of the club's liquid refreshments.

He Is Risen.

JOB LOT LEGISLATION.

The initiative, the referendum and the recall have been mortised into the constitutions of several States; but as yet the people have evinced little disposition to invoke either of them for Statewide application. In California the voters have not signed any petitions for the recall of any State officer. This is strange, considering the temptation. A petition for the recall of Gov. Johnson, for instance, would probably secure the signatures of those who voted for Bell. Then the Socialists, who are always ungrateful, would vote against our Governor. The followers of La Follette would remember his treachery to their leader. The old guard would smile a grim smile as they remained away from the polls, and the Governor, with his starboard pedoneum curled under him in a vain endeavor to arrest his descent, would go down the toboggan slide of the recall with celerity into the sump hole that is filled with forgotten politicians.

The referendum might be invoked by the I-Won't-Workers, to repeal those sections of the Penal Code which declare picketing, boycotting, insulting "scabs" and robbing hen roosts to be crimes, and the definition of larceny might be changed to read: "Larceny is the stealing, taking and carrying away of the goods of another other than the property of a railroad corporation."

The initiative offers unrivaled opportunities for the enactment of unique laws. A law to abolish all laws for the collection of debts would meet a long-felt want with many people. A law to establish free dispensaries of spiritus vini fermenti would be welcomed by Democrats, and Socialists, and even by some insurgent Republicans.

A law inflicting a heavy annual poll tax upon all unmarried men over the age of 30 years would commend itself to the women voters. In brief, a fine job lot of "progressive" legislation might be put under way that would add piquancy to election contests and contribute to the gaiety of nations.

SHARP WORDS ON SUGAR.

About six weeks ago in the city of Paris the people of France celebrated the one-hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the beet-sugar industry in that country. Its establishment was largely due to the patriotism and foresight of the first Napoleon, who encouraged all enterprises that would advance the wealth and prosperity of the people of his empire.

A month ago the people of England celebrated the establishment of the first beet-sugar factory built in England, and about the same time the American House of Representatives was, in the language of Congressman Fordney of Michigan, engaged in "celebrating the first serious attempt to destroy the sugar industry in the United States."

Mr. Fordney, when asked what effect the free-sugar bill will have upon the beet-sugar product of the country, replied as follows:

"If this bill becomes a law, there is one of two things must happen. If the domestic industry is permited to exist, then the sugar trust of this country, which refines the balance of our sugar, must hold the price up where it is today and receive themselves the benefit of this reduction of duty, and if they put the price down where they can still make a reasonable profit after the duty is removed, the domestic industry must cease at once and go out of existence."

The Democrats who interrupted and tried to disconcert Congressman Fordney themselves emerged disconcerted from their attempts. Attention was called by Congressman Rucker of Colorado to the fact that there is a suspension in the building of ten sugar factories in the southern part of that State, brought about by the threatened legislation. Mr. Fordney added that he had a list of factories in which construction was recently begun east of the Mississippi River that have suspended operations pending the consideration and the outcome of the proposed law. Whereupon Democratic Congressman James from Kentucky asked, with a sneer, "Are they afraid of the Republican Senate and the Republican President on free sugar?"

And Congressman Fordney replied:

"You are starting the ball rolling. You are breeding the free-trade theory. Let me say here that a producer of sugar from Louisiana came before a sugar investigating committee, and while testifying he spoke of the ravages of the boll weevil in that country which had caused the people of Louisiana to abandon the production of cotton and to turn their attention to the production of sugar. I asked him, 'My friend, you are a Democrat?'

"'Yes.'

"'You are a protectionist on sugar?'

"'Yes.'

"'Which of the two evils do you consider the greater in Louisiana, the boll weevil or the free trader?'

"He said:

"'My friend, the free trader, a thousand times over.'"

Again Congressman James, unmindful of the proverb which bids a reckless man not to monkey with a buzzsaw, said: "Does the gentleman mean to class the Republican Senate and President in the boll-weevil class?" So saying, Congressman James gave the signal which calls for "laughter on the Democratic side." And the unterrified "laffed" and "lawffed" at the exquisite, although uncomprehensible, wit of the blue-grass orator, and Congressman Fordney answered the question and closed the debate as follows:

"My friend, I have great hope that when in the Congress of the United States we are compelled to fall back to our second trench—the Senate of the United States—we will flay the life out of you free traders. If not, I have confidence in our good President who was elected on the Republican platform of 1908, which declares for protection sufficient to offset the difference in cost here and abroad, and, in addition thereto, a reasonable profit. I have confidence in him that he has the stamina, the courage and the intelligence to place his stamp of disapproval upon that bill if it comes up to him."

THE BEEF TRUST TRIAL.

The particulars of the trial of the Chicago beef packers who were acquitted by the jury after the government had expended months of time and many thousands of dollars in an abortive attempt to convict them criminally of a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law are interesting and significant. The jury consisted of a grocer, a grocery clerk, three farmers, a carpenter, a liveryman, a drug salesman, a tailor, a baker, a millwright and a telephone inspector. They were all good citizens anxious to do their duty, and there are no suspicions that their decision was corruptly influenced.

They found a verdict of not guilty because their intellects were swamped in a mass of technical, involved, and voluminous evidence, which they did not have the training to comprehend. One of them confessed after the trial: "We did not attempt to analyze the figures presented by the government, and decided the case on the broad lines of arguments and the testimony which we remembered. We were all anxious to get home, and avoided any unpleasant debate."

Probably their "anxiety to get home" was the most potent factor in bringing about an agreement. It was also called to the attention of the jury that the owners of the Standard Oil trust and the American Tobacco trust were made defendants by the government in civil actions only, and if Rockefeller and Duke escaped imprisonment why should Armour and Swift be locked up? The anti-trust law during the first twelve years of its life was a dead letter. Enforcement of it was begun in earnest by President Taft, for Roosevelt only talked about what he was "going to do" to the trusts and did not really try earnestly to do anything.

That combinations in restraint of trade should not be permitted will be conceded by everybody. That great industrial corporations should be supervised and regulated by law need not be questioned. But blackguarding all the captains of industry as thieves and calling them loathsome capitalists and owners of predatory wealth and otherwise pelting them with Rooseveltian and socialistic pet names, will not cure them of their evil ways, nor help the people to cheaper or better food or raiment.

The strike situation in the East is of the most menacing character. Californians now who have lived in the districts affected by the various strikes need be told nothing about the dangerous situation. They know.

The authorities have not yet been able to capture Sidna Allen, but like the constable in "Way Down East," they have their eye on him.

WHAT TAFT HAS ACHIEVED.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

Among the many achievements for good put through by President Taft may be mentioned the following:

Enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law without fear or favor.

Veto of Democratic wool, cotton and free list bills as unfair, unscientific and destructive of the Republican principle and policy of protection to American wages and American capital.

Abrogation of the discriminating passport treaty with Russia.

The establishment of postal savings banks, chiefly benefiting the working classes.

Great progress towards early completion of the American Panama Canal, without hint of favoritism or scandal.

Railroad rate increases prevented unless they are first approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Practical destruction of the white-slave traffic.

Admission, as promised, of Arizona and New Mexico to Statehood.

Bond issue of many millions to complete irrigation and land reclamation projects in the arid West and Southwest.

Bureau of Mines created to safeguard the lives of miners.

Maintenance of peace in Cuba, South and Central America by friendly warnings and moral intervention.

Income tax amendment to the Constitution submitted to State Legislatures for ratification.

Passage by Congress of the boller inspection law.

Non-political methods used in taking the census of 1910.

Government business methods modernized and reformed by economy and efficiency commission, saving millions of dollars yearly to the people.

Bucketshop and get-rich-quick concerns put out of business and offenders jailed.

New treaty with Japan, quieting racial controversies on the Pacific Coast.

Further extension of the safety appliances act.

The United States Postal Department made self-sustaining, instead of running millions behind each year.

Peonage—the twentieth century slavery—abolished.

Maintenance and extension of the open-door policy in China.

Publication of campaign funds and expenditures.

Corporation (Federal) tax successfully created and yielding $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year without any "kicks" of moment; government examination of corporation methods provided.

Transformation of a treasury deficit for the year of $58,000,000 into a $30,000,000 surplus.

Remarkably able and non-partisan judicial appointments.

Court of Commerce established to review findings of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Workingmen's compensation act brought to successful issue in the Supreme Court.

Non-partisan Tariff Board created to find out and report the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, thus protecting American wages and American capital.

Customs service reorganized, corruption done away with, frauds exposed and punished and millions of dollars recovered.

Extension of civil service control—that protection of government servants—by executive order.

American capital and labor benefited by extension of foreign markets.

Court of Customs Appeals; undervaluations stopped.

In view of the foregoing and much more which might as properly be set forth, there should be but one purpose in the mind of every fair-minded American, and that is to vote for President Taft and prosperity for a second term.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR.

[New York Press:] The simple little frocks a girl loves to wear are always in books.

Telling a second-hand secret is mighty hard, because everybody else already knows it.

The first thing a man tries to do when he gets troubles is to load them on somebody else.

As soon as the devil finds out a man is ambitious he knows he doesn't have to do anything more to get him.

After her own, a woman's idea of what would be a fine figure for somebody else is something entirely different from what it happens to be.

[Catholic Standard and Times:] "So," said the indulgent father, "young Mr. Nervey wants to take you away from me."

"Oh! yes," replied the dear girl, "but he says he'll bring me back after the wedding journey. He has decided that we shall board with you."

Now there is talk of a diamond trust; but we ultimate consumers are not lying awake o' nights about that.

Pen Points: By the Staff.

"He is risen."

Gov. Johnson insists that he is not a candidate for Vice-President. Oh, very well.

The rumor that there is such a thing as the South Pole seems to have been confirmed.

Years ago the three tailors of Tooley street called their little meeting a national primary.

The Cummins and Foss candidacies are running a dead heat—with the accent on the dead.

Having taken forty days off, Satan will now return to the old job of beguiling poor humanity.

The Democratic leaders are kicking one another's dogs around in the good old fashioned way.

Managers McKinley and Dixon appear to agree about as unanimously as Peary and old Dock Cook do.

Explanations that do not explain may be said to cover the recent exhibition of language on the part of Gov. Johnson.

It is estimated that a bee travels 43,000 miles in storing a pound of honey. It is the long haul that makes the high price.

A 10 per cent. discount on regular rates at the Baltimore convention, where the delegates "double." Brass beds, no doubt.

Francisco de la Barra, former provisional President of Mexico, is on his way home. Probably to place himself "in the hands of his friends."

On the subject of the situation in Mexico, it is hard to say just where brigandage leaves off and patriotism begins. And there is all the difference in the world in the two.

The Los Angeles folks who saw the Durbar at Delhi will have another guess coming when they witness the high jinks to be put on during the visit of the Shrine next month.

It must be admitted by even the political enemies of President Taft that he knows when to speak out and when to be silent. That is a great accomplishment, and not to be despised.

There must come a day when the Pullman Company will run out of names for its cars. But to our mind one would sleep just as soundly on 41144 as on the "Wildwood" or the "Windemere."

There will be no war with Japan on account of accessions of land along Magdalena Bay, simply for the reason that the little brown men have secured no such land. Put away the little gun!

The American Congress, through its Foreign Affairs Committee, has adopted a resolution that Mexico pay $100,000 for killing American citizens on this side of the Rio Grande, and Mexico will pay it, too.

The centenary of Robert Browning will be celebrated in Los Angeles in May. Most of his admirers are so busy trying to solve his puzzle poems that they have no time to pass the hat for the benefit of his heirs.

Bob Gardner of Chicago has been voted the handsomest man at Yale, and Stanley Harris the hardest worker. It is a wager of a dollar against a cookie that Bob will be borrowing a dollar of Stanley later on in the game of life.

It is not believed that the people of this country will go to the Democratic party for reform, in view of the Republican record of the last sixteen years. The sober second thought of the people is to be depended on in the present situation.

Colombia has sent a new Minister to take the place of Nel Ospina, who opened his mouth and put his foot into it. It is understood that the recently-appointed official put a time lock on his conversation, and then forgot the combination.

It is again announced that Germany is about to disregard the Monroe doctrine. What would happen to the foreign news service if that monthly statement should happen to be forgotten some time? Germany is too busy looking out for herself to worry about what Uncle Sam is doing or proposing to do.

RESURRECTION.

Upon her little pallet, cold and fair,
The Ruler's darling lay,
More still than the white lilies near her there,
More white and still than they.

The wailers o'er and o'er bemoaned her fate,
And in her anguish wild
The mother sobbed: "Her father brings too late
The Healer to our child."

Then Christ spake there: "She sleeps, she is not dead"—
Hushed were the clamorous cries,—
And taking the small hand He gently said:
"Maiden, I bid thee rise."

She hears His voice even in Paradise,
The starry eyes unclose,
To pallid lip and cheek the warm blood flies,
And the dear child arose!

Raptured they clasped her and adoring fell
Low at His feet to stay,
But He with grave, sweet face inscrutable,
Turned to His lonely way.

Upon His heart still lay the great world's pall,
Still weighed its grief and loss,
Beyond He saw Gethsemane's darkness fall
And shadowings of a Cross.

O Love divine, as by our graves today
Our sorrowing watch we keep,
Speak to the ear of faith and once more say:
"They are not dead, they sleep."

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C.,
March 28, 1912.

Mr. C. C. Chapman,
Fullerton, Cal.

Dear Sir and Friend:

I have recently observed by the California newspapers that you are the nominee for delegate to the national convention on the Taft ticket, and about the same time I saw in the San Diego Union the inclosed copy of the resolutions adopted by the Santa Ana regulars. I am taking the liberty of writing you to express the hope that both you and Senator Ward, the other candidate for delegate, will find occasion to address the people of the district along the line of the second resolution and burn in on the mind of every voter in Southern California the truth therein set forth.

I still have a very deep interest in the affairs of your portion of the State both because I am still its accredited representative in Congress and because of the momentous consequences that wait on any serious reduction of the duties on your great products. To me, it is incomprehensible that any considerable portion of the people or the press of Southern California, including Los Angeles, should, under the banner of insurgency or progressivism, join in the outcry against substantial protection to all the industries of the country. It should be clearly understood by the people there that here in Congress the acid test of insurgency is, "do you favor a low tariff?" Other things may be talked about and argued on occasions, but there is absolutely no other line of legislation on which the insurgents pretend to be united and working to a common end.

You must have observed that insurgency is now confined almost exclusively to the great corn and wheat States in the Middle West. Under the teachings of the Cummins school these grain farmers show signs of carrying out Blaine's prediction of thirty years ago and joining with the cotton States in bringing about practical free trade. How any sane newspaper writer or speaker can pretend that California's interests are in common with the corn belt, I cannot understand. In Southern California fills its place in the next Congress with Representatives who join hands with these Middle West statesmen your present measure of protection for your industries is lost as sure as there is a sun in the sky. Your people cannot trade with these tariff reformers down the road which reduces the duties or all the great eastern industries and then have a shadow of hope for saving our great

Washington, D. C.,
March 28, 1912.

Mr. C. C. Chapman,
Fullerton, Cal.

Dear Sir and Friend:

I have recently observed by the California newspapers that you are the nominee for delegate to the national convention on the Taft ticket, and about the same time I saw in the San Diego Union the inclosed copy of the resolutions adopted by the Santa Ana regulars. I am taking the liberty of writing you to express the hope that both you and Senator Ward, the other candidate for delegate, will find occasion to inform the people of the district along the line of the second resolution and burn in on the mind of every voter in Southern California the truth therein set forth.

I still have a very deep interest in the affairs of your portion of the State both because I am still its accredited representative in Congress and because of the momentous consequences that rest on any serious reduction of the duties on your great products. To me, it is incomprehensible that any considerable portion of the people or the press of Southern California, including Los Angeles, should, under the banner of insurgency or progressivism, join in the outcry against substantial protection to all the industries of this country. It should be clearly understood by the people there, and here in Congress the acid test of insurgency is, "do you favor a low tariff?" Other things may be talked about and argued on occasions, but there is absolutely no other line of legislation on which the insurgents pretend to be united and working to a common end.

You must have observed that insurgency is now confined almost exclusively to the great corn and wheat States in the Middle West. Under the teachings of the Cummins school these grain farmers show signs of carrying out Hadley's prediction of thirty years ago and joining with the cotton States in bringing about practical free trade. How any sane newspaper writer or speaker can pretend that California's interests are in common with the corn belt, I cannot understand. If Southern California fills its places in the next Congress with Representatives who join hands with those Middle West statesmen, the present measure of protection for your industries is lost as sure as there is a sun in the sky. Your people cannot travel with these tariff reformers down the road which reduces the duties on all the great eastern industries and then have a shadow of hope for saving our great western products. You are in more danger than many people seem to realize.

Hoping I shall have the pleasure of seeing you at an early date and with kindest personal regards, I am,

Yours very truly,
[Signed] S. C. SMITH.

Congressman Smith has long stood with Needham and the Old Guard in defending the citrus and sugar beet interests. He has fully understood the conditions and the measure of protection needed. He has never asked more than would foster a home industry—not only in California, but all over the West, and an industry, too, that in 1910 produced over half the sugar tonnage of the world. So, if there is to be a reduction or a free list change, the industry is to face repression or annihilation. The same holds as to citrus fruits and the Orange county Republicans are seeing clearly just where insurgency and democracy, combined are to lead them. Smith has been gerrymandered into a district with Needham, obviously to relegate at least one friend of honest protection to private life and Smith, because of his ill health, has accepted the relegation. Hence Orange county Republicans must look for a new defender of her great interests.

That a Democrat is an impossibility is made clear by a letter from Theodore Bell, the Champ Clark manager, who proclaims the same sugar doctrine that the Wilson advocates hold. Dr. H. S. Gordon of Santa Ana, a lifelong Democrat and former County Chairman of that party recently wrote to Bell to ascertain if the Democrats aimed to destroy the Orange county sugar beet industry, for, in the concrete of Orange county politics, that is the effect of free sugar. This is what Bell answered: "Champ Clark has announced publicly that he is unalterably in favor of the removal of the tariff on sugar, the revenue heretofore enjoyed from that source to be made good by an income tax.

"The Democratic majority in the House has, by its caucus action, made this a Democratic policy. I am heartily in favor of it myself and I believe the party generally is very strong for it."

Dr. Gordon, accepting Bell's assurances, immediately announced his withdrawal from a party that planned the ruin of such great home interests, no matter how the loss of revenue was to be made up, for the benefit of the sugar trust cane refineries.

If Orange county wants clear insight into the future it will investigate the so-called "progressive" candidacies as they appear in the light of what has been done. There is open purpose on the part of the Democrats. No one can be deceived by them. But insurgency presents a more dangerous foe of Orange county interests. Insurgency demands tariff revision and revision downwards and represents the most virulent antagonism to President Taft's tariff programme. It produces men like William Kent, elected as an insurgent at the behest of the Lissner-Johnson machine from the First district as a Republican. Kent openly voted for free sugar and free wool. He has the courage to do this where others, of the same kind, have not. Yet Kent's attitude represents the position all insurgents would take if they had control of government. This attitude can be carried far from Orange county, but it comes home when the House roll call is investigated. Successful insurgency means practically the same as Bourbonism when in free action. That Kent's acts are not displeasing to the insurgent bosses is shown by the selection of him as a delegate of California insurgency on a Roosevelt platform in spite of his assertion that he would vote for a Democrat if Taft should be renominated. The pretense of insurgency that it is faithful to protection is penetrable on every hand and undeceiving.

I have presented these matters fully because they are now under consideration by Orange county Republicans. They face disaster if either Democracy or insurgency wins. No county in California is more dependent on a full measure of protection than Orange. Before the beet industry became so great that it spread over 25,000 acres, Orange county was prosperous, abundantly prosperous, from its citrus interests. The development of its sugar beet fields has brought that prosperity to its apex. Through it millions are distributed through every channel of business in the county. And this is possible only through the just measure of protection now received and defended by President Taft.

And now, since Riverside county Republicans have chosen former Mayor S. C. Evans of Riverside as their insurgent free trade candidate for Congress to succeed Smith, Orange county Republicans are asking themselves if Evans is to be depended on. He has openly professed the doctrines of Johnson and Roosevelt. Before this he had been regarded as a regular Republican. In Riverside, Taft Republicans supported him mainly because between Evans and Cuttle, they wished to choose the lesser danger. In Orange county the insurgents receive and oppose Evans as a "stand-patter." In Riverside the Taft Republicans regard him as an insurgent. In neither county is there any one who can say positively just what he is if not an insurgent accepting the dictates of the Johnson-Lissner machine. He is regarded as trimming for both sides and basing his candidacy on his personal popularity. But the situation is too serious to be accepted by the Orange county Taft men. They want no trimmers, no straddlers. They do not know which side is being deceived by the Evans candidacy; they have made up their minds they do not want to be deceived by anyone. In this attitude they are not alone. The Taft Republicans of San Bernardino county agree with them. So do those of San Diego and Imperial. The dependable candidate is the one who says now that he is a Taft Republican and that he will strive for the full measure of protection to the common interests of the whole district just as Smith has done. A milk-and-water Republican is not wanted.

During the past week Evans visited Santa Ana. He has, he told me, started on his campaign and will keep at it until the September primaries. He has means, an affable manner, a reputation for ability and integrity and a reputed sympathy with the citrus and beet interests. He is an orange grower himself. He ought to know the situation. But he is an anti-Taft candidate, has swallowed all that Johnson and Roosevelt programme and his Riverside organ is preaching in his behalf principles repugnant to true Republicanism and saturated with Socialism. The Evans political candidacy represents an anomaly. Some element is going to be grossly deceived by it if "good fellowship" controls the September primaries.

But Riverside Taft Republicans, most of whom did not participate in the Evans-Cuttle postal primary, are not supporting any two-headed Janus. They will join with any other county in putting through a Taft Republican, and I find that C. C. Chapman of Fullerton, to whom Smith wrote the letter set out in the foregoing, is the kind of man in their thoughts. Chapman is not a politician. But he is a Taft Republican in every sense, is a candidate for Taft delegate to Chicago, is the largest and most successful orange grower of the South, is sound on protection, and has not crooked the knee to Johnson and Roosevelt and insurgency. I have been told that he has been asked to stand for Congress and has declined, because of his large business interests. But he is one of the most ardent and active Taft workers and has spoken for him a number of times and has tendered his services to Chairman Stanton of the Southern California Taft Republicans.

Chapman may not be a candidate though this is not absolutely settled. But he is the type of man the Republicans of the district want to represent them. There is no equivocation in his attitude. He is not trimming. And whether he becomes a candidate or not the Republicans will seek a man of the same type and support him in preference to one whose shoulders are bent with a double weight of water.

There is also consideration of Richard Melrose, former Assemblyman from Orange, who is sound on protection and Taft policies and who would be as effective in Congress as any member could be. Lyman M. King of Redlands is also under consideration and there are many who would favor the candidacy of Senator Leroy A. Wright of San Diego, whose thorough accord with the President and his demonstrated ability in public life make him eminently desirable. Of coure the candidacy of Lewis R. Kirby of San Diego is too much on a par with Evans to attract Taft Republicans. Plainly there is an office seeking a man in the new Eleventh District and the man who measures up on soundness in Republican doctrine, in staunch support of the President and recognized capability will win.

While Evans has declared for protection he is aligned with its enemies This may be a vote-catching dodge. If it is it hasn't fooled the Orange county insurgents because they, led by J. P. Baumgartner, Johnson's special representative, served notice before the postal primary that they would not recognize him as a "progressive." They were behind Cuttle. Riverside progressives also smile at Evans as one of them. And yet he is strenuously trying to make them believe he is all they want. Water is sure to be spilled sooner or later by him.

In view of this situation I find that the Taft Republicans of Orange county are meeting with the greatest success in their organization work. Strong clubs have been organized at Santa Ana, Anaheim and Fullerton and clubs are forming in many other cities. The press of the entire county, with one exception, is supporting Taft, and that one exception is not supporting Evans. The population is aroused by the menace of tariff changes and is recognizing that positive safety lies only in the renomination and re-election of the President and a Congressman who will uphold his policies.

PIMPLES ON FACE CAUSED GREAT DISFIGUREMEMT

For Three Long Years. Suffered Great Deal. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Brought Marvelous Results. In Few Weeks Cured Completely.

1015 W. 20th Place, Chicago, Ill. — "I was troubled with acne for three long years. My face was the only part affected, but it caused great disfigurement, also suffering and loss of sleep. At first there appeared red, hard pimples which later contained white matter. I suffered a great deal caused by the itching. I was in a state of perplexity when walking the streets or anywhere before the public.

"I used pills and other remedies but they failed completely. I thought of giving up when nothing would help, but something told me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a Cuticura Booklet which I read carefully. Then I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and by following the directions I was relieved in a few days. I used Cuticura Soap for washing my face, and applied the Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. This treatment brought marvelous results so I continued with it for a few weeks and was cured completely. I can truthfully say that the Cuticura Remedies are not only all, but more than they claim to be." (Signed) O. Baumel, May 25, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment do so much for skin eruptions, poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little that it is almost criminal not to use them. SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

After eighteen years, Mrs. Charles Shepherd has agreed to vacate the permanent injunction she obtained against the city to prevent the improvement of First street between Hill and Olive streets.

The election for charter free-holders will be held on May 21, the same day as the election on the various ordinances to be submitted.

An attorney representing the Auto Club of Southern California gave hints in a speed case in the Superior Court yesterday, that an attempt will be made to have the twenty-mile-an-hour law amended.

At the City Hall.

DOWN COMES HILL ON FIRST STREET.

ANCIENT INJUNCTION NOW TO BE VACATED.

Property Owner Who Eighteen Years Ago Obtained Court Order Permanently Restraining City from Improving Block Between Hill and Olive Yields.

Mrs. Charles Shepherd, has at last agreed to the improvement of First street, between Hill and Olive. That sentence may mean little to the newly-arrived resident, but to the men and women who have lived here for twenty years and more and recall the fight that went on when the city first tried to cut down First-street hill, it means the end of litigation that kept the municipality in hot water for years and finally reached the stage of a permanent injunction. Eighteen years ago the injunction was issued out of the Superior Court and since then not a stroke of work has been done on the block.

So on the north side of the street is a bluff eighty feet above the sidewalk, on the other, side the block is unpaved and that there is any roadway there at all is due, not to the efforts of man, but to the effort of wind and weather to straighten things out.

It is twenty years since the chain-gang was set to work to chop down that hill. Some progress was made, despite writs and temporary injunctions, and at last half the street was open. The other half remained closed. It was about that time that the court clapped the permanent injunction on the city. Since then every winter has seen part of the bluff on the north side slide into the street, until now it is a reasonably wide highway, but of course few improvements would be undertaken with the block in a half-finished condition. Meanwhile, property owners west of Olive street felt that they were being damaged. For eighteen shady years they have been arguing with Mrs. Shepherd. The Clark interests at the northwest corner of Hill and First, where the tunnel takes its plunge into the hillside, have consented to improve, but Mrs. Shepherd, who owns a much larger frontage, has held back; and, tied up by the injunction, the city could do nothing.

And now Mrs. Shepherd has yielded. A committee of First-street property owners called on the Board of Public Works yesterday and told the news. The committee, composed of Dr. W. A. Lamb, Attorney Gardiner, former Councilman Walker and others, said Mrs. Shepherd has agreed to go into court and have the injunction vacated, providing the city would slope back her property from the street so that it would not be washed down by the storm. Commissioner Humphreys, owing to the fact that he owns property in the neighborhood, did not participate in the discussion, but Chairman Hubbard of the board told the committee to prepare a statement and take the matter up with the City Council. This was satisfactory. The committee will act at once.

STORM OVER PLAN.

COMPROMISE MEETS OPPOSITION

A perfect storm broke over the heads of the special Street Railway Committee of the City Council yesterday morning, when the public hearing was held on the proposed San Pedro-street compromise. The compromise agreed on last Wednesday evening with the committee, was that the Pacific Electric Railway Company would run a red local car service on the street if given a franchise for its through cars, the "jigger" to be operated by the Los Angeles Railway Company in connection with that company's lines.

Representatives from the northeastern part of town, from South Pasadena and from San Pedro street denounced the idea of, as Councilman Andrews called it, "a dinky little red car." South Pasadena wanted a through service that would not be blocked and argued that any local service would result simply in congestion of traffic just as it has on main street. San Pedro-street wanted yellow cars and a transfer system. The northeasterp part of town insisted on a better service for that part of the city. Paul Shoup of the Pacific Electric said his company was willing to agree to anything.

It was finally agreed that the Pacific Electric should name a delegate, South Pasadena another and San Pedro street property owners another, and that they should meet with the special committee at City Attorney Shenk's office next Wednesday night, to try and reach an agreement satisfactory to all.

ELECTION DATE FIXED.

The election of a board of freeholders for the revision of the charter will take place on May 21, the same day on which the voters will declare their wishes on the several initiative ordinances to be submitted to them—on the tuberculin test the rail-way fares, the tax for a new City Hall, and the increase of the Aqueduct Investigating Commission from three to five members, the extra two to be Socialists. This was agreed to at a special meeting of the Legislation Committee of the Council yesterday noon on the request of City Attorney Shenk.

CONTRACTS AWARDED.

The Board of Public Works yesterday awarded contracts for the improvement of several streets, the most important of which were: Sewer in Alameda street, from Shearer to Third, Peter Grbovach, $16,669; paving Los Angeles from Seventh to Eighth, Benjamin F. Ford, $8,032.16; paving College street, from San Fernando to North Main street, the W. F. Hewitt Company, Inc., $6,640.35. There was a scramble for the sewer work in Alameda street, six contractors making an effort to get the contract, and the bids were from $32,899 down to the sum at which the successful bidder obtained the award.

City Hall Notes.

Health Commissioner Powers yesterday appointed Edwin C. Moritz as desk clerk in the health department at a salary of $75 a month.

The Mayor's veto of the electrical engineer ordinance reached the City Council yesterday morning. His suggestion that the engineer be appointed, under the charter, by the Chief of the fire department, it was stated by several members of the Council, would probably be agreed to.

At the Courthouse.

TIMES CHANGE, SO SHOULD LAW.

ATTORNEY'S CONTENTION AS TO AUTO SPEED MEASURE.

Case Appealed from the Justice Court and Indication Is Given that Legislature Will Be Asked to Make Revision—Same Conditions Don't Obtain.

Alleging that the State law regulating the speed of automobiles on county roads to twenty miles an hour was made to fit conditions, as they existed when it was passed in 1905 and does not apply under the changed conditions, Attorney Kuster, representing Edward Arnaelsteen, arrested at Long Beach for exceeding the speed limit, made an ingenious plea before Judge McCormick yesterday on appeal from the Justice Court.

Arnaelsteen was convicted by a jury in Justice Reeve's court and fined $75. He retained Kuster, who represents the Auto Club of Southern California, and his argument yesterday indicated a probable attempt to have the law amended so as to allow automobilists to exercise judgment as to the matter of speed.

Kuster pointed out that as recent as ten years ago a man carrying a red flag was sent ahead of an autoist warning drivers of vehicles to look out for the horseless vehicle. Marin county, seven years ago, passed an ordinance prohibiting automobiles to use the highways at night.

"Times have advanced," declared Kuster, "and these precautions appear ridiculous and would not be tolerated now. The law as to twenty miles an hour does not meet conditions now, and the minimum speed should be increased. Horses have become accustomed to automobiles and pedestrians have not the same fear. Hence the speed regulation is not applicable any more than the red flag was in England ten years ago."

Judge McCormick took the case under advisement.

AVIATOR'S ESTATE.

WIDOW FILES PETITION.

Calbraith P. Rodgers, the aviator, who lost his life at Long Beach last Wednesday, left an estate valued at $20,000. Of this amount $12,760.91 is in cash and letters of credit. The petition for the administration of the estate was filed by the widow, Mabel A Graves Rodgers yesterday. Rodgers left no will.

Among the assets enumerated are a Wright biplane worth $5000; a five-passenger automobile, valued at $1500, and a $10 watch. Salvage from the wrecked biplane is estimated at $1200. The heirs are Mrs. Rodgers, and Mrs. Maria C. Sweitzer, Roders's mother.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

Imperial Valley, and the South Side ORDERS WATER FURNISHED. By a decision of Judge Bordwell yesterday, the California Development Company will furnish water to W. F. McCullan, who owns 200 acres in Imperial Valley, and the South Side and East Side Water Companies, at the rate of 50 cents an acre-foot. When the matter was heard before the court, it was alleged the company could easily divert water to these lands, which stood in need of it, but that the receiver objected unless a bonus was paid.

WITHDRAWS CONTEST. Ernest J. Graves, son of Wilbur Graves, who was disinherited by his father, withdrew his contest to break the will and the latter was admitted to probate yesterday. Graves was twice married, Ernest being the son of the first wife. He lives at Geneva, N. Y. Graves had retired from business and had accumulated considerable money. It was found, however, that the estate had dwindled to $6000.

PROBATE PETITION. The will of Benjamin H. Wilde, who died March 26, was filed for probate yesterday. Wilde, who is the father of Charles L. Wilde, Deputy City Clerk, left an estate valued at $13,000. Bequests of $500 each were made to the grandchildren. The residue of the estate was left to Charles L. Wilde and the daughters, Mrs. Carrie Wright and Mrs. Mamie Frew.

COULDN'T STAY GOOD. After escaping a life sentence in an Ohio penitentiary for murder, Frank H. Crawford will pass fifteen years in Folsom for breaking into a house at Santa Monica and robbing Frank C. Donovan. Crawford was sentenced by Judge Willis yesterday on his plea of guilty. The records show that Crawford was pardoned two years ago, after serving thirteen years.

INCORPORATION. The Agency Company; incorporators, Robert W. Sloan, William H. Dale, Norman W. Sloan, George E. Blair, Edward L. Sloan; capital stock, $100,000.

IN THE INFERIOR COURTS.

Spirituous Combination of Alcoholic Beverages Causes Man to Forget Troubles but Makes Others.

Many men take to drink to forget their troubles, but L. Gardner found to his sorrow that it made him forget not only his cares but everything else.

And in forgetting his troubles he walked feet first into new difficulties.

Gardner was haled before Police Judge Chambers yesterday on a charge of having staggered around in front of a picture theater in an indecorous and inebriate manner, and with having brandished a gun.

The man didn't deny the charge. He pleaded forgetfulness.

"I must have been drugged," he said. "I went into a saloon near the Arcade Depot and had a glass of beer. I sent a jolt of whiskey after the beer to keep it company. The combination must have quarreled."

"And you were the one licked," commented the court. "No wonder you don't remember what followed."

Gardner received a suspended sentence on his promise to leave the city at once.

Antonio Sanchez, a restaurateur, was also arraigned on a charge of having carried a concealed weapon. He said he carried a gun because he takes money home with hom at night.

"That's no excuse," declared the court, and Sanchez was fined $20.

Complains of Overwork.

A warrant was issued by Police Judge Chambers yesterday for the arrest of B. Kessler, a restaurateur, No. 931 Temple street, predicated upon a complaint sworn to by Mary Gralinska, charging a violation of the eight-hour law.

According to the story the woman told Attorney McConnell of the City Prosecutor's office, she and two others were frequently forced to work eleven hours a day while waiting on tables.

"When the case goes to trial, I think you will find there is a bit of spite work back of it all," said McConnell. "I gather from what the women told me that they had had some trouble with Kessler, and this complaint is a means of getting even, I think."

Steals to Help Pay Rent.

"I did it because my mother needed money to pay the rent, and I did n't have any to give her. I have four brothers, three of them small. The one next to myself works, but does not make enough to keep us going. I have not been able to find any work for three weeks."

Robert Jones made that explanation to Police Judge Chambers yesterday in defense of the charge that he stole a suit of clothes from a delivery wagon. He was arrested by Detectives Murphy and Hawley, who were instructed by the court to investigate the boy's story and report to the court Monday morning. Sentence was continued until that time.

Hotel Thief Bound Over.

J. L. Coener was yesterday bound over to the Superior Court by Police Judge Rose to answer to the charge of burglary. Coener went to the Hotel Heinsman and asked for a room on the fourth floor. While he and the clerk were looking at rooms, Coener's partner robbed the cash register. The clerk suspected Coener, covered him with a revolver, and held him until the police arrived. At the request of Asst. Dist.-Atty. Shannon, Judge Rose fixed bail at $1500.

Little Weapon, Big Fine.

After spending about two weeks in the City Jail awaiting jury trial on May 20, G. Duncan reached the conclusion yesterday that he could save time by pleading guilty and throwing himself on the mercy of the court.

He did so and was fined $20 or twenty days. When arrested Duncan had an automatic Colt's revolver in his vest pocket. It measures less than three inches in length. It is so small the court was undecided whether it is really a deadly weapon. Duncan was tried before Judge Rose.

Asleep at the Throttle.

The cab of a monster locomotive standing on a side track in the Southern Pacific shop yards was the only place Thomas Cosgrove could find to take a quiet little nap. He was arraigned before Police Judge Chambers.

"My berth was mighty comfortable," said Cosgrove. "For twenty years I was a locomotive engineer."

As Cosgrove hadn't done any damage, Judge Chambers let him go with a small fine.

Pays Dearly for His Job.

H. Gorman was before Police Judge Chambers on a drunk charge. Plain-clothesman Kennedy of the Metropolitan Squad testified he panders for an alleged disorderly house at No. 138½ South Spring street.

"When we got there," continued Kennedy, "everybody was having a fine time, and liquor was being sold freely. Gorman took three men into the place."

After sizing Gorman up for a moment, the court fined him $30 or thirty days.

Harbor Magician.

HARD THINGS TO HIM SEEM EASY.

ENGINEER EMPLOYED BY CITY SPRINGS SURPRISES.

Problems Scarcely Considered by Commission Receive Deep Study from Him—Says Certain Features, Considered Puzzlers, Will Take Care of Themselves.

What the Harbor Commission and the local engineers had considered the most important problems to be met in planning to take care of the commerce of the world at Los Angeles harbor when the Panama Canal shall be ready for business, Consulting Engineer Goodrich, the second day on his work, pronounces the simplest of solution.

What the commission had scarcely given a thought to, the character of the bottom around the Huntington fill, is receiving all the engineer's attention.

Goodrich spent hours at the office of Harbor Commissioner Richard yesterday studying the government charts of the harbor, with the tidal currents. These are copious and gave him all the information he needed on that point.

The building laws governing the construction of the municipal warehouses to be placed on the Huntington concession were explained to him by Special Counsel Hewitt and Secretary Fleming of the Harbor Commission. It was the problems of how to construct the warehouses and how to lay out the great quay on the fill that the commission had considered of supreme moment. These with the character of the materials, Goodrich remarked would settle themselves, the construction being governed by the weather and climatic conditions to a large extent.

The plans for the inner harbor to be submitted tomorrow to the Harbor Commission are to be looked over carefully by Goodrich and it is the intention not to let the contracts until he shall have given his judgment.

The citizens' committee appointed by the City Council, composed of Gen. Chaffee, T. E. Gibbon and John B. Elliott, finally decided yesterday to leave for Washington next Thursday morning. This will give them time to appear before the Senate Rivers and Harbors Committee in the interest of deepening the harbor to thirty-five feet. This subject is set for hearing a week from Tuesday.

Col. McKinstry will arrive in Washington tomorrow afternoon and will make his argument before the Board of Engineers on the same subject. McKinstry has a project for the dredging of the harbor, bringing the six-fathom contour closer to the shore, so there will be no delay on this score. The project had already been prepared in expectation that it would be asked for.

What's the Use?

SEEKS TALK WITH HER PROSECUTORS

BUT THEY SAY THEY HAVE THE GOODS ON HER.

Alleged "Queen of the Smugglers" Shows Disposition to Discuss Matters With Men Who Claim They Have Telegrams and Incriminating Correspondence.

Mrs. Ethel Hall, alleged "queen of the smugglers," is apparently contracting the statement habit.

She submitted to an interview in the County Jail Friday evening, after months of obstinate silence. Her husband, Edmond Hall, violated the law in bringing Chinese contrabrands into this country, according to her statement. She denied that she was a participant in any way in the various jobs in which Hall was concerned, and attempted to exonerate Antonio Feliz, a former Governor of Lower California, of the charge that he was a partner of Hall's in the smuggling.

Mrs. Hall sent word yesterday that she wanted to have a talk with the United States District Attorney, but the nature of the conference was not revealed. An appointment was made with the woman and her attorney and Second Assistant District Attorney Robinson, who has the matter in charge. It will be held tomorrow morning in the Federal building.

Thirty-eight telegrams, which were exchanged by Mrs. Hall and Feliz, were found by the government authorities in one little town between Los Angeles and San Francisco. Her steps are known from the time that she dressed sixteen Chinese in women's clothes, at Punta Bunda, below Ensenada, so as to throw off the spying officers, two years ago, until the outfitting of the "Comrade" at Vallejo, just before the final sailing of the craft from that port to Ensenada, where the last load of Chinese, afterward captured in Monterey Bay, was taken aboard, according to the prosecution.

The break between Edmond Hall and his wife came when the woman refused to divide the money received in San Francisco for a trip, equally between the Halls and Feliz. The amount due Edmond Hall is said to have been about $2000. The couple separated, and Hall as a consequence was unable to pay the Gorham Engneering Company of Oakland, a bill of $800, contracted for a new engine for the "Ethel H," that resulted in the boat being sold by the United States Marshal for $1100.

For more than a year, the immigration authorities assert, the Halls made trips up and down the coast on smuggling tours, and they made money. Then Feliz came into the life of the woman and the Halls parted. The government will attempt to show their constant association here, in San Francisco, San Diego and a dozen cities along the coast, and further that from September 27, last, to November 27, they lived together at the Golden State Hotel in this city, under the name of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Pena. The "Comrade" left Ensenada November 22, loaded to the gunwales with Chinese, en route to San Francisco, and the boat was captured at Monterey Bay, four days later.

The following day Mrs. Hall was arrested at the Golden State Hotel, and Feliz, alias Pena, was arrested in San Francisco. The government is in possession of scores of letters and telegrams showing the relations of Feliz and the woman, and indicating every phase of the smuggling trade. In fact, the telegraph companies at a dozen points were ransacked for incriminating evidence.

With the "Comrade" was captured James Wright of San Diego, who had been hired to make the trip; Reynold Scott, a young engineer picked up in that city, and the Chinese. Ed Tracey, owner of the boat, has not been found, but he is supposed to be in Mexico. All have been indicted. Scott pleaded guilty and was sentenced to serve three months in the County Jail.

The fire department of Columbus, O., has decided to do away with horses and use motor cars in hauling its fire equipment. As a first step towards this change $50,000 has been appropriated for the purchase of motor cars with which to haul the steamers and hook and ladder trucks now in use.

A Druggist's Best Formulas

Any Woman Can Easily Prepare Them, and Can Save Money.

Every druggist has what he claims his pet formulas, says a retired druggist. I put in over 30 years in the retail drug business and I spent many hours figuring and working out formulas. The three most successful ones were a greaseless cold cream — a skin whitener and a tonic for developing the bust and rounding out the form. Of course, I always sold these ready to use, but any woman can make them herself in a few minutes, thereby saving the profit I made.

The greaseless cream is prepared by dissolving two ounces of cerol in a pint of boiling water, stirring until creamy and cold. This cream will not grow hairs or clog the pores, and will remove wrinkles and crowsfeet.

The form developer is made by dissolving a cup and a half of sugar in enough cold water to make a pint, then add one ounce of true gallol. This gallol is a little expensive, but one ounce makes enough for a month's treatment and is certainly the best tonic for women I ever saw. The whitener for red hands and arms is prepared by dissolving two ounces of amarol in a pint of hot water. This simple lotion will make the hands and arms soft, white and velvety.

Heralds the Rejuvenation of the Home

Singing birds—fragrant flowers—blue skies—verdant hills—Nature's harbingers of Spring—remind us that the time for home rejuvenation is here again.

The rugs must come up from the floors—the furniture must have its spring airing and cleaning—and the somber draperies of winter must give way to the dainty, refreshing tones of spring.

For months past, the "California" has been putting itself in readiness to supply more satisfactorily than ever before the spring home furnishing requirements of the critical people of the Southwest.

We have personally visited the greater home furnishing markets of the country—and have diligently and critically sought out the newest and worthiest home furnishing suggestions, ever having foremost in mind the particular needs of our Southern California homes.

We say in all sincerity that we believe there is not another such comprehensive gathering of critically selected home furnishings in Los Angeles.

The display of new wall coverings from both Europe and America is the most beautiful we have ever shown. Exclusive draperies and curtains — and fine carpets and rugs—are shown in greater and more interesting variety than ever before—and the display of new and worthy furniture pieces gives a greater and stronger emphasis to the home furnishings supremacy of the "California."

To the furnishers of the modest and palatial home alike—the "California" offers the advantage of unquestionably superior values — one right price to all, special favors to none.

We invite you to come here for home furnishing suggestions—and we court the most critical investigation of values.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Wall, Now in the City.

Wall is a special agent of the Treasury Department, customs service, here looking over the field, and says this will be one of the largest Pacific ports when the canal opens. He is an expert who made a reputation with his methods of collecting duties at New York as assistant to Loeb, and he knows all the tricks of smugglers. Mrs. Wall was a Pasadena girl.

Poor Child!

NOT A WHIMPER AS KNIFE CUTS.

WOUNDED UNTO DEATH, YET HE BEARS UP BRAVELY.

Eleven-Year-Old Schoolboy Caught Under Car and Leg Nearly Amputated—Brothers Saved from Injury and His Last Words Are of Them as He Dies in Father's Arms.

Ellis Bunday, a 11-year-old school boy, son of M. E. Bunday, a motorman, No. 3404 Maceo street, died at the Receiving Hospital yesterday afternoon after his left leg had been almost amputated at the hip by a Southern Pacific freight car. He gave such an exhibition of gameness that it was freely commented upon by the surgeons.

After being placed upon the operating table by Dr. Carter, the boy raised himself upon his hands, and looking at his torn and crushed leg for a moment, remarked without a tremor in his voice:

"Gee, that looks pretty bad, don't it, Doc?"

There wasn't a whimper from the boy until after his father and mother reached the hospital. Then he cried a little, affected by the weeping of his mother. When she walked into the room he looked up and a smile spread over his pale little face, as he said:

"Hello, mamma, I'm glad you've come."

When she began to cry, he said:

"Don't cry, mamma. It doesn't hurt."

Then he told her how it happened. He and his two brothers, Rolla, aged 9, and Horton, 7 years old, with Harry Nelson, a companion, were playing under a freight car in the Southern Pacific yards near the pigeon farm. Engine No. 1141, operated by Engineer Guthrie, bumped into the string of cars and before Ellis could come out from under the one he was under, its wheels had passed over his leg.

Switchman Furnia, who heard the boy cry out for help, assisted by D. N. Burrett carried Ellis to the engine in which they took him to the rock crusher, where he was wrapped in a piece of canvas. The engine was then run with all possible speed to River Station, where the police patrol took the boy to the Receiving Hospital.

Only two or three times did he complain of pain while making the trip, and that was when either the engine or the patrol gave a lurch. Then he exclaimed:

"Whew, but that hurt."

The next moment he would be smiling.

Shortly before he became unconscious, Ellis looked up at his mother and asked in a voice so low she had to lean over his cot to catch his words:

"Did Rolla get hurt?"

"No, dear," replied the mother.

Then he asked after his other brother, and when told that he was at home, safe, he smiled and replied:

"I'm glad they didn't get hurt."

Ellis died with his head in his father's arms, and his mother holding one of his little white hands. On the other side of the bed was his grandmother.

DUTY--CATCHING EXPERT.

hollow heel, into which diamonds and other precious stones are placed, and the heel then fitted to any ordinary pair of shoes. It is the European tradespeople who have educated American travelers to smuggling. They will fill an American mounting with fine stones and enable a man to walk right into his own country with apparent proof that his ring was purchased in the United States.

NOT SO BAD HERE.

"To combat these evils has been a very difficult matter, but it has been successfully carried on and there has been an immense increase in the receipts of revenue of the various eastern ports. In the West there is a growing tourist travel and the matter of petty smuggling has also increased. It has never assumed anything like eastern proportions, not only because of the smaller travel, but also because the Orient, China, Japan and Russia, have little to offer in the way of precious stones for the ordinary purchaser. On the other hand the undervaluation of semi-precious stones, of beautiful ivories and exquisite gold carvings, of laces and silks, is easy, and is frequently tried."

Wall has already become infatuated with Southern California. "As a boy I dreamed of it. I married a California girl and heard continually about it, and ohly now has come my opportunity of visiting it," he said, in his apartments at the Westonia Hotel. "I was rather disappointed in some portions of it, but on arriving here my dreams were more than realized. Los Angeles compares favorably with any American city, and is far more progressive than most of them. If possible, I should like to call it my permanent home."

Mrs. Wall is rejoicing in her first visit here in several years. She grew up in Southern California. Her father, I. M. Hill, was one of the wealthiest coal operators of Wisconsin, and came here more than twenty-five years ago. He purchased a ranch of thirty-seven acres in Pasadena, part of which is now the famous Orange Grove avenue, and his home was one of the first show places in the present millionaires' row. After his death the property was subdivided. Mr. and Mrs. Wall were married in Edinburgh about two years ago. They will be entertained extensively by Mrs. Wall's relatives and friends.

CHILDREN'S HOME SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Children's Home Society will be held in the First Methodist Church at 1:30 on Tuesday. A children's reception will be held at which a large number of children who have been placed in homes by the society will be present. Reports of officers will be received and directors elected for the current year.

DES MOINES CLUB PICNIC.

On next Saturday the members and guests of the Los Angeles Des Moines Club will hold a picnic at the home of Col. A. B. Shaw at Sierra Madre. Cars will leave the Pacific Electric station at 9:05 a.m. and every hour thereafter. Leave car at Villa station and walk one mile north, and the order is to wear mountain costumes.

COLTON.

COLTON, April 6.—A barefoot burglar entered the bakery of W. M. Marks on J street last evening just before 8 o'clock, and carried off the cash register containing $4.60. Although there is no clue to the perpetrator, the fellow must have been well acquainted with the premises, as the entrance was made through the rear door, instead of the front door, to which a bell is attached. The register was found behind a billboard at Seventh and J streets, rifled of its contents. Marks was in a room adjoining the bakery when the theft was committed.

FUNERAL OF MRS. MASON.

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Gaudalupe Mason were conducted yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock in St. Vincent's Church, the altar rail being banked with flowers from her many friends. Prior to the church services, private services were held at the residence, No. 179 West Santa Barbara street. High mass will be celebrated Thursday morning at 9 o'clock in St. Vincent's. The pallbearers were Morris Remy, Frank Cass, Edward Remy, Herman Kopsiker, Frank Pearne and Jake Sessler.

Magazine Profits

The publishing business offers an unusual opportunity for investment.

This city was made by printer's ink and the Railroads.

This city today publishes the Largest Sunday paper in the world. The stock of this paper once sold at $1.00, its par value—today that stock cannot be bought at all and is valued at $12.00 per share.

This State supports one great Magazine which is controlled by one of the big Railroads—the Magazine today is a tremendous success.

The Magazine business today is dependent on its advertising revenue. No city in the United States offers such wonderful opportunities for advertising. Tons of printer's ink are sent through the mails daily. Even with the wonderful Post Office facilities here the mails are clogged with advertising matter. The advertisers are reaching out. They want new mediums. Without any discredit to the pulling qualities of the newspapers, they are not paying the advertisers as they did months ago. The advertisers are demanding publications that reach the home; that are found on the Library table and are kept through the month.

These requirements are absolutely filled by SEMI-TROPIC CALIFORNIA—the beautifully illustrated Magazine of the West.

Under its new management, this organization has just consolidated and taken over Scenic America, which has been published at San Diego for the past seven years. It is the intention of the management beginning with the May number, to get out a publication similar to the famous "Country Life in America" the successful Eastern publication.

The April issue, which is now in circulation, is meeting with very favorable comment.

SEMI-TROPIC CALIFORNIA is not a literary Magazine but it's mission is to promote California and especially Southern California.

Its circulation will be world wide. It will appeal to anyone interested in California and especially those anticipating coming to this State.

To carry out certain circulation plans—etc., the management offers to the public the balance of its Treasury stock in subscriptions of not less than ten shares and not higher than twenty-five shares, as follows:

250 Shares - $12.50
250 Shares - $15.00
250 Shares - $20.00
250 Shares - $25.00

This means that after the first 250 shares have been taken at $12.50, the second allotment of 250 will be sold at $15.00; the third allotment at $20.00 and the forth at $25.00.

This Treasury stock proceeds go into the Treasury; no commission paid to brokers.

It is reasonable to assume that large dividends will be paid. No further stock will be sold. The above allotment is sold to facilitate business operations.

The management solicit the most rigid investigation. The Board of Directors are made up of Mr. Fletcher Ford, pres., Mr. W. H. Holcomb, vice-pres., Mr. R. J. Simpson, sec'y., Mr. John J. Walter, treas.

The books of the corporation are audited monthly by Simpson & Simpson, Expert Accountants.

JOBBERS LOOK TO SAN JOAQUIN

COURT PATRONAGE OF FERTILE VALLEY GROWERS.

Trade Excursion of Manufacturers, Wholesalers and Bankers Planned to Promote Trade Since Removal of Discrimination by Railroad Commission.

Inspired by the action of the Railroad Commissioners, in removing unfair discrimination against Southern California, the Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles have decided to make an excursion to the San Joaquin Valley, at a time yet to be determined. It is the intention to limit the excursion strictly to bankers and principals of firms representing the wholesale and manufacturing trades, and no goods will be sold.

Formerly all trade excursions to the San Joaquin have been conducted by the Chamber of Commerce and were thus open to anybody who desired to go. By the plan of the jobbers, only those directly interested in promoting trade with the territory under the very best conditions, will be given advantage of the special rate.

The Wholesale Dry Goods Association has taken up the proposition with much enthusiasm and by a unanimous vote decided at its last meeting to go in a body. Every effort is being made to have each house represented by its principals.

Owing to the Shriners' convention and the Fiesta next month, it is desired to fix the excursion for as early a date as possible this month and for that reason every eligible is asked to send in his acceptance to the secretary of the Associated Jobbers at once. The urgency of the proposed trip cannot well be over-estimated as it is important that business men of the city get in close touch with the territory.

THE LURE OF AN INDIAN BASKET.

It was a balmy day in the latter part of May, the morning was perfect as most California May days are, the simple joy, of being alive and out in the fresh, sweet air, listening to the birds sing, the perfume of orange and lemon; the purple blossoms on the umbrella trees was a delight to our very souls.

Than add to this the pleasure of a visit to one of our California Indian Campos, and to the lover of Nature and Nature's children, the time was most alluring.

The prospect of securing just one more basket for a collection already well supplied, gave zest to our journey.

Two women journeyed through the sweet spring weather behind the faithful family horse, over the fine country roads, and as we turned aside from the beaten track and wandered along Nature's unimproved sandy trails, we climbed the mesa. We left the cultivated ranches below us while a soft breeze played with the wild grasses and leaves of the last year's cottonwood and scrub-oak. In the valley below gleamed the glistening orange and lemon trees. They lay before us in straight lines, such long green lines in contrast to the wild uncultivated land above them. The white appearing like a huge checker board painted in different colors.

Have you ever noticed the lavender, pink and gray tones of the wild land in the early spring? At close range they all seem dead and brown, but down close to Mother Earth you can see when viewed from a distance the care Nature has taken to make even the desert beautiful and full of color.

After wandering around through the hills and over streams we came at last in sight of what seemed a human habitation. The wonder of it was that the place was so near and yet so secluded. We came upon it with some trepidation. The camp from which smoke was arising, "not from the romantic tepee," but from an iron cook stove enclosed on three sides by willow branches and reinforced on the outside with barley sacks. We were greeted by dogs—dogs! Large and small, black, white and yellow, some friendly and some otherwise.

The ground around the camp was kept as clean as a floor. A few chickens were scratching around in the dead leaves in the rear of the camp. Near by an irrigating ditch with running water supplied the needs of the different families.

At some distance from the kitchen and dining-room a board house about ten by ten contained the sleeping quarters. (This family being rather well off financially than the rest.) Best of all, we espied the grandmother of two generations sitting on the bare ground under a cottonwood tree in the very act of weaving a basket.

The wind blew up from the valley and stirred the grasses in the basket beside her. From beneath her calico dress two brown horny feet protruded and around her head, fashioned like the southern mammy of long ago, a bandana of brilliant hue. Her face told of hardship, the many wrinkled face and her scant years. In her hand she held a half completed basket. Her hands—they were the most remarkable feature of her whole appearance, so small and shapely, so smooth and tapered finger, and then again how strong and sure her tools were so simple as to cause amusement. What Royce could fashion books as the Indian squaws baskets, with such simple tools? An iron nail driven into a round piece of hard wood, ground very sharp at the end and used as an awl, in making little openings to pass the weaving through. At her side a lard bucket filled with water to keep the grass and reeds pliable, as all the material must be wet as it is used. The lid of a baking powder can with many fine holes like a pepper box, through these holes she passes the material to remove any pulp or undue moistness that might interfere with the smoothness of the basket. With primitive tools as these she had created one with a flight of brown birds chasing each other in high flight in lovely shades of brown from the stems of the maiden fern, others with Indian legends and with the arrowhead in imitation of the mark on the mountain.

We had brought our lunch, we had come to picnic right here, so finding a shady nook between two willow trees we said, "Now we will go after our rest and refreshment." For a chair I espied a tin can with a board for a top. I was comfortable for a time, but we began to hear unearthly noises, were unable to locate them, we began a search. JOBBERS LOOK TO SAN JOAQUIN.

COURT PATRONAGE OF FERTILE VALLEY GROWERS.

Trade Excursion of Manufacturers, Wholesalers and Bankers Planned to Promote Trade Since Removal of Discrimination by Railroad Commission.

Inspired by the action of the Railroad Commissioners, in removing unjust discrimination against Southern California, the Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles have decided to make an excursion to the San Joaquin Valley, at a time yet to be determined. It is the intention to limit the excursion strictly to bankers and principals of firms representing the wholesale and manufacturing trades, and no goods will be sold.

Formerly all trade excursions to the San Joaquin have been conducted by the Chamber of Commerce and were not open to anybody who desired to go. By the plan of the jobbers, only those directly interested in promoting trade with the territory under the very best conditions, will be given advantage of the special rate.

The Wholesale Dry Goods Association has taken up the proposition with much enthusiasm and by a unanimous vote decided at its last meeting to go in a body. Every effort is being made to have each house represented by its principals.

Owing to the Shriners' convention and the Fiesta next month, it is deemed to fix the excursion for as early a date as possible this month and for that reason every eligible is asked to send in his acceptance to the secretary of the Associated Jobbers at once. The urgency of the proposed meeting will be over-estimated as it is important that business men of this city get in close touch with the country.

THE LURE OF AN INDIAN BASKET.

It was a balmy day in the latter part of May, the morning was perfect as most California May days are, the simple joy, of being alive and out in the fresh, sweet air, listening to the birds sing, the perfume of sage and lemon; the purple blossom on the umbrella trees was a delight to our very souls.

Then add to this the pleasure of a visit to one of our California Indian Campos, and to the lover of Nature and Nature's children, the time is most alluring.

The prospect of securing just one fine basket for a collection already well applied, gave zest to our journey.

Two women journeyed through the fresh spring weather behind the good old family horse, over the fine country roads, and as we turned aside from the beaten track and wandered into Nature's unimproved sandy soil, we climbed the mesa. We left the cultivated ranches below us while the soft breeze played with the wild grass and leaves of the last year's dry mustard and scrub-oak. In the valley below gleamed the glistening white and lemon trees. They lay out in straight lines, such long green lines in contrast to the wild untilled land above them. The sage, appearing like a huge checker board painted in different colors.

Have you ever noticed the lavender sage and gray tones of the wild land in the early spring? At close range they all seem dead and brown, but when viewed from a distance how close to Mother Earth you are when viewed from a distance how Nature has taken to make the desert beautiful and full of life.

After wandering around through the hills and over streams we came in sight of what seemed a habitation. The wonder of it that the place was so near and yet undiscovered. We came upon it with no trepidation. The camp fire from which smoke was arising, "not the romantic tepee," but from an old cook stove enclosed on three sides by willow branches and reinforced on the outside with barley straw. We were greeted by dogs—yellow dogs! Large and small, black, white and yellow, some friendly and some otherwise.

The ground around the camp was as clean as a floor. A few hens were scratching around in the dead leaves in the rear of the house by an irrigating ditch whose running water supplied the needs of the different families.

At some distance from the kitchen and living-room a board house about ten by ten contained the sleeping apartments. (This family being rather better off financially than the rest.) Best of all, we espied the grandmother of two generations sitting on the ground under a cottonwood tree in the very act of weaving a basket.

A wind blew up from the valley and shook the grasses in the basket. From beneath her calico dress her brown horny feet protruded and around her head, fashioned after the southern mammy of old, was a bandana of brilliant hue, but her told of hardship, the wrinkled face and her scant hair told her hand she held a half finished basket. Her hands—they were the most remarkable feature of her whole appearance, so small and delicate, so smooth and tapered finely. Then again how strong and sure her tools were so simple as for amusement. What Royal Worcester would fashion books as the Indian baskets, with such simple tools? An iron nail driven through a round piece of hard wood, ground very sharp at the end used as an awl, in making the openings to pass the weaving. At her side a lard bucket with water to keep the grass reeds pliable, as all the grass must be wet as it is used. Also a baking powder can with holes like a pepper box, the holes she passes the reeds through to remove any pulp or undue moisture that might interfere with the closeness of the basket. With such crude tools as these she worked with a flight of brown birds shooting each other in hilarious glee, lovely shades of brown and red from the stems of the maiden hair ferns, others with Indian legends known only to the arrowhead in imitation of a bear's track on the mountain.

We had brought our lunch, we had a picnic right here, so finding a shady nook between two willow trees I said, "Now we will go over to our rest and refreshment." Using a chair I espied a tin basin on a board for a top. I was unable for a time, but we continued to hear unearthly noises, and were unable to locate them, we looked and looked. As I moved from the chair, and taking the top from the can, what was my surprise to find I had been calmly sitting over a nest of young mocking birds, the Indians planning to sell them as soon as they were large enough.

We had brought some articles of clothing along, as I knew I should find some one who needed them. The baskets we paid for in United States dollars, one of the youngest Indians telling us the reason baskets were so high, was because meat and beans and flour were higher, showing even the Red Man has an eye for finance. Formerly, baskets had been much cheaper if bought at the camp instead of the curio market.

I was not long in finding the most helpless villager, a very small Indian woman and very, very old, her face like polished mahogany and hair as white as snow. Although her face and head seemed so clean, she was absolutely in rags. I opened the package, at the same time asking her in Spanish (as most California Indians speak Spanish) of she would like a new dress. Her old eyes smiled as she put out a brown withered hand and selected a lavender flannel kimona and a black skirt. She took the things and disappeared like magic in the brush.

We also went farther, but found no better baskets than old Maria was making under the cottonwood trees.

The young Indians do not know much about basketry. The many schools provided by the government are fitting the Indian for modern methods. The old basket weavers are fast passing away and I am afraid that at no distant day it will be a lost art.

We decided to break camp and wander on. We finally returned to our first stopping place. We found, to our delight, the little old Indian woman clothed in lavender and black, seated on a clean square of burlap, her hands crossed in her lap, her bare feet tucked under her new skirt. Her face was turned toward the west; she was gazing off over the valley of Guamache (peace and plenty.) She looked like a Pagan God, never moving, while below her in the valley, the orange groves and beautiful homes of a new generation told of the results of civilization, and she, the remnant of past history, seated on the ground with eyes that saw not and ears that would not hear. Perhaps wisely, who shall say.

With care we stowed our prized baskets beneath the carriage robes and bade farewell to the barking dogs and with the setting of sun, we drove down into civilization and the land of trouble.

Neil Powers of San Francisco Treated with Unusual Honor by Redlands Lodge Men.

REDLANDS, April 6.—Neil Powers of San Francisco, State Deputy of the Knights of Columbus, accompanied by nine members of the State degree team, arrived here today, and with Frank N. Balfour of Pomona, another officer of the order, was motored over Smiley Heights and afterwards banquetted at the Casa Loma.

Redlands Commandery No. 45, Knights Templar, will go to San Bernardino Sunday to attend the Easter services held under the auspices of the commanderies of Redlands, San Bernardino and Riverside. The local Knights will leave here Sunday afternoon on special Pacific Electric cars. They will be met at the Traction station by San Bernardino Commandery and will be escorted to St. John's Church, where the services will be held.

NEWS BRIEFS.

An Executive Committee, which is composed of the chairmen of the several committees, was appointed yesterday and arrangements are being made for the programme. It is composed as follows: Chairman of the Executive Committee, Reid Thompson; chairman of the Grounds Committee, Walter Hentschke; chairman of the Advertising Committee, Herbert Huntington; chairman of the Finance Committee, Prof. S. Guy Jones; members-at-large, Elizabeth Hidden, Tracy Jackson, Donald Goodman, Vernette Krause and Curtis Edwards.

Doses Race and Is Fined.

Harry Rapp was before Police Judge Chambers yesterday, charged by Traffic Patrolman Green with having raced along Sixth street with another machine. When they saw that Motorcycle Officers Gardner and Hickok were following them, Rapp sought to escape by turning onto Carondolet street. The other man escaped. Judge Chambers fined Rapp $10.

BITS OF VERSE.

The Quiet Harvest.

Along the street are sounds of fife and drum,
And lo! the people shout that strength is come,
But mightier far, tho' trumpeted the less,
Is strength that walks in ways of quietness.

The music fades, the luster disappears
Into the mist of long-forgotten years;
And scarce the echo lives a moment's span
In the impulsive consciousness of man.

But, while in dust the pomp and pageant roll,
The quiet harvest of an earnest soul
Shall stand for ever, heedless of decay,
And grow more perfect to the perfect day.

Prescription that Soon Knocks Rheumatism

The only logical treatment for rheumatism is through the blood. The poisons that settle in muscles, joints and back, causing severe pain, must be dissolved and expelled from the system or there can be no relief. This prescription from a noted doctor is said to be working wonders all over the country. Hundreds of the worst cases were cured by it here last winter. "From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half-pint of good whisky. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed-time." Results come the first day. If your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take some patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original, one-ounce, sealed, yellow package.

It's Easy to Peel Off All Your Freckles

(From American Home.)

The contrast between the freckles and the clear skin usually is so great tat no bleach can be more than partially successful in obliterating the disfigurements. Ordinarily mercolized wax is far better; it literally peels off the freckles. Get an ounce of it at the nearest drug store and tonight spread on enough to completely cover your face; remove in the morning with warm water. Repeat daily until every freckle has disappeared.

Rough, blotchy, pimpled skin, also common at this season, may be entirely gotten rid of by this same method, without discomfort or inconvenience. The effort is decidedly worth while, the new complexion obtained being so clear, smooth and youthful. If bothered with wrinkles, after washing off the mercolized wax bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

"Taking the school to the shop in Cincinnati" is the title of an article in "The Survey" that is of more than passing interest to both teachers and pupils. The theory of sending boys and girls from their classrooms to workshops where the passing mark is 100 per cent. and not 60 per cent., has been frequently described, and as practiced in Cincinnati it has been demonstrated as practical and satisfactory to both manufacturers and school officials.

"The casual visitor would probably be disappointed with what he can see about the half-shop, half-classroom method. The engineers and the High School boys and girls who are on the 'half-and-half' plan, look just like other engineers and boys and girls who get all their education at school. No living man could have told which of the large number of workers in the foundry were university men. I thought, perhaps, it would be safe to assume that those doing the greasiest, dirtiest work would not be college men, but even here I was mistaken. They did not even differ from the non-college men working side by side with them in the matter of pay, because they were receiving market value for the time spent in the shops.

"The method is simple. Young John Smith and Bill Jones wanting to be engineers register in the University of Cincinnati. They go there partly because they believe that this shop work supplement to school instruction will earn them better jobs when they leave school, and partly because they will earn almost enough to pay their way through college. Positions are found for them with a manufacturer. John Smith works the first week of September, let us say shoveling sand. The next Monday he goes up to the university and listens to lectures, prepares papers, reads text books as Bill did the first week. He goes back to the shop the next week, and so on throughout five years, only that his job changes several times during this period as he demonstrates his fitness to a practical foreman.

"This workshop supplement to ordinary university training weeds out the men who want an education primarily to save them from hard work. That this combination of work for pay half the time with study at the student's expense the other half is attractive to students is proved by the fact that Dean Schneider has over 5000 applications this year for 150 openings in the freshman class. The university professors say it works well from the educational point of view.

"The system is known as co-operative, and the workers under it are called the 'co-op students.' These students, the manufacturers say, if they are any good at all, work harder and so give more for the money they receive than other workers who are less ambitious to get ahead. They take more pride in their work and do better work, and so attract the attention of the men over them. Here are the other reasons given for the high position these co-op students hold in the shops:

" 'Cincinnati's future prosperity depends upon her having not only high grade but the highest grade of skill in her factories; their public spirit and enthusiasm have been appealed to and they believe it is good for the boys and good for education as well as good for business.' " departure from the usual educational methods was advised by Miss Anna E. George of Tarrytown, Pa., in a recent talk before the Public Education Association of Philadelphia. Miss George, who is a pupil and representative of Dr. Maria Montessori in this country, describe the Montessori education system established in Rome, and which in four years has almost revolutionized child educational methods in many parts of the world.

Miss George, who went to Rome and studied with Madam Montessori for a year, conducts the only school in which the system is taught in this country. The system has for its great feature the securing of discipline through liberty. Miss George explained that children are not naturally unruly when their minds and hands are occupied in connection with something in which they are interested. The system is based on the principle of developing the individual personality.

"No limit is set on what a child can do," said Miss George. "The teacher simply intervenes for the purpose of directing the child to go in the direction of its natural bent. The method of teaching is the result of actual scientific experiment, not the product of abstract thought or sudden inspiration. The spirit of the teacher must be the spirit of the scientist, reverently watching and assisting the progress of his experiment, rather than attempting to interfere and predetermine results.

"In the Montessori classrooms there are no stationary seats and desks and the children are not expected to remain quiet except at infrequent intervals. The only activity that is repressed is that which does not tend to some useful purpose. The teacher says very little, and instruction is given not in classes or groups, but individually. Much emphasis is laid on self-dependence. The child who is led to find a thing out for himself generally knows it, the one who is told usually does not."

Miss George said the development and association of sense constituted one of the foundation stones of the system. She described the method by which a little child is taught to differentiate by the sense of touch. A smooth card and a rough card are placed before the little one, whose fingers are drawn over the surface. As the fingers pass over the smooth card the word "smooth" is repeated. So it is with the rough card, until the child by association can differentiate. In the same manner the children learn to distinguish geometric figures and various other shapes and sizes cut out of wood. There is much teaching by object.

A different relationship between a child and its earliest teachers is advocated by Sigmund Spaeth in Harper's Weekly. Every trace of useful information is carefully concealed from the very young child, he says. A rattle, or at most a rubber doll, is its only plaything. As it grows older it is very slowly and gradually introduced to the various forms of the animal kingdom. Of the mysteries of numbers and of language it has as yet no conception. Its constant questions are for the most part answered "humorously" and hence incorrectly, or they are not answered at all. This eternal "humor" is most galling of all. Why should a human infant be such an irresistible joke? The lower animals take their young seriously, and train them from the start with a very definite purpose in view. Yet their possibilities are infinitesimal as compared with those of the average baby. And we sit calmly by and enjoy the "humor" of childhood and insist that the child is enjoying itself also, even though its little soul may be thirsting for information which is laughingly denied it. And we continue to put off the inevitable day when the child will have to take life seriously, and hence, according to our tradition, sadly.

One important point which is quite overlooked by the upholders of the brainless child is the fact that nonsense and silliness are just as taxing to the infant mind as useful information would be. It requires no more mental effort to realize that A is A than to grasp the extraordinary fact that a mass of brownish softness is a "fuzzy little Teddy bear, yes it is." In fact, the letter A has a distinct advantage. And at a more advanced age it is certainly less puzzling to be told that five and five make ten than to have one's own respectable pink toes described as a series of pigs going to market or entering into the various other activities of life.

GATHERING EVIDENCE.

Personal Representative of Mexican Government Here Watching I. W. W. Gangs on the Border.

Theodore Frezieres, the personal representative of the Madero government, sent here to collect evidence in the neutrality cases against Ricardo Flores and Enrique Magon, as well as keeping an eye on the I. W. W. workers, who have headquarters here, reported yesterday that he is making rapid progress, and that the evidence of important witnesses on both propositions has been secured.

Frezieres is especially charged with the duty of looking after the anarchistic tramps masquerading along the Mexican border, intent upon marching into his republic and he is cordially co-operating with the United States government by express orders of President Madero.

CONSERVATIVES WIN ELECTION.

Stifle Repudiation Idea on Salt River Project.

New Charter Contemplates Commission Form.

State Fair Commission Working on Programme.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) April 4.—The conservative element triumphed at yesterday's election within the Salt River Valley Water Users' Association and John P. Orme was re-elected by a vote of 45,912 to 14,144 cast for his opponent, C. B. Wood. Each vote represented one acre of land, though no one person is permited to cast more than 160 votes. It is considered that the election has effectively stifled any sentiment toward repudiation of the debt due the government and has rendered possible better understanding between the government and the farm owners, who are to repay the cost of the Roosevelt project.

The Phoenix Charter Commission has finished its labors and the document involved, comprising about 25,000 words, will be presented to the City Council at a meeting Tuesday night. In general, the city is to be governed by a commission, consisting of a Mayor and two other members to be elected for four years, with one city magistrate. The Mayor is to receive an annual salary of $3000 and the other commissioners $2400 each. Large powers are given the Commissioners, who shall be subject to the referendum and recall provisions of the State Constitution. City officials generally are to be appointed and removed by the Commission which shall also fix salaries. There shall be a city manager, who shall be the administrative head of the city government, with tenure of office at the pleasure of the City Commission.

A. W. Bennett has been elected Mayor of Glendale, on a platform which favors Sunday closing of all amusement places. A city election also was held at Wickenburg, resulting in the election of C. M. Shannon over R. W. Baxter, present incumbent in the Mayor's office, by a majority of ten.

The State Fair Commission has decided upon the trotting and pacing events for the fair next November in Phoenix. At the head of the purses are several for $2500, for a 2:20 trot, 2:12 trot, 2:15 pace and 2:07 pace. There will be another meeting April 21, at which the running programme will be taken up. Charles R. Howe has taken the office as secretary in the commission succeeding Shirley Christy, who has become secretary of the Pacific Coast Racing Circuit, within which thirteen fairs are listed.

During 1911 the business done by fire and life insurance companies in Arizona showed aggregate premium receipts of $361,099. The leaders in the list are the New York Life, $285,453; Mutual Life $153,436, and Pacific Mutual, $124,753.

The Ray branch of the Gila Valley Bank and Trust Company has absorbed the Ray State Bank, a small institution.

MINE MANAGER RESIGNS.

Daniel Cole has announced his resignation from the position of manager of the Ray Consolidated Copper Company, effective May 1. Thereafter General Manager Jackling will direct matters from Salt Lake City. Mr. Cole has written concerning his resignation, stating that he believes himself deserving a rest after nine years of continuous work. He is optimistic concerning the future of the Ray company, predicting that within a short time the company will be producing 5,000,000 pounds of copper a month at a cost of 9 cents per pound, with enough ore in sight to maintain this output for thirty years.

Water stored in the Roosevelt reservoir now exceeds the stored supply at this time last year. The water elevation at the dam is about 167 feet, representing 566,000 acre feet.

The local rainfall for the past month was 1.96 inches, considerably above the average for the month.

Already the full capacity of five sleeping cars has been engaged by Shriners, who will leave Phoenix for Los Angeles May 4, and it is probable that the special train will have at least twelve sleepers.

NOTED EXPLORER TO LECTURE.

TRACES WANDERINGS OF JEWS TO PALESTINE.

Famous Egyptologist Who Was Imprisoned as English Spy During His Explorations Will Be Heard Here Under Auspices of the Archeological Institute of America.

Enduring a temperature of 120 deg. in the shade, suffering imprisonment on suspicion of being an English spy, and later being turned loose on the great Tih desert to make his way back to civilization as best he could, are a few of the hardships undergone by Prof. Charles T. Currelly, an Egyptologist and explorer, in tracing the wanderings of the Jews to Palestine.

Details of his experiences and discoveries will be presented before a Los Angeles audience by Prof. Currelly at Hamburger's Arrow Theater, on Tuesday evening. His appearance is under the auspices of the Southwest Society Archeological Institute of America, the lecture being entirely free to the public.

With the aid of stereopticon views, Prof. Currelly will trace "The Exodus of the Hebrews," giving a description of Goshen and the town of Pithon—the city built by the Jews. Then of the journey toward Sinai and the Mount of God in the Wadi Feiran. He believes in the general accuracy of the Biblical narrative, and students of sacred history will be deeply interested in what he has been able to learn during his many years of research in Egypt and the Holy Land—first with Dr. Flinders Petrie and later with Prof. Naville.

Prof. Currelly is director of the Royal Ontario Museum of Toronto, Can., for which institution he was collecting in the Holy Land. He discovered the tomb of Aahmes I, "The Pharoah who knew not Joseph;" remained at Pithon long enough to work out a complete plan of the ancient Hebrew citadel and its walls, and together with Prof. Naville found the wonderful "Cow of Hathor" in the great shrine and tomb of Mentro Hotep. He has been honored by being made Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of England, and by the Khedive of Egypt, through the Sultan, has been created a Knight of the Order of the Medjidie.

MEXICAN CAPTURED.

Charged With Killing John Walters—Turns on Deputy Sheriffs With Knife, but Is Overpowered.

After an exciting chase through Camarillo and vicinity Deputy Sheriffs Aguirre and Fry late Friday afternoon captured Jose Cruz, a Mexican, and last night he was locked in the County Jail on the charge of killing John Walters. Cruz was caught in a shed near Somis. He turned on the officers with a knife, but was quickly overpowered.

Walter's body was found in a wood camp near Newhall Wednesday, knife wounds disfiguring the face. Cruz had been working with Walters, and the officers suspected him of the crime. His trail led into the hills to the east. When caught Cruz stated that he saw Walters fall upon a knife, thus getting his mortal wound.

ONTARIO WAS EXCITED.

Campaign Over Places on School Board Develops Much Heat and Result Was Close.

ONTARIO, April 6.—In the most exciting school election ever held in this city, C. C. Graber, E. C. Harwood, H. C. Kennedy, J. O. Mills and Ben F. Warmer were elected to the Board of Trustees of the Chaffney High School.

The election was hotly contested, Warmer winning over his nearest competitor, Mrs. Lois A. Bennink, wife of Assemblyman C. G. H. Bennink, by but eighteen votes.

With the exception of Warmer all those elected served last year. R. B. Campbell, formerly on the board and a candidate for City Council Monday, lost heavily. Mrs. Marie W. Jesson was elected to fill the vacancy on the City Board of Education by a seven-to-one vote over C. H. Whitney. She is the first woman to hold an elective office in Ontario. E. C. Harwood was elected to the Upland Board of Trustees over J. B. Goodrich.

Why He Was Late.

"What made you so late?"

"I met Smithson."

"Well, that is no reason why you should be an hour late getting home to supper."

"I know, but I asked him how he was feeling, and he insisted on telling me about his stomach trouble."

"Did you tell him to take Chamberlain's Tablets?"

"Sure, that is what he needs." Sold by all dealers.—[Adv.

TERRIFIC STRUGGLE FOR VOTES.

Nine Glendale Men in Mad Scramble for Three Jobs—Town Agitated as Never Before.

GLENDALE, April 6.—Glendale is now witnessing a struggle for municipal official positions such as the city has never before known. During the few days the candidates and their boosters have been working overtime, Mass meetings have been held on both sides of town and thousands of sheets of printed matter have been distributed to the voters. Notwithstanding the strenuousness of the campaign thus far the remaining few days and hours promise to be filled with more earnest and tireless effort.

Nine candidates are in the field for Trustees each striving to fill one of the three chairs which will be left vacant by the expiring of the terms of three of the present Trustees. These candidates are W. A. Anderson, former City Trustees, A. F. Howard, O. A. Lane, present Trustee, J. W. Lawson, Frank Showalter, A. W. Tower, T. W. Watson, present Trustee W. A. Anderson and R. W. Hinckley T. W. Watson is being backed by each of the three tickets in the field, while A. Anderson and R. W. Hinckley are running independently. The Trustees will be elected for the four-year term.

For the office of City Clerk there are two candidates—H. L. Whaley, backed by the Citizens' League ticket, and George B. Woodbury, who has been City Clerk since the incorporation of the city six years ago, backed by the other two tickets. G. B. Hoffman who has been Treasurer of this city for the past several months, is the only candidate for that position.

Glendale has been divided into four precincts, which are as follows:

Precinct No. 1. All of that part of the city lying north of Fourth street and east of Louise street. Polling place, Room No. 247 South Glendale avenue. Board of election for precinct, Inspectors, B. H. Nichols, H. M. Overton; judges, Frank Zerr, Samuel Fiske; clerks, B. F. Patterson, A. B. McCoy.

Precinct No. 2. That part of the city lying north of Fourth street and west of Louise street. Polling place, tent at northeast corner First and Brand. Board of election for this precinct: Inspectors, Robert Durkin, Fred Fish; judges, Charles J. Letts, C. F. Parker; clerks, E. E. McNeill, C. D. Hellyer.

Precinct No. 3. That part of the city lying south of Fourth street and west of Louise. Polling place, tent at northeast corner of Lomita avenue and Brand. Board of election for this precinct: Inspectors, John W. Usilton, I. H. Russell; judges, Joseph Kirkby, Walter Stamps; clerks, F. C. Packard, H. Henning.

Precinct No. 4. That part of city lying south of Fourth street and east of Louise street. Polling place, tent at southeast corner of Sixth street and Glendale avenue. Board of election for precinct: Inspectors, Wilmot Parcher, Spencer Robinson; judges, W. B. Kirk, M. H. Frisbee; clerks, J. C. Pierce and J. W. Henderson.

AZUSA.

AZUSA, April 6.—The election held yesterday to choose School Trustees resulted as follows: V. M. Greener, to succeed W. R. Powell, resigned; and T. F. Heth, to succeed himself as Trustees of Citrus Union High School. Alvina B. Meier, to succeed T. C. Bouldin, resigned, as Trustee of the Azusa City Grammar School.

H. D. Briggs of Camp Rincon reports that the trout season opened in the west fork of the San Gabriel River with many representatives of the fisherfolk of Los Angeles and vicinity on hand. Practically all caught the limit, and many made record catches. The trout are of good size, many of those caught being fourteen inches, but Mr. Briggs is of the opinion that a month from now they will be even larger as this is still the growing season for trout. Among the guests at Rincon are Joe Welch of the Pasadena Hardware Company who distinguished himself by bringing in the limit before breakfast, John McDonald, George T. Downey, H. G. Chaffee, C. W. Leffingwell, B. D. Thomson, C. D. Meday, Paul Becker of Pasadena, M. G. Odler, W. Hubert, Carl Sungen, J. E. Allison, J. A. Crook, A. M. Morse, L. G. Brown, C. W. Keevan, H. D. Becker, J. W. DESTROYER GOES LAME.

Ill-Luck Vessel of Navy Maintaining Reputation for Calamity and Is Again in Ship Hospital.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Breaking down for at least the seventh time, the torpedo boat destroyer Goldsborough limped back to the Puget Sound Navy Yard late Thursday with engine trouble. Two hours previously she started on a trial trip after a seven months' stay at the navy yard for the repair of damage sustained last July. The trip was taken to test the compasses preparatory to a run to Southern California. As the ill-luck vessel of the navy the Goldsborough has not even a near competitor. Her builders at Portland went into receivership while attempting to make her conform to government specifications. En route to Puget Sound she grounded near Astoria, and on reaching Bremerton she could not make the required speed and was turned over to government mechanics for revision, being since known as a navy yard pet. Two years ago, returning from a trial run she bumped into a dock and telescoped her nose. Last summer while maneuvering her machinery broke down and ever since she has been undergoing repairs.

Epilogue.

Before my tale of days is told,
O, may I watch on reverent knees,
The Unknown Beauty once unfold
The magic of her mysteries!

Before I die, O, may I see,
Clasp'd in her violet girdle, spring;
May April breezes blow to me
Songs that the youngest poets sing.

Howe'er it be, I will not quail.
To tell the lapse of years like sand;
My faith in beauty shall not fail
Because I fail to understand.

So, to my days' extremity,
May I, in patience infinite,
Attend the beauty that must be,
And, though it slay me, welcome it.

Key of Success.

STANTON URGES TAFT MEN TO REGISTER THIS WEEK.

"REGISTRATION of the Taft vote is the key to success in the May primary election," said Chairman Stanton, on his return from a conference with State Chairman Hammond of San Francisco. Stanton got home yesterday and brings the most comforting news from the North. He says there are but one or two "bad spots" in the whole State, the North being particularly strong for the President's renomination.

"There is one week left in which for all of the Taft voters to qualify. I am going to make it my business to see that every one is properly registered. I have found many supporters of the President who are ignorant of the fact that they must declare affiliation with the Republican party before they can vote at the primary for him. To each and all I would urge visitation to the County Clerk's office during the coming week, or to the nearest registration deputy, which may be found by telephoning the registration office, and see that the party affiliation is stated. Next Saturday is the last date on which this may be done, so I urge all to begin early in the week."

It is not generally known that such votes as have registered since January 1 and have not stated party affiliation, must go to the County Clerk's office and make affidavit that they wish to declare their party.

Reports during the past week received at Taft headquarters here indicate that organization work throughout the South is growing with amazing rapidity. The Taft sentiment is very strong and it needs only direction to make it effective at the primaries. The headquarters has advised every club formed so far to expend its energy during the coming week on registration. In addition, where none has been organized, volunteers are making canvasses and stimulating registration.

Local campaigns in a score of places have held back the organization of clubs, but these conditions are about over and attention will soon turn to the larger affairs in politics. In a way, these campaigns have been held because they produced registration.

Secretary C. W. Fleming, of the Taft Republicans, who was stricken with appendicitis last Thursday and who underwent an operation, is reported making great improvement and his quick recovery is expected. Messages of sympathy for him have been received from all over the South, where he is well known.

PRAISES TAFT FOR TREATIES.

PRESIDENT JORDAN SAYS THEY MEANT REAL ARBITRAMENT.

Tells City Club War Is Impossibility Because of Economic Unity of World and Arbitration Is Cure for International Disputes—Japan Only Nation that Loves Us.

"The treaties President Taft proposed with England and France were written in the words that they should be written and they provided for a decision that would be final," said Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford University to the City Club at its weekly session yesterday, in an informal address on "Peace."

Dr. Jordan said no international peace treaty could be effective if the decision is not to be abided by. He said the Taft treaties provided for arbitrament that would stand and not be subject to review by the Senate. The President, he declared, did right when he held the treaties back because the Senate insisted on exercising its prerogative of final decision in each case.

The address was mostly an argument why judicial international arbitrament is the proper substitute for war. Diplomacy he said was the method of provoking war and he censured the United States for provoking its war with Spain, saying that Spain had already conceded everything demanded by the United States in the Maine crisis in the treaty negotiated by Minister Woodford but neglected by the United States.

He said the principal reason why arbitration should be substituted for what war is impossible between many nations without disaster to them is that the enormously expensive armament of the nations, growing more expensive every day, is needless. He declared the civilized world is united now in its economic basis and is controlled by the masters of finance that war is impossible. He said the Rothschild genius that had solved the problem of the peace of the world by putting all nations so heavily in debt that they could not maintain a great war.

"War is world sickness," he observed. And the bankers are the nerves of the world. The slightest danger of sickness is felt at once by them. It was the nerves of the world bankers that detected symptoms of sickness in the Tipoli-Italian trouble and prevented a great war. We need arbitration because it is reason and because of it moral effect.

"Still we may have, perhaps must have, small civil wars. Big fish eat little ones and little fish eat shrimp and shrimp eat mud, just the same," said he laughing.

"The war debt of the world is thirty-seven thousand millions dollars. The war debt of the United States is less than one thousand millions which leaves here really about the only nation capable of making a fool of her self by provoking another war," he added.

He took occasion to censure the "lies about Japan" and its Magdalena bay colonization scheme, saying these things were cooked up untruths and criminal in their purpose to stir up trouble.

"Other nations may respect us but Japan is the only nation that loves us," said he. He instanced that love by the fealty of the Japanese educated in the universities of this country to their alma maters. As for Magdalena Bay he declared it to be merely the scene of occupation for a few Japanese fishermen, in a region so barren neither a coyote nor jackrabbit would stay, without water and without hope for sustaining any colonization scheme.

The club, at the end of the address, adjourned out of respect to the memory of the late Maj. Henry T. Lee, whose funeral was held yesterday afternoon and who was one of the loved club members.

CHURCH BUSINESS MEETING.

At the annual meeting of the First Presbyterian Church, held last night, it was shown that during the year, under the pastorate of Rev. J. C. Pinkerton, 156 members have been received into the church, and the contributions during the same period amounted to $8400—an average of $23 per member. The beneficences were placed in the hands of a board of deacons, consisting of W. L. Beebout, Mrs. C. D. Hope, Mrs. F. H. Covey, Mrs. J. H. Chesney and W. H. Dunseath. J. P. Thurston was re-elected superintendent of the Sunday-school, and G. F. McCully, chief usher. The new board of trustees consists of F. C. Armstrong, C. P. Kirk, A. J. Benjamin, J. D. Sulphurro in Los Angeles

Marvelous Medicinal Discovery, Which is Exciting Washington and Oregon, Introduced into Southern California

More Than 4,000 Cures Reported in Pacific Northwest Before Sulphurro Was Placed on the Market and Good Work Multiplies

Sulphurro the Great Success as a Medicine

Cities to the North Fairly Wild Over Seattle Man's Remarkable Discovery.

MULTITUDES CURED BY COMPOUND OF SULPHUR.

How C. M. C. Stewart Gave Away $10,000 Worth of Preparation and Was Finally Forced to Place It on the Market at Beginning of Year.

BY F. W. STRANG.

Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, Spokane and all Washington and Oregon are talking "Sulphurro." San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento and Northern California have taken it up, and this week Los Angeles, San Diego and all Southern California will have an opportunity to test the powers of this marvelous new medicine.

"What is Sulphurro?" you ask.

It is the greatest success that the world of medicine has seen in modern years.

The discovery of a Seattle man, its use has spread with such rapidity that thousands and thousands of people have been restored to health by its marvelous curative powers. It is estimated that there were more than 4000 cures in Seattle before the medicine was placed upon the market.

Druggists in the cities of the North declare they never knew the demand for any other medicine to approach that of Sulphurro. Wholesale dealers have placed two and three orders for it in a single day, selling out their requisitions even before delivery. Retail druggists talking with buyers of Sulphurro find that it is effecting cures in the most severe and stubborn cases, while hundreds and hundreds of letters have been sent to the Sulphurro offices telling of Sulphurro's curative marvels.

Without exaggeration every other man and woman you meet in Seattle, Portland and Tacoma is talking Sulphurro or knows by personal observation in the case of friends what it is accomplishing. The same is true of San Francisco and Oakland. Prominent people have been cured of rheumatism, stomach disorders, gout, diabetes, goitre, eczema and numbers of other affections that had made their lives miserable. The letters testify better than any other evidence how remarkable a medicine Sulphurro really is.

Society Women Take Sulphurro.

Society women are taking Sulphurro to clear their systems and improve their complexions; scores who suffered tortures from rheumatism have been brought back to health, and even a case of rheumatic blindness has been completely cured. This marvelous cure has attracted wide attention, and others who might be benefited or who have friends afflicted with sightless eyes have journeyed from afar to convince themselves of the genuineness of Mrs. F. J. Mueller's restoration of sight. Two persons traveled all the way from Minneapolis and others came from Kansas and Nebraska for a personal visit with Mrs. Mueller, who now sees perfectly at the age of 54, after being blind most of the time since a child of 8. She is the wife of a German Lutheran minister, and lives at Bothell, near Seattle.

Nature's Own Remedy.

Sulphurro is a natural remedy. It is a liquid compound of sulphur, and the man who succeeded in rendering sulphur into liquid form is C. M. C. Stewart, a druggist and pharmaceutical chemist of more than a score of years' experience. It has been on the market only since the beginning of January of this year, yet so great has been the demand for it that only now has it been possible for him to let people outside his immediate territory know its story.

And Sulphurro has had a most interesting story. Read of its discovery and the strange tale of its rise into a widely known medicine: In 1896 Mr. Stewart, having been a deep student of chemistry and of medicine, conceived the idea of liquefying sulphur as the best means of getting a purifying element of recognized superiority directly into the blood. He was then in Iowa, conducting a large business.

First Successful Liquefying of Sulphur.

Many previous attempts have been made to render sulphur into a liquid but these had been successful only to the extent of holding the sulphur in suspension temporarily.

A year and a half ago Mr. Stewart worked on his problem, and at last produced a liquid of rich, cherry-cordial hue. But he felt the call of the Klondike, which was sweeping over the land at that time, and went north without doing anything more with the sulphur preparation.

Eight years Mr. Stewart spent in Alaska, and the Canadian Yukon. He returned to Seattle, and invested his means in such a way as to permit his retirement from active business life. It was in January of 1911 that a member of his own family was suffering severely from stomach disorders and rheumatism.

"I'll prepare some of the liquid sulphur compound and am sure it will do you good," said Mr. Stewart. Acting at once he revived his old preparation. It worked wonders in the way of relieving the stomach trouble and rheumatism, and friends of the family, hearing of the cure, immediately asked for a supply to relieve their own distress.

Endless Chain of Cures.

That's the way, an endless chain began. Friends came in numbers, as the story of Sulphurro came to be known, and friends of friends followed. Mr. Stewart watched each individual case and found that in every instance, where his directions had been followed, the cures were prompt and complete as had been the case in his own home.

The requests for Sulphurro became more and more numerous through last summer, until Mr. Stewart had to limit his receiving days to two a week, then to one a week, and on the last day that he held open house the people marched to his home as if going to a great meeting, and by actual count between 375 and 400 standing in line for hours awaiting their turn, were supplied with medicine.

Mr. Stewart estimates that in the year during which he gave away Sulphurro he distributed it among more than 8000 people and that he gave away upwards of $10,000 worth of the medicine. He was forced either to put it on the market or to hie himself away where they never had heard of him or his medicine. The good which Sulphurro would accomplish immediately outweighed every other consideration and he began the manufacture of Sulphurro on a marketable scale.

Within a month the original quarters were outgrown and the Sulphurro laboratory has been moved into space ten times as large. Even that promises to meet requirements only for a short time in the future.

Sent to World's Four Quarters.

Sulphurro has already been sent to the four quarters of the globe. Almost every State in the Union has received shipments of it through the activity of its friends, and bottles of it have just arrived or are on the way to England, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Russia, the Scandinavian peninsula, the Argentine Republic, to the Philippines, China, Japan and to Alaska.

Scores of California people have been cured of rheumatism and other ailments by Sulphurro, having learned of it through Seattle, Portland, Tacoma and Spokane friends.

Sulphurro introduces a most effective principle into the cure of disease. It is cleansing, purifying, germ-destroying. The blood is the foundation of health. When it is pure and healthy, disease has small chance to find lodgment in the human system. When the blood is not pure the slightest affection may become serious. Sulphurro renders the blood pure and vigorous. It gives the system new life and tone.

What Sulphurro has already accomplished in its brief lifetime is convincing to all that it will become one of the greatest medicines that the human family has ever acquired.

It is important here to state that Sulphurro is held in perfect solution (not suspension,) without the use of acid, potash (lye) or alcohol; and that it contains no opiates or narcotics of any description. It is good internally and externally for all, from the baby to the great-grandmother, if taken as directed. Sulphurro is registered under the U. S. Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906. A valuable and very interesting 32-page booklet describing the medicine and treatment for various ailments will be mailed to any one who wishes to learn more about this wonderful discovery.

DRUG STORES HAVE IT.

Sulphurro is on sale in drug stores throughout Los Angeles, San Diego and other cities and towns in this territory; but because of the difficulty of supplying the trade on such short notice it may be possible that here and there a store has been overlooked. If you find you can't get Sulphurro from your regular druggist, try the next one, and then if you fail to get it, send direct to the office of the C. M. C. Stewart Sulphur Company, 71 Columbia street, Seattle, Wash., and your order will be promptly filled at the same price. Please let us know the name of your druggist, so that he may have an opportunity to obtain a supply of Sulphurro from us.

Sulphurro is put up in two sizes and sells for 50 cents and $1. When you order direct from our laboratory the smaller size will be forwarded you by mail and the larger by express.

An interesting 32-page booklet containing full directions for the use of Sulphurro accompanies each bottle. Read it carefully and follow instructions. What Sulphurro has done for others it will do for you, but do not invest your money in Sulphurro unless you fully intend to follow directions.

Woman Blind Most of Life Tells Story of Wonderful Recovery

MRS. F. J. MUELLER.

Mrs. F. J. Mueller, wife of a venerable Lutheran minister, at Bothell, near Seattle, whose blindness, caused from rheumatism, was cured by Sulphurro, Stewart's Liquid Compound of Sulphur. She was stricken first when 8 years old, and is now 54.

Sightless Eyes Are Made to See Again

Liquid Sulphur Compound Performs Remarkable Cure for Washington Minister's Wife.

BLIND AT 8 YEARS OLD.

Happy Woman, in Interview, Tells How C. M. C. Stewart's Wonderful Discovery Brought Back Faculty After Years of Suffering and Deprivation.

By F. W. STRANG.

SEATTLE, April 6.—Among the most remarkable of Sulphurro cures was its restoration of sight for Mrs. F. J. Mueller, wife of a venerable Lutheran minister of Bothell, near Seattle.

To hear Mrs. Mueller's story from her own lips makes the tears well up in one's eyes, so pitiful was her blindness and so joyous is she in the recovery of her sight. Ever since she was 8 years old had her sight been affected, and now she is 54. During intervening years she had not more than brief intervals when she could see.

Once, after an operation on her eyes, performed by one of the best-known American specialists, her vision was cleared and she was able to walk out in the garden and admire the flowers and the sunshine. But when the sun went down Mrs. Mueller's sight went with it and years of darkness and suffering followed.

Mrs. Mueller had no thought that she would ever be able to see again when she visited Mr. Stewart's home on the arm of her ever-attendant husband. She had become of late years a sufferer from rheumatism. She heard that Mr. Stewart had made a medical discovery by liquefying sulphur in an original compound, and she sought the remedy as relief from her rheumatism.

Mr. Stewart did not even promise that relief. He gave her a bottle of the preparation, hoping it would lessen her suffering, and he asked that she let him know what progress she made. He sympathized deeply with her in the affliction of her blindness and secretly wished that it might be in his power to restore her sight.

When Mrs. Mueller again visited the Stewart home, not long after, her rheumatism was gone and she needed no guide for her footsteps; her lost sight had returned.

Let Mrs. Mueller tell the story. As joyful as a girl of 16, she fairly bubbles over with exultation as she recites her experiences:

"For more than thirty-seven years I was blind in one eye, and sixteen years in the other. Sometimes only could I tell the difference between daylight and darkness and much of the time I had to spend in a darkened room. I thought we had tried every possible cure, and I had settled down to the not pleasant thought that I never could see again. That thought now makes me shudder.

"When I was only 8 years old I suffered from fever. That was where I was born, on the Island of Langness, off Schleswig-Holstein, in the North Sea. The fever settled in my eyes and I was kept for months in a darkened room. The doctors hardly knew what to say about the case. One of the specialists that examined me wanted to take out one of the eyes, but my father would not let him.

Blind, Fingers Learn to Sew.

"Sometimes I could see a little in the years that followed. Then, twenty-three years ago, I came to America—to marry Mr. Mueller, who had come to America before me. In Napoleon, Ind., he had a small church. A year after, in 1890, we moved to Lanesville, Ind., and there I was totally blind, though I learned to be so proficient with my fingers that I could make dresses for my baby without the sense of sight.

"We had not much money. My husband saw some doctors, but they said they could do nothing for me. Rheumatism of the eyes, they said it was. My brother went to Louisville to see a doctor there and when this man said he could help me my brother said he would pay the expenses of my trip.

"When the doctor examined my eyes he told me yes, he could cure me. But to Mr. Mueller he said, whispering, that there was no hope.

"The next morning he performed the operation. When it was over I could see as I had not been able to see before since I was a child. It was beautiful, and I was so happy."

Mrs. Mueller trembled as she told of that operation and smiled with happy recollection of the thought of walking about in the doctor's flower garden when it was over. But her face darkened again.

"In the afternoon a strange feeling came over my eyes and by the time the sun went down I was as blind as I had been the day before."

In 1907, at Omaha, Mrs. Mueller was taken to a specialist of note and for a time had a partial return of vision. Coming to Seattle two years later the affliction grew worse. Specialists here diagnosed the case as of cataractal formation.

Friend Tells Her of Sulphurro.

"I heard through a friend of Mr. Stewart how Sulphurro was curing rheumatism, so Mr. Mueller and I went to his home to get some of the medicine," she continued. "I followed his directions implicitly, taking the preparation internally and bathing in it with great regularity. The hot bathing water I poured upon my eyes, for this seemed to relieve the pain.

"About seven weeks after I began taking Sulphurro I had a strange experience. At midnight I had the sensation of being able to see into the adjoining room. I scarcely knew whether it was real or not.

"I went to sleep and the next morning got up as usual and went out for breakfast. Still I seemed to be able to distinguish some objects around me. My daughter says she saw a film roll back from my eyes.

"When a neighbor woman passed the house and called to me I surprised her by telling her the color of her dress and the number of buttons on her waist. Then I realized that my sight had returned and I was like a girl again in my joy.

"The first thing I thought of was to let Mr. Stewart know of my good fortune, and when I saw him he was as pleased as I.

"Sulphurro is the greatest medicine that was ever discovered," declared Mrs. Mueller, "and to my dying day I shall be thankful to it and to Mr. Stewart."

Seeing has given Mrs. Mueller a new pleasure in living. It has made her so happy she can hardly control her joy. Her case has attracted wide attention and all Bothell is rejoicing with her at her recovery. Her clear, blue eyes look so strong and well now and she gazes at one with such directness that it is hard to believe those same eyes have been sightless for the greater part of their lifetime.

Hundreds and hundreds of people have come from far and near to talk with Mrs. Mueller and she has been fairly deluged with letters of congratulation and inquiry. Two persons traveled all the way from Minneapolis recently to hear the story from her own lips.

Tonsilitis; Rheumatism

Office of
AUDITOR OF SKAGIT COUNTY,
State of Washington.

Mount Vernon, Wash., Jan. 9, 1912.
Mr. C. M. C. Stewart, Seattle, Wash.

Dear Sir. I want to tell you how much good your Sulphurro has done me. Last winter I suffered everything with rheumatism, and after taking two bottles of your Sulphurro it has left me entirely.

I also had tonsilitis for the last two weeks and had tried everything, but no results. At last I thought of my Sulphurro bottle and used that just three times and my throat is well now.

Wishing you a world of success, I am, yours very truly, [Signed] MARY A. PATTERSON.

Eczema's Cure is Discovered in Sulphurro

J. E. Shannon, Widely Known in Seattle, Tells of Wonderful Recovery.

SUFFERED MANY YEARS; NOW ENTIRELY WELL.

Only Three Weeks Needed to Drive Rheumatism Out of System of Well-known Young Man Who Was Pitifully Helpless for Many Months.

Eczema is a disease that has caused tremendous suffering the world around. Its cure at last has been discovered—Sulphurro.

Almost every known medicine has been applied in cases of eczema, but usually with indifferent success. The causes lie so deeply enrooted in the blood that it is most difficult to reach and expel them.

J. E. Shannon, who is serving his third term as Constable in King county (Seattle,) and is assigned to Judge Gordon's court in the Prefontain building, Seattle, declares Sulphurro cured him completely of one of the most severe cases of eczema that ever tortured a sufferer. Mr. Shannon is well known to Seattle's law officers, to attorneys and to members of the police department.

"My case was hereditary, as is often true of eczema," said Mr. Shannon. "For years and years I had sought some remedy that would give relief,

J. E. SHANNON,
Constable Municipal Court at Seattle.

but the results were far from satisfactory. So badly was I afflicted with it that at times I hated to leave my home and go upon the street.

Sulphur Introduced Into Blood.

"I had all but given up hope when I heard of Sulphurro. Mr. Stewart was then giving it away to sufferers from far and near, no matter what the ailment. Such a cleansing, purifying element as sulphur, it seemed to me, would be most likely to get right at the seat of my trouble.

"Mr. Stewart promised nothing, but expressed the belief that if I would follow directions carefully Sulphurro would help me. I took a bottle home and lost no time in getting the treatment started. Almost immediately I improved. It was only a matter of weeks until my cure was complete, with every indication of its being permanent."

Washington, Oregon and California are full of these marvelous cures. Rheumatism, goitre, diabetes, stomach disorder, asthma, throat trouble—in fact, almost any ailment that the flesh is heir to, yields before the power of Sulphurro.

Wonderful Cures of Rheumatism.

Cases of severe attacks of rheumatism, rendering their victims pitifully helpless, have been cured with wonderful celerity by Sulphurro. A well-known young business man of Seattle, who was many weeks in bed, inflammatory rheumatism distorting his limbs and body, and placing him in excruciating pain.

"I could not touch my face, flat on my back, I was so helpless that my wife had to tie a little stick to one hand so that I could scratch my nose," said he.

"Three weeks after I began to take Sulphurro I was cured. The rheumatism had been completely driven out of my system, and I was out on the street again. How's that for a wonderful medicine?"

CURED OF RHEUMATISM.

Spokane, Wash.
Mr. C. M. C. Stewart,
Seattle, Wash.

Dear Mr. Stewart—I received the bottle of Sulphurro you so kindly sent me, and cannot say too much in favor of your wonderful remedy. For years I had rheumatism in the back, shoulders and arms, and it was while I was practically laid up in Seattle that I heard of your remedy through a friend there. I have taken about one-fourth of the bottle, and am entirely cured. I never have had an ache or pain since.

Very truly yours,
[Signed] B. M. FRANCIS,
501-2 Paulsen Bldg., Spokane.

WHAT THE PRESS IS TALKING ABOUT

Thrown His Greatness Away.

[New York Sun:] Misled by an ineffectual coterie of parasites and his incredible thirst for applause and power, ignorant of public opinion, deceived by the curiosity of the crowd, a pitiless curiosity which finds its dethroned heroes like Bryan and Roosevelt interesting merely as it finds the eight-legged calf and the Siamese Twins, Mr. Roosevelt sought the political disgrace of the loyal public servant, the true-hearted gentleman for whom he professed so much friendship, who had been at his side for years, whom he had praised cordially and often? What is a friend to a nomination? Why, indeed, should a man who would make the breath of mobs the final arbiter of justice bother about a bauble like old friendship? The great are not to be judged by common standards, and success crowns and sanctions all.

But failure in an ignoble personal struggle makes ridiculous. Here is Theodore Roosevelt, less than two years ago the most honored of American citizens, the most powerful in a legitimate and honorable way, if he had respected himself and his career and the affection of so many of his fellow-citizens. Deliberately he threw his greatness away. Here he is, baffled, beaten, meanly and ingloriously beaten, howling, "fraud," like an energumen, his dignity stripped from him by his own hands, a figure vulgarly comic.

Sorrowfully the American people might contemplate this shrieking victim who started out to victimize, if anything of tragic splendor clung to him; they might wrap him in their own dignity and pity as he lies naked to the world. But to betray a friend only to be betrayed to public scorn, the superman mouthing like a clown, Caesar cursing like a very drab, why, laughter irresistible and only laughter, is what he stirs.

Big Sweep for Taft.

[Baltimore American:] Theodore Roosevelt will have to be content with his straw-vote victories. The ballots in the convention of Indiana and the ballots in the primaries of New York were for the man at the helm. He is not a man of straw, nor is he, as the advertisement of the Roosevelt campaigners in New York suggested, a broken reed or an outworn instrument ready for the discard heap. He is the capable man. He is the man in the leadership of the nation. He is the man of the clear brain, unclouded by phantasies. He is the man of firm purpose directed toward serviceable ends. He is the choice of the Republicans of Indiana, of New York and will be of a big majority of the State delegations. The claim from the beginning of Taft on the first ballot is nearer realization today than ever before. The facts from Indiana and New York will show that the landslide has already struck the Roosevelt boom, and that it has been reduced to hollow echoes along the barren wastes of political mistakes. The Indiana regulars organized the convention and placed four delegates-at-large to the credit of Taft, leaving none of this class of delegates to the man of frenzied claims.

Seeks Leadership Without Training.

[Washington Star:] It is a singular thing that on the two great problems Mr. Roosevelt is essaying leadership he possesses no training. He would revolutionize the judiciary branch of the government, and yet is not a lawyer. He would go minutely into the regulation of business, and yet has never had a day's experience in business. It is confessed by lawyers that court procedures need amendment, and by business men that some business procedures call for governmental action.

But the details of what should be done are most important and most difficult in both cases, and call for much information and experience. Blacksmiths are not set to tinkering watches, nor watchsmiths to forging horseshoes. What are Mr. Roosevelt's claims to consideration as a judicial architect? And, if he is guiding by Mr. Perkins in his views of big and little business, what does the business world think of his mentor and sponsor? Mr. Perkins as a successful Wall Streeter is well known. But as an altruist he has his reputation yet to make. If he has turned State's evidence should not all he says and advises be examined with great care?

Taft and Roosevelt Policies.

[Minneapolis Tribune:] The common criticism of President Taft is that he has not carried out the Roosevelt politics. He has carried much farther than Roosevelt did the policies which he helped to organize and set in motion in the Roosevelt administration.

Since that time Col. Roosevelt has developed a new line of policies, entirely different and more easy of conception than of execution. President Taft has no responsibility for these.

If the people really want the Executive to override Congress and an accidental majority to override the Supreme Court; if they want the State governments reduced to chaos or impotence and the judicial power of the country concentrated in Federal judges appointed for life, they will have to call Col. Roosevelt back to do it.

One trouble is that a single impulsive though high-minded agitator can cut out more reform work in a summer than a constructive statesman with an unsympathetic and inefficient Congress hanging about his neck can carry out in four years.

Another trouble is that a headlong and perfervid reformer of this sort, as he leaps on from height to height of theoretical agitation, finally arrives in a region of thin air, where no performance can overtake him.

The sane and practical policies of Roosevelt are safer in the hands of Taft than in his own, and the other policies of his later evolutions are not safe in any hands, least of all in his own.

Bawls His Pain.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] We have had the opportunity within the last few days of seeing a side of Mr. Roosevelt's character which has not heretofore been brought conspicuously to public attention—the side of every man's character which comes out when a long series of successes begin to be checkered with defeats.

And it cannot be said that Mr. Roosevelt shows up handsomely under the test. There is nothing of the grim Spartan spirit—which is also the historic American spirit—of silent endurance of adversity. When Mr. Roosevelt gets hurt he cries out, and he cries loud. He fairly bawls his pain and his wrath.

Decidedly Mr. Roosevelt is a poor loser. Of course, there is a sort of an excuse for him. He has a remarkable record of apparently unbroken success. He has lost many battles. But they were battles in which he did not visibly appear as a personal combatant, and the defeats were not open, public and unmistakable. Now they are.

And Mr. Roosevelt takes them hard and noisily. He wails and rails and curses over them. He unpacks his heart with bitter words. And so he forfeits respect.

Not long ago Mr. Roosevelt was a menace to the republic. Unless we are much mistaken the time is near when he will be regarded as a joke.

Caused Transitory Excitement.

[Winnipeg Saturday Post:] The excitement caused by Mr. Roosevelt's extraordinary announcement that he will be a candidate for President of the United States for a third term, has pretty well died out. While this natural excitement lasted it was quite the real thing, but it is altogether likely that nobody is better pleased than Mr. Roosevelt that the disturbance has died away, for a time, at least.

The row that the announcement raised must have shaken even the colossal conceit of Col. Roosevelt, hard as that is to do. Practically every newspaper of consequence in the States denounced the motive and morals of the thing in language that would have been much worse if the law allowed the printing of the things that were clearly in the minds of the men who wrote the comments that appeared. There are scarcely two opinion about the Roosevelt policy and nothing was ever made clearer than that the ex-President made the mistake of his life when he gave way to his overweening egotism and said that he would listen to a call from his countrymen—with the all too-clear impression that that call would follow fast upon his announcement that his ear was held to the ground. With all their faults, the people of the United States have no stomach for treachery and this act of Mr. Roosevelt's was treachery of the worst type; the sort of treachery that betrays a friend and strikes the notion that a man is bound by high position to be honorable and square, dead at one blow.

The People Are Fit to Rule.

[New York Times:] Col. Roosevelt is right. The people are fit to rule and govern themselves. We have always believed it, now we know it. The people prove their fitness by rejecting the colonel. After having been exhorted, appealed to, cajoled, pleaded with, and most unconscionably mussed up for months by the colonel and his campaigners, after a pile of money contributed by the colonel's friends—shall we say out of their "trust" funds?—has been spent in the effort to evoke that overwhelming popular call for him as the only man for the job, the people of one State after another—Indiana, New York, Colorado, Iowa, North Dakota—turn their backs on the colonel and indicate their preference that somebody else shall be President. Most of them prefer Mr. Taft. The people of these States have plainly, once for all, told the colonel that they do not want him in the White House. This is absolutely convincing proof that he is right when he says that the people are fit to rule.

Causes Arrest of Picture Theater Proprietor Who Showed Cock Fight Scenes—Partner Sought.

A warrant was issued by Police Judge Chambers yesterday for the arrest of C. M. Campbell, one of the reputed owners of a motion-picture theater at No. 238 South Main street, who is charged by Superintendent Zimmer of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals with having shown crime films.

The pictures are of a cock fight in Seville, Spain, and show betting by the Spaniards on the result.

M. Stutz, another reputed owner of the theater, is out of the city. Mrs. J. Burmiller, secretary of the Board of Censorship, notified the City Prosecutor's office yesterday that her organization will take steps looking to a revocation of the license under which Campbell and Stutz are operating.

Zimmer says his attention was called to the cock fight pictures, and after seeing them he requested the management to discontinue them. The following day, Zimmer says, he learned that the only thing the management had done was to cut off the end of the reel showing the death of one of the birds, and an enlarged picture showing the holes in its head and where it had been spurred. He says he served notice that if they did not discontinue the pictures after Friday night he would arrest the manager. The pictures were still being shown yesterday morning.

TIES UP TRAFFIC.

A Pacific Electric work train, south bound, in rounding the corner at First and Los Angeles streets early yesterday morning collided head-on with an incoming Pasadena car that was waiting for a clear track. Nobody was hurt. The front end of the Pasadena car was damaged and the motor car of the work train jumped the track. Traffic in all directions was tied up until the work train could be put back on the rails.

HIS ESCAPE LUCKY.

W. H. Sayles, employed on the Times Building, First and Broadway, sustained a sprained ankle and other bruises when he fell a short distance while at work yesterday morning. He was removed to the Crocker Street Hospital.

Overworked Women

Fatigue is the natural result of hard work, but exhaustion results from organic weakness.

If you were offered sure aid in time of trouble, would you put it aside and accept something of doubtful efficiency?

If you saw before you a strong and safe bridge leading to your goal, would you ignore it and try some insecure and tottering structure? You would, of course, choose without hesitation that which all evidence showed to be the safest and best for you. Why, then, do some women risk their most precious possession—their health—because of some unwarranted prejudice against an advertised medicine?

You know, or should know, that for nearly forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for woman's special ills. No medicine without great merit could have stood the test all these years and attained the largest sale and greatest success of any medicine in the world for this particular purpose.

Therefore, is it fair for you or anyone to say, without giving this great medicine a trial, "I don't believe it will help me."

Read the following genuine and truthful letters—only two of many thousands from grateful women:—

Letter from Miss Grace Dodds, Bethlehem, N.H.—"By working very hard, sweeping carpets, washing, ironing, lifting heavy baskets of clothes, etc., I got all run down. I was sick in bed every month. This last Spring my mother got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and already I feel like another girl. I am regular and do not have the pains that I did, and do not have to go to bed. I will tell all my friends what the Compound is doing for me."—Miss GRACIE B. DODDS, Box 133, Bethlehem, N.H.

Letter from Mrs. Etta Donovan, Willimantic, Conn.—"For five years I suffered untold agony, backache, irregularities, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It was impossible for me to walk up stairs without stopping on the way. I was all run down in every way. I tried three doctors and each told me something different. I received no benefit from any of them but seemed to suffer more. The last doctor said it was no use for me to take anything as nothing would restore me to health again. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see what it would do, and by taking seven bottles of the Compound and other treatment you advised, I am restored to my natural health."—Mrs. ETTA DONOVAN, 762 Main Street, Willimantic, Conn.

to any person who will prove that any of our testimonial letters constantly being published in the daily newspapers are not genuine and truthful, or that any of these women were paid in any way to give their testimonials or that the letters were published without their permission or that all the original letters did not come to us entirely unsolicited. GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 5.—The I. W. W.'s are getting to be somewhat of a nuisance. The authorities offered them lodging and food in return for a fair amount of work, but they scorned the offer. Now they have taken to following the Mayor around. When he speaks on the subject of making the city beautiful, they are outside in the street with banners bearing inscriptions, sometimes like this: "Look at the City Beautiful and Then Look at Us."

Even the bankers are beginnin gto appreciate the fact that it pays to advertise. At the weekly luncheon of the San Francisco Advertising Association, Russel Lowdy, cashier of the American National Bank, read a paper on, "The Problem of Bank Advertising." He said that the conservative stand taken by the banks for so many years, is breaking down under the pressure of competition, and that those houses which have been most progressive in advertising, have found it successful.

Education comes high, but we must have it. The School Board has estimated that its expenses for the next fiscal year will amount to $2,471,055.-If. In asking for the 35 cents the members show they know to a cent just how much they want. The chances are that the Supervisors will allow them to struggle along as best they may on an even two million.

The grand jury comes out pretty strong in charging the McCarthy holdover officials with malfeasance in office. The holdovers will look up the word in the dictionary and see if they have been insulted. They may investigate the standing of the members of the grand jury, with a view to libel suits. At any rate, they hope that Mayor Rolph will not act on the suggestion that they be removed from office.

The bright young men of the local press have persisted in calling the Goldman-Snow affair a duel. An Oakland jury begs to differ with them. It finds that Goldman murdered Snow and that the latter shot his assailant in self defense. As both men are dead, it makes no difference to them.

Harbor Commissioner Hill is an ardent Roosevelt supporter. George T. Morris of Alameda is not. Hill refused to shake hands with Morris, who refused to do so, saying that the other man was a "political crook." Hill persisted and Morris threatened to punch his face in if he did not move on. Now the commissioner is wondering if officeholding is what it is cracked up to be.

Coupled with the information that our former President's son, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., has opened up in Wall street, comes the news that he said to some reporters: "I really wish that you newspaper chaps would stop bothering me." That may sound like Theodore, Jr., but it is not the line of talk that his father would have cut out.

With the civic center now an assured fact, the next thing to be decided is what buildings shall go on it. The City Hall and the auditorium of course, are certain. An active movement is on foot to have an opera-house there also. It is proposed to erect one at the cost of $500,000. This will have to be collected by private subscriptions and it may be that the promoters may modify their figures some.

Mayor Rolph gave Supervisor Payot a splendid cocker spaniel, a full brother to "Mission Jim," a notable prize winner. The dog is lost and wandering around the city without a home and it is to be hoped that no one is kicking it around. The Supervisor voted for the recent dog-muzzling ordinance, providing a fine of fifty or fifty days in jail or both for allowing his dog on the streets without a muzzle. So far no one has been punished and it would hardly be the right thing to start with a Supervisor.

The Chief of Police has gone East to study the police methods of that section. The eastern crooks have come West to study up the good things of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. Perhaps it might have been just as well for the official to have stayed here and studied the crooks.

HER CONDITION PUZZLES.

Young Woman Is Found in Unconscious State in Apartment-house. Denies Having Taken Drug.

Miss Ollie Britton, a young woman cashier, was found in an unconscious condition in her room in the El Moro apartments, No. 109 South Hill street, yesterday morning.

Everything possible was done to revive her at the Receiving Hospital, but she was still unconscious when sent to the County Hospital. The woman was found by Mrs. A. Reichert, the landlady. A woman having a room next to Miss Britton heard her call for help. When Mrs. Reichert entered the room Miss Britton was conscious sufficiently long to complain of a sharp pain in her head and to deny that she had taken any drug.

The Receiving Hospital surgeons think Miss Britton is either suffering from a slight paralytic stroke, which seemingly has affected her left arm, or is the victim of an apoplectic stroke. Where the woman worked the tenants of the El Moro do not know.

Something New.

CENTRIFUGAL PROCESS PRAISED AS BETTER THAN OTHERS.

City's Engineers and Operating Superintendents of Public Utility Companies Witness Demonstrations Which May Have Influential Effect on Building Here.

The manufacture by the new German centrifugal process of concrete poles, piles, conduits, columns, mine props, railway ties and other kinds of hollow forms of concrete reinforced by high-tensile steel was demonstrated before thirty operating superintendents, engineers and electricians of the railway, telephone and electric power companies, Tuesday afternoon, at the plant of the Centrifugal Concrete Company at Thirty-third street and Long Beach avenue.

Representatives from the various city departments that use such things were present and viewed the demonstrations by the engineer in charge, A. Vollker of Dresden, Germany, and tested the finished product. The machine used revolves 450 times a minute and turns out a pole, etc., in from ten to twenty minutes, perfect in form, of dimensions up to 55 feet long and 18 inches diameter, or smaller as desired, of guaranteed strength and of a density and uniformity not obtainable. It is claimed, by any other process.

It was stated that the cost of these Centrifuga' products would be for poles of ordinary length from two to three times the cost of wood which would get here be a bar to their use, as with everlasting durability and uniform strength to offset the rapid and certain deterioration and maintenance charge of wood due to decay and other causes, the economy would be in the long and even short run in favor of concrete.

Some thousands of concrete poles are already in use in the United States, made by primitive processes still an experiment and permitting of neither ascertainable or uniform strength.

Many of those present seemed of the belief that the method and the Centrifugal products shown were the solution of the pole and pile problems and would be adaptable for other articles, street and bridge lighting columns, pergolas, porches etc.

Photographs of the use for the latter purposes in Germany were shown.

A fact made apparent was that the Centrifugal machine operating at a speed of some 450 revolutions exerted a most powerful force in treating density, the factor now dwelt upon by harbor engineers and experts as the most important in the making of piles to resist sea water.

PASSING OF GOOD MAN.

Retired Minister, Well Known and Much Beloved, Dies in this City. Leaves Many Relatives.

Rev. J. H. Austermell, a well-known retired Baptist minister, who has resided in this city for many years, died at his home in Edendale on March 29, at the age of 73 years. He was a native of Philadelphia, where he was married in 1868 to Miss Alice Dunford of Illinois. The best years of his life, before coming to California, were spent in the ministry in New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. He was a man of the gentlest disposition, but exerted a strong Christian manhood wherever he was known.

Though he never expressed the thought to any of his family that his end was near, he undoubtedly knew it, as was indicated by his wife being awakened in the night by his singing favorite hymns. He leaves in this city a widow and many other relatives. His daughters are Mrs. Fred R. Dorn and Mrs. J. McKinley of this city, and Mrs. William Gard of Pasadena; a brother, W. T. Austermell, lives here, and a sister, Mrs. Media M. Lessel, in Garvanza. Another brother, Dr. J. J. Austermell, and a sister, Mrs. Julia V. Freyman, reside in Kansas City. There are also many grandchildren.

BACK TO BANK BUSINESS.

Gen. Wankowski Becomes Vice-President of Park Institution and Will Assume Active Management.

The announcement of the return of Gen. Robert Wankowski to the local banking field, in which he figured for many years, will be a matter of much interest to Los Angeles financiers. He has been elected vice-president of the Park Bank, Fifth and Hill streets, and will at once assume the active management of the institution. The latest report made by the Park Bank showed that it had deposits in excess of $1,500,000, and is growing. Gen. Wankowski has become a large stockholder.

The new vice-president of the Park Bank began his banking career in 1883, when he became identified with the State Bank and Trust Company, then located at Second and Spring streets. He was with that institution for ten consecutive years, and when the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank was organized in 1903 he joined its official family as cashier and remained with the institution in that capacity for seven years. In 1910 Gen. Wankowski left the bank to become chief deputy superintendent of State banks. This position he held for one year, when he resigned because of his desire to reside in Los Angeles, always his home.

POSTAL SYSTEM SPELLS SUCCESS.

OVER TWENTY MILLION DOLLARS COMES FROM HIDING.

Department Has Already Designated More Than Eight Thousand Postoffices as Savings Depositories. Los Angeles Bank Clearings Are Headed for Billion-dollar Mark.

The high record made by the postal savings system is best indicated by the fact that the postoffices so far designated have received in deposits a total of $20,000,000, with a reasonable prospect that by the end of the present calendar year this amount will have been increased to from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000, with the service fully self-supporting.

This large sum, which it is asserted by the department officials has come almost entirely from hiding, has been put into active circulation to the mutual advantage of the thousands of depositors and the country at large. Up to this time 8003 postoffices have been designated as savings offices, which nearly completes the Presidential list, and it is expected that within a week or two work will be begun with fourth-class offices. The department is now at work ascertaining what fourth-class offices are located in towns having banking facilities, and these will be designated first.

Recently the Postmaster-General reversed the former ruling which held that no person might open a savings account at any postoffice of which he was not a patron. His recent ruling is that the depositor may open an account in any savings depository office of his selection, but he must confine his deposits to that one office.

The great success of the postal savings system has stimulated a number of State Legislatures to interest themselves in strengthening banking conditions, and it is expected that in the very near future all restrictions as to the pledging of securities will be removed and at the same time laws will be enacted and strengthened which will require a satisfactory supervision of State banking institutions.

COLONY FOR ANARCHISTS.

San Diego War Veteran Urges Government to Deport Crime Breeders to Island.

At a notable campfire of Heintzleman Post, G. A. R., at San Diego the other evening, Comrade W. W. Bowers denounced the anarchistic conspiracies of the I. W. W., element as emissaries of hell and a grave menace to the nation, which the Civil War veterans fought to save fifty years ago.

He said in part:

"The red flag on the high seas is the emblem of pirates and cut-throats. On land it is the trade-mark of traitors, anarchists, assassins and their aiders and abettors. No good citizen of any country ever marched under the red flag, it is a menace and a curse to this country. It is a shame and disgrace that it is ever allowed to be flaunted on our streets in defiance of the Stars and Stripes, which the followers of the red flag would have torn down and spit upon.

"I believe, comrades, that every man who carries the red flag in these processions and those who march under it, should be put out of these United States as traitors and enemies of this republic and of all decent mankind. I believe that the survivors of the Grand Army of the Republic have the right to demand and should demand of this government in the name of the 400,000 patriots who gave their lives that this republic might be preserved, that every anarchist should be deported and their cursed work be stopped. It must be, if the republic is to continue a free people under a civilized government.

"The United States should select one of its island possessions and establish a penal colony thereon for these anarchists and vagrants; they should not be allowed among civilized people. No country wants its anarchists and criminals returned to it, and foreign countries may with good and sufficient reason refuse admission to all those who have become citizens of this country through naturalization being returned to them as anarchists and criminals, thence the necessity and the wisdom of providing a penal colony.

"I believe that the people do not realize how serious the danger is becoming through the proselyting work of the anarchist among the ignorant class and the demoralizing effect upon the young, through their lying circulars and prints.

"Finally, comrades, I believe that the G. A. R., posts of the whole country should, as a body, take action in inaugurating a movement to drive this great evil out of our land. I believe that he who maligns our flag or would tear it down, while waving over its own land, should be put away from under it and cast out into utter darkness."

Revising.

RECALL PER CENT. IS LOWERED.

CHARTER COMMISSION THINKS INCREASED VOTE A REASON.

Proposals to Change Initiative, Referendum and Recall Provisions Opposed by Lissner and Others but Majority Stands by the Committee Report.

The initiative, referendum and recall were discussed by the Charter Revision Committee chosen by the Council to redraft the city's organic law and provide for Commission Government. The discussion came up over the report of the committee on direct legislation, of which Mrs. Charles Farwell Edson is chairman.

It provided first for the reduction of the percentage required to recall a candidate, elective or appointive, from 20 per cent., as now, to 15 per cent. on the theory that the voting population of the city had doubled by reason of the suffrage amendment and that it would be more difficult to get a petition.

Meyer Lissner opposed the reduction holding that the doubling of the vote really made it easier to get signatures. In this opposition he was aided by H. H. Cotton and W. R. Williams, members of the revision commission, all taking the stand that, under the direct responsibility of the commission plan, there should be no recall of the appointive officials, as this would intervene between the responsibility of the Commission and its subordinates.

The same percentage was adopted by the majority, for which Lewis R. Works and H. W. Brundige spoke chiefly, for the recall of appointive officers, but it based their recall on the "entire vote cast for all candidates for Mayor." This was adopted regardless of the fact that the revisers have not yet determined whether there will be a Mayor.

Lissner made a strong fight against the new recall election process proposed. According to it when a petition of 15 per cent. is filed an election is called at which the question: "Shall John Smith be removed from the office of Commissioner by the recall?" is placed on the ballot. It must receive a majority affirmative vote before there can be any election. According to the new plan the only place the name of the incumbent appears is in this question the names of the other candidates being separate. Lissner argued that this multiplied the disadvantages of the incumbent. He said the "old way" under which the Harper recall was conducted worked well and he would be willing to readopt it with a provision for a majority election. On this question Lissner stood alone in opposition, the others expressing the belief that it is a protection to the incumbent to require a majority vote for removal.

The report of the committee requiring 200 words on each side of an initiative, referendum or recall, one discussion by the proponents and another by the antagonists, to be placed on the petitions, was adopted together with another permission to have 1000 words of argument on each side printed on the back of the sample ballots at any such election.

The present percentages for initiative petitions, 5 per cent. for optional and 15 per cent. for mandatory, were adopted.

Another provision adopted makes any sale of purchase of real property in excess of $25,000 exempt from the emergency clause in the obligatory ordinance providing for either purchase or sale. This was proposed by the committee for Dr. John R. Haynes, president of the commission, because he didn't like the purchase of the Temple Block site for a new City Hall. Originally the provision would have affected any purchase or sale of realty, but the $25,000 limitation was put in at the suggestion of City Attorney Shenk, who feared the original provision would hamper the city in small purchases and sales.

The commission selected the Municipal League as the organization to pick a ticket of fifteen freeholders to propose the new charter after it has been worked out and considered by the freeholders' board. The league was also asked to circulate the 3 per cent. petition required to nominate the freeholders' board chosen.

City Attorney Shenk said the commission had failed to have its request that an election for freeholders be called for May 24 before the Council at its last session, and that it was necessary to have the Council act before April 24, in order to insure validity of any steps taken for the election. President Haynes and Secretary Hamilton were asked to appear before the Council at its session tomorrow afternoon and urge immediate action.

The commission will meet again next Wednesday night when the Committee on Elective Officials will report. This committee is composed of Lissner, Wellborn and Williams and three separate reports will be submitted and they have been made the special order of business for the meeting.

OFFERS REWARD FOR SON.

Agonized Father Fears Harm Has Come to His Boy Who Disappeared From North Yakima.

After a month's fruitless search for his son, William Carson Long, who disappeared from North Yakima, Wash., on March 5, Theodore K. Long, No. 4823 Kimball avenue, Chicago, through the detective department of that city has sent notices throughout the West offering a reward of $5000 for information leading to the whereabouts of the young man or the finding of his body. Los Angeles hotels received the posters yesterday.

CHARGED WITH ROLLING 'EM.

Two Women Arrested and Held Without Bail on Serious Allegations Involving Robbery.

Miss Eva Blackburn and Miss Anna Wallace, brunettes of attractive appearance, were arrested yesterday on suspicion of being the women several men complained had "rolled" them for various sums. The women were taken from the Streeter apartments, No. 502 West First street, conducted by W. H. Woods, who was also arrested. The latter was released on $50 cash bail furnished by his wife, but the girls were booked on suspicion and denied bail. Both were handsomely gowned, had considerable money and wore valuable rings. In their apartment was found a large quantity of liquor.

The first complaint the police received about these girls was made about a week ago. A man said they robbed him of $35. He alleged he was taken to them by C. D. Moore, an auto driver for A. S. Ragsdale. When members of the Metropolitan Squad went to Moore a few nights ago and asked him if he could find some girls for them, he located Miss Blackburn and Miss Wallace. Moore was later arrested and charged with pandering. He furnished $1000 bail. A few days after Moore's arrest other complaints against the girls were received and yesterday they were arrested.

Both Woods and his wife denied knowing the character of the girls. They said the women had been in the house but a few weeks.

THREE MORE NEW THEATERS.

Milwaukee Magnate Plans to Break in on the Coast with Vaudeville and Picture Houses.

Planning an investment of from $350,000 to $500,000, John P. Trinz, the Milwaukee theatrical magnate, is in Los Angeles looking for sites for the erection of a vaudeville theater and two costly motion-picture houses.

The vaudeville show house, which will represent the principal capital to be invested in the three enterprises, is to be one of the best-appointed theaters west of the Mississippi.

The magnate is having difficulty in finding suitable downtown locations but has several properties offered him. He would not make public the details of his plans, but admitted the construction of the three proposed Los Angeles theaters would be but an entering wedge in a fight to obtain a foothold in the Coast vaudeville field.

Trinz is a millionaire and owner of a string of theaters in his home city, St. Paul and Minneapolis.

PURITAS, the Pure Drinking Water

Positively Cannot Be Harmful to Anyone.

A local Health Journal recently devoted considerable space to the question of water-drinking—as to the merits of cold water over hot; of when it should be taken, etc.

Not every one agrees as to the best time for drinking water — but there can be no disagreement as to the necessity of having one's supply of drinking water absolutely PURE.

Water is a tonic, and has distinct medicinal virtue—but impure water can be nothing else than detrimental—if nothing worse.

You cannot overdo the use of PURITAS—its perfect purity makes it an ideal drinking water for sick or well people.

PURITAS is distilled water—soft and palatable and sparkling as can be, because it is aerated with pure ozone, which adds the life that boiled waters lack.

PURITAS has this advantage over ordinary water—it quenches thirst as other water does out.

And PURITAS is inexpensive — it costs but 40 cents for five gallons, delivered anywhere within the old city boundary lines. An investment in a demijohn of PURITAS will more than likely save you the expenditure of money for doctor's bills and tonics, for while PURITAS is not medicinal in any sense, its use tends to a clear, healthy skin and freedom from rheumatic and kidney ailments.

Out-of-town people can in all probability obtain PURITAS from one of the many dealers in towns throughout Southern California. If not, simply write or telephone us, and we will see that you are supplied. Home 10053, Sunset Main 8191. Los Angeles Ice and Cold Storage Company.

An estimate of the cost of building a highway from Los Angeles to Yuma will be made by Engineer Clark. This will mean that a campaign to raise the money to do this work will be started at once. The money now in the treasury of the Highway Association is being used to defray the expenses of the men who are handling this proposition.

When President Mitchell starts on a great proposition he has the habit of finishing the deal. He is looking far ahead and says he can see success in the future. The future is not so far distant as Mitchell already has said that the road should be ready before the world's fair in 1915. This means a great deal of work but it is possible to complete the highway, engineers say, in time to start a big tour from the East to the West.

AT BRAWLEY.

From Mecca The Times car will be driven to Brawley and here a big reception is planned for President Mitchell. At least one thousand members are expected in this thriving little desert city and the Imperial Valley boosters are to be swung into line right.

The Brawley mass meeting is to be the last big affair in California and at this gathering it is intended that the entire Imperial Valley cohort will be marshalled into a division that will do active work. The task offered the men of Brawley is gigantic. It means much to those who are out on the desert in need of a better road.

From Brawley the car will be sent to Yuma, where another meeting of importance will be held. Dr. Ketcherside and D. C. Vance Clymer have things in charge in Arizona and at the first meeting in the new State a plan for campaign for Arizona will be mapped out carefully.

Healthy Hair At Small Cost Faded Gray Hair Banished

What a pity it is to see so many people with thin, wispy hair, faded or streaked with gray, and realize that most of these people might have soft, glossy, abundant hair of beautiful color and luster if they would but use the proper treatment. There is no necessity for gray hair under sixty-five years of age, and there is no excuse for any one, young or old, having thin, straggling hair, either full of dandruff or heavy and rank smelling with excessive oil.

You can bring back the natural color of your hair in a few days and forever rid yourself of any dandruff and loose hairs, and make your hair grow strong and beautiful by using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. For generations common garden Sage has been used for restoring and preserving the color of the hair; and Sulphur is recognized by Scalp Specialists as being excellent for treatment of hair and scalp troubles.

If you are troubled with dandruff or itching scalp, or if your hair is losing its color or coming out, get a fifty-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, and notice the improvement in the appearance of your hair after a few days' treatment. Special agent, Sun Drug Co.

MOUNTAIN RAILROAD PLANNED.

Incline Track Up Mount Verdugo's Slope Is the Announced Intention of Los Angeles Corporation.

GLENDALE, April 6.—Capt. S. L. Philips of Los Angeles has just made an announcement to the people of this valley to the effect that he represents a syndicate of capitalists whose intention it is to erect an incline railway from the foot of Mt. Verdugo to the mountain's summit, a distance of something like 3800 feet. It is the intention of this company to start work on the project just as soon as certain details regarding the route can be settled.

It was the original intention to run from the foot of the mountain to the summit by a fairly direct route, but Mr. Mesnager, owner of the land on the north slope of the mountain, refused to give his consent to the railroad being run over his ground. For this reason the route had to be changed somewhat. Capt. Philips, who is the representative of the inventor of the system, claims that the mechanical device for the working of the cars is an entirely new principle.

WOMAN DIES.

Mrs. Sallie C. Ogg, wife of Thomas W. Ogg, of Kenwood street, died suddenly at her home, the cause of death being acute stomach trouble. Mrs. Ogg rose at 6 o'clock Wednesday morning and when she complained of not feeling well a physician was sent for. She grew worse and finally succumbed an hour later. Mrs. Ogg was a native of Kentucky and with Mr. Ogg came to California eighteen years ago for her husband's health. She was popular in local society circles. The funeral service took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the parlors of the Pulliam Undertaking Company on Fourth street, the body being interred in Forest Lawn Cemetery near Tropico.

OFFICERS CHOSEN.

At the annual meeting of the Verdugo Pipe and Reservoir Company, held this week, the following officers were chosen to serve for the ensuing year: President, J. C. Sherer; vice-president, P. A. C. Moore; secretary, C. E. Parker. The directors in addition to the officers include R. H. Brown, Frank Campbell and J. L. McOmber. During the coming few months this company will lower its pipes, on Sixth street and Verdugo road and will also cover its reservoir.

PIRTLE DISCLAIMS.

It has been definitely learned that instead of J. A. Pirtle being responsible for the filing of the portest against the annexation election held here last Saturday the protesters include Louis Mesnager, owner of a large vineyard and winery in Verdugo Canyon; M. G. Verdugo, a large land owner in the canyon, and Mr. Brown, who for the past few months has been conducting a roadhouse in the canyon.

ELOQUENCE WAS WASTED.

Assemblyman Cogswell Takes Grilling Over Freak Law Which He Attempts to Defend—News Briefs.

COVINA, April 6.—Assemblyman P. F. Cogswell of El Monte stood good-naturedly before an audience of 200 citrus ranchers last night in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, fencing skilfully with them on the question of the storm-water law, which the Covina ranchers do not like, and are not slow in saying so. Mr. Cogswell was invited to explain the merits and demerits of this law that was passed in the grand carnival of law-making at the last Legislature, and the ranchers treated him with the greatest courtesy, thanking him for his visit when the meeting was over, but they impressed it upon him, and upon everybody present, that they did not want a storm-water district formed in the Covina Valley.

The meeting was, in a sense, the culmination of several meetings that have been held at Glendora, Azusa, San Dimas, Lordsburg and Covina, when practically 90 per cent of the ranchers registered a disapproval of the project. B. T. Wilson, a Covina rancher, in the meeting last night, characterized the project as "an attempt to improve private property along the washes at the expense of the public."

Deputy District Attorney B. C. Hanna was also present. He admitted that the proposed storm-water district would be known in law as a quasi-corporation, and that ranchers would be liable for alleged damages from breaking of dykes or other possible occurrences. It is understood that, owing to the opposition, the Board of Supervisors will abandon the storm-water project.

School board elections were held today in the Covina Union High School district. The High School trustees elected were: S. A. Stowell, Dr. G. D. Jennings, C. J. Hurst, D. J. Shultis. The grammar school trustees are: W. P. Watts, W. W. Nash, Rev. George Chemberlan. In the Charter Oak district the trustees elected were: Tom Johnson, S. A. Stowell and A. R. Bryan.

DON'T WANT FURTHER DELAY.

Bond Proposition Will Be Called by Invoking the Initiative if Civic Bodies Have Their Way.

BAKERSFIELD, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Exasperated at prospects of further delay in submitting municipal bond proposition, on which the City Trustees have been laboring for many months, members of the Merchantz Association and Board of Trade today set a committee of four lawyers at work drafting the papers necessary to call the election by initiative.

The trustees had prepared an ordinance calling an election to vote $210,000 for a supplemental sewer system, $150,000 to buy the old courthouse for a City Hall; $60,000 for improvements in the fire department and $27,500 for a branch library, but when it came up for passage an alternating City Hall proposition was offered and the board deadlocked on the question of putting it on the ballot.

The papers will be prepared by Monday night and if the trustees do not act by that time the initiative petitions will be circulated Tuesday.

Claiming that the raidator in her room blew up last November, and the steam burned her arms, Barbara S. Reit, a dressmaker, has filed suit for $2000 damages against the owners of the Euclid Hotel. A. B. Cohn and A. B. Herrington.

KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE.

Frank Harrison of Puente Steps in Front of Speeding Car and Meets Instant Death.

PUENTE, April 6.—Frank Harrison, 34 years old, was instantly killed here yesterday by a nautomobile driven by J. O. Melham of Watertown, S. D. The victim stepped from a wagon directly in the path of the approaching machine and those who witnessed it say that the driver was in no sense at fault. The body was taken into the auto and carried to the office of Dr. J. B. Reed, but life was found to be extinct. The County Coroner was notified and an inquest will be held Saturday morning at Puente. Harrison was a laborer, unmarried and a comparative stranger in the community.

INNOVATION WAS PLEASING.

Ventura Chamber of Commerce Invites Women to Participate and They Hasten to Accept.

VENTURA, April 6.—Last night there was an innovation in the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce. On invitation of the chamber, extended some time ago, the women of the city attended the session and as members. In order to interest them in civic work it was decided to send invitations to the several women's clubs of the city to join. The clubs immediately decided to send delegates, each club selecting one. Those who attended last night were Mrs. D. S. Blackburn of the Tuesday Club; Mrs. M. E. V. Bogart of E.C.O., Mrs. W. H. Francis of Shakespeare, Mrs. Gertrude Isham of Progressive, Miss Dowling of Fortnightly and Miss Edith Hobson of Native Daughters' Improvement. Mrs. George Farrand, representing the Wednesday Morning Club, was not present. LaLoma Club has not yet selected a delegate, but will do so.

VENTURA BRIEFS.

The tenth annual session of the Ventura County Association of Women's Clubs will be held in this city on April 13 at the Athene Clubhouse. A fine programme of exercises is being arranged for the gathering.

Sheriff McMartin was on the street yesterday for the first time since he was beaten up by a hobo near Calabasas.

The biggest trout so far caught here this season was taken from the Ventura River yesterday by Ah Moon, a Chinese cook employed at the N. B. Smith place in Sleepy Hollow. The trout measured twenty-nine and three-quarters inches and was of the steelhead variety.

The Board of Supervisors yesterday made the following reappointments: Dr. Cunane, County Physician; A. L. Cagnacci, Superintendent County Hospital, and J. J. Streets, County Stock Inspector.

The Oxnard Review will be issued as a daily paper on Monday next. L. P. Hathaway of this city will have charge of the editorial end.

SOCIALISTS ARE DEFEATED.

Redlands Voters Put Quietus on Claims by a Four to One Vote.

REDLANDS, April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The inflated windbag, which the Socialists of Redlands have the past month was punctured once and for all today when Mrs. Elizabeth Hendrickson, the Socialists' candidate for school trustee, was defeated by W. E. Putnam, clerk of the present board who was up for re-election. A total of 1144 votes were cast of which Putnam received 889 while Mrs. Hendrickson but 255.

This election was important as it determined the strength of the Socialists for the municipal election, over which there has been feeling of much concern because of their boasts; it will occur next Monday. The strength of the opposition was so strong that there seems little hope for them to gain a foothold in the City Council.

Everything looked Socialist up to noon as they had been working secretly all morning and it was plain to be seen that the victory was theirs unless the opposition made a better showing. The ballot was not secret and the onlookers were able to determine the results at that time. After the noon hour the committee of the Good Government workers secured automobiles in which to haul voters to the polls and the above was the outcome. After 3:30 o'clock over 500 votes were cast.

ELSINORE.

ELSINORE, April 6.—For the first time in the history of Elsinore, women voted today in a school election. Despite the rainy weather, automobiles and carriages brought out a large vote.

Mrs. A. E. Stiles, candidate of the Parent-Teachers' Association, was defeated by W. H. Green, a printer, by 32 majority, for trustee of the grammar school.

Oscar Ray and M. R. Root defeated James Stewart and H. H. Harris for places on the High School board by narrow margins.

THE PERFECT FLUKE.

Hari-Kari gives some lovely instances of the perfect fluke.

Tom Williamson holed out one of his tee shots in the French championship at La Boulie.

In a medal competition at the Royal Norwich Club, two of the competitors made a brilliant start by doing the first hole in one.

H. C. Jocelyn twice holed out in one in the course of a single round, at the third and fourteenth greens, on the Acton links.

In the open championship, R. E. Myddleton at one hole, drove down on to the shore, but his ball struck a rock and bounded back within a putt of the hole.

At Bramshot a golfer played from a bunker fifty yards away from the seventh hole, struck the flag with his shot, the ball coiling itself into the flag and then dropping neatly into the hole.

At the same club, another player had an extraordinary run of luck in one match. At the thirteenth and fourteenth he holed out from the rough with his niblick. At the next his opponent's ball knocked his dead for the hole and at the sixteenth his opponent's approach shot actually knocked his ball into the hole! Thus he did the four holes in 3, 2, 4, 2. Bogey being 4, 3, 5, 4.

DROWNED IN OFFICE-ORIENT.

WAZIR'S GARDEN ON ORPHEUM'S SECOND FLOOR.

Angora Carpet, Magic-Mosque Windows, Sea-Scape Wall, Bay-of-Avalon Couch and Rained-on-Copper Fixtures—Realistic Personality in All This.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

All fairy stories begin, "Once upon a time."

All theatrical stories start, "And entering a hole-in-the-wall, equipped with a bleak carpet, a few once-were chairs and a barren desk, we were aware that we stood in the sanctuary of the great manager."

Except this one.

I don't know just how to begin this yarn, for having lost my copy of Omar, and having had my unabridged Arabian Nights pilfered by one of the prurient, I am at a loss for terms sufficiently oriental and effulgent wherewith to jewel an inaugurative sentence.

So I don't think I shall begin or commence, but just jump in and start.

I take my text from the gospel of Clarence Drown.

And the gospel of Clarence Drown is to have the most beautiful theatrical office in the world.

Of its size.

And its size is half-portion. But remember, the Koh-i-noor and the Cullinan are not as big as cobble stones.

If it were possible to think of Mr. Drown as little, you might call him half-portion, or the managerial demitasse, for he is really dark. But one doesn't think of him as little, after one has known him fifteen consecutive seconds. Therefore you are just as apt to think of him as a white hope, instead of the managerial bantamweight—which he really is.

This lovely office is the jewel in the heart of the new Orpheum building, second floor, front, reachable only through the general office and the telephone exchange—which, by the way, are pretty classy in themselves. The radiance of the inner aura, as it were, spreads through them in, reflected glory.

If you wish to see this office go up and speak the open sesame to Mr. Drown's private secretary. But don't—

Tell her that you are an actor with an act;

A bill collector;

An amachure dramatist with a sketch;

An old friend;

Or merely one of the curious.

Because if you do, you won't get in.

Rather, tell her—

That you owe Mr. Drown a little money, and that you wish to pay him in person.

That may get you by, and when once in, confess freely. He is a kind man, with a sense of humor, and he may not call the slave. Or eject you in person, which I think he would be quite capable of doing.

On crossing the threshold, your foot, perhaps somewhat alarmed at itself, will sink noiselessly into a carpet as soft and deep as the fur on a healthy Angora, and just the tint of autumn leaves.

Brown is the entire color-scheme.

There is a relief, however, in the mahogany furniture, and in the wonderful sea-scape which glows at you from above the managerial desk. The sunlight fairly leaps from this dark frame. It suggests a lonely beach on a summer afternoon, the delights of absolutely virginal surf-fishing, and breaker-diving with no more garb-encumbrance than you wore down in the "crik" back home, sixteen years ago. It's a great picture, that.

There is no day in this office when the autumnal melancholy is not glorified, chased and driven away by the glow of great masses of red carnations. This flower, with its deep richness and its clove-scent, seems to be the Drown emblem. It rises from the most beautiful green jars that you could imagine. The paper cutter, the scissors, and the other implements on the mirror-like flat desk are also of green, a sort of laid-out-in-the-rain copper, as it were. The walls are of brown, leather-panelled. The chairs are of deep, heavy, restful mahogany. There is a couch—I think it's the color of a shallow sea-water. But the couch belongs in a press-agent's room, that's where the lying is.

The leading role in this eye-drama, however, is played by the window-hangings. Of red, brown, green, and intangible shadings, they filter Broadway until it becomes the Wazir's garden, on the near side of their magic screen. Literally, they make this office a mosque, and when the afternoon sun hits their street-surface and becomes aged and wined and drugged in the coming-through, you unconsciously look for a white turban and listen for the Muezzin's call to prayer.

Now after this In-a-Persian-Garden stuff you expect me, quite naturally, to describe Mr. Drown receiving in a fez, sandals, a white robe, a red sash, a gilt curio-store sword, and a general odor of sanctity, super-refinement, affectation, balderdash and punk.

Mr. Drown may receive you in the odor of a meat-paper cigarette he deftly rolls himself, but be assured if there are other odors—than those of the clove-carnations—you will bring them with you.

This sense of luxurious beauty must rest somewhere in the seventh sub-cellar of the little manager's soul, for the Lord knows it never surfaces itself.

In all things, he is a plain man of the plain people.

He is an omnivorous, indiscriminate glommer of tales. Story-telling is his one hobby. His own collection is of the choicest. He adds to it and distributes his wares with fine generosity and a connoisseur's discrimination in audiences.

Getting as near the wonderful Bay-of-Avalon couch as I dared, I asked him, the other day—while the photographer defiled the walls of passionate-brunette with flash-powder—just why he had gone into such extreme artistic detail in the perfection of his cameo-office.

"Well," said he, opening a letter, "I guess it's because I wanted harmony after that Monday morning rehearsal. You know we certainly never find it on the stage. So I crawl up here after that battle, and try to come to."

"Where did you get that plct—"

I was interrupted by Mr. Drown. "Ever hear the story of the cockney who was rowing down the Thames?"

I hadn't, so I listened.

We all laughed, none more heartily than the manager-impersonator.

Then it was my turn. He always expects a come-back.

"You know that one about the sofa-cushion?"

"No."

"Well, here goes."

Finally the photographer got impatient. He had to pose Mr. Drown in a natural attitude.

"Give me a letter with a check in it," said Drown. "I want to appear pleased."

But the check was too small. He didn't appear very pleased.

A newspaper man would chuckle in all directions on discovering a check for as large an amount as 3 cents; not so the manager of a theater whose net profit is $80,000 a year—a manager who is vice-president of the greatest vaudeville circuit in the world.

This chocolate Caliphate that Drown now possesses is a reward, in a way, for years and years of the toughest sort of service in the toughest sort of territory.

Though Mr. Drown, with the aid of just three or four touches of make-up, could still be absolutely the juvenile in any play, he, in reality, was the advance guard of western vaudeville.

It was Drown who took the first really big vaudeville shows over the road, playing them in all sorts of stands and tanks, from Jonesboro, Ark., to Medicine Bow, Wyo.

Drown's big bunch of high-priced taleht was always well looked after, but for years he himself was glad to fare on coffee and beans, in making his quick jumps, and if he broke the ice in the pitcher in the village tavern—well, he hoped the water under the ice was clean, and he was truly thankful if he found it so.

Drown has virtually built the Orpheum business in Los Angeles into what it is. It was he who moved the Orpheum from the old Grand Operahouse into Spring street; it was he who began a subtle, quiet, but immediate, campaign for the great Orpheum of today, on South Broadway.

And next?

Well, while I'm wondering I'd like to ask, if I dared—

What's so equatorial about this office that it needs two automatic sprinklers, of shining brass, pinged into the softly-glowing ceiling?

Clarence Drown,

Bantamweight champion in the managerial class, and the world's foremost exponent of the aesthetic theatrical office. Mr. Drown's autumn-toned dream-palace in the new Orpheum building, into whose dusk the ordinary and human actor must step reverentially if at all, bespeaks a Renaissance of Art in that commonest form of commerce, amusement.

The Week.

ALICE LLOYD, LITTLE FIX-IT.

"OVER NIGHT" AT THE HAMBURGER MAJESTIC.

"Henpecks" Fischer's Second Lyceum Production—"Third Degree" at the Belasco—Armstrong at the Grand—Burbank Continuance—Vaudeville Announcements.

Alice Lloyd, the popular English singing comedienne, will be seen at the Mason Operahouse for two weeks beginning tomorrow night, in a new musical comedy entitled "Little Miss Fix-it."

Alice Lloyd, easily the most deservedly popular of all the English artists to be imported to this country, needs no introduction to local theatergoers. She has been seen here previously as an important vaudeville headliner, and on tour has enjoyed equal popularity in "Little Miss Fix-it," a vehicle having already to its credit a run of four months at the Globe Theater in New York, as well as an all-summer's engagement at the Chicago Operahouse.

Alice Lloyd has never been seen to better advantage than in "Little Miss Fix-it," the joint work of William J. Hurlburt, Harry B. Smith, and George V. Hobart. The comedy contains an extremely amusing and most pleasing story, dealing with the joys and trials of Delia Wendell, a young woman who loves her husband so devotedly that she exercises a woman's prerogative and quarrels with him over a foolish trifle. She then determines to forget her sorrows by making those about her happy, so she starts a wholesale match-making campaign and attempts to "fix it" for every body who is in love, or who, she thinks, ought to be.

The complications arising from her methods are very funny. Her plan furnishes material for numerous amusing situations and supplies Miss Lloyd with ample opportunity to display all those delightful talents for fun-making which have made her so immensely popular. Needless to say, after undergoing many complications, and bringing happiness in varying degrees to others, Delia finally finds her own happiness where she started, with her youthful husband.

During the course of the comedy Miss Lloyd introduces her most recent song successes, "Have You Ever Loved Any Other Little Girl?" "Cupid," "The Hobble Promenade," "I'll Build an Eden for You," and "Excuse Me, Mr. Moon." A feature, also, of the second act, is the now famous dance number, "The Newport Turkey Trot," said to be quite the most fascinating of the present numerous terpsichorean oddities.

Messrs Werba and Luescher, under whose management Miss Lloyd is appearing, and who are also the producers of "The Spring Maid," "Miss Dudelsack," and "The Rose Maid," have surrounded the comedienne with a most distinguished supporting company, including Lionel Walsh, Frederic Santley, Frank Shannon, Joseph C. Lane, Grace Field, Nellie Malcolm, Pauline deLorme, Annie Buckley and Grace Brown. The scenic equipment is an extremely attractive and tasteful one, the first act occuring in the grounds of a pretentious country house on fashionable Long Island, and the second act in the living-room of the same establishment.

Hamburger's Majestic.

At the Majestic Theater, beginning tonight, William A. Brady will present for the first time in this city "Over Night," a three-act comedy by Philip H. Barthomolae. This play was one of the biggest hits of last season in New York, and remained there for nine months, playing first at the Hackett Theater and afterwards at The Playhouse. It was given at the latter until well up in the summer, when the hot weather put an end to the theatrical term in New York.

The author of "Over Night," Mr. Philip H. Barthomolae, is a young man only just out of college, who had mapped out for himself civil engineering as a career, but having a liking for the theater, like many another, decided that he would write a play.

The story of "Over Night" concerns the mishaps that befall two young married couples who start on their honeymoon trips on the day-line steamer Hendrik Hudson, bound up the Hudson River to Albany. The husband of one of the wives goes ashore to look after some baggage and the wife of the other husband leaves the boat to send a telegram, and these two are left behind, with the other mismated pair still on board.

Many amusing complications ensue over this device of the writer and it is said that it would seem as though the tangle could never be straightened out. The author, however, succeeds in unraveling the threads at the end, and everything ends happily, as it should in all perfectly good comedies.

Mr. Brady promises a first-class production of the play and has engaged a capable company for delineation of the various characters. In the original production of "Over Night" a pronounced hit was made by a young man named Arthur Aylsworth in the role of a country hotel clerk, and he now heads the company.

The interest naturally centers around the four young people, and these characters have been cast as follows: The part of Richard Kettle, one of the husbands, will be played by Thomas Emory, a successful delineator of eccentric comedy of the lighter variety, while that of Percy Darling has been assigned to Sam B. Hardy, a well-known light comedian. The two wives will be played by Francine Larrimore and Ada Stirling. Others in the company are Inez Buck, Elsie Scott, James T. Ford, Mahlon P. Hamilton and E. L. Duane.

Fischer's Lyceum.

An Easter week offering that is peculiarly appropriate, in that it is called "The Henpecks," is what "Pop" Fischer and Harry James have to call attention to, opening with today's matinee, at Fischer's Lyceum, and if indications count, it certainly ought to top the record for Fischer's, inasmuch as no show written has been better cast. The superb resources of the great Fischer organization rival anything the metropolis has to offer, and it is possible to more than duplicate here the casts in the original showings there.

When Lew Fields produced "The Henpecks" as his own show in Gotham, he had no such aggregation of talent in it as Fischer's will be able to put forth here. This fact is amply verified by a comparison of the two casts. Here, Herbert Cawthorne has the Lew Fields role of Henry Peck; May Boley has that of Miss Peck, played East by Jessie Busley; Texas Guinan is in the original Blossom Seeley part; Bob Lett has the Vernon Castle role; Madison Smith certainly is better than Thomas Murray, and Jane Urban classes with Elizabeth Brice. Reece Gardner need not apologize to Charles King, and Joseph Kane can learn any day from Lon Chaney in an Italian role. Ann Montgomery can outsing and outact Marjorie Blythe, and Laura Oakley as Mrs. Peck can discount Louise Garver as an eccentric any day in the week. All that Pop asks, when it comes to chorus, is "compare them."

It is thus mere justice to say that the Fischer production has a stronger cast and certainly an equal chorus, and that New York has nothing "on" Los Angeles at all.

"The Henpecks" is a show especially strong in song numbers, and they are distributed all in proportion, till Misses Boley, Guinan, Montgomery, Urba, and Oakley, and Messrs. Smith, Lett, Cawthorne, and the rest, have their due share. And against all eastern affairs, Pop sets Mlle. Vanity, the wonderful little dancer, who is an added attraction, not possessed at all by the New York show.

There are five scenes to "The Henpecks," ranging from the farm in Maine through the wonderful barber shop of Ravioli, to the Peckingham swell apartments, and there is ample opportunity throughout for musical numbers, chorus and ensemble work dancing, scenery and costumes of the most gorgeous. The usual bargain matinee is promised for Wednesday.

Belasco.

Commencing with the performance tomorrow night, the Belasco Stock Company will make on of its most important productions this season in Charles Klein's powerful and uncommonly successful play "The Third Degree."

During the last three theatrical seasons, "The Third Degree" has proved one of the most attractive plays touring this country and now that it has been released to the Belasco company for the first production in stock it will doubtless prove one of the most largely-attended productions that this stage has held in many months.

Like all Klein dramas, "The Third Degree" is a big, powerful, gripping play, full of great dramatic situations and with a story of intense interest from the rise to the fall of the curtain. Los Angeles' theatergoers are familiar with the plot.

Thomas MacLarmie, Howard Hickman, Robert Ober, William Dowlan and all of the other male members of the Belasco company will be seen to exceptional advantage in "The Third Degree," while the piece also allows splendid chances to Bessie Barriscale, Helene Sullivan and the others of the feminine portion of the company.

Grand.

Beginning tomorrow night a new regime will be inaugurated at the Grand Operahouse, the home of musical comedy for the past several years. Musical comedy will still hold sway, but it will be of the short type and of the topical review and high-class burlesque variety. The Armstrong Follies Company, an organization well known on the Pacific Coast, and especially well remembered for former triumphs in Los Angeles, will be presented for an indefinite season by Messrs. George A. Howell and H. L. Skinner, two well-known theatrical men, who have taken a long lease on the Main-street playhouse.

The opening bill will be "A Big Night," a merry musical melange, which will portray some of the real follies of Los Angeles and will embody some exceptionally clever music and rare fun. "A Big Night" is in four scenes, each mounted in beautiful stage settings, and costumed in a most sumptuous manner. Topical songs, burlesques of current topics and other features of the down-to-the-minute variety will make the initial offering one of exceptional worth.

In the Armstrong Follies Company there are fifty persons. Of this number there are twenty-four famous "Baby Dolls," known from one end of the country to the other for their beauty, grace and charming voices. The Temple City quartette is another portion of the organization. These singers have lately been in vaudeville. Among the principals of the Armstrong company are such well-known players as Ethel Davis, Ed and Will Armstrong, Clara Howard, Gus Leonard, the German comedian, Hazel Wilson, Eddie Mitchell and Minnie Rhoades.

Under the new management two shows will be given every night and matinees will be given daily except Monday and Friday.

—o—

The Burbank company's presentation of "The Squaw Man" has proved as popular with local theatergoers and the demand for seats has been so uncommonly large, that this fine American play will be continued for a second week, commencing with the matinee today.

The play itself is one of the most interesting and attractive offerings that has ever occupied a local stock stage, for its unique, interesting story and its bracing atmosphere of the West delights everyone who likes to see a really big play.

First honors in the presentation go to Forrest Stanley in the role of Jim Carston, while the second biggest individual hit in the piece has been scored by Lola May as Nat-U-Ritch, his Indian wife.

Following the second week of "The Squaw Man," the Burbank company will make a big revival of the famous comedy drama, "David Harum," in which the popular character comedian, John Burton, will make his reappearance on the Burbank stage in the title role.

—o—

Orpheum.

Unquestionably the most extraordinary list of headliners who ever appeared on a vaudeville bill will mark the sensational feature of the Orpheum's Easter week programme, opening with tomorrow's matinee, for no fewer than four—half the number of acts—will be recognized and authorized headliners.

The list is composed of Mary Norman, in "Women I Have Met;" Robert T. Haines and his company, in George Broadhurst's first one-act play, "The Coward;" Valerie Bergere and her players, in a new sketch, "She Wanted Affection," and Ida Fuller and her dancers in "If." With Miss Bergere's change of bill, this makes three new headline acts, and Miss Fuller's is certainly worthy of another week.

In detail, of Miss Norman it may be said that while a recognized favorite here, she has perfected a number of new studies of women, and in her inimitable way she will take off her sex to the huge merriment of the men and the keen enjoyment of the women, to a final "T." Miss Norman is not an imitator nor an impersonator; she picks out characteristics and exaggerates them to obtain values.

Mr. Haines, long a star in the best legitimate companies, including leading man for Marlowe, comes into vaudeville with a very strong vehicle, "The Coward," which he presents admirably. Broadhurst is America's foremost dramatist of the younger school, and this act was written especially for the Orpheum at Mr. Beck's behest.

Wilson Brothers, two very clever comics, have a scream act in "Go Out," which will delight all who love a good laugh, and Sammy Watson, with his barnyard circus of dogs, roosters, hens and so forth, returns with the same draw for old and young. Watson's show is unique, like nothing else and has a field of its own. Watson being a humorist of the best sort, and his pets being highly trained and very funny.

Miss Bergere's new sketch is a comedy farce, in contrast to her present week's vehicle; Miss Fuller's beautiful act is a novelty of its kind; Percy Waram and company in "The Boson's Mate" is a comedy scream from start to finish, and Cole de Losse offers a sure novelty in a wire act. The music and the motion views of the world's news finish a bill which for remarkable names and unusual size of acts outdistances anything yet proffered here.

Empress.

With Joe Maxwell's Dancing Girls; Merritt and Douglas, and May Devlin and company in the novel skit, "The Girl From Yonkers," Sullivan and Considine will tomorrow afternoon offer an entirely new and splendidly diversified bill of vaudeville at the Empress Theater.

Maxwell's Dancing Girls is one of the latest vaudeville musical comedy creations to have been acclaimed a success in the East, and this is its first visit to the Coast. There are ten people in the cast, the greater part of whom are sprightly dancing girls, headed by clever young Julia Curtis, a recent recruit from musical comedy.

The piece abounds in bright, catchy new songs, and dances, while there are a number of uncommonly fine scenic effects, including a real rain storm. The piece is shown in four different stage settings, while it is costumed with all of the brilliance of a large musical comedy organization.

Merritt and Douglas are two comedians well-known to vaudeville audiences, who depend upon bright, snappy dialogue, clever dances, and new songs offered in a most enjoyable and amusing manner, rather than grotesque make-up, for their success.

May Devlin and her company in the new sketch, "The Girl From Yonkers," will be one of the important offerings of the new bill. In this Miss Devlin plays the role of the shy lit-the country maid, who in reality, is a very clever little burglar, and who beats a "wise guy" at his own game.

Lovers of music will find much to enjoy in the act of Phil Bennett, billed as the Alpine troubador, a clever instrumentalist and the possessor of a rare lyric tenor voice. Bennett is a recent recruit from the comic opera stage and has won a distinct success everywhere he has appeared in vaudeville.

The acrobatic portion of the new bill will be in the hands of the Bennington Brothers, who will show a series of feats requiring perfect physical development, and the Les Gougets will be seen in a genuine musical novelty.

—o—

Pantages.

"A Night in 'Frisco," the big singing and dancing sensation that has made such a hit all the way up the Pacific Coast, will appear in Los Angeles Monday afternoon at Pantages. The act is described as a reproduction of a typical San Francisco cafe, and presents an even dozen of the best dancers and commedians ever seen on the coast in a similar vaudeville production.

The headline number for the week is Jules Held's "Childhood Days," a school act presenting a bunch of juveniles who sing and dance with the joyous abandon of children, and the skill of adults.

The Nichols-Nelson troupe, hoop-rollers, jugglers and diabolo experts, will present their novel specialty. This troupe comes to the Pantages circuit direct from its vaudeville debut in New York where they made an immense hit in the Keith vaudeville houses. Alf Rippin, the Scotch ventriloquist, appears in kilts and a Harry Lauder accent. The bagpipes and some songs about the "Land o'-Cakes" figure joyously in this act.

The Shubert Musical Quartette, one of vaudeville's smartest musical turns, will offer a melange of comedy and singing, with string and saxaphone instrumental accompaniments. The Allman and Nevins combination are also musical commedians with a trend to the burlesque.

Mr. Pantages finds by the combined experience of the circuit that music, comedy and dancing are the features in vaudeville most enjoyed by his patrons, and as a result acts of this character have of late largely predominated in the programme at the Pantages vaudeville theaters.

—o—

Adolphus.

One great round of pleasure is what the bill for the farewell week of vaudeville at the Adolphus Theater will be. For beginning Monday, April 15, the policy of the Adolphus will be changed from vaudeville to musical comedy, playing the high class releases from the western wheel of burlesque. The week commencing tomorrow marks the twentieth and closing week of vaudeville.

The headliner will be Edwin T. Emery and a company of eight in the sensational French pantomime L'Amour De L'Apache, as first introduced at the Follies Bergere, Paris. The dance presents the story of Blanche, who is forced to bring money to her hideous master. The scene is laid in a cabaret or wine house where crooks congregate. To the rhythm of feird and fantastic music the story is told in dance form. Eight European pantomimists present the dance.

Edwin T. Emery its author and producer is well known on the Pacific Coast. He is better known as the originator of the famous dances: Cleopatra Death Dance; Le Tragede De Egypte; Military Mary; Blue Love Letters; The Revel Of the Norsemen; The Game Of Love and several other terpsichorean creations now playing the "big time" with great success, in the East.

The Misses Hazel Power and Sallie Heath were hostesses at an April Fools party, last week, given at the home of the former in Baldwin Park. After the unwinding of "Satan's Net" in which partners for supper were discovered, the guests went to the Woman's Clubhouse which was decorated to represent "The Hall of Demons" and dancing was enjoyed. The grand march was led by Miss Powers and Lieut. Heath. The end of the journey was reached at the home of Miss Heath where "The Feast of the Fools" was spread. A jolly-faced clown, standing in a basin of red poinsettias held green and scarlet ribbon streamers which extended to the place cards.

At the close of the evening Dr. and Mrs. Heath passed unique little baskets to each guest and when opened news of the marriage of Mrs. Heath's niece, Miss Jessamine Woods and C. I. Groves of Imperial, was discovered. The wedding was solemnized December 27, but the young people had carefully guarded the secret.

Extending to each plate were violet ribbons to which were attached corsage bouquets of the same flowers. Favors were lavender baskets, on the handles of which rested yellow, fluffy chickens filled with bon-bons. Hand-painted cards ornamented with jonquils and violets marked covers for the guest of honor, Mrs. Howard Skinner, Mrs. Lee Mullen, Mrs. John Griffith, Mrs. George Howell, Miss Bess Ellis and Mrs. O. H. Casebeer of Des Moines, Ia. Following luncheon bridge was enjoyed for the balance of the afternoon.

Pearls are Correct this Season

This "white season" brings pearl jewelry to the front as never before. And pray, what is prettier, daintier, more chaste than a Pearl Necklace, Pearl Lavalliere, Vanity Chain, Hat Pin, Brooch or Ear Rings?

Our $30 Suits

This season we are making a specialty of Tailored Suits at $30.00. Suits which we claim are better in material, better colors, better linings and better styles than any $35.00 suit ever offered in this town—and we've been told by many that our claim is just one. Plain Tailored, Demi-Tailored or Norfolks. Each and every one strictly man-tailored, $30.00.

ALSO we are showing a line of strictly man-tailored suits at $25.00 whose equal at the price we've not seen or heard of. Suits we can recommend for style and goodness of material. Ask to see these, too. They come in all the season's best colors.

Corset Satisfaction

Surely no woman need leave this corset department dissatisfied. We have the corsets, and we employ expert fitters to aid you in choosing the style best suited to your figure. Our fitting rooms are convenient, light, airy and comfortable. Among the well known makes of which we carry full and complete lines—being the exclusive agents for some of them—are:
MODART, front lacing; NEMO, R. & G., FLORITA, J. B., BIEN JOLIE, RENGO BELT., B. & J. and DE BEVOISE BRASSIERES, besides other popular brands.

Where's the Girl Who Would Not Like These Suits?

Assortments were never so large, vareties never so broad.

Of course the navies and creams, the soft tans and grays and the smart little black and white shepherd checks are strong favorites.

Remarkably smart styled suits at: $13.50, $15.00, $18.50, $20.00 and up to $27.50.

SOCIETY.

By Miss Ida Smith, Rita Gould, Howard Reed and E. R. Nugent and vocal solos by Lowell Shork. Refreshments were served during the evening. Those in charge of the affair were Mrs Wolkern, Mrs. Hotchkiss and Miss Lilburn.

Members of the College Corner Club were a dainty dinner in the Y.W.C.A. cafeteria Tuesday evening as a farewell to Miss Ethel Smith, who leaves soon for the East, where she will become the bride of Lieut. Ralph Wilson. In deference to the position of her future husband, decorations for the pretty affair bore a patriotic significance. The flowers adorning the tables were red, white and blue, with tiny silken flags nestling among them and the place cards displayed clever sketches of fat little cupids wearing caps and belts and swords and carrying huge guns. An after-dinner toast, "The Call to Arms," was responded to by Miss Lucile Singletary; Miss Mabel Scott Riley's "Old Sweetheart of Mine" to a soft piano accompaniment, and Mrs. Arthur Walther read a parody on a humorous selection. A feature of the evening was the presenting to Miss Smith of a handsome hammered copper jardiniere, the parting gift of her College Corner friends.

Members of the Woman's Club were at home Tuesday afternoon to sister club women both in this city and surrounding towns. A large company assembled for the programme and remained through the social hour which followed. Mrs. Ida Spooner Smith, president of the Woman's Club, welcomed the guests and the programme which included a paper on the evolution of woman by Dr. Sarah Mallory; a number of Scotch songs by Miss Cumming and John Cumming and a reading by Miss Marion Harris on the life of Jane Carlyle. During the social hour tea was served with Mrs. J. H. Cox and Miss Julia Myers in charge. As Scotland furnished the motif for the afternoon's entertainment, the decorations of the clubhouse were in Scotch broom and pictures of Bobbie Burns and Thomas Carlyle were in evidence.

Clarence Sherman Frye of Riverside and Miss Alice May Chapin of Pasadena were married Wednesday evening at the Congregational Church in Pasadena, Rev. G. W. Mathes officiating. Following a large reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lou V. Chapin, followed the service at the church. The young people will live in Pasadena on their return from their wedding journey.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Gage of 296 East Fourteenth street have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anna Stewart Gage, to Henry Schuyler Montgomery. The date for the marriage has not been definitely decided upon.

The Crescent Bachelors' Club will entertain with an informal dance Friday evening, the 12th of April, at the Venice Country Club. A number of special features will be introduced.

Owing to a number observing Holy Week there were but three tables present at Friday Tuesday afternoon at the Shakespeare Club. Mrs. Willis Parris was hostess for the afternoon. The study scene was made by Mrs. Peckham. Punch was served. Saturday evening the members gathered to elect officers for the coming year. A supper and dance was given after the business session.

Mrs. I. G. Braun of Venice was hostess to the World's Progress class Friday afternoon. After the usual business hour, tea was served by the hostess. Those present included Mrs. J. D. Makins, Mrs. C. M. Shtssler, Mrs. Robbins, Mrs. T. A. Higgins and Mrs. Lane.

Mrs. D. Eaton, Dudley avenue and Front, was hostess to the members of the Silk Stocking Club Thursday afternoon. A luncheon preceded the usual game of bridge and the appointments were carried out in the Easter colors and motif. There were tiny chicks, and cards, marking the decorations, marked places for the guests. The highest score was made by Mrs. Frank Kegley, who was awarded the usual prize. Mrs. Frank Rule of Venice will be the next hostess to the club.

—o—

The Sawtelle Women's Club entertained with an April-fool's luncheon Monday at the Community Clubrooms. The hall was decorated with golden poppies and the appointments were all carried out in the favored shade. Fifteen small tables were used for the luncheon, each table bearing a centerpiece of the pretty blossoms. The luncheon was given by the losing side in the recent attendance contest and a number of amusing surprises were given by the hostess. Mrs. George Wiseman was toastmaster and toasts were responded to by Mrs. Edinger, on "April Fools;" Mrs. Haskell, "The Fountain;" Mrs. Pearce, "The Historic Sycamore;" Mrs. Nellis, "The City Beautiful;" Mrs. C. T. Barker, "The Fire Department," and Miss Caroline Wilson, "Citizenship." Instead of the usual flowers these they portrayed the circus, entertaining their guests by naming various members. Prizes for the jokes were taken good natured and the members will remember this luncheon as one of the most unique ever given by the club. A musical programme was given in the afternoon, Mrs. Edith Teal being the artist, those who contributed to the pleasure and enjoyment by a number of vocal solos.

A quiet, but pretty, wedding was solemnized Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Augustus G. Paine, 1 West J street, when their daughter, Deborah, became the bride of Mr. Addison Gillette. The rooms were decorated for the occasion into a fairyland of beauty, feathery palms and white carnations being used with the greatest effect. (From a drawing made Wednesday, showing how far work had progressed in removing the north building at that time.)

---"It Seems a Shame to Tear Down Such a Splendid Building"

—more than one man has expressed himself similarly in the past few days.

—It is a shame, from one standpoint, to utterly destroy and remove a 6-story and basement, Class B structure that is barely 7 years old—and that cost over $100,000.

—But it is a necessity—from more than one standpoint—
—Los Angeles is growing.
—Bullock's is growing.

THE SHAKESPEARE CLUB held its monthly social Saturday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Carl Raab on West First street, with an attendance of forty persons. Mesdames Raab, Klingerman, Pierson, Nolan, McKnight, Russell, and Miss Lulu Mayes were hostesses for the afternoon. The entertainment embraced a musical romance read by Mrs. McKnight in which the names of familiar songs occurred. When these occurred instead of being pronounced by the reader, she paused, and Mrs. Raab at the piano played the music and the guests wrote down the names of those they recognized. The result of the competition was a tie between Mrs. Anna McMichael and Mrs. Alice Shugg. A musical puzzle was also a feature of the afternoon's entertainment and resulted in a tie between Mesdames McMichael, Shugg and Lulu Killian. Refreshments were served and an enjoyable afternoon spent by all present.

The Current Events section of the Shakespeare Club will give a programme commemorative of the poet, Wordsworth, tomorrow. Roll call will be responded to by quotations from the poet's works. Mrs. Charles Worth will give a sketch of Wordsworth and his friend, Coleridge. Mrs. L. Klingerman, biography; Mrs. J. F. Baker, The Lake Poets. The home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Beck was the scene of a lively gathering of young people Saturday evening to celebrate the eighteenth birthday of their daughter Miss Hazel. Invitations to the number of seventy had been issued and there were few regrets as the Beck home is proverbial for good times.

The Baraca class of the Methodist Church gave an April Fool party Monday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hicks, which was a thoroughly enjoyable affair. Parlor basketball was played during the entire evening, the balls being empty eggshells which were blown about on tables. $3.50 Recipe Free For Weak Men Send Name and Address Today —You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, failing memory, lame back, brought on by excesses and natural drains, that has cured a number of worn out and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicines—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and vitality, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a specialist who has made a special study of men, and I am convinced it is the most effective combination for the cure of vigor lost or weakness ever put together.

I think I owe it to my fellow men to send them a copy in confidence so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures and is drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what I believe is the quickest-acting restorative, upbuilder and SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, so cure himself at home, almost from the quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 3750 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain sealed envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3 to $5 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I send it entirely free.

Thinness Easily Overcome.

(From "Health and Beauty.")

Further evidence is being presented almost daily that a recent discovery of new chemical elements combined in a tablet with hypophosphites is in fact proving a blessing to the absolutely thin men and women, for it can be demonstrated beyond doubt that a course of three or four weeks' treatment brings an increase in weight of from 10 to 20 pounds, and a wonderful improvement of health and strength. For self administration the most convenient form is to be found in three-grain Sargol nuclaine tablets, obtainable in regular packages from the best apothecary stores with full directions.

Being April Fool's day there was an air of expectancy among the guests as the clever hostess provided various games and prizes for the afternoon's entertainment. After serving a most delightful afternoon luncheon, each guest was handed a boquet of daffodills tied with ribbon, from which was suspended a small yellow bag. The guests were asked each to open them at the same moment. Supposing, this of course, to be the joke of the afternoon, it was cautiously opened and found to contain a black cat, on which was written the names of Miss Phillips and Edward Hartsig. The guests were both fooled and surprised at the happiness they found within. Miss Phillips has been one of Alhambra's most popular teachers for the past three years and Mr. Hartsig is a successful business man of Detroit, Mich., where the young couple will make their future home. Miss Phillips was assisted by Miss Florence Erwine. The guests were Miss Moore and Bater of Pasadena; Miss Clay of Anaheim, Mmes. Walter E. Eddy, H. M. Knox, J. B. THE LOCAL STAGE.

ques; Zukovs Trio in original Russian singing and dancing; the Shomers, novelty teeth equilibrists; Tourtlott in a new novelty musical act; Palmer, comedy dancing juggler, and the Obermans in "Fun in a Dressing-Room, 13 and 23," complete the best bill of the season. The Obermans present an act that is one constant convulsion of laughter. There are three in the company and the scene is the dressing-room of a vaudeville theater. The act comes to the Adolphus with an eastern reputation. It is now making its first appearance on the Coast.

Commencing Monday, April 15, the policy of the Adolphus will be changed from three-a-day vaudeville to three-a-day musical comedy. A company of fifty people will be put in with Frank Morton as producing director. Popular prices will prevail.

—o—

Princess.

Something clever and sensationally daring will be presented at the Princess Theater this week, when a series of living pictures will be contributed as a special feature attending the musical farce-comedy "Some Time." The young girls who will appear in the tableaux will be drawn from among the most beautiful women of California.

In the play itself, Edmund Flynn, as principal comedian, will have the assistance of Miss Eleanor Courtan, the leading woman. Miss Jeanne Moore in an important role. The setting of the play will be laid in a Los Angeles garden spot.

The play will serve to introduce a number of delightful musical numbers to be sung by Miss Moore, Miss Courtan, Otto Kaestner, O. J. Post and Walter Harrison.

La Bella Guillermo, whose oriental dances have charmed so many during the last fortnight, will have a new specialty throughout next week.

—o—

Kinemacolor.

Lake Louise, the gem of the Rockies, will be shown at the Kinemacolor Theater this week, commencing Monday afternoon. Lake Louise is 3000 feet above sea level, being one of a number of lakes nestling amid the towering peaks of the Canadian Rockies. Most of these mountain lakes contain no fish, the water in them coming from the glaciers and snowfields far up on the mountainsides. A feature of glacier water is its intense green color, and this characteristic is only recorded by Kinemacolor. A second cause of the green tint of the water is, of course, that the surrounding slopes are usually covered with pines, whose deep-green foliage is reflected in the lake.

"The Royal Regatta, at Cowes;" "Scenes in Smyrna;" "Waves and Spray;" "Choosing Wallpaper," and "The Steamship George Washington," complete a very strong and interesting programme.

—o—

William Hodge Coming.

At last Los Angeles is to have William Hodge in "The Man from Home." No play produced in America in the last dozen years has created such a tremendous amount of favorable discussion as this joint effort of Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, which comes to the Majestic Theater for one week, commencing next Sunday.

Even greater than the success made by the play is the prominence achieved in the leading role by William Hodge. He has really given the American stage a new type of character comedy work. Mr. Hodge is at once original, unique and singularly impressive.

"The Man from Home" fairly exudes Americanism. It is patriotic to a degree, brimful of broad comedy and some exceedingly strong dramatic situations. For the last six years Mr. Hodge and "The Man from Home" have been one of the strongest possible combinations ever known in American stage history.

Chicago held the twain for two years, New York for a like period and in the lesser cities such as Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Boston engagements have run from four to twenty weeks each.

Mr. Hodge created the part, and his coming here in the play is an event that justifies far more than usual attention on the part of theatergoers.

SHAKESPEREAN PAGEANT.

Interest Manifested in Natal Day Celebration — Extensive Musical Programme by Drill.

Great interest is being taken by the public at large—say the promoters—in the Shakesperean Anniversary celebration, which is to be given at the Auditorium Saturday, April 20, under the auspices of the Egan School.

Expressions of cordial support and good will have been received from schools, from various semi-public and private institutions and from notable persons all over Los Angeles county. In addition to scholastic indorsement, letters of approval have been received from Bishop Thomas J. Conaty, Charles F. Lummis, Mrs. W. D. Turner of Pasadena, and the heads of eleven schools in and about Los Angeles.

The matinee will begin at 2 o'clock, and will be inaugurated by a processional pageant of 100 persons in costume, representing characters from Lear to Puck.

There will be a prologue by Amanda Matthews, written especially for the occasion, and read by Helen Eddy.

The music, which is strictly Shakesperean in character, is being prepared under the direction of Thomas Taylor Drill, and the programme will include Nicolai's "Merry Wives" overture; "Tell Me Where Is Fancy Bred," setting by Stevenson; a greenwood dance in minuet form, intended as an entr'acte to "As You Like It;" the waltz song from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet," sung by Florence Wadsworth Wallace; a gavotte, another entr'acte; incidental Shakesperean music by Pavanne; Thomas Morley's setting, "A Lover and His Lass," sung by Miss Jacobs and Mr. Alexander; Sarjeant's setting to "Blow, Blow, Thou Winter Wind," sung by Mr. Mercer, and a village green dance, from a potpourri of Greenwood airs on Shakesperean themes.

The dramatic portion of the programme is most comprehensive, it includes rapid, incisive, abbreviations from twenty-one of the most famous scenes, delivered in unintermittent succession, waits being avoided by shifting "full stage" and "scene in one" with timely regularity.

The services of about 200 young players will be required to present the full programme.

DON'T deny yourself delights conferred by Satin skin cream and Satin skin powder.

MISSION PLAY PROCEEDS.

Rehearsals Will Commence at San Gabriel Tomorrow—Some Details of the Large Cast.

Director Henry Kablerske, who is in charge of the production of the Mission Play at San Gabriel, has engaged the most of his large company—with the exception of men for a few principal roles—and will start rehearsals Monday morning, April 8.

Thereafter rehearsals will proceed throughout the better part of every day until the actual production, which will be made the last of this month.

The theater is in such shape now that it admits practical stage work, and this will be carried on with the surroundings which the full-fledged production will have.

Mr. Kablerske's stage manager is Ben Horning, who, in the past season, has been seen in some remarkably good character parts in Los Angeles—notably in Max Figman's company. Mr. Horning has had wide experience in stage management, and will be the master of all the intricate details of person and effect which accompany this spectacular allegory.

The men engaged for the company, so far, are Messrs. Lynton, Rowe, Rutledge, Bachmann, Fenton, Heard, Wilkes, Harris, Staples, Lederer, Chandler, Marriott, Rafferty, Haverly, Well, Marvine, McNulty, Haskins, Johnson and Cox. Misses Temple, Gordon and Ranier will also appear in roles of considerable size.

As has been announced and frequently commented upon, the Princess Eleanor Lazarovitch-Hrebelianovich, the beautiful California-Servian, will play the leading feminine role of Senora Domingues.

An orchestra of sixteen men has been provided, and a full stage working staff in all departments. In all, a mechanical force of sixty-two has been engaged.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Col. Colville P. Terrett, Eighth United States Infantry, has been placed on the retired list on his own application after more than thirty-three years' service. His first service was in California and Arizona, where he served in the Apache campaigns under Gens. Crook and Miles.

Capt. H. Daldof of the Standard Oil tank steamship Hesperus was recently presented a gold watch by the company in honor of his three hundredth voyage around Cape Horn. He has been at sea practically all his life, and before he became a master made several voyages around the horn.

W. A. F. Ekengren, the Minister to this country from Sweden, and Mme. Ekengren will spend a part of the summer in Sweden. Mme. Ekengren will be presented at court.

The friends of Judge Carpenter of the Federal District Court in Chicago expect that he will be appointed a Circuit judge to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Judge Grosscup. Judge Carpenter was named for the District Court by President Taft, who has been more than pleased with the record he has made.

Brig.-Gen. Daniel H. Brush, commanding the Department of California, has asked the War Department for permission to retire from the service April 12, instead of waiting until his sixty-fourth birthday, which falls on May 12, next. Gen. Brush is one of the few active army officers with Civil War records. During the Spanish-American War he campaigned both in Cuba and the Philippines.

Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder of the Christian Endeavor Society, in his present world's tour in the interest of its work, has recently been in the ancient city of Pergamos—the site of one of the Seven Churches seen in the vision of St. John. He also has visited Philadelphia, a number of cities of Greece and Turkey, Sardis and other cities in Asia Minor and many in Europe.

GERMANY PUTTING CLOTHES ON NUDE REPRODUCTIONS.

Puritanical "Bare-Maniacs" Who Believe the Sight of Skin Is Bad for Both Young and Old—Courts Trying to Solve the Difficult Question of What Is the "Proper" Minimum of Clothing.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, March 15.—Germany is suffering from "Blossenwahn" or "Bare-Mania." A rigidly respectable state has leagued itself with tailors, milliners and bootmakers to ensure that all art shall be properly clothed, instead of causing unemployment in these decent trades by going bare. Policemen, postal authorities, customs officials and private individuals are seizing and destroying pictures and statues which when they got up in the morning forgot to put their clothes on. The courts are busy deciding what is the minimum of allowable garments. The constituted authorities demand that the minimum be nothing less than the maximum. Herr Prefect Jagow demands it; Herr Parson Steinitzer demands it; Herr Judge Arnold demands it. And as many millions of unauthorized Germans demand elemental naked nudity there is trouble in the air.

The "Bare-Mania" is an outcome of politics. Some people say that the original cause is the dominance in imperial affairs of the Clerical Center party. The Center, which with the Conservatives has run Germany during the last three years, is emphatically the respectable party. It backs all forms of clothes legislation; and the law under which the present prosecutions are made is largely its creation. And Kaiser Wilhelm, as fits a monarch with nine and seventy uniforms, is a clothes man. It was he who initiated twenty years ago the proposal for the Lex Heinze, which was realized only after ten years' quarreling.

At first the wise censors merely went for modern pictures of Gallic audacity; and here they had great success. Publishers were fined; one was sent to jail; and the "Marquis de Bayros," who illustrated Casanova in a way which—illustrated Casanova—was obliged to flee from Germany. But later some clever moralists called attention to the fact that the Italian renaissance was quite as bad as De Bayros; and usually worse so little clothes that a microscope couldn't find them. And the censors immediately seized photographs of Correggio's "Io Receiving the Kiss of Jupiter," which hangs in Berlin Museum, and there daily demoralizes an average of 632 visitors. The firm of Stengel, for selling photographs of "a picture by Antonio Allegri, known as Correggio," came before the Tenth Punitive Chamber of the First Land Court. The prosecuting lawyer asked that the publishers be acquitted as he could not prove that they had actually sold any photographs; but he demanded that the photographs be confiscated on ground of their impropriety. Seven professors were summoned to swear alternatively that "Io and Jupiter" was improper and that it was proper; and they talked learnedly about renaissance ideas of nudity; explained that Florentine duchesses sat naked to Titian; and that Correggio had painted the "Holy Night," which is a treasure of the Dresden Gallery. And in the end Correggio was acquitted; and naturally millions of Germans who formerly only knew him through the "Holy Night," are now adorning their living rooms with "Io and Jupiter."

TITIAN'S OFFENSES.

The next renaissance painter gone for was Titian, who painted large numbers of ladies without clothing, some of them ladies of not irreproachable history. Titian's different Danaes caused sad offense. But the attacks failed. The first was made against reproductions of the Hermitage Danae. Later a Leipzig censor went for another, and more famous, Danae, which is in the museum at Naples. It is a nice-looking picture; and the court let it off. The "Bare-Maniacs" of Cologne then tried to get the authorities to begin a prosecution of a postcard seller who offered reproductions of Titian's "Divine and Earthly Love." The authorities refused. On the subject the maniacs started a discussion and controversy, which illustrates well the "Bare-Mania" point of view. They explained that the picture was particularly demoralizing because one of the two ladies seated by the fountain was fully dressed and the other fully undressed. That contrast emphasized the undressiness. If the dressed lady were not sitting by the fountain the undressed one would be bearable. "All right," retorted the friends of the postcard seller. "We will agree to abolish the dressed lady, and print only postcards with the undressed one. Will that satisfy you?" And the retort closed the controversy about Titian.

Having had extremely bad luck with the improper classics, the "Bare Maniacs" have returned to the attack on the improper moderns. Here they are having more success. In Munich, the citadel of bare art, they obtained a court judgment that Rodin's statute, "The Kiss," is demoralizing; and now though anyone can buy a print of "The Kiss" in Berlin there is not one on sale in all Munich. The Prussian authorities have had their success in other quarters. They began by ordering the authorities at Warnemuende to seize copies of pictures and statutes by the Swedes, Zorn, Larsson and Hasselberg. In particular they object to certain ruddy nudities of Zorn. Their next action created a storm. They seized prints of Hasselberg's famous "Snowbell" statue. "Snowbell" got first prize at the Paris Exhibition; and it stands in a public place in Stockholm, in front of a school, so that children see it every day. Everyone in Stockholm admires its beauty and poetical charm. But what is allowed to Swedish children is too wicked for German grown-ups. A trial over "Snowbell" is still pending; and soon someone may be in jail for selling the prints.

IN FRANCE.

Naturally the censors who object to serious Scandinavia and classical Italy will not let France alone. They tried to prevent the sale of Watteau's "Jupiter and Antiope," which is in the Louvre, and got the authorities in various provincial towns to seize prints after Baudry, Carolus Duran and Bouguereau. In Cologne was confiscated Bouguereau's "Birth of Venus from the Sea Foam." This seizure was justified by the court on the ground that the picture was sold to persons aged under 16. In Hanover the raid on French art was less successful. A dealer named Hahnemann was summoned for selling reproductions of pictures by Boucher, Lancret, and other eighteenth century French masters. Experts, as usual, swore that the pictures were demoralizing, and were followed by experts who swore the contrary. The president of the court decided to use his own judgment. He took up one of the disputed reproductions, looked at it intently, blushed red, and said with a nodding of head: "I do not deny that this is admirable art. But it is abominable morals. I am sure there is no man of decent feeling in Germany who would let his family see it. I give judgment . . ."

"I beg your pardon," interrupted the lawyer for the defense. "The original is in Potsdam Palace, in the picture gallery. His Majesty the Kaiser gave permission to copy it."

The judge got redder still, and continued: "Don't interrupt. As I wanted to say, I give judgment against the prosecution. The prints are to be returned."

THE KAISER INCENSED.

Naturally the questions, what the Kaiser thinks, what the Kaiserin thinks, what the King of Saxony thinks, what the ruler of Bavaria thinks, what pictures they have in their palaces, play a considerable role in the controversy. Newspapers say that the Kaiser is much incensed at the growing love of Germans for nakedness, as shown by Olga Desmond's naked dances, by the various nakedness societies; and by the craze for naked paintings and statues. Prince Regent Leopold of Bavaria is also prominently dragged into the quarrel. This was apropos of the dancer, Adoree-Villany, who had trouble with the Munich police for dancing in garments which were thought improper. A streptococcus would have caught cold in the adorable Adoree's garb. Some said she wore nothing at all; and to prove they were wrong she produced photographs taken as she danced. "Now, who dares accuse me of wearing no clothes?" she exclaimed. "Yes, but where are the clothes?" said her critics, peering closely into the photographs. These photographs were sold in the city; and the Munich high art crowd who object to tailoring gushed much over them. "Our art-loving Prince Regent," they said, "is always on the side of artistic freedom." And they spread the story that the director of the Academy, Dr. von Miller had shown the photographs to Leopold, who said, "they were very nice." And this led to a storm.

The newspapers of the clothes school, which is very strong in Bavaria, criticised the Regent, and said they were surprised. For a few days Leopold kept silent, and the clothes school held that the charge was proved. Then appeared a semi-official communication in the "Bayerischer Courier," saying: "It is entirely untrue that His Royal Highness applauded the naked figure of the dancer, Adoree-Villany. His Royal Highness has already passed his ninetieth year; and he is thinking not of dancers, but of eternity and of the salvation of his soul."

UP IN ARMS.

At Munich and everywhere else the artist world is up in arms against the new censorship; because it is feared that after the "Bare-Maniacs" have disposed of the nudities of Italy, France and Scandinavia they will attack German nudity. The artists point out that all great German nineteenth century painters—Feuerbach, Habermann, Klinger, Liebermann and Marees—painted nudes plentifully; and that nobody is painting more of them than Louis Corinth, the chief of the modern secession. "That doesn't matter," answer the "Bare-Maniacs," "Corinth's nudes are so ugly that they do no harm." And so goes the controversy. The amusing feature is that it takes place in Germany, where artistic freedom has hitherto been great. A few years ago Germans used to laugh at the "Bare-Mania" of England and of America. One of their books about America has an acid story to the effect that Hiram Power's "Greek Slave," now in the Washington Art Gallery, was examined by a committee of parsons in order to decide "whether it was fit to be seen by a Christian people." In Germany, the "Greek Slave" now would be wrapped in a policeman's overcoat, and hurried to the nearest court of justice.

BASIL SANDWYCH.

A LITERARY EXCURSION

LONDON, March 20.—There is a Scotch family in London whose members could, an' they would, give us almost as many and as interesting reminiscences of J. M. Barrie as Herbert Spencer's two spinster acquaintances at Brighton did of that philosopher, no great time ago. Barrie's friends never will do this, but if they did it would be little more than turn about, for they tell me that the author of "Peter Pan," who was best known to them in his early days in London, did not hesitate to use as "copy" any entertaining episode or anecdote he heard related while visiting them. They grew quite accustomed, in fact, to picking up the "St. James's Gazette" (now the "Evening Standard,") for which Barrie then wrote regularly, and finding their "table-talk" chronicled in its pages. He was emphatically the "cheil amang them taking notes" and he mostly did "prent it." It was the famous editor of the "St. James's," the late Frederick Greenwood, by the way, who persuaded Barrie to leave his editorial work on the "Nottingham Journal," and to come to London, and among Barrie's first contributions to Greenwood's paper were the "Auld Licht Idylls."

My friends saw most of him at this time and during the next few years, or when Barrie was turning thirty. He was very Scotch, painfully shy, and, as one would expect, not rolling in wealth in those days. The frugality which is said to characterize his nation was not absent from the budding genius, though when Barrie turned up, as he once or twice did, with his boots tied with ordinary string, the mater was put down to the remissness of the artistic temperament.

Herbert Spencer's lady biographers described the ear-plugs with which it was the philosopher's custom to shut out unwelcome conversation; Barrie's friends tell amusingly of a gutta-percha "tooth" of his own manufacture which for some time replaced a molar of the writer's that had come to grief. This was a side tooth which Barrie had lost through some accident, and the hunk of gutta-percha, introduced between the teeth on either side, apparently made a pretty good substitute. Occasionally, having got hard, it dropped out, and whenever this happened, its gifted possessor held it before the fire and kneaded it tenderly, and, after it had regained its elasticity, popped it back again.

About this time, one of the ladies of the family asked Barrie to write in her autograph book. Barrie wrote, "Beware of a pale woman with a large appetite." I saw it the other day, in his firm, a bit precise, handwriting. Evidently the writer thought well of this "mot," which, to its recipient, seemed no great shakes, or else he deemed it best not to be too prodigal of his quips, for some years after the lady read in a newspaper that he also had written it in the autograph book of a fair one in Nottingham.

They saw a lot of him while he was writing his most famous stories, "The Little Minister," "Sentimental Tommy" and the rest, and had become a great man in the literary world. He came back delighted, they say, with his first visit to the United States, and and described with special gusto his visit to Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, who gave him what were fondly intended to be "real Scotch scones," but which Barrie described as "rather fearsome things." He was lively enough with folk, like these acquaintances, whom he knew well, and a great hand for games. If no real game was available he improvised one, and the spectacle of Barrie hilariously playing "billiards" on their dining-room table with apples for balls and a walking stick as cue was witnessed by these friends more than once. At one of their Christmas dinners, he gave a highly comic imitation of himself replying to a toast at a public banquet.

It was after Barrie's marriage, and the emigration to Canada of a son of the house who had been one of the author's closest chums, that my friends more or less lost track of him. Their recollections of him really begin with his school-days at Dumfries, and they remember vividly, amongst other things, his juvenile appearance—as a female character—in a school play. He wore a blonde wig and was as feminine in appearance as amateur "make-up" could contrive, but when he spoke, they say, it was in such deep, lugubrious voice that a Scotch woman present cried, "Bless the laddie, he might be a widow in first mourning." And, as one more example of the proverbial lack of reverence for a prophet in his own country, they quote an old Scotsman from Barrie's birthplace, who visited them in London, and was told of the progress that had been made in the world by various mutual acquaintances. To most of this relation he listened without surprise, but when they told of the fame attained by the author of "A Window in Thrums," the old man burst out incredulously, "What? Wee Jamie Barrie?"

For a periodical to have existed for close on eighty years and never, in all that time, to have paid for a contribution, must be a record, one would think. If so, that record is held by "The Naturalist," an illustrated monthly magazine which has rather a big circulation in this country, and which, according to the declaration of its own editor, never yet has parted with cash for "copy." An acquaintance, who recently "submitted" a manuscript to "The Naturalist," together with a suggestion regarding terms, received the following reply from its directing genius. "Dear Mr. Blank: I beg to thank you for your letter, but although we have been in existence since 1833, we have never yet paid for a contribution." Any American editor who thirsts to know how the thing is done hereby is informed that the address of "The Naturalist" is Hull.

We all pretend to frown on self-advertisement, yet a lot of really great men and fine artists have gone in for it. Among those who did not disdain its "sweet uses" was, it seems, Dante Gabriel Rossetti. Rossetti once told a friend in a whimsical mood that he wanted to buy an elephant "I mean him," he said, "to clean the windows; and then when passers-by see the elephant cleaning the windows they will say, 'Who lives in that house?' And people will tell them, 'Oh, that's a painter called Rossetti.' And they will say, 'I think I should like to buy some of that man's pictures,' and so they will ring, and come in and buy."

It is difficult, somehow, to imagine the King of England sitting down quietly with a novel, but when he does, I hear, he likes an adventure story better than one of the "problem" sort, and isn't even averse to a good "blood and thunder" yarn. Queen Mary's literary tastes are a bit more lofty. Mrs. Humphrey Ward being one of her favorite authors, and she generally has a wholly serious book on hand, as well. Queen Alexandra is said to insist on a "happy ending," and is keen on Miss Braddon. The late King Edward was reputed to enjoy the novels of Mrs. Henry Wood, while Queen Victoria, of course, was one of Miss Marie Corelli's most faithful readers.

CATARRH EASILY CONQUERED

Germs Destroyed; Discharge Stopped; Sore Membrane Quickly Healed — Often Restores Hearing.

HYOMEI, a pleasant antiseptic, germ-destroying, vaporized air breathed over the entire membrane of the nose and throat and deep into the lungs over the bronchial or air tubes will kill catarrh germs; soothe and heal the sore catarrhal spots and stop the discharge of mucus in a few days.

Sprays, douches, snuffs or ointments won't end catarrh because they are not penetrating enough to get where the germs are.

So surely does HYOMEI (pronounced High-o-me) clear up the head and penetrate into the innermost recesses of the entire nasal tract that it very often drives out the catarrhal conditions in the tubes that connect the ears with the nose and by so doing restores hearing to persons who believed they were destined to be deaf for life.

If you have catarrh, dear reader, do not forget that HYOMEI is a wonderful remedy for catarrh and is free from cocaine, or any other injurious drug.

A complete outfit, which includes a hard rubber pocket inhaler, costs $1. If you already own an inhaler you can get a bottle of HYOMEI for only 50 cents at pharmacists the world over.

HEALTH and BEAUTY HINTS

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Rose: To rid your skin of that shiny, greasy, sallow look and make it appear charming and youthful, you can use nothing better than a lotion made by dissolving 4 ounces spurmax in ½ pint witch hazel (or hot water,) then adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. This lotion will clear and whiten your skin, make it smooth and velvety, and give you a beautiful complexion. It costs very little, will not show on the skin like powder does, and, when you wear a veil, will not rub off so easily. This is really a wonderful complexion beautifier, and one which every woman should use.

Phoebe: If a strong light hurts your eyes and makes you squint, you should at once take steps to correct this weakness. Get an ounce of crystos and dissolve it in a pint of water. Put a few drops of this soothing tonic in each eye daily and you will soon find your eyes greatly strengthened, clear and sparkling. No remedy has so far been found to equal this excellent tonic for correcting weak, inflamed eyes. It makes them healthy and strong and is used by many actresses to make their eyes sparkle.

M. W.: To permanently remove those hairs, mix a little powdered delatone with water, then spread on hairy surface. After two or three minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a painless method, and after using the delatone the skin is left soft and without a blemish.

N. B. K.: For your chronic condition of ill health take a tablespoonful of the following tonic before each meal: Dissolve in ½ pint alcohol, ½ cupful sugar and 1 ounce kardene; then add hot water to make a full quart. This excellent system-tonic and blood-purifier gives splendid results in toning up the body, restoring lost appetite and color to the complexion, removing pimples, liver-blotches and sallowness. After taking a few doses you will note a big improvement in the condition of your health. It is a great energizer and health restorer.

Mrs. T. A.: I do not think it necessary for you to consult a physician about your weight. You can easily remove your burdensome fat at small expense by dissolving 4 ounces of parnotis in 1¼ pints of hot water and taking a tablespoonful before meals. This splendid fat-reducer is very safe to take and will not injure your health. It will leave your skin free from wrinkles and flabbiness. No dieting is necessary.

Ida P.: You can't be too careful about the shampoo you use. Soap and powders should never be used on the scalp. To properly cleanse your hair and scalp without any danger of injury to the hair you will find nothing to equal a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water. Your hair will rinse easily, dry quickly without streaking or brittleness, and take on an added lustre and fluffiness that will last. No shampoo is so effective in removing dandruff, scalp irritation and promoting hair-health by keeping the scalp perfectly clean.

Mrs. S. M.: Your complexion is shiny from the use of greasy cold creams. If you will mix an ounce of almozoin and 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine in ½ pint cold water, and use this greaseless beauty cream night and morning, you will not be bothered with a muddy, greasy complexion. It will make your skin ever so soft, smooth and beautiful. It clears and refines the skin as no other cream I have ever used will, and is a sure preventive against chapping, blackheads and enlarged pores.

C. W. R.: Oils, vaseline and most of the dope called "hair tonic" will never help your hair and scalp troubles. The best remedy for ridding your scalp of dandruff, itching and stopping your hair from coming out is made by mixing together 1 ounce quinazoin, ½ pint alcohol and ½ pint cold water. This dependable remedy will not make your hair oily or "stringy," but will make it soft and glossy. Used twice a week it keeps the scalp in a healthy condition and promotes a vigorous growth of glossy hair.

TWO BEAUTIFUL PATTONS.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—No phase of life at the capital is so fascinating as the opportunity afforded to meet the representative women of every State and frequently from many alien lands. The coming of the Countess of Warwick was loudly heralded by the equal rights sympathisers and by those who would like to see radical measures introduced into the national policies. A visitor whose personality is of deep interest just now because of the large clientele urging her claims to be the next president-general of the D.A.R. is Mrs. Alexander Ennis Patton of Curwensville, Pa. Mrs. Patton spent some time here at the home of her brother-in-law and his wife, Representative and Mrs. Charles E. Patton, also of Curwensville. She is expected in Washington again during the coming week as she will be among the delegates to the Continental Congress which will convene on April 15. For many years she has attended these congresses but the illness and death of her husband has kept her in retirement for some years. During the past winter, however, Mrs. Patton presented her young daughter to society and this has compelled her to take up the old threads in social life broken since her widowhood. Mrs. Patton has been an enthusiastic member of the D.A.R. ever since it was established in Pennsylvania and she has held every position of honor which her constituency could bestow. Last autumn, at the State conference in Gettysburg, she was indorsed as the favorite daughter of the Keystone State and since that time the boom has grown into national proportions.

Mrs. Alexander E. Patton.

Miss Edith D. Patton.

"I am frequently asked," said Mrs. Patton, discussing the work of patriotic societies," if I think there are sufficient results for the time and money spent in the work of the D.A.R. If I am to judge results everywhere by what my own State has accomplished, I should answer most emphatically, it far surpasses what we hoped in undertaking to promulgate the ends and aims of what is now the largest and most powerful patriotic society in the history of the world. It is natural that Pennsylvania, which is one of the richest of States in heroic memories and which possesses a generous number of revolutionary sites, should take kindly to perpetuating these memories as the D.A.R. constitution suggests. Not a spot connected with the progress of the continental army remains unmarked and not an episode of moment has been left unrecorded, not only for the student of history but for the casual sojourner in our borders. At Valley Forge, the Merion Chapter keeps the headquarters of Washington just as he left them. There is a museum in which every available relic or manuscript is preserved and every cent of the large expense connected with so excellent a work is defrayed by the Merion Chapter. The regent, Mrs. John Devlin, and her sister, Miss Harvey, who is vice-regent, have practically devoted their lives to the cause and have patiently sought out material with which to enrich this storehouse of the nation's heroes.

"There is Ft. Pitt, another link in the long chain of glorious deeds contributed by Pennsylvania to the history of the war against England and this also has been preserved intact through the generosity of the Daughters of the Pittsburgh chapter led by their enthusiastic regent, Mrs. Samuel Ammen. But the list would be long, indeed, should I attempt even to give superficially all that the Daughters of the American Revolution have done to preserve historic spots, to get together historic books and manuscripts and the personal belongings of revolutionary heroes and their kindred. Just now the national society is getting together every scrap of available information from old family Bibles or other records from ancient letters and books, from church and school registers, from every source where authentic knowledge may be gleaned painfully and patiently, which relates to men or women of revolutionary times. In due time these records will be printed and if the Daughters have accomplished nothing else, this conservation to enrich the history of the republic entitles them to respectful attention.

Mrs. Patton possesses great personal charm and social tact. The wealth and prominence of her husband made their home a radiating social point at Curwensville and her own position in the councils of the D.A.R. and in other philanthropic and patriotic work gave her a supreme importance throughout the State. This home called Terrace Hills is one of the most ornate in the locality, and since the debut of Miss Edith D. Patton, the only daughter, has assumed its former hospitable and cheerful aspect. Mrs. Patton is devoted to her home and has been unable to reconcile herself to establishing even a temporary domicile elsewhere. She had intended spending last winter and this in Washington and in New York and Philadelphia, but these intentions dwindled down to a few weeks of opera in New York and a fortnight or two visiting friends and relatives in Philadelphia and the capital.

"There are few spots in the world more beautiful than the country about Curwensville," said Mrs. Patton. "We are set high up in the mountains with every advantage of earth and sky and its exquisite changing beauty. Quite near us is a bend in the railroad, which is more wonderful and longer than the famous horseshoe, which attracts so many strangers to the route going west. The forests are superb and there are rivers and brooks and all that makes wild and romantic beauty. I have traveled in many parts of the world and to places which have world-wide fame, but I return to my own home more and more convinced that there is nothing which surpasses its natural charms in any section of the habitable globe. Dipping into the early history of Pennsylvania, I find that we are counted among the cave dwellers in the early days and these cave houses were used almost half a century, for the Governor's Council in 1685 ordered that these miserable substitutes for homes should be abandoned. It makes a useful study in looking over the State to note the contract in the homes of today and those which the pioneers of Pennsylvania occupied, four or five feet of earth on river banks or low hills on which sods were placed on poles to make a wall and roof. I find also that the Pennsylvania Germans were the first to use cook stoves and many of curious design may be seen in museums of history. Franklin used this funny old stove as a basis for his invention, the New Pennsylvania Fireplace, which he invented in 1742, and which survives still in some parts of the country as the Franklin heater, a contrivance by which both coal and wood may be used and while the main part is used to cook for the family, a hot-air drum heats the chamber above.

"I find nothing more interesting than to look into these records of the past and it is gratifying to see how Pennsylvania, the keystone of the nation led in so many other directions as well as in constructive patriotism. In the matter of dress, which naturally claims feminine attention, people are apt to believe that all Pennsylvanians were sombrely clad as Quakers, whereas even these religious folk had to be solemnly warned against wearing hoop skirts, scarlet slippers, rolled hair and puffs, as may be seen in the old notices about 1750. The belles of Philadelphia led a merry bevy of admirers and wore gauze and silk and satin and brocade and were not one whit behind their sisters in New York, Baltimore and Annapolis. These were the day of stage coaches and it took five days to make the trip from Philadelphia to Baltimore. Still many gallants and ladies were not afraid of the hardship and some of the old papers contain accounts of robberies, mishaps and queer accidents. We boast the first turnpike road in our State and it was completed in 1792, between Philadelphia and Lancaster. Then stage coaching was in its glory and we have a wealth of literature on the subject, principally from travelers who made the journey from New York or to Baltimore and the South. Ann Warder, a well-known writer in the last half of the eighteenth century, gives a good description of the stage coach journey from Philadelphia to New York, and there are scores of lesser writers who took up the theme after 1750."

Since her husband's death, Mrs. Patton has managed her numerous financial interests which is encouraging to those who see in her the next head of the D. A. R. She keeps her interests all under her own control and she has realized handsomely on all new ventures. She is a very wealthy woman and with the conservatism which resulted from taking a serious view of the responsibilities of riches and social station. As State regent of the D. A. R., Mrs. Patton made a record which is the best campaign document which her advocates are presenting in her behalf. One of the many important measures was to get her State organization after contributing most generously to the Continental Hall, to take up the decorating of the main lobby. This is one of the most successful portions of the great Valhalla erected by the Daughters and as a crowning gift they set up a fine bust of their best known sage philosopher and statesman Benjamin Franklin.

Mrs. Patton has a fine presence and was long known as one of the handsomest and best equipped women of her State. She is young and in superb health, active, fond of doing good and prone to accomplish all that she undertakes. She is known to all the Daughters, not only in Pennsylvania, but in every section and her candidacy, which has just been announced, has been received deferentially everywhere, whether with individual favor or not. It is said that a number of the most powerful leaders of the society have declared their intentions to support Mrs Patton and that she will get the solid vote of what is known as the conservative or present administration of the society.

Mrs. Patton and her daughter will return to Washington in a few days. Leaving the capital after a very pleasant visit, they made a brief visit to Hot Springs, Virginia. Miss Patton is a graduate of Miss Somer's school in this city and is noted for her accomplishments and also for her devotion to golf, tennis and horseback riding. She will be the platform page of Mrs. Scott at the Continental Congress, which will be in progress from the 15 until the 20 of April.

A Song.

If I were rich—then would I give to you
Many a treasure, many a priceless gem,
A golden helmet, or a diadem,
A horse to ride, a velvet cloak to wear.
Pictures of splendor, books beyond compare—
If I were rich!

But I am poor—and what have I to give?
Only a smile or two when you are glad,
A little pity when your heart is sad,
A little love, a little tenderness—
Nothing but these—there could not well be less,
But I am poor!

EDUCATORS.

Dr. Carl H. von Klein, a Chicago physician, after twenty years' study and an outlay of $50,000, has completed the translation of the "Papyrus Ebers," an Egyptian medical work, 7000 years old. The papyrus was revealed in 1872 by George Ebers, who, with the aid of Ludwig Stern and some Egyptologists, published the fact that Hippocrates of Cos, who had been known as the "Father of Medicine," no longer possessed that title. The date of the papyrus was so remote as to place Hippocrates in the ranks of modern physicians. "The Egyptian physicians were the most learned in all the world," said Dr. von Klein. "The incantations in the papyrus are beautiful. They cover all diseases. Even appendicitis, which we considered a new disease a few years ago, is described."

Dr. Eugene Kuehnemann, professor of philosophy at the University of Breslau, is to become the first German professor to occupy the Carl Schurz memorial chair, established last year in the University of Wisconsin by German-American friends of the university.

Miss Sophonisba P. Breckenridge, professor of civics at the Chicago University, is second vice-president of the National Suffrage Association. She is a native of Kentucky and a member of the well-known Breckenridge family of that State. She is intensely interested in the problems of working girls.

Maeterlinck is said to have become a passionate devotee of boxing despite the fact that some years ago he wrote of it as a sport which "brings blind brute force into play by means of vulgar gestures and often with repulsive effects." He is now preparing an essay eulogizing boxing.

Theodore Marburg of Baltimore has proposed the creation of a commission to deal with the problem of the insecurity of life and property in the backward countries of the world which frequently becomes the cause for interference by foreign powers and for wars. Such a commission to be a success should represent not only the eight leading powers, but all powers where there are just laws administered with a fair approximation to justice.

Dr. Zenzinoff, a Russian scientist, who had a brilliant career at the University of Moscow before his exile to Siberia, has no intention of being idle. When he heard his fate he at once wrote to the director of the Academy of Science at Takutsk and asked to be supplied with the instruments necessary for making meteorological observations. His request was granted and the unfortunate scientist was greatly cheered by the thought that the lonely years in the Arctic regions will not be altogether wasted.

It Was Unethical.

[New York Tribune:] On returning to his office from a round of calls a New York physician found waiting for him the servant of a patient. She was the bearer of a bottle and a note to the effect that the remedy contained in the bottle had been recommended by a woman, and the query "Do you think I might try it for my cold?" In reply the doctor wrote: "I have not examined what you sent to me and can offer no suggestion, nor do I know what ailed your friend when it 'cured' her. But I do know that if hers was an attack of virulent impertinence she is still uncured."

DEAFNESS

SUCCESSFULLY TREATED.
By the Simplest Method Yet Discovered.

Ninety-five per cent. of the cases of deafness brought to our attention are the result of chronic catarrh of the throat and middle ear. The air passages become clogged by catarrhal deposits stopping the action of the vibratory bones. Until these deposits are removed relief is impossible. The inner ear cannot be reached by probing or spraying, hence the inability of specialists to always effect cure. Neither can ear drums cure deafness. But there is a scientific treatment for deafness and catarrh which is demonstrated every day by the use of Actina. The vapor generated in the Actina passes through the Eustachian tubes into the middle ear, removing the catarrhal obstructions and loosens up the bones (hammer, anvil and stirrup) in the inner ear, making them respond to the vibration of sound. Actina has also been very successful in relieving ringing noises in the head. We have known people afflicted with this distressing trouble for years to be entirely relieved by a few weeks use. Actina has also been very successful in the treatment of hay fever, asthma, bronchitis, sore throat, weak lungs colds, headache and other troubles that are directly or indirectly due to catarrh. Actina will be sent on trial, postpaid. Write us about your case. Our advice will be free as well as a valuable book—Prof. Wilson's Treatise on Disease. "Keep Pores Open, Be Young At 90," Says Eminent Physician.

The results produced by a Robinson "Thermal" Bath inside of 10 minutes are almost beyond belief.

Similar results are obtained in cases of kidney trouble, neuralgia, pimples, all skin diseases, throat and lung trouble, insomnia, constipation, lumbago and bad colds.

I suffered terribly from rheumatism, heart and stomach trouble—physicians pronounced me incurable—until I got a Robinson Bath Cabinet. My skin was yellow. I had lost 40 pounds weight. Orpheus Concert.

The Orpheus Club announces the second concert of its present seventh season for Thursday evening, April 11, at 8:15 p.m., in the Temple Auditorium, with Mrs. L. J. Selby, contralto, as soloist.

Under the direction of Prof. Joseph H. Dupuy, musical director, a most attractive programme has been arranged. It includes representative compositions from the German, French, English and American music masters.

Special features of the programme will be "The Singer's Harp," by Bishop; "The Son of the Prophet," by Faure; "In the Night," by Liebe, and "The Plainsman Song," by Paul Bliss.

Leonard D. Ooge, and L. F. Russell and other members of the club will present solos.

The Symphony Concert.

At the Auditorium on Friday afternoon, the sixth and last symphony concert of the season will be given under the direction of Harley Hamilton. Meyerbeer's "Fackeltanz" in B flat, will open the programme. Glazounow's "Carneval" overture will close it. The symphony is Brahms's celebrated third symphony in F major, the four movements complete.

The soloist is Alessandro Bonci, the celebrated lyric tenor, whose tremendous successes at the Manhattan Operahouse and later at the Metropolitan, together with apearances in connection with the leading symphony orchestras of the United States, and in recital, has won him the distinction of being called, perhaps, the most-inspired and the greatest of all the modern tenors. Piotow's grand aria from Martha, and "Cielo e mar" from "La Gioconda" will be sung with orchestral accompaniment.

Bonci's success this year with the Thomas Orchestra, the New York philharmonic and the Boston orchestras have been so complete that he has become one of the most sought for of all vocalists to sing with orchestral support. As an opera singer he has learned the art of orchestral accompaniment, and this is why he is so satisfying to his hearers.

The Symphony programme follows:

Fackeltanz in B Flat (Meyerbeer;) "M'appari," "Martha" (Flotow;) Third Symphony in F Major, Op. 90 (Brahms;) Allegro con brio, Andante, Poco Allegretto, Allegro; intermission; "Cielo e mar," "La Gioconda" (Ponchielli;) overture, "Carneval" (Glazounow.)

Miss Agnes Clark of the senior class will give her graduating piano recital, Tuesday evening in the university chapel. She will be assisted by Miss Lillian Backstrand, soprano.

Dr. Steininger will hold the position of Mayor of Berlin, to which he was recently elected, for the next six years. He is 48 years old and was born in Nosbach in the Rhine province. He studied at Basel, the Berlin Theological College.

Georges Mascal,

Famous first baritone of the French Opera, now soloist with Tetrazzini.

Alessandro Bonci,

OVER THE SEA.

Sir William Ramsey announces that he is going to test his theory that gas can be made underground from the coal without the latter being mined. He has received permission from a pit owner to try his experiment on a small scale. Sir William says: "If this experiment is a success a candle may be lighted which will not be extinguished in our time."

Next to Carmen Sylva, the most voluminous of present-day royal authors, is the Austrian heir presumptive, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, who made his debut in literature twenty years ago with a volume describing his trip around the world. The Archduke's next work was a monograph on Radetsky, which has run into several editions, and this was followed by two other works on historical subjects. He has also published two volumes of verse, and is credited with the authorship of a number of articles in technical publications on engineering and kindred subjects, in which he is keenly interested.

Sir Arthur Knyvet Wilson, admiral of the British fleet, who has just received the Order of Merit, has had a distinguished career. He entered the royal navy in 1855 and served in the Black Sea during the Russian War, receiving the Crimean and Turkish medals and the Sebastopol clasp. He was awarded the Victoria Cross in 1884 for a brilliant act at El Teb.

George Mitchell, who was known in London as the "policeman poet," has become a Baptist parson with a chapel costing about $5000, raised mostly by his own energy. His change of life came about through a dream, in which he was in a place of worship, with a crowded congregation waiting in hushed silence for the minister. "Suddenly," he says, "a young man went up to the pulpit and held out his hands to the people with a pathetic, pleading action, as if his heart were too full to speak. When I awoke it seemed to me that I was to be that young man."

Count Nostitz and his American wife will soon leave Paris to make their permanent home in St. Petersburg. Count Nostitz has been promoted to the important post of chief of staff of the Russian imperial guard, which necessitates his presence near his sovereign. For several years the Count has been military attache to the Russian embassy here. Those years have been active ones, socially, for Count Nostitz and his wife.

Baron and Baroness (Clara Busch of St. Louis) von Gontard, celebrated their advent into the Prussian nobility by giving a sumptuous banquet and ball to forty dinner guests and 200 dancers. In the party were many Americans, including Consul-General and Mrs. Thackara, but owing to the conclusion of the official season few of the court circle were present.

Without You.

Without you, love, the day would hold no light,
The kindly stars would vanish from the night;
The flowers would forget to wake at morn;
The rose die sleeping, leaving but the thorn—
Without you.

Without you, love, no promise would be bright;
Hope's golden sun would darken at its height;
The world of all its glory would be shorn,
And I should be a wanderer, forlorn—
Without you.

On the Road.

My friend has met me on the road of life,
Sure-footed, swift, his manner glad and gay;
A smile, a word, some mention of life's strife,
Mayhap a handshake—and he is away.

My enemy has passed me on my path;
With lurking step he waits for me alone;
Warned by unrest, I turn in righteous wrath,
To see his shadow blending with my own.

ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

Evening.

My window's open to the evening sky;
The solemn trees are fringed with golden light;
The lawn here shadowed lies, there kindles bright;
And cherished roses lift their incense high.
The punctual thrush, on plane-tree
warbling nigh,
With loud and luscious cries calls
down the night;
Dim waters, flowing on with gentle might,
Between each pause are heard to murmur by.
The book that told of wars in holy-land, (Nor less than Tasso sounded in mine ears.)
Escapes unheeded from my listless hand.
Poets whom Nature for her service
rears,
Like Priests in her great temple min-

But in her glory fade when she ap-

Marines by John Donovan.

John Donovan's exhibition of thirty-four marines opened last Monday in the Steckel gallery, to continue for two weeks.

The painter, who was born in Detroit, has lived in Los Angeles for several years, and has exhibited once before in the Steckel gallery. He studied art in Detroit under John Ward Dunsmore, who was a pupil of Thomas Couture. Donovan won a scholarship in the life class. After leaving Dunsmore he taught drawing in Assumption College, Sandwich, Ontario. Later he tried the newspaper game, doing both reporting and illustrating. This work did not especially appeal to him, however, and he soon gave it up.

Since his earliest boyhood Donovan has been fond of the sea and of the sailor's life, and his vacation days were spent in paddling over the Detroit River and in sailing up Burlington Bay. When his brief newspaper experience came to an end he started for Europe, and "knocked about" the English, Irish and French coasts with fishermen, thoroughly enjoying the freedom of the life, and incidentally working hard at his painting.

This glorious holiday being over, he resumed study, remaining in London for some time, and then drifting on to Paris, where he drew from life under Delecluse. He did no painting in any of the schools, but found his own color afterwards. That this color is eminently satisfactory no one, looking at the present exhibition, can deny. Though subdued, it is still rich, and there is life in the grays which he uses so freely.

You will probably note, as I did, that Donovan never paints a cheerful sea. Smiling, sunny effects are entirely wanting in the exhibition. There are storms, approaching squalls, high winds with rain, brooding twilights, somber dawns—but no studies of brilliant high noon, no quiet, unruffled reaches of sea. Too, it should be noticed that there are no shipwrecks, for though Donovan has a sea-mew's exultation in a "big blow," he has no use for deep-sea theatricals.

The artist has been in search of the immensities of ocean—its wild unrest, its stupendous weight, its splendid force and its magnificent rages. Its sweet placidities—for old ocean has plenty of these, too—he has generally left for other hands to picture. Now and again, however, he has been led by the lure of quiet waters in sunlit coves, and has painted them with poetry and feeling. But mostly he seeks the open sea, his ambition being to paint supremely well that most difficult of artistic themes, sky and sea without land or living thing in sight. If such a subject is made absorbingly interesting, you may be sure that the painter of it is a true artist.

Donovan has made it interesting not once but many times. One of the best examples of his success in this exhibition is the large canvas which he calls "Brooding Sea," where mass and weight and movement, all under a gray expanse of sky, have a sort of solemn poetry. "Into the Night," has mystery and deep significance. A vast bank of gray clouds obscures the restless sky. Far off a steamboat can be seen on a high, crested wave. A heavy trail of smoke reaches close to the bosom of the sea toward the glooming cloud-rack.

In "Coming Squall" we have an effect wonderfully well rendered. Past the edges of gray clouds made as opalescent as a rainbow by a shaft of light, we have a glimpse of sky so blue that it is almost black. A seagull swoops by, screaming in the teeth of the gale. "Rainy Day Off Point Firmin," is also remarkably true to nature, and at the same time finely stimulating to the imagination. We see a ship laboring in the restless gray scheme of the world, whose somberness is relieved by one touch of lemon yellow light in the sky.

There is poetry in "The Twilight Star," a ship sailing into the coming night over a sea that is very quiet and reflecting.

"One pale and splendid star, that seems to rest,
A luminous gem, on beauty's pulse-less breast."

And how nobly decorative is "Afterglow," a magnificent bank of clouds touched with red and pale gold, and piling themselves over a sea that is jubilantly tossing toward a crescent moon, while it plays with some ships whose sails belly in the wind. This picture, it seems to me, is painted in the "grand manner"—or at least felt in the truest and biggest of ways.

If you love the sea—and if you care for sincere art—you will like Donovan's pictures.

Moonlights by Ernest Smith.

Ernest Browning Smith's exhibition of thirty-four landscapes, almost half of which are studies of moonlight effects, opened in the Blanchard gallery on Monday, to close at the end of this week.

Though you may quarrel with Smith's methods—as I sometimes do—you cannot find fault with his sincerity. A true lover of nature, his aim is to put down with absolute candor what he sees and feels. If he doesn't always record what YOU see—well, so much the worse for you, he will probably say. He may also add that your eyes need training.

Smith shows one moonlight that he painted several years ago, that you may compare it with those painted during the past year. In the one there is almost a negation of color. It is, according to Smith's own statement, dull, dead and black. In the others the color note is almost forced—according to Smith again, though here I do not quite agree with him. They are vividly blue and purple. They vibrate. They are alive. This was the artist's aim, and I think he has achieved it.

To paint the vast nothingness of a moonlit sky is no small matter. In fact, it is one of the most difficult things in the world. Many have tried it, few have done it well. The beauty and mystery of the morbidezza of night is at once the joy of nature lovers and the despair of picture painters. And this is why moonlights will continue to be painted. Some painters say the night is gray, some say it's green, others declare it's blue, and still others find it purple. Many painters say it's all these colors on different occasions, and they are probably right.

Smith finds it blue and purple, and more often blue than purple. He never sees it green. Among the best of these bluish effects is "Surf at Twilight," a study of waves breaking over the rocks at Laguna Beach. Another good one is "Moonlight, the Cliff, Catalina," with a foreground of the beach strewn with pebbles. A very beautiful one is "Night, the Hillside," in which you feel the quality of moonlight over the big forms of the hills and on the lesser rotundities of the massed oaks. This quality is got by means of numerous careful touches of pure paint. In "Surf at Moonlight," we have a tremendous break of sea against Laguna's rocky shore. The white foam rushes toward the sky, suggesting the sea's awful might and power.

Leaving the moonlights, we come to more conventional themes, though the artist does not treat them in a conventional way. In these, too, he has certain original ideas of how effects in nature should be expressed in paint—and straightway proceeds to express them. His finely painted "Snow Among the Pines," painted on Mt. Wilson, was exhibited last year. A more recent picture is "After the Snowstorm," painted on Mt. Lowe near Alpine Tavern. The pure green of clumps of manzanita shows through the dazzling white of the recent snowfall, making a color scheme of much charm and beauty.

The artist spent all last summer in Europe, bringing back with him many sketches and a few pictures. "The Lake, Bois du Bologne," is one of these. The effect of morning mists on the dreaming lake and on a group of birches in the foreground is very poetically rendered by the use of many delicate greens and grays. "The Birches," though painted in New England on the artist's return from Europe, is very much like "The Lake" in color and sentiment. Equally poetical is "Sunrise Across the Valley" (the San Fernando,) in tones of red, lavender and green, showing a group of graceful red eucalyptus trees in the foreground.

Interesting sketches from Europe are: "On Lake Geneva," "The Bridge at Argenteuil," "Edinburgh Castle," "The Thames at Eaton" and "On the Seine."

Ernest Browning Smith paints like a man who has the courage of his convictions. His work is eminently worthy of an equally sincere consideration.

Sketches by Frederick Miner.

The New England sketches of Frederick Roland Miner will remain in the Royar Gallery, No. 744 South Hill street, till Saturday. Some of this artist's pictures of Southern California are also being shown. In all there are sixteen pictures and thirty-three sketches.

Miner was in New Hampshire and Connecticut through all the autumnal glories of last year, and he has translated the gorgeous colors of the maples in October with as free a hand as he dared to use. Certainly, the sketches are very vivid, though the artist protests that they are far below the original bits of landscape in brilliancy of hue. Such careful color notes should work up into pictures of much charm and beauty, and it is to be hoped that Miner will show them to us when this has been done.

However, the sketches are very interesting in themselves. They are sincere notes, and in composition they are almost invariably well selected. Many of them may be made into pictures with hardly a single change in mass or line.

More familiar are the California landscapes. Topanga Canyon has long been a favorite sketching ground with Miner, with the result that his best work comes from that picturesque pass. These canvases are painted with a full brush, simply, directly and truthfully, and are especially happy in their rendering of sunlight and air.

The sunny expanse of "The Canyon Road" gives us good greens, while the distant mountains are pale purple. This canvas, as well as "Green Fields and Oaks," is full of outdoor feeling. A more delicate poetic feeling characterizes "Mountain Road," whose haze and wan sunlight are like an eastern Indian summer.

Vigorous studies are "The Mountain Monarch" and "The Oak on the Bank," the one with an attractive sky filled with floating clouds, the other with good greens and rich, raw yellows in foliage and broken soil.

Boydell's Gallery.

Some interesting prints are now being shown in the little gallery of the Dawson Bookshop. Among them are a number from Boydell's famous "Shakespeare Gallery," which was one of the most stupendous artistic projects ever attempted.

John Boydell (1719-1804) started his career as a London print seller and engraver. By his good taste and liberality he managed to secure the services of the best artists of the day, and his engravings were executed with such skill that his business became extensive and lucrative.

After amassing a fortune he conceived the idea of a Shakespeare gallery. He obtained the assistance of the most eminent painters, whose contributions were exhibited publicly for many years. Prominent among them were Westall, Hamilton, Smirke, Stothard, Fuseli, Ipie, James Northcote, Sir Joshua Reynolds, etc. The engravings after these paintings, executed by the foremost men of that time or indeed of any time, form the collection of pictures in book form known as Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery.

The undertaking, which cost $1,750,000, proved to be too great a strain for Boydell's finances, and his pictures had finally to be sold by lottery.

In 1789, at the dinner of the Royal Academy, Sir Joshua proposed his health, "The Commercial Maecenas of England." The company, which included the Prince of Wales, joined heartily in the toast.

Some fine color prints on coaching and yachting subjects, including a few Ackerman prints, will also be exhibited at Dawson's.

ART NOTES.

A group of landscapes from the facile brush of Eugene C. Frank is now being shown at the Daniell studios, No. 218 South Broadway. These are studies made in various parts of Europe, as well as Southern California, and are informed with that intimate knowledge of nature which always characterizes Frank's work. A more extended notice of them will appear in next week's Art and Artists.

Mary Beckwith of New York, a "secessionist" among photographers, showed some of her work last Monday afternoon, at No. 2212 South Union avenue. Miss Beckwith is a graduate of Columbia University and Pratt University, and has studied art photography under Paul Anderson and Clarence White. Some very beautiful portraits and genres were shown.

Elizabeth Borglum is contemplating having an exhibition of her recent work, mostly landscapes, at the Daniell studios early in May. The artist has been giving much of her time to the study of landscape for the past two years, and her later work has all the poetic charm of the earlier, plus a more varied and forceful technique. Some of her smaller canvases are especially charming.

In May, Allan Harvey, the picture dealer, will start for Europe, with the idea of bringing back with him a number of good pictures for his gallery. A fine picture by Josef Israels, and one by Bernard de Hoog, have already been purchased, and these will also be part of his return luggage. Harvey reports that there are only twenty-five paintings by the late Paul de Longpre left. They will not be shipped East, as at first contemplated. The study of Cherokee roses which De Longpre considered his best work, has been bought by a Los Angeles collector.

QUEEN MARY OF ENGLAND DOMINATES BY DOMESTICITY

Has Immense Influence With King George, and Her Boys "Tell Her Everything"—King's Critics Say He Stands in Awe of Her—"The Demon" Who Unpinned the Visitor's False Curls.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

Queen Mary of England,

Mother first and queen afterwards, who declares "married flirts are the trial of this age."

LONDON, April 6.—Fortunately for the British nation, Queen Mary, is a woman with a keen sense of right and wrong and of justice. Were this not so she might, with her dominating personality, her immense influence with the King, her ambition and calculation, very easily alter the life at Buckingham Palace from one of quiet routine, in which before all the domestic note is resonant, to one fraught with momentous consequences, adventures and intrigues.

So resonant, indeed, is the domestic note that she is mother first and Queen afterwards. Her boys spend every available moment in her presence. They tell her everything. When she and the King returned from India the Prince of Wales went forward in a decorous manner to greet his father, but etiquette and reserve were flung to the four winds when he saw his mother. Her he hugged. This shy boy, still painfully nervous, still self-conscious and liable to blush, regards his mother as "the saint of his deepest devotion," who inspires him, encourages him and may yet succeed in giving him trust in himself.

But the Queen is far too strong a woman to spoil her children. Prince John, the baby of the family, who is known among his relations as "The Demon," is afraid of no one but his mother, a fact, however, which did not deter him some months ago from mounting a chair behind a lady who was visiting Queen Mary and, while apparently admiring an ornament in her hat, unpinning all her false curls, which she found in a little heap on the floor, when she rose to leave.

The only daughter of the royal house, Princess Mary, is as her mother says, being taught "to do everything that a woman should know how to do"—which is defined by some as an early Victorian notion and like other relics of Victorian times, prosaic and unnecessary. But, according to Queen Mary, it is the domesticated woman who is happiest. The girl princess has been taught such old-world accomplishments as reading aloud, embroidery and cookery. "Not," says the Queen, "that she is ever likely to need to cook, but in order that she may understand how it should be done. Every woman should know as much as her housekeeper or chef."

THE THREE MEALS.

Each day with unfailing regularity the three menus for the royal household—the King and Queen's table, the schoolroom and the servant's—are brought to Queen Mary and she deletes or adds as she sees fit. It is her custom to blue-pencil out-of-season delicacies for even the royal table, remarking as she does so, "We can do without such and such until it is in the market. "I won't stand extravagance while people starve." As a matter of fact, asparagus, strawberries and other delicacies appear on the tables of rich residents in Grosvenor Square, weeks before they are enjoyed at Buckingham Palace.

From the man-in-the-street who watches the Queen go by in her royal chariot to the great household official, they all rather admire her. Each says—"She is a fine woman; her face is her own." They are quite correct, for Queen Mary never uses a vestige of make-up, never has done so, and declares she never will. It was characteristic of her the other day, when her daughter tried to cut out a few silver hairs showing in the auburn, to remark, "Leave them alone, darling; everyone knows your mother's age, and she does not want to look one hour younger than she is."

Practically, the Queen has never altered the style of her hair dressing since she put it up as a girl. It is fine, luxuriant hair, which another woman would make much of, but which the consort of the King arranges stiffly, almost dowdily—yet it cannot be said to be unbecoming to her. She tramples on fashion ruthlessly, after the style of her mother-in-law, Queen Alexandra, whom, it may be owned, she has always taken somewhat as a model in things sartorial.

Queen Mary has none of the modern woman's contempt for petticoats, nor has Queen Alexandra. They both stuck to the old-fashioned style of skirts, even when sheath dresses were the order. With the exception of the Connaughts, who are always arrayed in the pink of fashion, all the women of the royal family retain their appreciation of underskirts, even of the heavily-pleated and tucked flannel varieties, the sight of which is sufficient to give the modern mondaine the proverbial "fit." And, amazing to relate, Queen Mary has the skirts of her gowns lined, even when of rich brocade, and braided at the hems to protect them from fraying.

A well-shaped foot with high instep is one of nature's gifts to the Queen of England. Her feet are encased in boots more frequently than shoes, of the sensible order rather than the beautiful, and invariably of black leather or glace kid, for it is an unwritten law in the royal family that in public no colored footgear may be donned. The Queen's bootmaker lives in a street off Regent street and her boots are made to order with low, square heels and a slightly rounded toe. She takes fives in boots and six and three-quarters in gloves. Her predilections for white and the delicate tinted variety are well known. Rarely is she seen wearing any others. Gloves are about the only things in which Queen Mary is extravagant. She seldom wears the same pair twice.

Her sables are some of the finest in the world, exceeding in magnificence even those of the Czarina of Russia. The sable coat Queen Mary wore the day she drove through London on her return from India is reputed to be worth $150,000. It was a gift to her from the King on his accession. It is said to this day she has no actual idea of its cost; for the King has never told her, knowing it would by no means please her to realize so considerable a sum had been lavished on one garment. For royal ermine and minniver she has no use, and dislikes greatly having to wear them at State functions like the opening of Parliament and at Courts.

NO AFFINITIES.

All the royal family are true to their friends. But if Queen Mary's friend should violate the conventions in the slightest degree, then indeed does she risk seriously losing the royal favor. For married women with "affinities" the Queen has no excuse.

Recently she heard that a certain young married woman of her acquaintance had been seen at a fashionable restaurant, dining with a man to whom she had been engaged before she met her husband. The Queen sent for her.

"Is it true," she asked, "that you have been dining alone with Maj. Blank?"

The friend admitted it, adding—"But Madame, Maj. Blank is so sympathetic and understands me."

"Look here," said the Queen, "the married flirt is the trial of the age. She is a selfish, heartless, irresponsible creature and she has no idea of duty. I don't wish you to develop into that type. Since you chose to marry, it is your duty to think that there is but one man in the world and that man your husband."

Queen Mary has the most emphatic views where marriage is concerned. She has been known to say that half the trouble in domestic life arises out of wrong moral training and the desire for amusement. Smart women of the present day, she thinks, are often devoured with vanity and have no idea of making the best of what is sometimes "a bad bargain." They will put up with nothing and in their ardent desire to correct their own mistakes trample social laws and violate principles, dashing at last in their wild stampede into a worse condition than the first.

Curiously enough, for all her hard and fast theories, the Queen is catholic enough in her taste in literature. She thinks Hardy's "Tess," the greatest novel of the last century, and it was through her its author received the Order of Merit. She is also of opinion that innocence is often ignorance.

Brought up in the Victorian school of manners, Queen Mary is truly of the type of wife our grandmothers knew. She is every whit as skilled as they in the gentle art of managing men without pretending to do so. Like those dames of old she has made a careful and almost scientific study of her husband, and today probably knows and understands him better than he knows or understands himself. His weaknesses are all as an open book to her.

She has the Victorian woman's notion of the comforts and small luxuries with which a busy man ought to be surrounded. To the King her sympathy, advice and encouragement are indispensable. Though neither demonstrative nor eloquent, the King's affection for this strong yet sympathetic woman is far greater today than when his brother Clarence cut him out as a suitor for her hand. His critics say that he is a little in awe of his wife.

The King's love for home is proverbial. Without exaggeration he is the most domesticated man in England, in his element at the tea-time hour, sitting with his wife and children these spring afternoons in the Queen's boudoir, overlooking the gardens of Buckingham Palace. The picture is domestic in the extreme. Queen Mary presides at the head of the table, for it is the old-fashioned "sit-down" tea which is taking place, and she pours out tea herself, though there are a dozen footmen within call. And as a rule no strangers are present. Perhaps that is the best part of the entertainment. It is a great treat for the King to get right away from strangers and officials for an hour.

What the future of the British Court will be it is difficult to prophesy. There are those who predict there will be little to recount because of its "eminent respectability and somewhat dowdy decorum." It will, according to such prophets—who are not infrequently disappointed critics, lost to royal favor—progress uneventfully and unpicturesquely. But it may be said that the happiest courts, like the happiest people, have no histories. The sober minded are full of thankfulness to Queen Mary for having set the fashion of morality, the fruits of which are already beginning to manifest themselves. Since she began to reign, children are once more the fashion and are seen with smart mothers in the park, the boudoir and the carriage. Men find more interest in their homes than in their friends's houses and their clubs; it is no longer outre for husbands and wives to be seen at the same parties. Someone remarked wittily lately that it is high time for a new programme to be written, explaining to the smart world how to progress in daily life, etiquette being today as totally apart as the poles from the correct modes of procedure ten years ago.

Queen Mary's good sense is another of her attractions. People with this gift often manage to secure finer results for themselves and others than those blessed with the scintillating brilliance of the intellectual endowments of the artistic temperament. That is just where Queen Mary scores—she does not possess one jot of the artistic temperament.

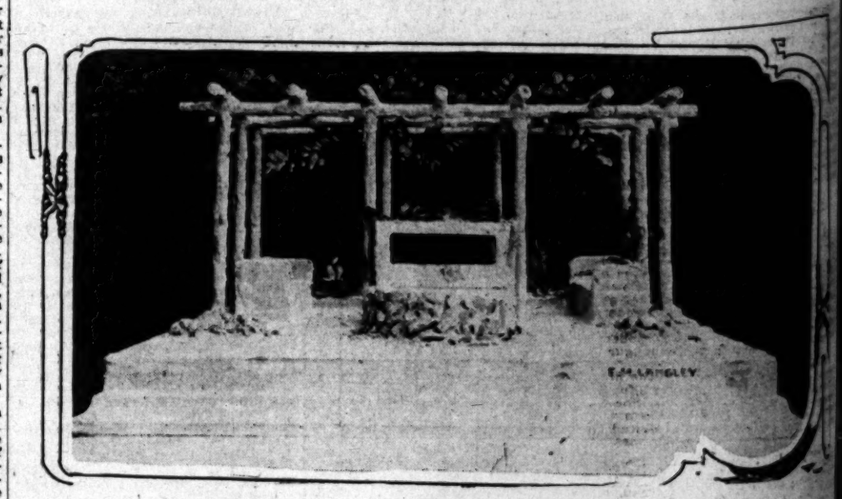
TO BUILD FOUNTAIN FOR EL CAMINO REAL



Fountain

To be erected by Committee on History and Landmarks of Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs on El Camino Real between Los Angeles and Ventura.

One of the events of the year in club circles is the California Historical Pageant to be given on the evening of April 18 at the Ebell Clubhouse by the District Federation Committee on History and Landmarks. The purpose is to raise money to place on El Camino Real a fountain which shall not only be a comfort to tired and thirsty travelers but also shall show in some way the honor and veneration the club women of the district feel for the fathers who toiled so earnestly and unselfishly for the beginnings of California.

Miss Mary A. Rhodes, district chairman of history and landmarks, together with Mrs. Elizabeth Cloud Miller, who is staging the production, have evolved a series of tableaux which will represent the history of California from the time of the coming of Cabrillo to the present. Music and dances of the various eras will also be given and great care has been taken that only the music and dances characteristic of the era be used with each tableau.

Among those who will have parts are: Cabrillo, Mrs. Lane; Father Junipero Serra, Mrs. William Hunnewell; Spanish dancers, Mrs. La Fon Brinker and Miss Willy Smyser; Indian discovering the Arrowhead, Mrs. John Thayer; Mexican bride, Mrs. Theodore Bulson; Mexican bridegroom, Miss Ivy Block; Mexican mother, Mrs. William Noyes Johnson; Mexican father, Mrs. W. C. Chambers; Yankee trader, Mrs. E. H. Quein; Mexican maidens, Mrs. Glen Behymer and Miss Pearl Massie; cavaliers, Miss Gertrude Knight, Miss Carolyn Knight, Miss Francis Gooding and Miss Mabel Nichols.

Miss Bessie Marion Coats, B.A., Vassar, 1907, has received the Alice Freeman Palmer fellowship, founded in 1903 by Mrs. David P. Kimball of Boston, and yielding an income of $1000. Miss Coats is the holder of the Mary E. Ives fellowship in philosophy for 1910-11 at Yale.

Youth and Charm.

Youth was a goodness in the ancient days,
Worshiped and loved as never since the Greek
Adoring lissom form and head sleek,
Ever on youth poured out praise,
Lamenting even in immortal phrase
Brief life and briefer beauty, or would seek Beyond the rounded limb and glowing cheek
The loveliness of mind and soul that stays—
The loveliness that ripens with the years;
Bright eyes less bright become, the form, less lithe.
Yet battles braved and errors paled with tears,
And griefs that chasten proud hearts and blithe.
Shall clothe the soul with greater charm and power;
More precious than fair Youth's lightful dower.

Bayless Lower, a locomotive engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, recently risked his life in order that his train might be stopped before an accident happened. A steam pipe leading from the boiler broke, filling the cab with steam and driving the engineer from his post before he could set the brakes. Nevertheless, though frightfully scalded, he climbed over the tender of the engine and stopped the train by cutting the air hose connecting the engine with the first car.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws its beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Several prominent women of Orange, N. J., have proposed to the city authorities that they be allowed to redeem all captured dogs, pay the city license fee, and find homes for the outcast animals. It is desired to end the destruction of the animals and in the belief that many homes not provided with animal pets are available for some of the finer breeds of dogs, an attempt will be made to provide such homes for a large proportion of the vagrants that would otherwise be judicially asphyxiated. As the plan is purely philanthropic and not for profit the officials will grant the request, which will not only be satisfactory to the dogs, but to the taxpayers as well, as it will lessen the present expense incident to the maintenance of the dog lockup, and asphyxiation tank.

Isaac Schlichter, Sr., a wealthy manufacturer of Philadelphia, has shown his appreciation of the services rendered him by his old employees, by distributing $50,000 among fifty of them who have been with his establishment more than fifteen years. Preference is to be given to persons who are elderly, or disabled from work, and to persons who are Christians of good moral character, members of one of the so-called evangelical churches, to-wit, the Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Congregational, Moravian, or Episcopalian, and who are not addicted to the use of intoxicants or tobacco, nor the patronage at theatrical entertainments."

The executors were authorized to form a corporation to carry out this provision of the will if they deem it advisable.

COMBUSTION ENGINE WINS.

MAY SAVE NEED OF SO MANY COALING STATIONS.

Germany Planning a Battle Cruiser to Make the Journey Around the World Without Having to Replenish Its Fuel Supply. Destroyers as Submarines.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:] The rapid progress made in the adaptation of the internal combustion engine to the uses of maritime propulsion, gives food for reflection on the possible modification of ship type which is likely to follow its introduction and the developments of strategy and tactics which these involve.

The German Marine Office has already plans for a battle cruiser which will be able to make the journey round the world without putting in anywhere to replenish her fuel supply. To some extent this will do away with the need of naval bases over sea. For instance, a German squadron so engined could make Kiou Chou without the need to use British ports on the way, as Prince Henry, to his chagrin, had to do when he took the old Deutschland and Gefion out to China and gave the object lesson which is at the bottom of German expansion. Rojdestvensky, with such a fleet, would have reached the Sea of Japan before Port Arthur fell, and the history of the Far East might have been altered.

But the impressive thought is the possibilities of the case when such a vessel or vessels get to sea on the wide ocean, having donned the cap of darkness, and yet being kept fully informed by "wireless" of all that is going on and of the points to which it is required that they should direct their energies. The news that Germany is possessed of such a design adds significance to the determination that the ships of her increased programme shall be battle cruisers. The advantages of our geographical position, will, thereby be largely neutralised.

But, for the moment, the consequences of the development of the internal combustion engine promise to be even more striking in their effect upon the design and use of torpedo craft. The new British submarines will be able to keep the sea for two months with the fuel supply they will carry. Once the surface speed attainable with internal combustion engines is raised to that now possessed by turbined destroyers—and it is rapidly approaching thereto—what happens automatically, as it were? Destroyer and submarine both disappear as a separate class. You come to an above-water submarine, or a diving destroyer, which you will. This is the real explanation why the newest classes of submarines are being equipped with guns. The type is not yet fully evolved, of course, but the first approach to it is being made.

The argument runs something on these lines: The destrover is useless for attack on large purposes. Light craft of all kinds are easily chased off. Only armored ships can hang on to an enemy's fleet and secure uninterrupted information. At most, she serves for inshore work, and to chase and destroy the enemy's torpedo boats, which was her original business. The aeroplane, moreover, will do a great part of the intelligence work required, and a submarine with guns and sufficient speed, (or a diving destroyer) will equally well account for torpedo boats of the old type. The three essentials to be attained are speed, habitability and rapidity of submersion. If the hull of a destroyer, when funnels are got rid of, can be adapted for diving, the first and second requisites will be practically attained. And approximation of the form of the submarine to that of the above-water vessel is rapidly proceeding. The size of modern submarines, morever, is equal to that of the destroyer of ten years ago. Everything points to the rapid evolution of the new type of vessel, the long range and invisibility of which will make it a terror to battle fleets.

One more interesting speculation is induced by the mention of aviation, and by Mr. Churchill's assurance to Mr. Burgoyne that experiments with the hydroaeroplane are proceeding. It is within the bounds of possibility that we shall see in the future a veritable naval "wild-duck;" a vessel which can swim on the surface of the water, dive beneath it, or soar above it. It is a theme worthy of Jules Verne; but it is hardly more impossible of realization than aviation or submarine navigation seemed twenty years ago. For the present, man must be content to swim and fly, or swim and dive, trusting to time to perfect the combination of the three. But the internal combustion engine is evidently destined profoundly to modify the instruments of warfare and the practice, if not the principles of strategy and tactics.

CRANKS.

Dr. Elizabeth Shapleigh, a Boston suffragette, has a poor opinion of men. "After women get a little political power into their hands I shouldn't be surprised if they abolished a few men," she says. "There are too many men in the world anyway. As a student of biology, I can say that we could get along with a very few men."

James C. Waite, a farmer of Bakersfield, made a vow in 1896 not to shave until William Jennings Bryan was elected President. On March 26 he unwound his beard from the spool on which he wore it and deliberately broke his vow. Half the town gathered to watch the barber remove the long beard. "I guess Bryan has no chance any more," remarked Waite as he drove into town. "I've forgotten just why I was such a durned fool."

Enraged by the fact that the town of Murray, in Orleans county, N. J., went "dry" at the recent election, Levi Kelsey, proprietor of the Sandy Creek Hotel, chained up a pump in front of his hotel and is now demanding 5 cents a pail for water from the eight or ten families who have been accustomed to get water at that pump.

John E. Parsons, the venerable lawyer and counsel for the sugar trust, has never allowed a telephone to be installed in his office. Every time he had occasion to advise his clients he either wrote with his own hand or dictated to a stenographer a letter.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

Gen. Isaac Dyer, the oldest postmaster in the United States, has announced his resignation from office. He is 92 years old and has been postmaster at Skowhegan, Me., twelve years.

Eben Leighton of Mt. Vernon, Me., was 95 years old in January. During the winter he cut two cords of birchwood from the stump. When that and five cords of hardwood are sawed, he will take his usual spring tonic of splitting and housing the whole pile without help. Mr. Leighton enjoys a good appetite, writes very legibly, and reads the daily papers with keen interest.

Sheltered from the vicissitudes of old age and a lonely life by the walls of Ionia (Mich.) county's comfortable county home, aged Zenas Deino is spending the declining years of his life quietly and happily. He is 94 years of age and walks with a feeble step and yet his eye is bright and his mind clear. Many hours during the fall are spent by him in the cornfield husking the winter store, and doing such other labor around the farm as his age will permit.

OFFICIAL SIGN LANGUAGES.

United States Government Uses Many Symbols for Description of Areas Covered by Surveyors.

[New York Tribune:] If you were making a reconnaissance of a large area of greatly diversified country and were taking copious notes of the various natural characteristics observed, as well as the many works of man, your notes would consist to a large extent of discussions of constantly recurring types which might well be expressed by symbols. The printed or written sign language is far older than the alphabet and there is in common use today in the United States an official sign language which so far as geographic features are concerned is sufficient to describe fully, without the use of a single word, the most unusual area within the country or any of its outlying possessions. This is the collection of symbols and abbreviations adopted by the United States that may take from two to four weeks. Geographic Board and published, with the signification, on a large sheet by the United States Geological Survey. By the use of these symbols everything of the nature mentioned can be described by an amateur map maker or can be read on any government map, and any one who has the key to the symbols can read the map and learn the character of the area so far as the map depicts it.

Thus, a rock in the ocean whose exact position is doubtful is represented by a simple sign the size of a pinhead, and an oil well or a telegraph station is indicated by another symbol no larger. If a lake or pond is intermittenently wet and dry, it is represented by a symbol slightly different from that used for a regular lake, and if a section of country is covered with pines or other conifers the symbol employed to show these trees is slightly different from that used in indicating an oak forest. Some seventy symbols are used to portray the various works and structures erected by man from suspension bridges to mine shafts or windmills; about twenty symbols are used to indicate different classes of land, ranging from sugar cane areas to cactus patches; aids to navigation and hydrographic features of all kinds are represented by many devices and other general subjects covered are boundaries, marks and monuments and many special military features.

This sheet of conventional signs is much in use by schools and field organizations. It can be procured from the director of the Geological Survey, Washington.

PEARL HARBOR A GIBRALTAR.

By Midsummer the United States Will Have Completed an Impregnable Mid-Sea Naval Base.

[Christian Science Monitor:] By midsummer or early fall it is expected that the work of constructing the approaches to Pearl Harbor will be completed and then the United States will have in the Pacific a national defense as important and as impregnable as that of Great Britain at Gibraltar. When completed the work will have cost about $10,000,000.

The channel leading into the harbor has already been cut to a depth of thirty feet below low tide and will thus pass some of the cruisers of the Pacific station. But the cutting is to continue until there will be enough water to float the greatest of the dreadnoughts.

Pearl Harbor is to be the most strongly fortified naval base in the Pacific, if not in the world. The harbor is landlocked and is distant from Honolulu twelve miles. When the channels to the east, the middle and the west locks have been dredged, the harbor will be large enough to float the combined navies of the world. The work of construction has been under way more than twelve years and it was hastened materially after the Spanish War and the occupation by the United States of the Philippine Islands.

Hidden forts and disappearing guns of the latest pattern are to protect the new harbor. The guns will use smokeless powder so as to render their discovery by an enemy more unlikely than otherwise would be the case.

The most of the expense in connection with this great undertaking has been for the cutting of a channel through one side of a coral reef so that vessels can get to deep water inside the harbor. The coral is of the hardest character and, therefore, the work has been slow. But the results will be permanent and there will be no need of dredging to keep the channel open. More than 4,600,000 cubic yards of coral reef have been excavated to open the approaches to the inner harbor.

The solid character of the coral reef will afford a fine foundation for the graving deck. The drydock has been planned on a large scale. It is 720 feet long, 110 feet wide and fifty-five feet deep, large enough in every way for any battleship.

Hawaii has the advantage over the Philippines as a naval base because it is nearer the American coast and consequently American ships can get to coaling stations in a comparatively short time in the event of war.

PUBLIC PENSIONS AND BEGGARS.

The German System Seems to be Breeding Liars Instead of Solving the Industrial Problem.

[Philadelphia Record:] What is there about a public pension fund that has the effect of creating a state of debauchery and of turning those who touch it into mendicants and liars? When workingmen's insurance was introduced into Germany we were told that the industrial problem had been solved and that an example of Christian responsibility had been given to the world. And now Dr. Freidenburg, lately president of the insurance fund actually tells us that it has debauched its beneficiaries and has made successful fraud one of the chief ambitions of the people. If the wife is injured she becomes at once the employee of her husband. If the husband is injured then the wife is the master. Wounded children are invariably found to be employed, no matter if they are only four years old.

Aged men who have done no work for years are described as plowboys as soon as they accidentally or purposely cut their fingers, and the mother-in-law who burns her wrist at the kitchen range is duly "sworn in" as a nurse girl. Every child killed was the "sole support" of its parents, while in one case a farmer injured while on his way to church to pray for rain declared that praying for rain was an agricultural pursuit and that he was entitled to a pension. In 1886 there were 190,159 accidents reported and in 1908 there were 663,321 accidents. The making and support of claims has become a great industry, while the land is covered with an evil blight of inspectors, claim agents, and attorneys. And yet this same system on an even wider scale is about to be introduced into England with the same throwing up of hats and hosannas, and within the last few months we have seen similar beginnings in California.

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE
by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Hannah" writes: "I would like to get something that would make my hair soft and fluffy. My hair is greasy and I can do nothing to keep the oil out of it."

Answer: To take the surplus oil out of the hair and keep it soft and fluffy, get 4 oz. jar of plain yellow minyol and use it regularly. This will cure itching scalp and dandruff and make the hair grow, and you will not be bothered with stringy, straggling locks.

* * *

"Louise" writes: "I do not weigh enough for my height. I am dull and lifeless and have frequent headaches. Please advise what will help me."

Answer: Your condition is due to the lack of red blood corpuscles. I can prescribe nothing better than three grain hypo-nuciane tablets, which can be purchased at any up-to-date drug store in sealed cartons with full directions. These tablets will cause the body to assimilate the fatty elements of food and thus give you strength and added color to the skin. Your weight will increase and you will not be troubled with headache. These are recommended by physicians and if taken according to directions you will surely gain flesh.

"Troubled Miss G." writes: "Every winter I am troubled with severe attacks of rheumatism which sometimes keep me in bed for weeks. Please advise something for me."

Answer: My favorite prescription for rheumatism, and one that I know has cured thousands of people, is made by mixing: Iodide of potassium, 2 drams; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; wine of colchicum, one-half oz.; comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syrup sarsaparilla, 5 ozs. Take one teaspoonful at meal time and at bed time, and you will soon be cured.

"Annette" writes: "I have been greatly annoyed lately by coughing and a tickling sensation in the throat and hoarseness after singing. My bronchial tubes are affected also."

Answer: You can be very easily cured of this bronchial trouble by using essence mentho-laxene. This relieves quickly and certainly brings about a cure by its tonic and laxative action and therefore is superior to ordinary preparations, which only relieve. You can feel the medicine working on the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes, giving a feeling of freshness and strength to the entire system. Purchase a 2½ oz. package of essence mentho-laxene and make according to the directions on bottle and take eight or ten doses daily and you will soon be cured of your trouble.

"N. L. O." writes: "Have suffered for years with stomach trouble and constipation. Have tried many 'cures' but they did not even relieve. I have great pain at times, especially after I eat."

Answer: Obtain tablets triopeptine and take acording to directions. These tablets are pink, white and blue. Take a pink tablet after breakfast, a white tablet after dinner and a blue tablet after supper. Regular treatment with these tablets will cure any case of stomach disorder.

"Jack says: "I need a good nerve tonic. I have to work very hard and am becoming almost a wreck."

Answer: Your condition is very common especially among brain workers. Make the following tonic by mixing syrup of hypophosphite comp., 5 ozs., tincture cadomene (not cardamom), 1 oz.; and take a teaspoonful before each meal and in a few weeks your strength will be restored.

* * *

"Mrs. W." writes: "I am getting too stout for comfort and would like you to publish a safe effective cure."

Answer: Purchase separately to avoid substitution: Aromatic elixir 5 ozs.; glycot arbolene 1 oz. Mix by shaking well and take a teaspoonful after meals for the first three days and then double the dose. Many have reported the loss of a pound of flesh a day after taking the medicine for several weeks. This should be continued until you properly reduce your weight.

"Miss K." writes. "Could you publish a remedy for liver and kidney trouble and the usual diseases that arise from that source? I am troubled with dizzy spells, dark spots before my eyes and also with rheumatism."

Answer: If you will get three grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur tablets), and take according to directions, you will not only be relieved, but if you continue the use of these tablets you will be gradually cured of all the troubles you mention. They will purify the blood and also cure your rheumatism.

"Worried"—Your child can be easily cured of bedwetting by using tincture cubebs, 1 dram; tincture rhusaromatic, 2 drams, and comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz. Give him 10 to 15 drops in water before each meal. This is equally good for older people.

"Virginia" writes: "I suffer greatly with catarrh, bad breath, headache and pain across my eyes. Only my nostrils and throat are affected. Could you prescribe a remedy to cure me?"

Answer: The following local treatment should be used: Obtain a two ounce original package of Vilane powder, put one-half teaspoonful in a pint of warm water and snuff the water from the palm of the hand through the nostrils several times daily until they are cleaned thoroughly. To one ounce of vaseline or lard mix one teaspoonful of Vilane powder and apply twice a day well up into the nostrils, and your catarrh will soon vanish. This should be used at intervals to prevent a recurrence. I have received hundreds of letters from grateful people who have used the above prescription and been cured from that dreadful disease, catarrh.

A Plain Woman.

QUEEN MARY OF ENGLAND DOMINATES BY DOMESTICITY

Has Immense Influence With King George, and Her Boys "Tell Her Everything"—King's Critics Say He Stands in Awe of Her—"The Demon" Who Unpinned the Visitor's False Curls.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

Queen Mary of England,

Mother first and queen afterwards, who declares "married flirts are the trial of this age."

LONDON, April 6.—Fortunately for the British nation, Queen Mary, is a woman with a keen sense of right and wrong and of justice. Were this not so she might, with her dominating personality, her immense influence with the King, her ambition and calculation, very easily alter the life at Buckingham Palace from one of quiet routine, in which before all the domestic note is resonant, to one fraught with momentous consequences, adventures and intrigues.

So resonant, indeed, is the domestic note that she is mother first and Queen afterwards. Her boys spend every available moment in her presence. They tell her everything. When she and the King returned from India the Prince of Wales went forward in a decorous manner to greet his father, but etiquette and reserve were flung to the four winds when he saw his mother. Her he hugged. This shy boy, still painfully nervous, still self-conscious and liable to blush, regards his mother as "the saint of his deepest devotion," who inspires him, encourages him and may yet succeed in giving him trust in himself.

But the Queen is far too strong a woman to spoil her children. Prince John, the baby of the family, who is known among his relations as "The Demon," is afraid of no one but his mother, a fact, however, which did not deter him some months ago from mounting a chair behind a lady who was visiting Queen Mary and, while apparently admiring an ornament in her hat, unpinning all her false curls, which she found in a little heap on the floor, when she rose to leave.

The only daughter of the royal house, Princess Mary, is as her mother says, being taught "to do everything that a woman should know how to do"—which is defined by some as an early Victorian notion and like other relics of Victorian times, prosaic and unnecessary. But, according to Queen Mary, it is the domesticated woman who is happiest. The girl princess has been taught such old-world accomplishments as reading aloud, embroidery and cookery. "Not," says the Queen, "that she is ever likely to need to cook, but in order that she may understand how it should be done. Every woman should know as much as her housekeeper or chef."

THE THREE MEALS.

Each day with unfailing regularity the three menus for the royal household—the King and Queen's table, the schoolroom and the servant's—are brought to Queen Mary and she deletes or adds as she sees fit. It is her custom to blue-pencil out-of-season delicacies for even the royal table, remarking as she does so, "We can do without such and such until it is in the market. "I won't stand extravagance while people starve." As a matter of fact, asparagus, strawberries and other delicacies appear on the tables of rich residents in Grosvenor Square, weeks before they are enjoyed at Buckingham Palace.

From the man-in-the-street who watches the Queen go by in her royal chariot to the great household official, they all rather admire her. Each says—"She is a fine woman; her face is her own." They are quite correct, for Queen Mary never uses a vestige of make-up, never has done so, and declares she never will. It was charactertistic of her the other day, when her daughter tried to cut out a few silver hairs showing in the auburn, to remark, "Leave them alone, darling; everyone knows your mother's age, and she does not want to look one hour younger than she is."

Practically, the Queen has never altered the style of her hair dressing since she put it up as a girl. It is fine, luxuriant hair, which another woman would make much of, but which the consort of the King arranges stiffly, almost dowdily—yet it cannot be said to be unbecoming to her. She tramples on fashion ruthlessly, after the style of her mother-in-law, Queen Alexandra, whom, it may be owned, she has always taken somewhat as a model in things sartorial.

Queen Mary has none of the modern woman's contempt for petticoats, nor has Queen Alexandra. They both stuck to the old-fashioned style of skirts, even when sheath dresses were the order. With the exception of the Connaughts, who are always arrayed in the pink of fashion, all the women of the royal family retain their appreciation of underskirts, even of the heavily-pleated and tucked flannel varieties, the sight of which is sufficient to give the modern mondaine the proverbial "fit." And, amazing to relate, Queen Mary has the skirts of her gowns lined, even when of rich brocade, and braided at the hems to protect them from fraying.

A well-shaped foot with high instep is one of nature's gifts to the Queen of England. Her feet are encased in boots more frequently than shoes, of the sensible order rather than the beautiful, and invariably of black leather or glace kid, for it is an unwritten law in the royal family that in public no colored footgear may be donned. The Queen's bootmaker lives in a street off Regent street and her boots are made to order with low, square heels and a slightly rounded toe. She takes fives in boots and six and three-quarters in gloves. Her predilections for white and the delicate tinted variety are well known. Rarely is she seen wearing any others. Gloves are about the only things in which Queen Mary is extravagant. She seldom wears the same pair twice.

Her sables are some of the finest in the world, exceeding in magnificence even those of the Czarina of Russia. The sable coat Queen Mary wore the day she drove through London on her return from India is reputed to be worth $150,000. It was a gift to her from the King on his accession. It is said to this day she has no actual idea of its cost; for the King has never told her, knowing it would by no means please her to realize so considerable a sum had been lavished on one garment. For royal ermine and minniver she has no use, and dislikes greatly having to wear them at State functions like the opening of Parliament and at Courts.

NO AFFINITIES.

All the royal family are true to their friends. But if Queen Mary's friend should violate the conventions in the slightest degree, then indeed does she risk seriously losing the royal favor. For married women with "affinities" the Queen has no excuse.

Recently she heard that a certain young married woman of her acquaintance had been seen at a fashionable restaurant, dining with a man to whom she had been engaged before she met her husband. The Queen sent for her.

"Is it true," she asked, "that you have been dining alone with Maj. Blank?"

The friend admitted it, adding—"But Madame, Maj. Blank is so sympathetic and understands me."

"Look here," said the Queen, "the married flirt is the trial of the age. She is a selfish, heartless, irresponsible creature and she has no idea of duty. I don't wish you to develop into that type. Since you chose to marry, it is your duty to think that there is but one man in the world and that man your husband."

Queen Mary has the most emphatic views where marriage is concerned. She has been known to say that half the trouble in domestic life arises out of wrong moral training and the desire for amusement. Smart women of the present day, she thinks, are often devoured with vanity and have no idea of making the best of what is sometimes "a bad bargain." They will put up with nothing and in their ardent desire to correct their own mistakes trample social laws and violate principles, dashing at last in their wild stampede into a worse condition than the first.

Curiously enough, for all her hard and fast theories, the Queen is catholic enough in her taste in literature. She thinks Hardy's "Tess," the greatest novel of the last century, and it was through her its author received the Order of Merit. She is also of opinion that innocence is often ignorance.

Brought up in the Victorian school of manners, Queen Mary is truly of the type of wife our grandmothers knew. She is every whit as skilled as they in the gentle art of managing men without pretending to do so. Like those dames of old she has made a careful and almost scientific study of her husband, and today probably knows and understands him better than he knows or understands himself. His weaknesses are all as an open book to her.

She has the Victorian woman's notion of the comforts and small luxuries with which a busy man ought to be surrounded. To the King her sympathy, advice and encouragement are indispensable. Though neither demonstrative nor eloquent, the King's affection for this strong yet sympathetic woman is far greater today than when his brother Clarence cut him out as a suitor for her hand. His critics say that he is a little in awe of his wife.

The King's love for home is proverbial. Without exaggeration he is the most domesticated man in England, in his element at the tea-time hour, sitting with his wife and children these spring afternoons in the Queen's boudoir, overlooking the gardens of Buckingham Palace. The picture is domestic in the extreme. Queen Mary presides at the head of the table, for it is the old-fashioned "sit-down" tea which is taking place, and she pours out tea herself, though there are a dozen footmen within call. And as a rule no strangers are present. Perhaps that is the best part of the entertainment. It is a great treat for the King to get right away from strangers and officials for an hour.

What the future of the British Court will be it is difficult to prophesy. There are those who predict there will be little to recount because of its "eminent respectability and somewhat dowdy decorum." It will, according to such prophets—who are not infrequently disappointed critics, lost to royal favor—progress uneventfully and unpicturesquely. But it may be said that the happiest courts, like the happiest people, have no histories. The sober minded are full of thankfulness to Queen Mary for having set the fashion of morality, the fruits of which are already beginning to manifest themselves. Since she began to reign, children are once more the fashion and are seen with smart mothers in the park, the boudoir and the carriage. Men find more interest in their homes than in their friends's houses and their clubs; it is no longer outre for husbands and wives to be seen at the same parties. Someone remarked wittily lately that it is high time for a new programme to be written, explaining to the smart world how to progress in daily life, etiquette being today as totally apart as the poles from the correct modes of procedure ten years ago.

Queen Mary's good sense is another of her attractions. People with this gift often manage to secure finer results for themselves and others than those blessed with the scintillating brilliance of the intellectual endowments of the artistic temperament. That is just where Queen Mary scores—she does not possess one jot of the artistic temperament.

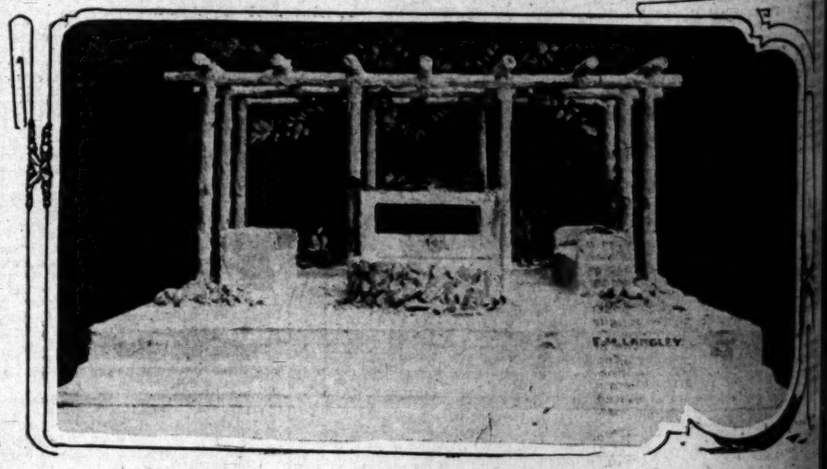
TO BUILD FOUNTAIN FOR EL CAMINO REAL



Fountain

To be erected by Committee on History and Landmarks of Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs on El Camino Real between Los Angeles and Ventura.

One of the events of the year in club circles is the California Historical Pageant to be given on the evening of April 18 at the Ebell Clubhouse by the District Federation Committee on History and Landmarks. The purpose is to raise money to place on El Camino Real a fountain which shall not only be a comfort to tired and thirsty travelers but also shall show in some way the honor and veneration the club women of the district feel for the fathers who toiled so earnestly and unselfishly for the beginnings of California.

Miss Mary A. Rhodes, district chairman of history and landmarks, together with Mrs. Elizabeth Cloud Miller, who is staging the production, have evolved a series of tableaux which will represent the history of California from the time of the coming of Cabrillo to the present. Music and dances of the various eras will also be given and great care has been taken that only the music and dances characteristic of the era be used with each tableau.

Among those who will have parts are: Cabrillo, Mrs. Lane; Father Junipero Serra, Mrs. William Hunnewell; Spanish dancers, Mrs. La Fon Brinker and Miss Willy Smyser; Indian discovering the Arrowhead, Mrs. John Thayer; Mexican bride, Mrs. Theodore Bulson; Mexican bridegroom, Miss Ivy Block; Mexican mother, Mrs. William Noyes Johnson; Mexican father, Mrs. W. C. Chambers; Yankee trader, Mrs. E. H. Quein; Mexican maidens, Mrs. Glen Behymer and Miss Pearl Massie; cavaliers, Miss Gertrude Knight, Miss Carolyn Knight, Miss Francis Gooding and Miss Mabel Nichols.

Miss Bessie Marion Coats, B.A., Vassar, 1907, has received the Alice Freeman Palmer fellowship, founded in 1903 by Mrs. David P. Kimball of Boston, and yielding an income of $1000. Miss Coats is the holder of the Mary E. Ives fellowship in philosophy for 1910-11 at Yale.

Youth and Charm.

Youth was a goodness in ancient days,
Worshiped and loved as never since the Greek Adoring lissom form and head sleek,
Ever on youth poured out perfect praise,
Lamenting even in immortal phrase
Brief life and briefer beauty it would seek
Beyond the rounded limb and glowing cheek
The loveliness of mind and soul that stays—
The loveliness that ripens with the years;
Bright eyes less bright because the form, less lithe,
Yet battles braved and errors rent with tears,
And griefs that chasten feeling hearts and blithe,
Shall clothe the soul with perfect charm and power;
More precious than fair Youth's delightful dower.

SUNDAY MORNING

THE HELPING HAND

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Several prominent women of Niagara, N. Y., have proposed to the city authorities that they be allowed to redeem all captured dogs, paying the city license fee, and find homes for the outcast animals. It is desired to end the destruction of the animals and in the belief that many people not provided with animal pets would be available for some of the finer breeds of dogs, an attempt will be made to provide such homes for a large proportion of the vagrants that would otherwise be judicially asphyxiated, as the plan is purely philanthropic and not for profit the officials will grant the request, which will not only be satisfactory to the dogs, but to the taxpayers as well, as it will lessen the present expense incident to the maintenance of the dog lockup, the asphyviation tank.

Isaac Schlichter, Sr., a well-to-do manufacturer of Philadelphia, has shown his appreciation of the services rendered him by his old employes by distributing $50,000 among those of them who have been with his establishment more than fifteen years. The gifts ranged from $500 to $2000, according to length of service. Many of the employees has been with the firm fifty-three years and four or forty years.

An anonymous donor of $50,000 has made it possible for Union Theological Seminary to erect a new gymnasium. The new building will be undertaken at once. The plans call for a structure two and a half stories high, of English gothic architecture to harmonize with the other seminary buildings.

The late Mary H. Lawrence of New York made many charitable bequests in her will. Seton Home for the Cathelic Protectory, the Home for the Aged, and the Society of St. Vincent de Paul each get $10,000 and one-eleventh of the residuary estate. The other bequests were to Mamie Henry A. Brann, rector of St. Ann's Church on East Forty-third street, and the College of St. Francis Xavier, $4000 each, and the Franciscan Memories of Mary $5000.

Andrew Carnegie has sent a wedding gift of $1000 to Miss Mary Hannah Johnson, librarian of the Nashville (Tenn.) Carnegie Library, who is soon to become the bride of P. H. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, according to announcement.

A note in Mr. Carnegie's handwriting praising Miss Johnson's devotion to public service accompanied the check.

Mrs. Mary S. Robinson of Westchester, N. Y., left a bequest of $40,000 for the benefit of needy persons who do not drink or attend theaters. The peculiar provision leaves the residuary estate in trust to Burton Meighan and Frank B. Upham for the following purposes: "To provide shelter, necessaries of life, education general or specific, and such other financial aid as may seem to them fitting and proper, to such persons as they shall select as being in need of the same. Preference is to be given to persons who are elderly, or disabled from work, and to persons who are Christians of good moral character, members of one of the so-called evangelical churches, to-wit: the Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Congregational, Moravian, or Episcopal, and who are not addicted to the use of intoxicants or tobacco, nor to attendance at theatrical entertainments."

The executors were authorized to form a corporation to carry out the provision of the will if they deem it advisable.

The largest single gift ever made by a living man to an American college is one of $2,500,000 by an anonymous donor to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In announcing the gift, President MacLaurin stated that the donor was not a graduate of the Institute, but a public-spirited business man, who desired to do a great thing quietly and without fuss, and wishes for the present to remain anonymous."

Bayless Lower, a locomotive engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, recently risked his life in order that his train might be stopped before an accident happened. A steam pipe leading from the boiler broke, filling the cab with steam and driving the engineer from his post before he could set the brakes. Nevertheless, though frightfully scalded, he climbed over the tender of the engine and stopped the train by cutting the air hose connecting the engine with the first car.

UP TO DATE WOMEN.

Dr. Emma Sanders, who is making her first visit to the United States, is the first woman to take the degree of doctor of laws at the University of Amsterdam, Holland. She won her degree about six years ago. Dr. Sanders is the author of several books and is said to speak fluently five modern languages besides her native tongue.

Miss Julia Sullivan will be the first woman to drive a public taxi for a Chicago motor livery concern. She is preparing to take the city examination. The company has announced it will employ twenty women drivers.

Miss Laura G. Grant of New York has been appointed a member of the fire prevention inspectors' bureau, of that city, of which there are seventy-five, she being the only woman.

Miss Katherine Conway of Boston, who was honored by the Pope recently with a medal and autograph letter, is one of only three Catholic women in this country so honored.

Mrs. Jane K. Sather's gifts to the University of California aggregated more than half a million dollars. Mrs. Sather's first gift was the Sather Gate to the Telegraph-avenue entrance to the university as a memorial to her husband. She endowed two professorships, each for $120,000; provided book funds, of $25,000 and $10,000, and gave $200,000 for the erection of a bell tower of white granite.

Mrs. William Miller Graham, whose husband is one of California's wealthy oil producers, is preparing at an expense of $50,000 an elaborate production of the second act of Victor Herbert's opera, "Natoma," in Santa Barbara county, early next autumn. It is to be produced in the open air, and will have as its background the old Santa Barbara mission, from which the brothers of Natoma received their inspiration.

Naval Revolution.

COMBUSTION ENGINE WINS.

MAY SAVE NEED OF SO MANY COALING STATIONS.

Germany Planning a Battle Cruiser to Make the Journey Around the World Without Having to Replenish Its Fuel Supply. Destroyers as Submarines.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:] The rapid progress made in the adaptation of the internal combustion engine to the uses of maritime propulsion, gives food for reflection on the possible modification of ship type which is likely to follow its introduction and the developments of strategy and tactics which these involve.

The German Marine Office has already plans for a battle cruiser which will be able to make the journey round the world without putting in anywhere to replenish her fuel supply. To some extent this will do away with the need of naval bases over sea. For instance, a German squadron so engined could make Kiou Chou without the need to use British ports on the way, as Prince Henry, to his chagrin, had to do when he took the old Deutschland and Gefion out to China and gave the object lesson which is at the bottom of German expansion. Rojdestvensky, with such a fleet, would have reached the Sea of Japan before Port Arthur fell, and the history of the Far East might have been altered.

But the impressive thought is the possibilities of the case when such a vessel or vessels get to sea on the wide ocean, having donned the cap of darkness, and yet being kept fully informed by "wireless" of all that is going on and of the points to which it is required that they should direct their energies. The news that Germany is possessed of such a design adds significance to the determination that the ships of her increased programme shall be battle cruisers. The advantages of our geographical position, will, thereby be largely neutralized.

But, for the moment, the consequences of the development of the internal combustion engine promise to be even more striking in their effect upon the design and use of torpedo craft. The new British submarines will be able to keep the sea for two months with the fuel supply they will carry. Once the surface speed attainable with internal combustion engines is raised to that now possessed by turbined destroyers—and it is rapidly approaching thereto—what happens automatically, as it were? Destroyer and submarine both disappear as a separate class. You come to an above-water submarine, or a diving destroyer, which you will. This is the real explanation why the newest classes of submarines are being equipped with guns. The type is not yet fully evolved, of course, but the first approach to it is being made.

The argument runs something on these lines: The destrover is useless for attack on large purposes. Light craft of all kinds are easily chased off. Only armored ships can hang on to an enemy's fleet and secure uninterrupted information. At most, she serves for inshore work, and to chase and destrov the enemy's torpedo boats, which was her original business. The aeroplane, moreover, will do a great part of the intelligence work required, and a submarine with guns and sufficient speed, (or a diving destroyer) will equally well account for torpedo boats of the old type. The three essentials to be attained are speed, habitability and rapidity of submersion. If the hull of a destroyer, when funnels are got rid of, can be adapted for diving, the first and second requisites will be practically attained. And approximation of the form of the submarine to that of the above-water vessel is rapidly proceeding. The size of modern submarines, morever, is equal to that of the destrover of ten years ago. Everything points to the rapid evolution of the new type of vessel, the long range and invisibility of which will make it a terror to battle fleets.

One more interesting speculation is induced by the mention of aviation, and by Mr. Churchill's assurance to Mr. Burgoyne that experiments with the hydroaeroplane are proceeding. It is within the bounds of possibility that we shall see in the future a veritable naval "wild-duck;" a vessel which can swim on the surface of the water, dive beneath it, or soar above it. It is a theme worthy of Jules Verne; but it is hardly more impossible of realization than aviation or submarine navigation seemed twenty years ago. For the present, man must be content to swim and fly, or swim and dive, trusting to time to perfect the combination of the three. But the internal combustion engine is evidently destined profoundly to modify the instruments of warfare and the practice, if not the principles of strategy and tactics.

"In a garden made a lover's snare,
By pottery, bench and hickory chair,
'Neath the rose vine and laurel tree, Met Anthony Dare and Marjorie Dee."

—Beginning today, and continuing during the next five weeks, we shall display in our windows a series of novel, interesting and artistic tableaus, featuring

"The Courtship of Anthony Dare and Marjorie Dee"

—This perhaps will prove one of the most unique and most interesting features in the shape of window displays which have been made by any Los Angeles firm. In this series of window pictures, we shall portray the romance of "Anthony Dare" and "Marjorie Dee" with appropriate settings of furniture and other appointments, which we are confident you will enjoy. The first of these tableaus will occupy our two large south windows this week. In succeeding views will be pictured other incidents in the courtship. You'll want to see them all!

CRANKS.

Dr. Elizabeth Shapleigh, a Boston suffragette, has a poor opinion of men. "After women get a little political power into their hands I shouldn't be surprised if they abolished a few men," she says. "There are too many men in the world anyway. As a student of biology, I can say that we could get along with a very few men."

James C. Waite, a farmer of Bakersfield, made a vow in 1896 not to shave until William Jennings Bryan was elected President. On March 26 he unwound his beard from the spool on which he wore it and deliberately broke his vow. Half the town gathered to watch the barber remove the long beard. "I guess Bryan has no chance any more," remarked Waite as he drove into town. "I've forgotten just why I was such a durned fool."

Enraged by the fact that the town of Murray, in Orleans county, N. J., went "dry" at the recent election, Levi Kelsey, proprietor of the Sandy Creek Hotel, chained up a pump in front of his hotel and is now demanding 5 cents a pail for water from the eight or ten families who have been accustomed to get water at that pump.

John E. Parsons, the venerable lawyer and counsel for the sugar trust, has never allowed a telephone to be installed in his office. Every time he had occasion to advise his clients he either wrote with his own hand or dictated to a stenographer a letter.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

Gen. Isaac Dyer, the oldest postmaster in the United States, has announced his resignation from office. He is 92 years old and has been postmaster at Skowhegan, Me., twelve years.

Eben Leighton of Mt. Vernon, Me., was 95 years old in January. During the winter he cut two cords of birchwood from the stump. When that and five cords of hardwood are sawed, he will take his usual spring tonic of splitting and housing the whole pile without help. Mr. Leighton enjoys a good appetite, writes very legibly, and reads the daily papers with keen interest.

Sheltered from the vicissitudes of old age and a lonely life by the walls of Ionia (Mich.) county's comfortable county home, aged Zenas Delno is spending the declining years of his life quietly and happily. He is 94 years of age and walks with a feeble step and yet his eye is bright and his mind clear. Many hours during the fall are spent by him in the cornfield husking the winter store, and doing such other labor around the farm as his age will permit.

OFFICIAL SIGN LANGUAGES.

United States Government Uses Many Symbols for Description of Areas Covered by Surveyors.

[New York Tribune:] If you were making a reconnaissance of a large area of greatly diversified country and were taking copious notes of the various natural characteristics observed, as well as the many works of man, your notes would consist to a large extent of discussions of constantly recurring types which might well be expressed by symbols. The printed or written sign language is far older than the alphabet and there is in common use today in the United States an official sign language which so far as geographic features are concerned is sufficient to describe fully, without the use of a single word, the most unusual area within the country or any of its outlying possessions. This is the collection of symbols and abbreviations adopted by the United States that may take from two to four weeks. Geographic Board and published, with the signification, on a large sheet by the United States Geological Survey. By the use of these symbols everything of the nature mentioned can be described by an amateur map maker or can be read on any government map, and any one who has the key to the symbols can read the map and learn the character of the area so far as the map depicts it.

Thus, a rock in the ocean whose exact position is doubtful is represented by a simple sign the size of a pinhead, and an oil well or a telegraph station is indicated by another symbol no larger. If a lake or pond is intermittenently wet and dry, it is represented by a symbol slightly different from that used for a regular lake, and if a section of country is covered with pines or other conifers the symbol employed to show these trees is slightly different from that used in indicating an oak forest. Some seventy symbols are used to portray the various works and structures erected by man from suspension bridges to mine shafts or windmills; about twenty symbols are used to indicate different classes of land, ranging from sugar cane areas to cactus patches; aids to navigation and hydrographic features of all kinds are represented by many devices and other general subjects covered are boundaries, marks and monuments and many special military features.

This sheet of conventional signs is much in use by schools and field organizations. It can be procured from the director of the Geological Survey, Washington.

PEARL HARBOR A GIBRALTAR.

By Midsummer the United States Will Have Completed an Impregnable Mid-Sea Naval Base.

[Christian Science Monitor:] By midsummer or early fall it is expected that the work of constructing the approaches to Pearl Harbor will be completed and then the United States will have in the Pacific a national defense as important and as impregnable as that of Great Britain at Gibraltar. When completed the work will have cost about $10,000,000.

The channel leading into the harbor has already been cut to a depth of thirty feet below low tide and will thus pass some of the cruisers of the Pacific station. But the cutting is to continue until there will be enough water to float the greatest of the dreadnoughts.

Pearl Harbor is to be the most strongly fortified naval base in the Pacific, if not in the world. The harbor is landlocked and is distant from Honolulu twelve miles. When the channels to the east, the middle and the west locks have been dredged, the harbor will be large enough to float the combined navies of the world. The work of construction has been under way more than twelve years and it was hastened materially after the Spanish War and the occupation by the United States of the Philippine Islands.

Hidden forts and disappearing guns of the latest pattern are to protect the new harbor. The guns will use smokeless powder so as to render their discovery by an enemy more unlikely than otherwise would be the case.

The most of the expense in connection with this great undertaking has been for the cutting of a channel through one side of a coral reef so that vessels can get to deep water inside the harbor. The coral is of the hardest character and, therefore, the work has been slow. But the results will be permanent and there will be no need of dredging to keep the channel open. More than 4,600,000 cubic yards of coral reef have been excavated to open the approaches to the inner harbor.

The solid character of the coral reef will afford a fine foundation for the graving deck. The drydock has been planned on a large scale. It is 720 feet long, 110 feet wide and fifty-five feet deep, large enough in every way for any battleship.

Hawaii has the advantage over the Philippines as a naval base because it is nearer the American coast and consequently American ships can get to coaling stations in a comparatively short time in the event of war.

PUBLIC PENSIONS AND BEGGARS.

The German System Seems to be Breeding Liars Instead of Solving the Industrial Problem.

[Philadelphia Record:] What is there about a public pension fund that has the effect of creating a state of debauchery and of turning those who touch it into mendicants and liars? When workingmen's insurance was introduced into Germany we were told that the industrial problem had been solved and that an example of Christian responsibility had been given to the world. And now Dr. Freidenburg, lately president of the insurance fund actually tells us that it has debauched its beneficiaries and has made successful fraud one of the chief ambitions of the people. If the wife is injured she becomes at once the employee of her husband. If the husband is injured then the wife is the master. Wounded children are invariably found to be employed, no matter if they are only four years old.

Aged men who have done no work for years are described as plowboys as soon as they accidentally or purposely cut their fingers, and the mother-in-law who burns her wrist at the kitchen range is duly "sworn in" as a nurse girl. Every child killed was the "sole support" of its parents, while in one case a farmer injured while on his way to church to pray for rain declared that praying for rain was an agricultural pursuit and that he was entitled to a pension. In 1886 there were 100,159 accidents reported and in 1908 there were 663,321 accidents. The making and support of claims has become a great industry, while the land is covered with an evil blight of inspectors, claim agents, and attorneys. And yet this same system on an even wider scale is about to be introduced into England with the same throwing up of hats and hosannas, and within the last few months we have seen similar beginnings in California.

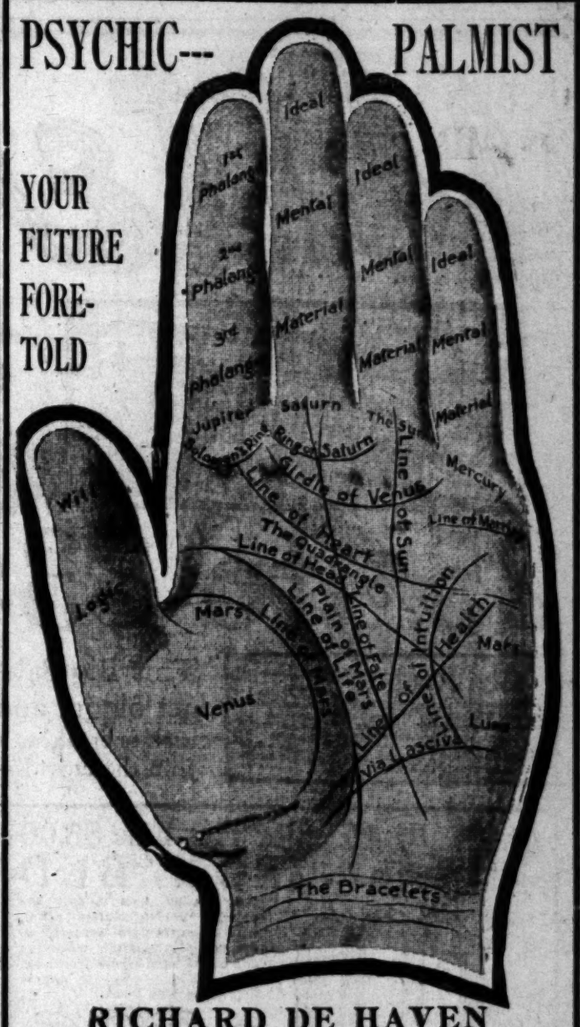
PSYCHIC--- PALMIST

YOUR FUTURE FORE-TOLD



RICHARD DE HAVEN

King of Life Readers

I was born with a strange and remarkable power—power not meant to gratify the idle curious, but to direct, advise and help men and women who are in trouble and suspense concerning the every day affairs of life.

$5.00 LIFE READING $1.00
(Reduced fee for this week only.)

I give just as careful and complete a revelation of your business, love and domestic affairs for $1.00 as I do for my regular fee of $3 and $5. I am taking the reduced fee plan to introduce myself and my work more extensively to the people of this city, where I have established my permanent home.

MY WORK SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

While I have the indorsements of hundreds of the most noted men and women of America, I deem them of little value, since I stand alone upon the merits of my work. Any person who can believe their own eyes and ears cannot help but know that I am a man of high ability and indisputable power excelled by no man on earth in this line.

MASTER OF STRANGE POWERS.

There are strange and mighty forces which men and women can use to better their conditions. These forces are called personal magnetism, mental telepathy, semi-hypnotic suggestion, etc. All this I teach to any one who wishes to use it for a legitimate and honorable purpose.

WHAT I DO FOR $1.00

I tell what condition your business is in and how to promote it. I tell you of any move, journey, position or change of any kind which may be before you, and how to act to obtain the best results. I tell you exactly what your acquaintances think of you, who to trust and who to shun. In short, I tell you everything you called to find out, and that, too, without asking you a question or you speaking a word.

I guarantee to develop mediumship to its fullest degree in those who have any latent power whatever. If I do not succeed as above stated, I ask no fee for my work and time whatsoever.

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE
by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Hannah" writes: "I would like to get something that would make my hair soft and fluffy. My hair is greasy and I can do nothing to keep the oil out of it."

Answer: To take the surplus oil out of the hair and keep it soft and fluffy, get 4 oz. jar of plain yellow minyoi and use it regularly. This will cure itching scalp and dandruff and make the hair grow, and you will not be bothered with stringy, straggling locks.

* * *

Answer: Your condition is due to the lack of red blood corpuscles. I can prescribe nothing better than three grain hyponuclane tablets, which can be purchased at any up-to-date drug store in sealed cartons with full directions. These tablets will cause the body to assimilate the fatty elements of food and thus give you strength and added color to the skin. Your weight will increase and you will not be troubled with headache. These are recommended by physicians and if taken according to directions you will surely gain flesh.

"Troubled Miss G." writes: "Every winter I am troubled with severe attacks of rheumatism which sometimes keep me in bed for weeks. Please advise something for me."

Answer: My favorite prescription for rheumatism, and one that I know has cured thousands of people, is made by mixing: Iodide of potassium, 2 drams; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; wine of colchicum, one-half oz.; comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syrup sarsaparilla, 3 ozs. Take one teaspoonful at meal time and at bed time, and you will soon be cured.

"Annette" writes: "I have been greatly annoyed lately by coughing and a tickling sensation in the throat and hoarseness after singing. My bronchial tubes are affected also."

Answer: You can be very easily cured of this bronchial trouble by using essence mentha-laxene. This relieves quickly and certainly brings about a cure by its tonic and laxative action and therefore is superior to ordinary preparations, which only relieve. You can feel the medicine working on the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes, giving a feeling of freshness and strength to the entire system. Purchase a 2½ oz. package of essence mentha-laxene and make according to the directions on bottle and take eight or ten doses daily and you will soon be cured of your trouble.

"N. L. O." writes: "Have suffered for years with stomach trouble and constipation. Have tried many 'cures' but they did not even relieve. I have great pain at times, especially after I eat."

Answer: Obtain tablets triopeptine and take acording to directions. These tablets are pink, white and blue. Take a pink tablet after breakfast, a white tablet after dinner and a blue tablet after supper. Regular treatment with these tablets will cure any case of stomach disorder.

"Jack says: "I need a good nerve tonic. I have to work very hard and am becoming almost a wreck."

Answer: Your condition is very common especially among brain workers. Make the following tonic by mixing syrup of hypophosphite comp., 5 ozs., tincture cadomene (not cardamon), 1 oz.; and take a teaspoonful before each meal and in a few weeks your strength will be restored.

* * *

"Mrs. W." writes: "I am getting too stout for comfort and would like you to publish a safe effective cure."

Answer: Purchase separately to avoid substitution: Aromatic elixir 5 ozs.; glycol arbolene 1 oz. Mix by shaking well and take a teaspoonful after meals for the first three days and then double the dose. Many have reported the loss of a pound of flesh a day after taking the medicine for several weeks. This should be continued until you properly reduce your weight.

* * *

"Miss K." writes. "Could you publish a remedy for liver and kidney trouble and the usual disease that arise from that source? I am troubled with dizzy spells, dark spots before my eyes and also with rheumatism."

Answer: If you will get three grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur tablets), and take according to directions, you will not only be relieved, but if you continue the use of these tablets you will be gradually cured of all the troubles you mention. They will purify the blood and also cure your rheumatism.

"Worried"—Your child can be easily cured of bedwetting by using tincture cubebs, 1 dram; tincture rhusaromatic, 2 drams, and comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz. Give him 10 to 15 drops in water before each meal. This is equally good for older people.

"Virginia" writes: "I suffer greatly with catarrh, bad breath, headache and pain across my eyes. Only my nostrils and throat are affected. Could you prescribe a remedy to cure me?"

Answer: The following local treatment should be used: Obtain a two ounce original package of Vilane powder, put one-half teaspoonful in a pint of warm water and snuff the water from the palm of the hand through the nostrils several times daily until they are cleaned thoroughly. To one ounce of vaseline or lard mix one teaspoonful of Vilane powder and apply twice a day well up into the nostrils, and your catarrh will soon vanish. This should be used at intervals to prevent a recurrence. I have received hundreds of letters from grateful people who have used the above prescription and been cured from that dreadful disease, catarrh.

Big Knotted Veins, Bad Legs, etc. Cured WITHOUT CUTTING or tying the veins. Average time, two months. No detention from business. No operation or appliance. Cures 95 per cent. of all cases. Must apply first treatment myself. A secret mixture positively cures and absolutely removes cramps, pain, swelling and disease, and it starts at once. BYRON L. STANLEY fully appreciates that in this day of sensational advertisements there are more false claims and misrepresentations chaperoned through the columns of the daily press than the most hypocrital tongue could utter in a lifetime, until one cannot be blamed for doubting almost everything they read. Therefore he says to you—come to him this very day and let him give you a complete reading, telling you every hope, fear or ambition, better than you could explain yourself. He will tell you the bad as well as the good; keeping nothing hidden from you. He will tell you everything upon matters of love, marriage, divorce, business, health; in fact, he will read your life like an open book.

Before you go into anything of importance or undertake anything serious—in business or love, or marriage, or before you make any change—you should consult the master mind of psychics.

ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO PSYCHIC THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.
DON'T FORGET
The name STANLEY, a double guarantee. See the real life reader who really tells what you desire to know or no charge. A foolish weakling only will pay for a reading that gives no benefit. Stop and think.

Don't struggle with a burden you can divide. A troubled mind begets a morbid conscience. Sympathy, consolation and timely advice heal the worst of wounds. Be advised and relieved of anxiety.

Realizing that this city has been overrun with pretenders, and that many of its best citizens are anxious to visit a genuine psychic, Mr. Stanley has decided to place his consultation fee within the reach of all.

Finding many deserving people who were not able to pay a large fee he has decided for a short time to place his readings within the reach of all at live and let-live prices. So if you wish to take advantage of this offer, call at once.

If you contemplate consulting a psychic several things should be taken into consideration—ABILITY, the HONESTY of methods, the FAIRNESS of dealings, the HIGHER degree of the ACCURACY of each prediction, the COMMON SENSE used with it, the INTEREST taken in each case, the RESPECT shown to each caller, the fact of SECRECY in consultation, the FEE charged for services.

You hear the truth and nothing but the truth.

BEWARE of pretenders and partially-developed mediums. They copy his advertisements and in many smaller cities use his name. Please remember BYRON L. STANLEY can be seen only at his Los Angeles office.

To whom it may concern: We take great pleasure in recommending our brother, PROF. STANLEY, as a life reader of good standing, having to our knowledge been fully developed in all the various phases of mental psychism. We cordially recommend him to any individual or society that may need his services.

PERSONAL—
MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 222 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store.)
Is now offering CAREFUL PALMISTRY AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigation along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the cause common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

PERSONAL—
PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
NOTED ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST OF NATIONAL FAME AND REPUTATION.
305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
A RESIDENT OF LOS ANGELES 28 YEARS.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The horoscope shows the powerful influence of the planets in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, love and marriage, financial affairs, talents, environments, about children, relatives, when and where to travel, what to seek or to avoid, when in danger of losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—giving dates of these events for the future.

PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Mary Mannering, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Bonns, Modjeska, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Jefferson, Capt. Hobson, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, H. E. Huntington, De Wolf Hopper, Maxine Elliott, Ethel Barrymore, etc.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S SKILLED WORK with his trained judment must in no wise be classed with that of other readers. Therefore do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics—those doing dishonest work.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING gives also an ASTROLOGICAL READING.

DR. J. A. LARSEN writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life; I know a great deal about these sciences, and I consider your work as the most THOROUGH and reliable of any reader in the United States."

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was most SATISFACTORY. Your knowledge and skill is REMARKABLE."

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."

The interpretation of a Horoscope is a fine art; the percentage of "GENUINE" astrologers is exceedingly small. To know a little of astrology out of books, and to be a skilfully trained, EXPERIENCED ASTROLOGER, are two entirely different things. Therefore, in this work, it depends largely WHO it is that reads you as to the RESULTS obtained.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of HOROSCOPES and hand reading has brought him a LARGE AND SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE. The most private confidences are exposed to him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances. Personal attention. Strict privacy. HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and many years of experience can produce. Therefore HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
Daily and evening; Sunday, 10 to 5.
STUDIO PARLORS, 305½ S. SPRING ST.

WOMEN VOTE MANFULLY.

Ontario Fair Ones Avail Themselves of Newly-Granted Privilege With Considerable Enthusiasm.

ONTARIO, April 6.—Ontario women were yesterday given their first opportunity to exercise their privilege of the ballot, and they did it manfully.

As a result of the election, an Ontario woman holds an elective office for the first time in the history of the city. Mrs. Jacob Jesson was chosen to fill the vacancy on the City Board of Education by the overwhelming majority of 356, to C. H. Whitney's 56 votes.

The women did good work in Ontario, but they evidently failed to reckon with Upland. Mrs. Lois A. Bennink, wife of Assemblyman C. H. H. Bennink, eleventh-hour candidate that she was, did remarkably well, leading her nearest competitor at the Ontario polls by three votes, but the women of Upland failed to rally to her support and she was defeated by eighteen votes.

Mrs. Bennink takes her defeat philosophically, for, while she was willing to devote her time to what she considered a worthy cause, it was, nevertheless, with a feeling of something akin to relief that she learned that the more or less arduous duties of school trustee were not to be thrust upon her.

The election was without doubt the most hotly contested of its kind ever held in Ontario. The successful candidates for the Chaffey board are C. C. Graber, E. C. Harwood, H. C. Kennedy, J. O. Mills and Ben F. Warmer. With the exception of Warmer, who defeated former Trustee R. B. Campbell, the board is the same as that of last year.

RANCHER HURT.

F. A. Cobb, a rancher, residing some four miles to the southeast of the city, was seriously injured this morning at the Hammond Lumber yards, Euclid avenue and State street, when his horse became frightened and he was thrown beneath its feet.

Cobb, who had driven into the lumber yard to purchase some boards, had just finished loading his small wagon and was about to mount to the seat when the horse, for some unaccountable reason, took fright and started to run for the gate.

In attempting to stop the flight of the terrified beast, Cobb was thrown beneath its feet and the wheels of the wagon. He was picked up unconscious by men in the office of the lumber company, and medical aid at once summoned.

Examination showed that several ribs had been fractured and internal injuries may result. At latest reports he was resting as easily as could be expected. The wagon was badly shattered, the horse continuing its mad flight after trampling its master under foot.

COLTON.

COLTON, April 6.—The county bridge, which is being built over the Santa Ana River, south of Colton, on the Riverside road, will be finished by the middle of this month. Several months ago an auto truck plunged through the old structure, since which time the traveling public has been compelled to ford the stream, this, however, often being impossible on account of the high waters.

Mrs. Seth Hartley was elected school trustee yesterday at the regular election, to fill the expired term of H. B. Smith.

DYNAMITE DEALER FINED.

Socialist Merchant Punished for Handling Explosive in Violation of City Ordinance—News Briefs.

SANTA ANA, April 6.—A. E. Hawley, the dealer in dynamite whose manner of storing and dealing in dynamite was under investigation less than two weeks ago, paid a fine of $10 today for breaking the city ordinance prohibiting the keeping of over fifty pounds of dynamite at one time in any place in the city. Hawley's experience with the officers failed to make him careful enough to avoid arrest. When Sheriff Ruddock found that Hawley was keeping dynamite in big quantities, sometimes a ton at a time, in his barn, open to easy theft, he compelled Hawley to provide a place where the dynamite could be kept secure. The city authorities made him take his dynamite, about 2100 pounds of it, outside the city, and City Marshal G. S. Wilson told him that he would arrest him if he was caught violating the law.

This was two weeks ago. Today, a rancher told Hawley he wanted 150 pounds for blasting purposes. Hawley brought the explosive to his store on West Fourth street, and the rancher then concluded not to take it immediately, and went away. Hawley took the three fifty-pound boxes inside the store. People in the vicinity became uneasy, and the Marshal was informed. The Marshal immediately arrested Hawley, who pleaded guilty and paid a fine.

Hawley was one of the local Socialists who met Jack White, a San Diego I.W.W. agitator. Later, when White was arrested at San Diego, he was found to have a memorandum of the fact that Hawley had a large quantity of dynamite on hand. That was the reason for the investigation two weeks ago.

TRAMPS GO TO CITY.

Of the forty-five I.W.W.s who arrived here yesterday after being driven back from San Diego at San Onofre, but four or five are here today. The others made their way to Los Angeles, some of them to nurse their bruised bodies. A man named Martin from Anaheim, who was one of those who experienced San Onofre, had a brief local officers that he has all he wants of attempting to invade San Diego.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Spring strawberries are being shipped to market in quantity, the first of the season. The Berry Growers' Association has received 500,000 three-quarter-pound boxes for its crop. While Orange county produces strawberries every month of the year, the winter product comes from the old growth. The spring berries now being sent to market are luscious and come from the new growth. Growers are getting 16 cents per box. The berry crops bring in about $70,000 annually to growers in this county.

A horse driven by J. A. Williamson, near Tustin, shied into an automobile, and a wheel of the buggy was torn off. Williamson and Mrs. Samuel Williamson and her 2-year-old child, were thrown out, but escaped with severe bruises.

J. D. Miller is in the County Jail charged with habitual intoxication. He ran a poolroom at Winterburg. The officers say that often when intoxicated, terrorized his aged father and mother, who are both quite ill.

ROUSING CHEER FOR PREXY.

Dr. Jordan Addresses Alumni of Stanford and Asks Their Aid to Help Educate Future Generations.

One hundred men and women, members of the Stanford Club of this city, attended the reception at the Gamut Club last night, in honor of President Jordan.

Stanford's "prexy" was given a rousing rah rah ovation when he appeared in the assembly hall. He shook hands with the graduates and called many of them by their first names.

After singing several of Stanford's familar and beloved songs and parodies, President Reed of the Stanford Club, introduced Dr. Jordan, who gave a short talk.

"Stanford University has paid out $2,400,000 in educating students who attended the university from Southern California," said the president. "Now it's up to you 'grads' in Southern California to pay back that amount through your good deeds, faithful work and enterprise.

"We are trying in every way to raise the moral and intellectual standards of Stanford University in order to make it the greatest educational institution in the world. Our standards always have been high, but we are aiming even higher."

He said that nearly half a million dollars was paid out annually by the university for salaries and that it cost $375,000 a year to run the various departments and branches of the Palo Alto University.

President Jordan will leave for the North today.

VENTURA NOTES.

VENTURA, April 6.—The fight for High School Trustees here yesterday resulted in the election of George Cook and E. P. Foster, incumbents, in this district. The only opponent was Mrs. Sheldon of the Mound district. In the Ojai district there was a tie vote for trustees, between Messrs. Barrows and Lindner. Barrows has been the trustee and was opposed for re-election. In other sections of the county no fights developed, and generally old trustees were re-elected.

The Board of Supervisors has announced that it will advertise for bids for the building of the bridge across Ventura River at this place April 16. There are two plans to be considered in the bidding. One of these calls for a reinforced concrete bridge of arch construction, eight arch spans and 980 feet in length, the arches to be 115x150 feet in the clear, and with an eighteen-foot roadway. The steel structure plan calls for a flat girder bridge of sixteen sixty-foot spans, 997 feet long, the girders five feet above highest high water, and the foundation eighteen feet below the lowest point of the riverbed. At the meeting on the 16th inst. there will also be let the contract for the extension of the Hontalvo bridge.

EL CENTRO BRIEFS.

EL CENTRO, April 6.—Owing to the fact that several cases of rabies have developed among dogs of Imperial Valley, the City Trustees of El Centro in a special session this week adopted an ordinance prohibiting dogs running at large unmuzzled, within the city limits. The City Trustees of Brawley have taken similar precautions, and the Supervisors of Imperial county have adopted a similar ordinance for the county outside of the incorporated cities.

A feature of the last meeting of the Woman's Ten Thousand Club at El Centro was an exhibition of Russian laces sent here by Madame de Blumenthal of Pasadena, who has interested herself in the Russian lace-makers and has succeeded in creating a large market for their skilled work among American women.

Landlord Arey of the Bungalow Hotel at Brawley has been found guilty of having intoxicating liquors in his possession. The trial was by jury and Arey will receive his sentence next Monday.

El Centro is to observe Memorial Day with exercises at the public library grounds, where a seventy-five-foot steel flag-staff, presented to the city by A. G. Thurston of Pasadena will be used for the first time and a large flag donated by the public school pupils will be raised.

GLENDALE.

GLENDALE, April 6.—At the school election held here yesterday the following were chosen: Glendale grammar school trustees, one-year term, R. C. Sternberg; two-year term, C. S. Westlake; three-year term, A. B. Heacock. The tally by precincts was: Sternberg, No. 1 (Casa Verdugo,) 46; No. 2 (Brand boulevard,) 247; No. 3 (Glendale avenue,) 215. Westlake, No. 1, 22; No. 2, 219; No. 3, 144. Heacock, No. 1, 92; No. 2, 253; No. 3, 209. The total vote cast was 910. High School Trustees: Dwight Greswold of Tropico, Dr. A. L. Bryant of Glendale, and C. W. Young, Eagle Rock.

WAYWARD BOY.

COLTON, April 6.—Milo Rumsey, the 18-year-old son of S. W. Rumsey, was arrested on the charge of entering the store of Muschewske & White last night and stealing various articles, among which were a diamond ring and considerable cash. Rumsey was arraigned before Justice Hanna today and was placed under bail of $1000 for his appearance on April 10.

CLAREMONT.

CLAREMONT, April 6.—Last evening at Holmes Hall a meeting of the citizens was held to listen to addresses in favor of the renomination of President Taft. Capt. Helm and Albert Sweeney, Esq., both of Los Angeles, were present and made very able speeches on the subject. C. R. Sumner is president of the local Taft Club and the Rev. Mr. C. S. Valle is secretary.

Mrs. Mary C. Maynard was unanimously elected a member of the Claremont school board at the city election held yesterday. Mrs. Maynard succeeds W. S. Palmer as one of the board of three. Mr. Palmer has rendered very efficient service to the community in conjunction with the other members, E. H. Sanford and Dr. J. A. Lyman, in the erection and supervision of the new $80,000 high school on the foothill boulevard. This high school has an attendance of 110, which is an unique fact, as it shows that one-tenth of the population of the city is enrolled.

TROPICO.

TROPICO, April 6.—At the school election held yesterday in this city for grammar and high school trustees, Clyde R. Carmack was elected for grammar school trustee, and Mrs. Rose Winterburn received the greatest number of votes for Union High School trustee—Tropico, Glendale, Eagle Rock, La Crescenta and Casa Verdugo comprising the union district.

HUNTINGTON PARK.

HUNTINGTON PARK, April 6.—There will be a municipal election at Huntington Park, the polls being open at the City Hall for all districts. The City Club of Huntington Park, recently organized, has indorsed the following candidates: Trustees, G W. Dudderar, O. W. Leonard, Arthur M. Loomis, J. H. McCord and John Tarr; all well-known business men: City Clerk, W. E. Boss, an expert accountant; City Treasurer, Mrs. Lorena Hudspith, well-known in women's club circles.

AZUSA.

AZUSA, April 6.—An occasion of great interest was the debate yesterday evening between the Inglewood High School and Citrus High School. Some forty or fifty friends accompanied the speakers from abroad and were entertained at luncheon by the citrus people. The question debated was: "Resolved that Federal Control of Marriage and Divorce will be for the best interest of the people of the United States." The affirmative was maintained by Horace Sollenberger and Miss Blanche Nelson of Inglewood; the negative by L. Whitcomb and Earnest Daniels of Citrus. The Inglewood speakers had 168 points; those of Citrus, 173. The first place was awarded to Miss Nelson.

QUAKERS WIN FIRST GAME.

WHITTIER, April 6.—The baseball team of Whittier College annexed the first game of the season this afternoon by taking the fast Orange High School aggregation into camp over the 4-to-3 route, on Hadley Field. This was the first real workout for the Poets baseball squad this season and the team made a remarkable showing, considering this fact. The work of the infield and battery for the Quakers were the bright features of the game, and the Whittier rooters are much encouraged over the outlook for the first intercollegiate game, which takes place with Pomona next Saturday afternoon.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER.

NEVADA CITY (Cal.) April 6.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] A verdict of not guilty was brought in late today in the case of Paul M. Doyle, charged with the murder of W. H. M. Smith, editor of the Truckee Republican, in Truckee on February 7 last. The jury was out four hours and five minutes. Doyle, who is a prominent Truckee merchant, shot Smith dead in the postoffice after a series of published attacks on his character. He pleaded self-defense, alleging that Sm

VIII.—JINXES—WHAT THEY MEAN.

A FRIEND of mine who took a different fork in the road from the one that I have followed when we left college, was walking down Broadway with me one morning after I had joined the Giants, and we passed a cross-eyed man. I grabbed off my hat and spit in it. It was a new hat, too, and not guaranteed water-proof.

"What's the matter with you, Matty?" he asked, surprised.

"Spit in your hat quick and kill that jinx," I answered, not thinking for the minute, and he followed my example.

I forgot to mention, when I said he took another fork in the road, that he had become a pitcher, too, but of a different kind. He had turned out to be sort of a conversational pitcher, for he was a minister, and, as luck would have it, on the morning we met that cross-eyed man he was wearing a silk hat. I was shocked, pained and mortified when I saw what I had made him do. But he was the right sort, and wanted to do the thing according to the standards of the professional man with whom he happened to be at the time.

"What's the idea?" he asked as he replaced his hat.

"Worst jinx in the world to me a cross-eyed man," I replied. "But I hope I didn't hurt your silk hat," I quickly apologized.

"Not at all. But how about these ball players who masticate the weed? Do they kill jinxes, too?" he wanted to know. And I had to admit that they were the main exterminators of the jinx.

"Then," he went on, "I'm glad that the percentage of wearers of cross eyes is small."

WHAT A JINX IS.

I have just looked into one of my favorite works for that word, "jinx," and found it not. My search was in Webster's dictionary. But any ball player can give a definition of it with his hands tied behind him—that is, any one except "Arlie" Latham, and, with his hands tied, he is deaf and dumb. A jinx is something which brings bad luck to a ball player, and the members of the profession have built up a series of lucky and unlucky omens that should be catalogued, yet all ball players seem to know them instinctively. And besides the common or garden variety of jinxes, many stars have a series of private or pet and trained ones that are more malignant in their forms than those which come out in the open.

A jinx is the child of superstition, and ball players are among the most superstitious persons in the world, notwithstanding all this conversation lately about educated men breaking into the game and paying no attention whatever to the good and bad omens. College men are coming into both the leagues, more of them each year, and they are doing their share to make the game better and the class of men higher, but they fall the hardest for the jinxes. And I don't know as it is anything to be ashamed of at that.

A really, true, on-the-level, honest-to-jimmy jinx can do all sorts of mean things to a professional ball player. I have seen it make a bad pitcher out of a good one, and a blind batter out of a three-hundred hitter for a time, and I have seen it make a ball club, composed of educated men, carry a Kansas farmer with two or three screws rattling loose in his dome around the circuit because he came as a prophet and said that he was accompanied by Miss Fickle Fortune. And that is almost a jinx record.

Jinx and Miss Fickle Fortune never go around together. And ball players are always trying to kill this jinx for, once he joins the club, all hope is gone. He dies hard, and many a good bat has been ruined in an effort to kill him, as I have said before, because the wearer happened to be chewing tobacco when the jinx dropped around. But what's a new hat against a losing streak or a batting slump?

Luck is a combination of confidence and getting the breaks. Ball players get no breaks without confidence in themselves, and lucky omens inspire this confidence. On the other hand, unlucky signs take it away. The lucky man is the one who hits the nail on the head and not his fingers, and the ability to swat the nail on its receptive end is a combination of self-confidence and an aptitude for hammering. Some figure! Good ball playing is the combination of self-confidence and the ability to play. Get me? Because we are going to pass along to the next exhibit whether you do or not.

The next is "Red" Ames, although called "Leon" by his family when a very small boy before he began to play ball. (He is still called "Leon" in the winter.) Ames is of Warren, O., and the Giants, and he is said to hold the Marathon record for being the most unlucky pitcher that ever lived, and I agree with the sayers. For several seasons Ames couldn't seem to win a ball game, no matter how well he pitched. In 1909 "Red" pitched a game on the opening day of the season against Brooklyn that was the work of a master. For nine innings he held his opponents hitless, only to have them win in the thirteenth. Time and again Ames has pitched brilliantly, only to be beaten by a small score because one of the men behind him made an error at a critical moment or because the team couldn't give him any runs by which to win. No wonder the newspapers began to speak of Ames as the "hoo-doo" pitcher and the man "who couldn't win."

There was a cross-eyed fellow who lived between Ames and the Polo Grounds, and "Red" used to make a detour of several blocks en route to the park to be sure to miss him in case he should be out walking. But one day this last summer, when it was his turn to pitch, he bumped into that cross-eyed man and, in spite of the fact that he did his duty by his hat and got three or four small boys to help him out in the battle, he failed to last two innings. When it came time to go West on the final trip of the season Ames was badly discouraged.

"I don't see any use in taking me along, Mac," he said to McGraw a few days before we left. "The club can't win with me pitching if the other guys don't even get a foul."

The first stop was in Boston, and on the first day it rained. In the mail that day addressed to Ames came a necktie and a four-leaf clover from a prominent actress, wishing Ames good luck. The directions were inside the envelope. The four-leaf clover, if the charm were to work, must be worn on both the uniform and street clothes, and the necktie was to be worn on the street clothes and concealed in the uniform, if that necktie could be concealed anywhere. It would have done for a headlight and make Joseph's coat of many colors look like a mourning garment.

"Might as well wish good luck to a guy on the way to the morgue," murmured Ames as he surveyed the layout, but he manfully put on the necktie, taking his first dose of the prescription as directed at once, and he tucked the four-leaf clover away carefully in his wallet.

"You've got your work cut out for you, old boy," he remarked to the charm as he put it away, "but I'd wear you if you were a horseshoe."

The first day that Ames pitched in Boston he won, and won in a stroll.

"The necktie," he explained that night at dinner, and pointed to the three-sheet, colored supplement affair that he was wearing around his collar, "I don't change her until I lose."

And he didn't lose a game on that trip. Once he almost did, when he was taken out in the sixth inning, and a batter put in for him, but the Giants finally pulled the victory out and he got the credit for it. He swept through the West unbeatable, letting down Pittsburgh with two or three hits, cleaning up in St. Louis, and finally breaking our losing streak in Chicago after two games had gone against us. And all the time he wore that spectrum around his collar for a necktie. As it frayed with the wear and tear, more colors began to show, although I didn't believe it possible. If he had had occasion to put on his evening scenery, I believe that tie would have gone with it.

For my part, I would almost rather have lost a game and changed the necktie, since it gave one the feeling all the time that he was carrying it around with him because he had the wrong end of an election bet or something of that sort. But not Ames! He was a game guy. He stuck with the necktie, and it stuck with him, and the combination kept right on winning ball games. Maybe he didn't mind it because he couldn't see it himself, unless he looked in a mirror, but it was rough on the rest of the team.

Columns were printed in the newspapers about that necktie, and it became the most famous scarf in the world. Ames used to sleep with it under his pillow alongside of his bank roll, and he didn't lose another game until the very end of the season, when he dropped one against Brooklyn.

"I don't hardly lay that up against the tie," he said afterwards. "You see, Mac put all those youngsters into it, and I didn't get any support."

And now I am told the tie is in a glass case in a cabinet in Warren, O., and Leon lets the natives look at it on holidays and feast days, but for the rest it is kept in a dark room so that the light won't hurt it, and he can trot out the jinx destroyer next season.

Analyzing is a distasteful pastime to me, but let's see what it was that made Ames win. Was it the necktie? Perhaps not. But some sliver of confidence, which resulted from that first game when he was dressed up in the scarf and the four-leaf clover, got stuck in his mind. And after that the rest was easy.

IN LOVE WITH LOWER 13.

Frank Chance, the manager of the Cubs, has a funny superstition which is of the personal sort. Most ball players have a natural prejudice against the number "13" in any form, but particularly when attached to a Pullman berth. But Chance always insists, whenever possible, that he have lower "13." He says that if he can just crawl in under that number he is sure of a good night's rest, a safe journey, and a victory the next day. He has been in two or three minor railroad accidents, and he declares that all these occurred when he was sleeping on some other shelf besides "lower 13." He can usually satisfy his hobby, too, for most travelers steer clear of the berth.

McGraw believes a stateroom brings him good luck, or at least he always insists on having one when he can get it.

"Chance can have 'lower 13,'" says "Mac," "but give me a stateroom for luck."

Most ball players nowadays treat the superstitions of the game as jokes, probably because they are a little ashamed to acknowledge their weaknesses, but away down underneath they observe the proprieties of the ritual. Why, even I won't warm up with the third baseman while I am waiting for the catcher to get on his mask and the rest of his paraphernalia. Once, when I first broke in with the Giants, I warmed up with the third baseman between innings and in the next round they hit me hard and knocked me out of the box. Since then I have had an uncommon prejudice against the practice, and I hate to hear a man even mention it. Devlin knows of my weakness and never suggests it when he is playing the bag, but occasionally a new performer will drill into the box score at third base and yell:

"Come on, Matty. Warm up here while you're waiting."

It gets me. I'll pitch to the first baseman or a substitute catcher to keep warm, but I would rather freeze to death than heat up with the third baseman. That is one of my pet jinxes.

And speaking of Arthur Devlin, he has a few hand-raised jinxes of his own, too. For instance, he never likes to hear a player hum a tune on the bench, because he thinks it will keep him from getting a base hit. He nearly beat a youngster to death one day when he kept on humming after Devlin had told him to stop.

"Cut that out, Caruso," yelled Arthur, as the recruit started his melody. "You are killing base hits."

The busher kept on with his air until Devlin tried another form of persuasion.

Arthur also has a favorite seat on the bench which he believes is luckier than the rest, and he insists on sitting in just that one place.

But the worst blow Devlin ever had was when some young unknown admirer of his in his palmy days, who unfortunately wore her eyes crossed, insisted on sitting behind third base for each game so as to be near him. Arthur noticed her one day and, after that, it was all off. He hit the worst slump of his career. For a while no one could understand it, but at last he confessed to McGraw.

"Mac," he said one night in the clubhouse, "it's that jinx. Have you noticed her? She sits behind the bag every day, and she has got me going. She has sure slid the casters under me. I wish we could bar her out or poison her or shoot her, or chloroform her, or kill her in some nice, mild way because, if it isn't done, this league is going to lose a ball player. How can you expect a guy to play with that overlooking him every afternoon?"

McGraw took Devlin out of the game for a time after that, and the newspapers printed several yards about the cross-eyed jinx who had ruined the Giants' third baseman.

With the infield weakened by the loss of Devlin, the club began to lose with great regularity. But one day the jinxess was missing and she never came back. She must have read in the newspapers what she was doing to Devlin, her hero, and quit the game or moved to another part of the stand. With this weight off his shoulders, Arthur went back into the game and played like mad.

"If she'd stuck much longer," declared McGraw, joyous in his rejuvenated third baseman, "I would have had her eyes operated on and straightened. This club couldn't afford to keep on losing ball games because you are such a Romeo, Arthur, that even the cross-eyed ones fall for you."

SUPERSTITIOUS ABOUT BATS.

Ball players are very superstitious about the bats. Did you ever notice how the clubs are all laid out in a neat, even row before the bench and are scrupulously kept that way by the bat boy? If one of the bats by any chance gets crossed all the players will shout:

"Uncross the bats! Uncross the bats!"

"It's as bad as discovering a three alarm fire in an excelsior factory. Don't believe it? Then listen to what happened to the Giants once because a careless bat boy neglected his duty. The team was playing in Cincinnati in the season of 1906 when one of the bats got crossed through the carelessness of the bat boy. What was the result? 'Mike' Donlin, the star slugger of the team, slid into third base and came up with a broken ankle.

Ever since that time, we have carried our own boy with us because a club with championship aspirations can't afford to take a chance with those foreign artists handling the bats. They are likely to throw you down at any time.

The Athletics have a funny superstition which is private or confined to their team as far as I know. When luck seems to be breaking against them in a game, they will take the bats and throw them wildly into the air and let them lie around in front of their bench topsy-turvy. They call this changing the luck, and any other club would consider that it was the worst kind of a jinx. But it is the same theory that card players have about shuffling the cards up to bring a different run of fortune. Then, if the luck changes, the Athletics throw the bats around some more to keep it. This act nearly cost them one of their best ball players in the third game of the late lamented world's series.

The Philadelphia players had tossed their bats to break their run of luck, for the score was 1 to 0 against them, when Baker came up in the ninth inning. He cracked his now famous home run into the right field bleachers, and the players on the bench hurled the bats wildly into the air. In jumping up and reaching for a bat to throw, Jack Barry, the shortstop, hit his head on the concrete roof of the bench and was stunned for a minute. He said that little black specks were floating in front of his eyes, but he gamely insisted on playing the contest out. "Connie" Mack was so worried over his condition that he sent Ira Thomas out to inquire if he were all right, and this interrupted the game in the last half of the ninth inning. A lot of the spectators thought that Thomas was out there bearing some secret message from "Connie" Mack. None knew that he was ascertaining the health of a player who had almost killed himself while killing a jinx.

The Athletics, for two seasons, have carried with them on all their trips a combination bat boy and mascot who is a hunchback, and he outjinxed our champion jinx killer, Charley Faust, in the world's series. A hunchback is regarded by ball players as the best luck in the world. If a man can just touch that hump on the way to the plate, he is sure to get a hit, and any observant spectator will notice the Athletics' hitters rubbing the hunchback boy before leaving the bench. So attached to this boy have the players become that they voted him half a share of the prize money last year after the world's series. Lots of ball players would tell you that he deserved it because he has won two world's pennants for them.

Another great piece of luck is for a ball player to rub a colored kid's head. I've walked along the street with ball players and seen them stop a young negro and take off his hat and run their hands through his kinky hair. Then I've seen the same ball player go out and get two or three hits that afternoon and play the game of his life. Again, it is the confidence inspired, coupled with the

THE OVERWORKED LOAD OF EMPTY BARRELS.

Another old superstition among ball players is that a load of empty barrels means base hits to a ball player. If an athlete can just pass a flock of them on the way to the park he is sure to step right along stride for stride with the .300 hitters that afternoon.

McGraw once broke up a batting slump of the Giants with a load of empty barrels. That is why I maintain he is the greatest manager of them all. He takes advantage of the little things, even the superstitions of his men, and turns them to his account. He turned this trick in one of the first years that he managed the New York club. The batting of all the players had slumped at the same time. None could hit, and the club was losing game after game as a result, because the easiest pitchers were making the best batters look foolish. One day Bowerman came into the clubhouse with a smile on his face for the first time in a week.

"Saw a big load of empty barrels this afternoon, boys," he announced, "and just watch me pickle the pill out there today."

Right at that point McGraw got an idea, as he frequently does. Bowerman went out that afternoon and made four hits out of a possible five. The next day three or four more of the players came into the park carrying smiles and the announcement that fortunately they had met a load of empty barrels. These all went out and regained their old batting strides, and we won that afternoon for the first time in a week. More saw the load of empty barrels the next day and started to bat. At last all the team had seen the barrels, and men with averages of .119 were threatening to chisel into the .300 set. With remarkable regularity the players were meeting that load of empty barrels on their way to the park, and, with remarkable regularity and a great deal of expedition, the pitchers of opposing clubs were being driven to the shower bath.

"Say," asked "Billy" Gilbert, the old second baseman, of "Bill" Lauder, formerly the protector of the third corner, one day, "is one of that team of horses sorrel and the other white?"

"Sure," answered "Bill."

"Sure," echoed McGraw. "I hired that load of empty barrels by the day to drive around and meet you fellows on the way to the park, and you don't think I can afford to have them change horses every day, do you?"

Everybody had a good laugh and kept on batting. McGraw asked for waivers on the load of empty barrels soon afterwards, but his scheme had stopped a batting slump and put the club's hitters on their feet again. He plays to the little personal qualities and superstitions in the men to get the most out of them. And just seeing those barels gave them the idea that they were bound to get the base hits, and they got them. Once more, the old confidence, hitched up with ability.

GIANT'S JINX KILLER.

What manager would have carried a Kansas farmer around the circuit with him besides McGraw? I refer to Charles Victor Faust of Marion, Kan., the most famous jinx killer of them all. Faust first met the Giants in St. Louis on the next to the last trip the club made West last season, when he wandered into the Planter's Hotel one day, asked for McGraw and announced that a fortune teller of Marion had informed him he would be a great pitcher, and that for $5 he could have a full reading. This pitching anouncement piqued Charles, and he reached down into his jeans, dug out his last five and passed it over. The fortune teller informed Faust that all he had to do to get into the headlines of the newspapers and to be a great pitcher was to join the New York Giants. He joined, and, after he once joined, it would have taken the McNamaras in their best form to separate him from the said Giants.

"Charley" came out to the ball park and amused himself warming up. Incidentally, the Giants didn't lose a game while he was in the neighborhood. The night the club left for Chicago on that trip, he was down at the Union Station ready to go along.

"Did you get your contract and transportation?" asked McGraw as the lanky Kansan appeared.

"No," answered "Charley."

"Pshaw," replied McGraw. "I left it for you with the clerk at the hotel. The train leaves in two minutes," he continued, glancing at his watch. "If you can run the way you say you can, you can get it and be back in time to catch it."

It was the last we saw of "Charley" Faust for a time—galloping up the platform in his angular way with that contract and transportation in sight.

"I'm almost sorry we left him," remarked McGraw as "Charley" disappeared in the crowd. We played on around the circuit with indifferent luck and got back to New York with the pennant no more than a possibility, and rather a remote one at that. The first day we were in New York "Charley" Faust entered the clubhouse with several inches of dust and mud caked on him, for he had come all the way either by side-door special or blind baggage.

"I'm here, all right," he announced quietly, and started to climb into a uniform.

"I see you are," answered McGraw.

"Charley" stuck around for two or three days, and we won. Then McGraw decided he would have to be dropped and ordered the man on the door of the clubhouse to bar this Kansas kid out. Faust broke down and cried that day, and we lost. After that he became a member of the club, and we won game after game until some busy newspaper man obtained a vaudeville engagement for him at the salary of $100 a week. We lost three games the week he was absent from the grounds, and Faust saw at once he wasn't doing the right thing by the club, so, with a wave of his hand that would have gone with J. P. Morgan's income, he passed up some lucrative vaudeville contracts, much to the disgust of the newspaper man, who was cutting the remuneration with him, and settled down to business. The club didn't lose a game after that, and it was decided to take Faust west with us. Daily he had been bothering McGraw and Mr. Brush for his contract, for he wanted to pitch. The club paid him some money from time to time to meet his personal expenses.

The Sunday night the club left for Boston, a vaudeville agent was at the Grand Central Station with a contract offering Faust $100 a week for five weeks, which "Charley" refused in order to stick with the club. It was the greatest trip away from home in the history of baseball. Starting with the pennant almost out of reach, the Giants won eighteen and lost four games. One contest that we dropped in St. Louis was when some of the newspaper correspondents on the trip kidnaped Faust and sat him on the St. Louis bench.

Another day in St. Louis the game had gone eleven innings, and the Cardinals needed one run to win. They had several incipient scores on the bases and "Rube" Marquard, in the box, was apparently going up in the air. Only one was out, Faust was warming up far in the suburbs when, under orders from McGraw, I ran out and sent him to the bench, for that was the place from which his charm seemed to be the most potent. "Charley" came loping to the bench as fast as his long legs would transport him, and St. Louis didn't score and we won the game. It was as nice a piece of pinch mascoting as I ever saw.

The first two games that "Charley" really lost were in Chicago. And all through the trip, he reiterated his weird prophecies that "the Giants with Manager McGraw were gointa win." The players believed in him, and none would have let him go if it had been necessary to support him out of their own pockets. And we did win.

"Charley," with his monologue and great good humor, kept the players in high spirits throughout the journey, and the feeling prevailed that we couldn't lose with him along. He was advertised all over the circuit, and spectators were going to the ball park to see Faust and Wagner. "Charley" admitted that he could fan out Hans because he had learned how to pitch out there in Kansas by correspondence school and had read of "Hans's" weakness in a book. His one "groove" was massages and manicures. He would go into the barber shop with any member of the team who happened to be getting shaved and take a massage and manicure for the purposes of sociability, as a man takes a drink. He easily was the record holder for the manicure Marathon, hanging up the figures of five in one day in St. Louis. He also liked pie for breakfast, dinner and supper, and a small half before retiring.

But, alas! "Charley" lost in the world's series. He couldn't make good. And a jinx killer never comes back. He is gone. And his expansive smile and bump the bumps slide are gone with him. That is, McGraw hopes he is gone. But he was a wonder while he had it. And he did a great deal toward giving the players confidence. With him on the bench, they thought they couldn't lose, and they couldn't. It has long been a superstition among ball players that when a "bug" joins a club, it will win a championship, and the Giants believed it when "Charley" Faust arrived. Did "Charley" Faust win the championship for the Giants?

THINGS THAT MUST NOT BE SAID TO A PITCHER.

Another time-honored superstition among ball players is that no one must say to a pitcher as he goes to the box for the eighth inning:

"Come on, now. Only six more men."

Or for the ninth:

"Pitch hard, now. Only three left."

Ames says that he lost a game in St. Louis once because McGraw forgot himself and urged him to pitch hard because only three remained to be put out. Those three batters raised the mischief with Ames's prospects, he was knocked out of the box in that last inning, and we lost the game. That was before the days of the wonder necktie.

Ames won the third game played in Chicago on the last trip west. Coming into the ninth inning, he had the Cubs beaten when McGraw began:

"Come on, 'Red,' only—"

"Nix, Mac," cut in Ames, "for the love of Mike, be reasonable."

And then he won the game. But the chances are that if McGraw had got that "only three more out," he would have lost, because it would have been working on his strained nerves.

TAFT CLUB ORGANIZED.

Azusa Republicans Hear Stirring Address by Los Angeles Attorney and Plan Active Campaign.

AZUSA, April 6.—Enthusiasm marked the organization of a Taft campaign club here tonight. The meeting was presided over by C. L. Smith, who was afterward made president of the club.

After the preliminary business, Hon. R. W. Richardson, a Los Angeles attorney, addressed the meeting. He began by saying that Taft audiences are all marked by dignity and intelligence, and that the one before him was no exception.

He insisted that this country, since its inception, has been ruled by the people, and that all recent talk on that subject is superfluous. He graciously complimented the women, who in Los Angeles, saved the city from socialism, and felt sure that in other things their influence will be beneficial.

He affirmed that if the principles of the Democrats prevail, citrus fruits, raisins, beet sugar and olive oil will go on the free list, and he deplored the fact that many Republicans seem inclined to follow democratic ideas, and so are working against the material interests of California. He referred to the Wilson bill in 1896, which lessened the tariff and so alarmed business, that it almost paralyzed industry. "Elect a progressive," he said, "and you elect a half-Democrat." "We have prospered under protection," he said, "and why should we, without cause, overturn this system." The principles of the progressives tend toward a Socialistic democracy. He deprecated the undignified position of Roosevelt campaigning to an extent exceeded only by Horace Greeley. He told of a Los Angeles man who, approached by a Roosevelt man, said: "No, I might vote for a Socialist, I might vote for a Populist, I might vote for a Democrat, but I'll be confounded if I'll vote for all of them in one."

The second speaker, Mrs. Ella Westland of Upland, was introduced as a candidate for the delegate to the national convention in Chicago.

"As a newspaper woman," she said, "I never permitted myself to see only one side, but as I study the question, I'm convinced that there is only one Republicanism, and that is the Republicanism upheld by William Howard Taft."

She declared herself to have been at one time a worshipper of Roosevelt, and said that when he began to slip from the high pedestal on which the American people placed him, it hurt. In the first days of Taft's administration there was a feeling that Roosevelt was the real ruler, it was only when Taft began to show his independence that the man showed himself; and as Taft has grown in the hearts of the people, Roosevelt has lost. "Roosevelt," she declared, "has forgotten principle and now thinks only of self."

The club now numbers 125 members, and by means of this meeting will undoubtedly be increased.

TAFT HOLDS CONTROL.

Has Enough Instructed and Uninstructed Delegates to Give Him Iowa State Convention.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES (Iowa.) April 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Results of county conventions in Iowa today practically assure President Taft control of the Republican State Convention at Cedar Rapids April 16.

While only 617 of the 743 votes necessary to control have been instructed for Taft, uninstructed delegates from Taft territory will bring the total up to the desired figures.

The Cummins men have not conceded defeat, but admit the convention will be close.

Iowa and Ida counties today instructed for Taft, while Clinton, Humboldt, Dickinson and Emmet counties instructed for Cummins.

Of the Democratic conventions held today, Wayne and Jefferson instructed for Clark, Boone and Hamilton elected divided delegations, and Adair instructed for Wilson. In Woodbury county, the Clark men were in control and the Wilson forces, claiming fraud in the caucuses, bolted and held a rump convention. Each faction will send a full delegation to both the Congressional and State conventions.

Wealthy Importers to Build Unique Dwelling.

Foothill Bungalow Veritable Chinese Palace.

Teak, Ebony and Colored Tiles in Construction.

What will possibly be the finest, and certainly the most unique bungalow in the United States will be started within a short time on the crest of a beautiful knoll in the Hollywood foothills. Departing from every type and adaptation yet attempted by the builders of this kind of house in Southern California, the owners of the projected foothill dwelling will faithfully copy in their home the lines and material of a Chinese mandarin's palace. Even is the teak wood of the walls will the structure be oriental, and no luxury of finish and furnishing known to the wealthiest of the dwellers of the Celestial kingdom that is no more a kingdom will be left out.

The builders are two wealthy New York merchants, Adolph and Eugene Bernheimer, and are among the largest importers of oriental goods in the world, maintaining offices not only in the American metropolis but in Paris, Berlin, London and Peking. The Bernheimers, whose permanent home is a magnificent estate on Long Island, saw the entire world before they settled upon Southern California as the land of heart's desire. Both are at present in the Orient on business and a portion at least of the rare and priceless furnishings that will be installed in the new house will be brought back from China with them.

The site was purchased by the present owners several weeks ago from H. [illegible] Whitley, and consists of a three and one-half-acre knoll to the north of the Hotel Hollywood and just back of Franklin avenue, a property which has long been known as "Whitley Hill No. 1." The only improvement at present on the hill is a small summer house, which will soon be removed. The elevation is a commanding one and is reached by a winding drive opening onto Bonita Terrace. The transfer of the property to the Bernheimers was handled through the agency of H. J. O. Pohl & Co., which firm will also have charge of the building operations.

ORIENTAL MAGNIFICENCE.

The plans for the bungalow were drawn by Franklin M. Small, a leading architect of New York City and a student of oriental architecture. The house alone, without any fixtures or furnishings, it is stated, will cost about $10,000. With the cost of the land of the elaborate landscaping that will be necessarily figured in, it is estimated that the total outlay will be approximately $100,000.

The bungalow will be 110 feet square, with a court fifty feet square in the center. The exterior will be of teak wood, the ornamentation consisting of carvings, richly colored and gilded. The roof will be of long red Chinese tile, the comb being enriched with heavier moulded tiles. An open veranda will extend around three sides of the place, the back of the house opening directly upon a Chinese garden in which are to be planted the finest trees, shrubs and flowers of the orient, and which will contain the pools and bridges and trellis-covered walks so dear to the wealthy Chinaman at home.

The house within will be of luxurious finish and appointment, the woodwork being in teak, mahogany, ebony and enamel, richly carved and colored. The oriental idea will be carried out in every room, although without any sacrifice of modern comforts and conveniences. In his planning the architect has shown a wonderful ingenuity in this respect.

Wealthy Importers to Build Unique Dwelling.

Foothill Bungalow Veritable Chinese Palace.

Teak, Ebony and Colored Tiles in Construction.

What will possibly be the finest, and probably the most unique bungalow in the United States will be started within a short time on the crest of a beautiful knoll in the Hollywood foothills. Departing from every type and variation yet attempted by the builders of this kind of house in Southern California, the owners of the projected palatial dwelling will faithfully copy after home the lines and material of a Chinese mandarin's palace. Even the teak wood of the walls will be of structure be oriental, and no luxury of finish and furnishing known to the wealthiest of the dwellers of the Celestial kingdom that is no more splendor will be left out.

The builders are two wealthy New York merchants, Adolph and Eugene Schirmer, and are among the largest importers of oriental goods in the world, maintaining offices not only in the American metropolis but in Paris, London and Peking. The Schirmers, whose permanent home is a magnificent estate on Long Island, see the entire world before they settled upon Southern California as the land of heart's desire. Both are present in the Orient on business for a portion at least of the rare and costly furnishings that will be installed in the new house will be brought back from China with them.

The site was purchased by the present owners several weeks ago from H. H. Whitley, and consists of a three-and-one-half-acre knoll to the north of the Hotel Hollywood and just back of Franklin avenue, a property which has long been known as "Whitley Hill No. 1." The only improvement at present on the hill is a small summer bungalow, which will soon be removed. The elevation is a commanding one and is reached by a winding drive from Bonita Terrace. The handling of the property to the Bernheimers was handled through the office of H. J. O. Pohl & Co., which firm will also have charge of the building operations.

ORIENTAL MAGNIFICENCE.

The plans for the bungalow were drawn by Franklin M. Small, a leading architect of New York City and a student of oriental architecture. The house, without any fixtures or furnishings, it is stated, will cost $100,000. With the cost of the land and of the elaborate landscaping which will be necessarily figured in, it is said that the total outlay will be approximately $100,000.

The bungalow will be 110 feet square with a court fifty feet square in the center. The exterior will be of stucco, the ornamentation consisting of carvings, richly colored and gilded. The roof will be of long red Spanish tile, the comb being enriched with border moulded tiles. An open veranda will extend around three sides of the house, and directly upon a Chinese garden in which are to be planted the trees, shrubs and flowers of the Orient, and which will contain the pools and bridges and trellis-covered walks so dear to the wealthy Chinaman's home.

The interior will be of luxurious finish and appointment, the woodwork being in teak, mahogany, ebony and enamel, richly carved and inlaid. The oriental idea will be carried out in every room, although without any sacrifice of modern comforts and conveniences. In his plans the architect has shown a wonderful ingenuity in this respect. The living room, hall and library will in reality constitute one big room and will be a veritable treasure storehouse for rare oriental wares and furniture. The drawing-room will be 22x15 feet in size and will be finished in beautiful inlaid ebony. The dining-room, of the same size, will be in enamel with carved cornices and high paneling. The court will be completely surrounded by a wide balcony and will be paved with tile. The bedroom suites and servants' quarters will be at the sides of the court.

WILL INCORPORATE.

With the incorporation, during the coming week, of the Federation Building Company there will be taken an important step in the plans of the Federated State and Provincial Societies to erect a building for its own uses and general income purposes in the business district. The project is being handled by W. M. Davison, who stated yesterday that the arrangements are proceeding to the entire satisfaction of the organization he represents. "The site will be close to Seventh and Broadway," said Davison yesterday, "and we hope to erect a building of at least ten stories in height."

WEST ADAMS PARK TRACT.

One of the most notable and significant of the many subdivision developments that are engaging the attention of real estate men at this time is that represented in the plans outlined by Robert March & Co., for their new West Adams Park tract, consisting of 555 lots, and which fronts for about 2000 feet on West Adams street, just west of the city limits. This company will expend a large sum of money in improvements and will attempt to make of the tract one of the most desirable yet laid out in the vicinity of Los Angeles. The street are to be graveled and five-foot cement walks will be laid and water piped to every lot. The fine shade trees will be a feature.

FACT AND COMMENT.

Last Sunday's comments and near-sermonizing on the subject of a too reckless optimism in buying and selling and anent the too common mistake of living beyond one's means and missing the golden investment opportunities of the present day, month and year in this rapidly-advancing city, were the cause of the Fact and Comment man's receiving several letters of commendation during the past week. And these words of approval came not only from readers at large, but from real estate operators and brokers, as well; for to the honest and conservative agent sound sense in business dealings and investments is gospel itself. In fact, the writer is under obligation to one of the city's most prominent and favorably-known brokers for the suggestion of the theme of last Sunday's "sermon."

One of the letters received came from an attorney in Salt Lake City and this communication is so full of the spirit of friendliness for Los Angeles and Southern California, and withal so imbued with saving common sense, that a considerable portion of it is herewith reproduced. Says the Utah reader:

"I read your Fact and Comment in last Sunday's Times, and wish to congratulate you and your paper upon the production of that article. It is high time for journals and journalists who understand and who have the best interests of the country at heart to point to dangers that should be feared.

"I am the owner of a small farm near your city, and some day, if nothing prevents, I shall live on it. For several years I have been watching the marvelous growth of Los Angeles and the rapid development of your country. You have a country where the tourist finds Italy, Egypt and Switzerland all in one; where the manufacturer finds the resources of Pennsylvania at his door and where the farmer finds that 'God is with him' in raising every crop.

"When the canal and the harbor are completed the advantages of a Liverpool will be added. I know of no country that possesses so many natural resources and so many charms of earth and air and sky as does Southern California. Nor in counting its advantages is the quality of its population to be overlooked. That your country is destined to become one of the most densely populated portions of America no thinking man will deny.

"It is this very promise of greatness—this very assurance of growth and prosperity—that is likely to breed the evils you denounce. Every man who lives in a mortgaged house ought to have the saws of Poor Richard written on the motto boards that hang in his parlor. It might be well for the mortgage to contain a stipulation to that effect."

To Compare Notes.

The getting together of the architects of the West Coast at the second annual convention of the Architectural League of the Pacific Coast to be held in this city next Thursday and Friday will accomplish much toward the establishment of friendly and beneficial relations among the designers of buildings at this side of the continent. Especially will it aid in fostering in the proper manner the spirit of emulation among the architects of the different cities, something which cannot but result in a higher regard for the esthetic side of architecture all along the Coast.

One of the features of the interesting programme planned will be an address by Architect F. Gould of Seattle, upon the splendid civic center project now being carried out in the northwest metropolis. It is devoutly to be hoped that Mr. Gould in his talk can succeed in instilling into the minds of the people of this city some of the spirit that has inspired Seattle's citizens to set about intelligently and earnestly to prepare for the future. Los Angeles, too, has its visions of a great civic center and of a logically planned park and boulevard system that shall be the pride of the Southwest and the delight of every visitor, but it must be confessed that the movement here has unfortunately lacked the steam that is back of the equally elaborate plans of Seattle.

Such conventions are to be most highly commended as the best means of inspiring the younger architects and the draughtsmen who will one day take up the profession of architecture with high ideals in designing and construction. The big men of the profession, the successful architects, who have planned the great structures of the Coast and who, through study and experience, have come to be the recognized heads of their important calling, will be present to give of their best to the youngsters. All this is going to be reflected in the future appearance of this and other Coast cities. One of these days it is going to be considered a disgrace to erect a building which is merely a structure of four walls and a roof and in the construction of which no attention is paid to refinement or design. The educational benefit of conventions like that to be held this week in Los Angeles cannot be overestimated.

Not a Bad Idea.

At a time when one is continuously having the word "conservative" dinned into his ears it is rather refreshing to hear the principle upheld by someone who is not looking for an office or talking through his hat in general. It strikes the writer that the Governor of Illinois has rendered a real and a noteworthy service to conservative in setting aside October 9 as Fire Prevention Day, the idea being to encourage efforts toward the prevention of conflagrations and the lessening of waste from this cause, as distinguished from fire fighting per se.

The significance of the date is that it is the anniversary of the great Chicago fire of 1871, which literally wiped that thriving young Middle West metropolis temporarily off the map.

On Fire Prevention Day it is suggested that everyone make a thorough examination of his premises with the end to seeing if any danger from fire be lurking in a pile of refuge heaped up in a cellar, in a leaky gas pipe or poorly insulated fixture, in a defective flue or in promiscuously scattered matches. The Illinois executive is quoted as expressing the opinion that fully 25 per cent. of the frightful annual fire waste of $500,000,000 could be eliminated if the people of the country would only exercise these simple precautions once in a while.

BIG HOUSEWARMING.

Los Angeles Realty Board to Celebrate Installation in Fine New Quarters Next Saturday Night.

The Los Angeles Realty Board has issued invitations to its members to attend a housewarming in the new quarters of the board in the Realty Board Building, Nos. 631-635 South Spring street next Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

Recently the board has fitted up magnificent quarters on the top floor of the Realty Board Building and this housewarming will be in the nature of a "get together" meeting of all of the members. A programme that is unique in many respects and in which there are many surprises has been arranged. The committee in charge is composed of Harry R. Callender, chairman; W. W. Mines, Guy M. Rush, W. Ross Campbell and Herbert L. Cornish.

The Los Angeles Realty Board is the largest organization of its kind in America and has recently made wonderful strides. The new board rooms have been fitted up in an elaborate way and the conveniences that have been arranged for the members are said to far excell those of any other similar real estate organization in the United States.

BALDWIN ACRES AT STAKE.

Suit to Quiet Title to Portion of Rancho San Francisquito Is Submitted—Technical Point.

The suit of H. A. Unruh, executor, and Clara Baldwin Stocker and Anita Baldwin McClaughry, heirs of E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin to quiet title to eighty acres in the Rancho San Francisquito, claimed by Fred Lummer, was concluded yesterday afternoon and Judge Raker took it under advisement.

The suit began last Monday. Lummer possessed the land in 1887 and asserted he acquired title in 1896 by right of adverse possession. Unruh testified that Baldwin bought the land and that Lummer acknowledged Baldwin's ownership of it.

The claim was set up by Attorney Dell, representing Lummer, that the taxes were invalidly assessed and alleged that the map was not recorded until 1891 with reference to certain described property.

This raised a technical point which made it necessary to produce the assessment rolls since 1880 and instruments recorded on file in the Recorder's office affecting the title. Attorney Bradner W. Lee of this city and Attorneys Mayer and Burke of San Francisco represented Unruh and the Baldwin heirs. They showed that Lummer always paid rent for the land to Balwin, and that he never claimed ownership until after the latter's death.

STAYS WITH MINES.

S. J. Durnerin, who, for the past five years has been associated with Mines & Farish, has joined the forces of W. W. Mines & Co., now installed on the fourth floor of the Realty Board building. Durnerin has specialized in business property and exchanges, and has been identified with a number of notable deals in recent years.

Why the Parson Lost Trade.

[Youth's Companion:] A clergyman in a small town was deploring the fact that none of the couples that came from the country to be married stopped at his house for the purpose.

"Well, brother," said the man addressed, "what can you expect with that big sign on the tree there, 'Five Dollars' Fine for Hitching Here?"

DEL MAR TRACT IN NEW HANDS.

TWO THOUSAND AN ACRE PAID BY INVESTORS.

Property, Although Subdivided, Will Not Be Put on Market for Some Time—Same Company Takes Long Lease on Valuable Frontage Along Venice Pier.

One of the largest real estate transactions of the week in suburban property was consummated yesterday, when the Venice Investment Company purchased from J. H. Spires of this city, the Del Mar tract of fifty-eight and one-half acres, on the Venice Short Line, at a cash price of $110,000, or nearly $2000 an acre.

The tract adjoins Palm place, belonging to Robert Sherman, and is already subdivided, strets, curbs, water and sewer improvements being in. The entire acreage is covered with walnut trees eight years old and bearing good crops every year. The property will not be placed on the market immediately.

This was only one of the large transactions closed by the company, which, yesterday, also secured a ten-year lease on a large portion of the pier frontage of Windward avenue. The lease was made with the Abbott-Kinney Company and calls for a frontage of 280 feet on the pier, the space between the present dance hall and the auditorium. It extends into the ocean a distance of 175 feet and the moment the lease was signed, pile drivers were ordered in to commence the work of placing piles for the new enterprise, which will be in the nature of new amusement devices.

One of these will be the "witching waves," built upon a moving steel floor. It will contain elaborate scenery and will cost for installation alone, a sum exceeding $15,000. The other amusement feature will be a "Virginia reel," will be a laugh provoking ride in baskets through shifting scenery. This will cost another $15,000.

Between the two amusements will be placed a Tyrolean village, in which a refreshment parlor and cafe will be located. Scenes depicting a beautiful Swiss mountain village will be built to provide proper atmosphere. The entire conception is taken from Coney Island and the new amusement features will be the first of their kind west of Chicago. Their total cost will run to $55,000.

The Venice Investment Company was formed only last week and is made up of a syndicate of wealthy mining and business men, who have interests of various kinds in the district south of Los Angeles and in the vicinity of Santa Monica, and Venice. The officers and directors include W. J. Guthrie, president; W. J. Doran, vice-president; J. W. Lawrence, secretary and treasurer; W. S. Hackney and Edward Campbell, directors.

HE'S A MAN OF PARTS.

Prize-fight Promoter, Banker, Miner, Prospector and Detective Plays Lead in New Role.

Larry Sullivan, associated with Tex Rickard in the promotion of the Gans-Nelson fight, a banker, miner, prospector and detective, occupied a new role yesterday, when he appeared in the Superior Court seeking a divorce.

Sullivan testified that his wife deserted him January 1, last, and he believes her to be in Portland. Judge Hutton granted the decree.

Sullivan was one of the big men of Goldfield in the boom days, establishing the L. M. Sullivan Trust Company, and he figured financially in many of the big deals when Goldfield was spreading on the map. Recently, when the inside history of Goldfield was written by George Graham Rice for a New York magazine, Sullivan figured largely in its pages.

551 OXFORD BLVD.

One of the most attractive homes in the fashionable Wilshire section. Unusually well built, on a 60x150-foot east-front lot near Wilshire boulevard. This magnificent home of 11 rooms is distinctive in type of architecture; not the ordinary design so prevalent here, but a most pleasing one of the Swiss chalet type. You enter a spacious reception hall paneled high in Peruvian mahogany of beautiful grain; on the right is the dining-room also paneled up high in quarter-sawed fumed Pollard oak, a fine large built-in buffet occupies one entire side of the room, so arranged as to display cut glass and china to the best advantage. A fine, woven tapestry frieze occupies the wall space above the plate rail. A large living-room with handsome Grube tile mantel and library with ample bookcases are finished in Jacaro mahogany. The walls are canvased and hand decorated in oil colors. A most cheerful breakfast room, in French gray, unusually large, with fine buffet, opens onto a rear pergola porch, through French windows, as also does the library; a cool closet, kitchen, pass pantry, maid's room and bath and large screened porch completes the ground floor arrangement, while on the second floor there are four large bedrooms, one with solarium; sleeping out porch with ventilated wall bed; large airing balcony; two large tiled baths, with wide roll-rim tubs; pedestal lavatories and showers, connecting directly with three of the bedrooms. Quarter-sawed oak floors throughout; all rooms decorated; the bedrooms with dainty wall coverings of pleasing designs; furnace and automatic heater; large cellar with two entrances; garage for two machines, etc., etc. The finish of this house is of the very highest class and the floor arrangement is ideal. Handsome electric fixtures and hardware in keeping. Nothing for convenience or comfort has been omitted.

FOR SALE—

MAIN STREET.

$50 foot, Main st., west side, north of Jefferson. Remember Main street is the only through north and south street in Los Angeles, and as it is the through street to Los Angeles Harbor it therefore must be the main business artery. Its trend is southward which is in direct line of the city's growth. If investors and speculators could view Main st. in six months hence with its hundred-foot street and its sixteen-foot sidewalk on either side, adorned by brilliant cluster lights clear to Jefferson, they would get busy and buy any property listed on the market at five hundred dollars or under. Business naturally follows the line of the least resistance and that is Main st., south from junction of Main, Spring and Broadway. There are to be three retirement buildings erected soon, viz: skyscraper corner Spring and Ninth; Huntington Building, corner Main and 12th, and an imposing structure to be built corner Main and Washington. Again why has Huntington purchased the strategic corners as far south as Jefferson? A word to the wise is sufficient. My client would not consider one cent less than price quoted; in fact, he is open to buy more at the right price between Pico and Jefferson. Address Exclusive Agent, N, box 336, TIMES OFFICE.

10 acres covered with live oak. A most beautiful place for a country home site. Such properties are scarce and extremely hard to find on a car line. Only 2 miles forced on all of the foothill properties west of Pasadena and within 15 miles of the center of Los Angeles, and we consider this the most desirable of them all for one who is fond of the California natural live oaks. There are at least 20 of these beautiful trees. The property is situated on the main highway and the adjoining properties are being beautifully improved. The entire place lies well and commands a fine view of the loveliest valley in Southern California, and also one of the finest mountain ranges near Los Angeles, and the county highway is within a short distance of this property. If you have the price and the inclination we have the time and the machine. Phone for appointment.

ALFALFA,

Free Water,

PRODUCTS.

Every California product except the citrus fruit.

ALFALFA.

It's the natural home of alfalfa, five to seven cuttings per year, and average of two tons per cutting, and an average of $10 per ton is obtained.

One man sold his entire crop for this year, 1912, estimated at 5000 tons, to be delivered on the railroad at $13.50 per ton.

MY LOSS—YOUR GAIN.
How would you feel if you had secured a fine lease on a first-class apartment building, furnished it with as much care as you would your own home, then you were obliged for reasons, I will tell you personally, to sell at a great loss? Hard luck isn't it when the house and furnishings are only about 4 months old, lease for ten years at a monthly rental of about one dollar less per room than anything you could get today. Located west side, fifth down town. It's your gain, all right, and my loss. I will not only sell for several thousand less than it cost but I will consider one-half cash, and balance easy payments, or possibly some exchange. Address M, box 79, TIMES OFFICE.

TEN YEARS' LEASE—
REAL ESTATE AND FURNITURE.
I am the owner of both real estate and furniture of a high-grade apartment house, located west side, three minutes' walk from Fifth and Broadway, situated on high ground. I will sell the furniture for just what it will bring, and give you a ten-year lease on the building at a rental of less than one dollar per room per month than you could secure today any place in the vicinity. Place now clearing $600 per month. Will sell on easy terms or would consider part exchange. Address M, box 98, TIMES OFFICE.

INVESTMENTS—
One thousand dollars invested in stock in our Date Company will net you 8 per cent. interest while our Date Palms are growing and will pay from 300 to 900 per cent. interest on the investment annually when the trees are ten years old.
There is no chance to lose on the investment because the ranch today is worth every dollar as much as the total stock issued and the money derived from the sale of stock is being used to complete the improvements now under way.
Only a few more thousand shares will be sold. If you have $500 or $5000 to invest, it will certainly pay you to Alfalfa land, capable of producing 10 to 20 tons per acre, per year. (Adjoining farms prove this statement.) Land all perfectly level, smooth surface. A deep mellow soil, composed of volcanic ash, sediment and decayed vegetable matter, (from the decay of tules for centuries), makes this the best alfalfa land in the world. Odorless natural gas, underlying this land, furnishes heat, fuel, light and power. Abundant free gravity water, for irrigation, from a lake, containing 144 square miles. The best water system in California, free. Close to transportation. Two railways. A well settled country, farmers all prosperous. This is your last chance to buy this land at $65.00 per acre, on easy terms. Join our excursion and see it for yourselves.

AFTER THE WALKING RECORD.

South African Arrives at Covina After a Stroll of Twenty-four Thousand Miles.

COVINA, April 6.—To be jogged suddenly out of the life of near views, to that of the prospective of a man who has walked around the world, was the pleasure of a Covina audience last night at the Isis Theater, when Ralph Brown, the South African world-walker appeared before them.

The man deserves more than passing attention. He is an educated Englishman, whose wager of 5000 pounds, made in South Africa, has sent him on a journey that has taken him through nearly every country on the globe, always walking. He was sent out of China because of joining the rebels at the time of the big rebellion. He nearly died in the desert of the Sahara, and lay between life and death with fever in India. He has yet to go through England, Germany and France, and will finally attempt the perilous journey through Siberia. The man is a strange genius. His battered, sun-browned face gives a hint of unexplainable hardships, and the hugeness of the world has softened his eyes to wistfulness.

Some time this summer, after reaching New York, he will go to London. He has completed 24,000 miles in three years and five months.

Best and Cheapest.

SANTA MONICA WILL ASK FOR OWENS RIVER WATER.

SANTA MONICA, April 6.—The Chamber of Commerce's special water committee, after having made a thorough investigation, has submitted a favorable report on the project of securing Owens river water for this beach.

The report is to the effect that Santa Monica will be able to obtain an adequate supply of the best and cheapest water in the world through the aqueduct and the committee has been instructed to at once ask the City Council to make immediate application for the supply.

April 26 was selected as the date for the annual banquet, and on this occasion the subject of discussion will be Owens River water, with Engineer Mulholland as the principal speaker.

The railroad committee has presented a favorable report on the boulevard from Fremont avenue opening of the boulevard from Fremont to Windward and plans being drawn to submit to the railway company, and it is believed that a satisfactory plan can be made to have the boulevard over the Pacific Electric right of way. The chamber instructed the secretary to write to the Pacific Electric asking for the return of the 700 cars to the Short Line service. A committee was appointed to co-operate with the Committee of the City Council of Santa Monica to consider the revision of the Charter.

President P. J. Dudley has announced the appointment of the following directors as chairman of committees: M. Bunker, public utilities and finance; W. J. Stadelman, transportation; Frank Stewart, laws; Charles E. Nile, conventions, excursions and picnics; Paul D. Howse, publicity; F. E. Bundy, hotels, buildings, and exhibits; W. C. Jones, housing and sanitation; A. M. Montgomery, membership and grievance; E. Lillingston, boulevard, parks and roads; R. W. Armstrong, entertainment and reception.

NEWS BRIEFS.

After a conference with the promoters of the proposed aerial railway line, the City Council's special committee has instructed the City Attorney to co-operate with the attorney of the railway company in drafting a franchise covering Fremont avenue, this being the route decided upon for the entrance of the new line into the city. The railroad being a unique one, the State law was not drawn to cover the case and consequently the wording of the franchise makes a study of the statutes of necessity in order to find a section of law to cover the case.

Robert Adams, who died at the Ideal Sanitarium this morning, was descended from John Quincy Adams and revolutionary sires. He was 76 years of age and the son of Robert Adams. For several years he had been passing his winter vacations here, coming from his home in Kansas City, where he was for many years corporation counsel for the Missouri Pacific. Mrs. J. A. Gumaer of this city is a niece of deceased.

Capt. Adams was born in New York and was studying law in the office of Emery A. Storrs at Chicago when war was declared and he enlisted in a regiment commanded by Col. Mulligan, rising to the rank of captain and fighting with distinction at the battle of Lexington, Mo., and in many other notable engagements. Afterwards he served as Judge Advocate-General with Gen. Phil. Sheridan, and later had an intimate association and acquaintance with Gen. Grant, serving under both until the close of the war and being mustered out in West Virginia in 1865.

Having been in the seasoning process since December, one of the planks of the platform upon which four Municipal League candidates for Councilmanic seats, rode into power is about to undergo a supreme test. This will come Monday night, with the application of Dearth & Dwyer for a saloon license. One of the ante-election pledges of the League was that the so-called "whisky monopoly" should be broken. It was argued for years and years that the same men had been growing richer and richer in the liquor business at the beach and that under former administrations only the select few need apply for permission to sell booze to the thirsty. The promise of the League was to break the monopoly, and the inference was that present places would either be closed or new ones would be opened. There being no disposition on the part of the people to make it a dry town, the opportunity is afforded for more irrigation.

The promise of the men who seek to penetrate through the monopolistic lines is, if granted a saloon license, to build a $30,000 brick block on Second street near Utah avenue. Their petition is before the police commission, but that body did an unprecedented thing at the meeting called to consider it. The commission took no action. It made no recommendation to the Council. This will throw the application fairly and squarely before the Council upon its own merits and without prejudice, unless the Police Commission should hold a special meeting Monday and recommend for or against.

FINANCIAL NEWS SUMMARY.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building, Los Angeles.]

Pere Marquette in receiver hands are result of refusal of Michigan Railroad Commission to authorize $4,000,000 bond issue liabilities $49,620,000.

Frank W. Blair, Dudley E. Waters and Newman Erb, appointed receivers.

Twelve industrials advanced .74 per cent. Twenty active railroads advanced .40 per cent.

The current week has witnessed a resumption of the bullish activity and also the rise in the security market. Advancing tendencies halted for a time last week owing to the fact that the generality of traders were disposed to the view that the advance which up to that time had been recorded, has in great part measured the betterment which had taken place in general trade and sentiment. The fact that the steel issues during the previous week were disposed to lag had much to do with creating the impression outlined above, and therefore when within the current week the same displayed buoyancy and advanced in keeping with the upturn in other quarters, aggressiveness on the part of the element operating for the rise became pronounced, which was reflected by a marked increase in the outside trade. Advices from crop sections are commanding quite a little attention, but despite the fact that farm work in certain sections has been retarded by excessive moisture, it is the impression in good quarters that conditions, taken as a whole, are rather satisfactory though perhaps somewhat below the average for recent years at this period and unquestionably if such should be verified by the government report, the disposition in the stock market to promote an upward movement in the strangers would be quite pronounced. In the above connection it may be well to pay close attention to Atchison and also other southwestern issues as the crop prospect generally has a distinct bearing on the course of these lines in the stock market. While moderate distribution has become apparent of late we believe that the trend of the stock market is still upward and that a substantial higher range of prices will be recorded in the absence of unforeseen occurrences of a disturbing nature. We are bullish on steel.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKETS

A decline of 1 cent on creamery extras and firsts was the only change noted in the market for dairy products. The former went to 27½ cents and the latter to 26½ cents per pound. The market was steady under the revised quotations. The general tendency of the market for the past week has been to decline, owing to increased receipts. Ladle stock was held at 27½ cents, with little demand for this grade. Receipts were 42,877 pounds.

The egg market was quotably unchanged and barely steady at prevailing prices. Outside stock was held at 21½ cents for candled eggs, but dealers were anxious to dispose of the local eggs in preference to the outside stock. Arrivals were 614 cases.

The cheese market closed firm at quoted prices. There was a good demand for all varieties. Receipts were 5650 pounds.

The first break in the potato market for some time was shown by the decline of Highland spuds, which went to $2.50 and $2.75 per hundredweight. The decline was not unlooked for and, in fact, was expected sooner, owing to continued heavy arrivals. The market generally was top-heavy. Other varieties were quotably unchanged. Receipts were 2161 sacks.

There was no change shown in the market for miscellaneous vegetables. There was a good cutlet for cauliflowers, celery, lettuce and asparagus at the old range of prices.

Newton pippins and Bellefleur apples were about the only varieties in anything like demand in this market, and prices were firmly held. Considerable stock which was held on the outside in storage was unloaded on the market to be disposed of. The receipts totaled 654 boxes, of all varieties.

Sweet potato arrivals were fifteen sacks. The market featureless with small sales reported.

No bean arrivals were reported in. The market was firm.

LOS ANGELES EXCHANGE.

Mexican Petroleum Common Jumps Up to Almost Its Highest Point. Union Is Active.

The rapid advance of Mexican Petroleum Common was the feature of the trading on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday, the closing bid being 56.12½. Most of the sales were made at $56. This stock will soon be listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Union was the most active of the oil shares, the sales aggregating 190 shares. There was no price change, the closing bid being $98, where it has stood for some time.

Associated was steady around $45 a share, and the other oil traders were Jade, Palmer, Penn Midway, Olinda Land and United Petroleum. There was no activity in the mining department. In the bank list $1095 a share is now being asked for Merchants' National. Security Trust and Savings is steady at $440 bid. The past week's trading was not of a sensational character.

CITY'S BANK CLEARINGS.
FINE CONDITION SHOWN.

The Los Angeles bank clearings continue to show a steady and gratifying increase. The total for the month of March was over $93,000,000, and if the present rate is kept up till the end of the year the grand total will materially exceed $1,000,000,000.

Of all the cities of the United States, Los Angeles now stands twelfth in the weekly total of clearings. For the week ended April 4, Bradstreet's report showed a total for Los Angeles of $22,669,000, a gain of 18.7 per cent. over the corresponding week of 1911. The total for the week ended yesterday, was over $22,000,000.

Los Angeles bankers attribute the size of the clearings to the healthy business conditions prevailing in the city, the enormous amount of high-class building and general prosperity of the community. Bank clearings are recognized as the faithful barometer of a city's business standing.

RESUMPTION OF BUYING.

STOCKS MAKE NET GAINS OF TWO POINTS.

United States Steel Takes on Strength and Courage Yielded by the Adverse Report of the Senate Committee on a Bill Deemed "Ill Advised and Unfair."

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 6.—The buying movement on the stock market, in full swing at Friday's closing, was resumed at the day's opening and trading was large and broad, with many net gains of 1 to 2 points. Though the European exchanges were closed 30,000 shares of United Steel, 5,000 shares of the Coppers and Union Pacific were purchased for London, it was reported. Steel retained its leadership here, opening with large blocks of stock, the first 7000 shares at a ½ per cent. advance, which it subsequently improved. It finally reached its highest point since August. Utah Copper rose over a point at the outset and later increased its gain by over 2 points. The Harriman and Hill issues rose a point or more, as did Rock Island preferred, St. Louis and Southwestern preferred, American Sugar, American Can, American Car and Foundry and various other specialties. Reading and Lehigh Valley were relatively less strong, their movement being somewhat retarded by the unsatisfactory anthracite situation. While steel derived part of its impetus from the adverse majority report of the Finance Committee of the United States Senate which declared the steel bill "ill-advised and unfair," the market generally found favorable influences in the buying of equipment by the railroads, another large increase in bank clearings and building operations and the encouraging tenor of the reports for the week issued by the commercial agencies. Various issues, chiefly those that improved their position in the last hour. Trading for the two-hour session aggregated 500,000 shares of which steel totaled over 100,000. Toward the close market was firm, with the day's operations par value, amounting to 2,000,000. United States 3's advanced ½ per cent., and Panama 2½'s ½ % on the week.

GOLDEN SINGER'S GREAT GREETING

Diva Showered With Flowers by Club Women.

Popular Price Concert to Be Given Today.

Rare Concession Is Made for Angelenos.

For the first time since she was "discovered" eight years ago in a music hall in Mexico City, Madame Tetrazzini, the world-famous diva, will sing at a popular-price concert in Shrine Auditorium this afternoon under the auspices of the Friday Morning Club.

In order to demonstrate to lovers of music and art that popular concerts would be liberally supported and that Los Angeles needs a great auditorium for similar attractions, the Friday Morning Club arranged with Madame Tetrazzini to cancel her Salt Lake City Easter Sunday engagement and sing here.

Six thousand seats, the auditorium's capacity, were sold a week ago, several hours after the box office opened. It is estimated that 20,000 applicants for tickets were turned away, showing that Los Angeles citizens appreciate the best in music.

Mme. Tetrazzini arrived yesterday morning on the Lark from San Francisco. She was greeted by Mrs. McCan, the president of the Friday Morning Club, and a group of prominent club women, each carrying the most beautiful flowers this fair region could grow. The club women showered her with roses, mignonette, orange blossoms and lilies, and the great singer was visibly affected by the unique and cordial welcome.

The original plan of the club women was to open the Friday Morning Chinhouse yesterday and make it the occasion for an informal open-house day to allow the club members to meet their distinguished guest. But the singer, wishing to give her best efforts this afternoon, preferred to rest and went directly to the Alexandria. She was accompanied from the North by her manager and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Leahy, and L. E. Behymer, who went to San Francisco several days ago to escort the great singer to Los Angeles.

"The wonderful demand for tickets for this concert illustrates in a striking manner that Los Angeles needs a great auditorium," said Behymer last night.

"Los Angeles is way behind San Francisco, Cleveland, Atlanta, Detroit and scores of other smaller cities in this regard. San Francisco citizens recently voted $8,500,000 bonds for the purpose of building a magnificent cultural center. Cleveland is spending nearly $10,000,000 in beautifying the city and erecting museums, convention halls and art centers.

Behymer announces that there will be extra car service to the auditorium most of the cars put on for the occasion being intended for the use of the concert patrons only. There will be ample provisions to handle the crowds and 100 ushers to expedite the seating of the large audience.

This is Mme. Tetrazzini's farewell concert in California.

Organized Opposition.

TO FIGHT FOR BEET INDUSTRY.

DELEGATION GOES TO CAPITAL TO SEE EXECUTIVE.

Will Appeal Direct to President and if Underwood Bill Passes They Will Ask Him to Veto It—Committee of Taft Republicans Sends Memorial to Mr. Taft.

To augment the fight to preserve from injury California's great sugar beet industry another delegation of growers, headed by F. B. Case of Santa Ana and John L. Howard of San Francisco, left Los Angeles last night for Washington.

The delegation will appeal to the President directly. If the Underwood bill should pass the Senate (which is doubtful,) the President will be asked to veto it.

In support of the fight in defense of the sugar beet industry the Executive Committee of the Taft Republicans yesterday authorized Chairman Stanton to send a telegram to President Taft, saying:

"A memorial to Hon. William Howard Taft, President of the United States.

"We, the undersigned, your petitioners, respectfully memorialize as follows:

"Whereas, there has been passed by the House of Representatives in Washington and there is now pending in the United States Senate, H. R. 21213, a bill, entitled 'An act to provide revenue, equalize duties and encourage industries of the United States and for other purposes' and

"Whereas, the passage of said H. R. 21213 will work most serious injury to the second most important industry of Southern California, that of beet sugar, therefore be it,

"Resolved, that the Taft Republicans of Southern California, by its Executive Committee, hereby protests against the passage of the said bill and we hereby petition that in the event the said measure is referred to you for official action, that you withhold executive approval from the same."

Miss Amy Sapp,

Sought by the police on the charge of having stolen a thousand dollars' worth of clothing.

CLOTHES DON'T MAKE LADY.

Domestic Believed to Be Walking Streets in Garments Stolen From Woman Osteopath.

Miss Amy Sapp, an attractive young girl of the pronounced brunette type, is believed to be walking the streets of Los Angeles or its environments wearing a valuable Russian lynx fur and muff and cape, a handsome gown, expensive underclothes, pure silk hosiery and the finest of handmade shoes, which she is charged with having stolen from Dr. Brace Wyckoff, wife of Dr. L. E. Wyckoff of No. 411 South Boyiston street. Although detectives have searched the city for the girl from the Occidental College to San Pedro, she has eluded arrest.

Miss Sapp was employed as a domestic by Dr. Wyckoff and enjoyed her confidence as an employer. When Dr. Wyckoff went out several days ago to try a new automobile she had no fear about leaving the girl at home by herself. About 4 o'clock the doctor telephoned home, and was answered by Miss Sapp. An hour later she was gone, and almost $1000 worth of Dr. Wyckoff's clothing. Some one carried them off in grips.

"The girl didn't leave even as much as a pair of stockings," said the doctor in reporting her loss to the detectives. "She took every stitch of clothing I had excepting what I was wearing while out auto riding."

Miss Sapp is described as 17 years of age, 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs about 135 pounds, has a dark complexion, black hair, black eyes, round full face and with a white scar on the back of her neck.

Two Big German Steamship Lines to Inaugurate Through Service When Panama Canal is Opened.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 6.—In steamship offices here yesterday it was an open secret that two of the big German steamship lines are planning as soon as the Panama Canal is open to begin a special service of ships between Europe and California, in which steerage passengers will be carried to the Pacific Coast at the same rates as to New York. The only extra charge will be sufficient to cover the canal dues.

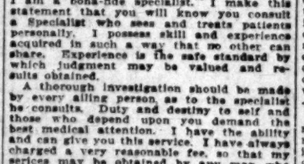
CURED IN FIVE DAYS

Hernia, Piles, Fistula and Varicose Veins



W. J. TILLOTSON, M.D.
[Established 31 Years. Copyrighted.]

I publish my true photograph, correct name and personally conduct my office. I am the longest established, most successful and reliable, as medical credentials and press records prove. Imitation of my copyrighted announcement is an evidence that I am a bona-fide specialist. I make this statement that you will know you consult a Specialist who sees and treats patients personally. I possess skill and experience acquired in such a way that no other can share. Experience is the safe standard by which judgment may be valued and results obtained.

A thorough investigation should be made by every ailing person as to the specialist he consults. Duty and destiny to self and those who depend upon you demand the best medical attention. I have the ability and can give you this service. I have always charged a very reasonable fee, so that my services may be obtained by any man who sincerely desires to be cured. I make no misleading statements or unbusinesslike propositions; neither do I desire to be particularly independent, and I would like to have you for a patient, if you will come to me on a strictly professional basis, and the inducements that I offer, which are my ability and thrity-one years' successful experience. Time-saving treatment and guarantee of cure of certain diseases.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TO COMMENCE TREATMENT. Many patients have no confidence in their doctor, because he demands pay before a cure has been effected, and there are many who have been misinformed about their condition, or through unsuccessful treatment have become skeptical and think there is no cure for them. I want an opportunity to treat such cases. It makes no difference about the financial part, as I accept pay for my services as benefits are derived, when I am satisfied the patient is reliable. Health is capital at interest. I will prove my ability to cure you before asking pay for my services.

WRITTEN GUARANTEE.

Dr. Tillotson's written guarantee means a cure or no pay for services. I guarantee to cure certain diseases or refund every dollar you have paid me for my services. My services cost you nothing unless I cure your Varicose Veins, Hernia, Piles, Fissures, Fistula or any disease I guarantee to cure. My terms are reasonable and no more than you are willing and able to pay.

READ MY BOOK — It contains information every young man, husband and father should have regarding himself. Book Sent Free to those who, in my opinion, will be benefited by it. Call or write before treating for disease or disorders.

Many Cases Cured Permanently in FIVE DAYS. Most Time-Saving, Most Natural, Most Safe. No Detention from Occupation, Family or Home. A Radical and Permanent Cure. I Will Give $500 to Any Charity as a Guarantee That Every Statement in This Announcement is True.

I cure rapidly, painlessly and at small expense. Cured patients are my testimonials; however, I do not make patients' names merchandise by publishing them. I will give conclusive evidence of my merit, which is obtained and maintained by ability. I invite you to come to my office. I will explain my treatment for Hernia, Piles, Fistula, Varicose Veins, Pelvic, Nervous, Blood, Kidney, Bladder and Rectal Diseases. I will give you free a physical examination; if necessary a microscopical and chemical analysis of excretions to determine existing pathological and bacteriological conditions. Every person should take advantage of this opportunity to learn their true condition. Certainty of cure is what you want.

VARICOSE VEINS.

In the cure of Varicose Veins, Rupture and Associate Diseases of the Pelvic Region, I am successful in bringing to bear the curative power of Nature's forces in such a manner as to supplant the old-time, wide-open surgical operation. Once it required several weeks to cure these conditions and the method which some still use is such as to endanger the life of the patient and require a long period of convalescence. Now an absolute cure can be accomplished in a few days and with perfect safety.

TRUSSES SELDOM CURE RUPTURE.

Disregard for existing Hernias has cost many lives. The smallest hernias are the most dangerous to life, because of the increased liability to strangulation. I am aware that a great deal of fraud has been practiced on the public in connection with the alleged cure of rupture, and when I say positively that I cure Rupture, to stay cured, I do not expect any one to accept my statement without investigation of my professional work. My claim to your confidence is based on absolute facts, accomplished results. A personal consultation. I will make a free examination and can explain every detail of your Hernia and demonstrate to you the curative value of the method I have discovered. I invite the careful investigation of any person who sincerely desires to be cured. I cure Rupture, in selected cases, with perfect safety, and entail no suffering, and do not detain you from occupation under Written Guarantee. Many cases cured to stay cured by a few treatments.

PILES, FISTULA, RECTAL DISEASES.

These diseases are very common; most frequently found in persons of middle or advanced age; are exceedingly annoying, often very painful, and sometimes very dangerous, and frequently unfit one for pleasure or occupation. My treatment and successes are the result of years of experience; my treatment is kindly applied. I cure Piles without cutting. Some cases are cured by one or more treatments. If I do not cure your Piles, Fistula and other Rectal Diseases, my treatment does not cost you anything. Gentleness in treatment comes from treating many cases, so I guarantee a cure of Piles, Fistula, Fissures, Ulcers and all curable Rectal Diseases.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES.

With these diseases you may have more complications than are presented by any other diseased organs. By my searching illumination of the bladder I determine accurately the diseases and by my microscopical examination and urinalysis, make sure of the condition of the kidneys, thus laying foundations for scientific treatment.

I OFFER A FREE CONSULTATION AND EXAMINATION.

LOFT BLOCK TO BE FIREPROOF.

Big Wholesale House Will Be Strictly Up to Date.

Initial Height to Be Seven Stories and Basement.

To Be Home of Big Local Neckwear Concern.

Of considerable interest in building circles, is the announcement that work will immediately commence on the erection of an absolutely fireproof seven-story and basement loft and office building at Nos. 752-54 South Los Angeles street. It is eventually intended to have the building nine stories high, and with this in view, the walls and supporting columns will be constructed heavy enough to carry two more floors.

The lot was recently purchased by the Marion R. Gray Company, the largest wholesale manufacturers of neckwear on the Pacific Coast. This concern will occupy the lower part of the building for its factory, sales and sample rooms, which will be equipped in the most up-to-date manner. The rest of the building will be divided into loft, office and display rooms, to be used exclusively for offices of manufacturers' agents and display of their goods.

The building will be equipped with a high-speed passenger elevator, as well as high-powered freight elevators. Steam heat will be circulated through the entire building. The lobby entrance will have white and black marble wainscoting and tile floors. Heavy plate glass above will insure perfect light. Fancy wrought iron cages for elevators and stairways will be finished in antique verdigreen.

The entrance will be covered by an ornamental marquise, especially designed for the building. Another unique feature will be flower boxes extending across the entire front on each floor level. Uniformed attendants will care for the wants of the tenants. The roof will have several extremely light rooms built on it for the use of blue-printers and commercial photographers, as well as a canopy top roof garden, with growing palms and flowers.

The owners of the property believe that the extra expenditure for ornamentation and convenience is not at all out of place in a wholesale and manufacturing building and that it will attract tenants and be more than justified. The building will be the first to be erected here for the sole use of manufacturers' agents. The W. Ross-Campbell Company negotiated the sale of the lot and has handled all the details incidental to the building project.

When need of the type of building planned was pointed out to the Marion R. Gray Company, that concern promptly made arrangements for the erection of the structure projected. Hugo Eckardt was engaged to prepare the plans, which have been completed. Eckardt also has the contract for the construction, at approximately $75,000. The site is 55x95 feet in size.

In the same vicinity on South Los Angeles street, long-term leases have only recently been concluded through the Campbell agency on the large building of the Brownstein-Louis Company and the Cooper, Coate and Casey Company the latter of which structures is in course of construction at Seventh and Los Angeles. From Seventh street south, Los Angeles street has just been widened twenty feet and is now held to be a choice location for wholesale jobbing houses.

Brashear Company has the contract for the street work and the W. G. Newcomb Company the contract for all the cement work. Many houses are projected in the tract.

At Washington and Westview J. E. Adams has started a house to cost about $12,500. J. D. Diehlman will soon begin the erection of a house on Rimpau between Washington and Twenty-first. Twelve bungalows will be begun within thirty days on the slopes below Twenty-first street. G. F. Sloan will begin his home on Westview avenue in thirty days and H. L. Bentley will build on Rimpau. J. H. Willey will start building at Rimpau and Washington about July 1.

SEASIDE TERRACE SALES.

Recent sales in Seaside Terrace, Santa Monica, are reported by Carl F. Schader, owner of that property, as follows: Lot to J. C. Travis of Orange, who will build; lot to W. E. Porter, who plans an apartment-house; lot to Mrs. Adelia P. Porter, who will build a bungalow; two lots to J. W. Winnett; lot to Miss Mary E. Murphy of San Francisco, who plans a hotel, and lot to Mrs. Edna E. Coffmann, who will build a residence. Previous to this time twenty-three lots had been sold, many of which have since been attractively improved. A little over a year ago the tract was bare. Today there are two apartment-houses, a hotel and a number of houses on the property.

FINKLE APARTMENTS LEASED.

A deal has just been consummated through the agency of E. W. Cason & Co., associated hotel brokers, whereby F. C. Finkle, owner of the Hotel Snow, at Sixth and Flower streets, leases to Mrs. M. V. Fairbanks the new apartment hotel building which he is preparing to erect on Figueroa between Ninth and Tenth and which will contain eighty rooms, divided into two and three-room apartments. The building will be finished October 1. The plans have been drawn by R. B. Young & Son. The lease is for ten years and calls for $75,000. Mrs. Fairbanks, who is well known in local hotel circles, has just sold the Hotel Loomis at Sixth and Loomis streets.

Palatial Orange Grove Dwelling Bought by Crown City Attorney. Eastern Magnate Acquires Fine House on Same Avenue, as Does Also Leading Manufacturer.

PASADENA, April 6.—Three important sales were made last week by the William R. Staats Company in which the total consideration involved was $190,000. All three properties are residences and among the most beautiful homes in, or about, the city.

F. G. Cruickshank, a prominent local attorney, who now lives at No. 482 East Colorado street, bought the magnificent home of A. Kingsley Macomber, at No. 1071 South Orange Grove avenue. The grounds have a frontage of 242 feet on the boulevard and a depth of 520 feet on Madeline drive and are beautified by many rare and costly plants and much artistically arranged shrubbery.

The house is a fourteen-room structure, finished in mahogany, Italian walnut and bird's-eye maple on the interior. There is a combined stable and garage, hot houses and other outbuildings. The property is in the same neighborhood as the residences of John B. Miller, John S. Cravens, E. R. Kellam, Dr. Arno Behr and Adolphus Busch.

The consideration was $85,000 and included in the sale is an unimproved lot adjoining on the west. This will be made a part of the residential estate, and will be arranged in keeping with the yard proper.

Sixty-five thousand dollars is understood to have been the consideration in the next largest of the three deals, which was the transfer of a newly finished residence at No. 340 South Orange Grove avenue, from George W. Stimson of No. 391 South Orange Grove avenue to Frederick H. Stevens, president of the American Locomotive Company of Buffalo, N. Y.

The lot has a frontage of 172 feet on the boulevard and a depth of 200 feet on Waverly drive. It is improved with a fourteen-room house of hollow tile and concrete construction. Stevens will make the place his winter residence.

Stimson also sold to Frank Gates Allen, vice-president of the Moline Plow Company of Moline Ill., the newly completed residence at No. 453 South Orange Grove avenue, for a consideration of $40,000. The house has thirteen rooms and four baths and is one of the handsome Orange Grove avenue places. The property fronts on the boulevard, with a width of 115 feet and has a depth of 220 feet.

TO BUILD SHOW PLACE.

Plans for a fine country residence to be built for Hull McClaughry on a twelve-acre tract at Baldwin avenue and Hillside drive, in Sierra Madre, are being drawn by Arthur B. Benton. The house will be in the mission style and will contain fifteen rooms. A large patio in front will be a feature. Two wings will extend obliquely from the main section, giving the house a total spread of 160 feet. The construction will probably be reinforced concrete, the roof being of tile. Both a stable and garage will be built in connection with the place.

OFF WITH A RUSH.

Permit Figures For April to Date Practically Double Those Corresponding Period Last Year.

From April 1 to April 5, inclusively, the Chief Inspector of Buildings issued permits to the number of 318 for new buildings whose aggregate cost will be $520,105. The figures for the corresponding period of last year were 186 permits and $255,184 valuation.

To date for the year the permits issued number 3802 and represent a total valuation of $6,817,720 as compared with 2770 permits and $5,592,702 valuation for the same part of 1911. The figures completely eclipse those of all other years as well.

ENLARGE FACILITIES.

Edward Scherman & Co., have added another department to their land office, to be known as the suburban land department. W. J. Miller, an experienced realty man, is manager of that department. One of the specialties handled by Mr. Miller will be lands and ranches in the Lankershim, Van Nuys and Owensmouth district in the San Fernando Valley, as well as orange lands in the Live Oak ranch.

BUY RAW ACREAGE.

The San Dimas Real Estate Company has just closed a deal for 160 acres of raw alfalfa land in the Wineville-Chino district, the consideration being $24,000. The property was owned by John K. Wright of Pomona, and was sold to a syndicate of San Dimas men, who will at once develop the property.

LOS ANGELES' THREE GOLDEN YEARS.

Faith and Works.

THE GOLDEN PROCESSION OF THE COMING YEARS.

AS WE STAND today looking into the future there lies before us, not dimly, but clearly revealed, the three greatest years the Great Southwest has ever encountered. Do you realize fully what that means? It means three of the greatest years of opportunity for land-owners and producers of all kinds to do things worth while and things that will pay large profits, above anything ever before known to the human race. Yes, that is saying something. We have said it, and moreover, we stick to it.

It requires no great audacity to make the statement in view of the actually accomplished facts. It two years from now ships will be passing through the Panama Canal, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, by a passage of about fifty miles, cutting off from one to two hundred times that distance for vessels going around the Horn. This great achievement of American brain, muscle and money stands at this date as the consummate, crowning glory of human effort. The greatest undertaking man ever put his hand to it will be the greatest in its effects on the history of the world. Nowhere will these effects be felt more promptly or in larger degree than here in California, and nowhere here with anything like the measure sure to come to our own section through our own harbor.

AS TO CROPS.

The opening of the canal will mean a demand for every ton of every agricultural product that Southern California can raise. The present output of grains, fruits, vegetables, nuts, will not begin to supply the demand. Every acre of productive land within a radius of one hundred miles of Los Angeles will be subjected to intensive cultivation. The kings among men will be the agriculturists and horticulturists that take advantage of this situation. Vast as our operations are today, they will be insignificant compared with the possibilities on the land two or three years hence.

We are trying, in discussing this question, to keep our feet planted firmly on terra firma, and to keep clearly before our eyes, that which is not merely probable but certain to happen in the next few years. We do not mean to say that Los Angeles will take business away from any rival city, or that we will surpass at least a dozen of them in the amount of commerce carried on through our harbor. At least, not at once. But what we do mean to say is, that in the growth of business at Los Angeles Harbor will far outstrip that of any other important seaport affected by the opening of the Panama Canal.

WORLD COMMERCE.

The first and most important effect will be the bringing of our city directly in touch with the pulsating commerce of the whole of the globe where men of any degree of civilization are found. It means the opening of markets for every product of our section throughout the whole world. The opening of the canal will break down every barrier to commerce erected by every monopolistic power of the railroads. It will give us waterway freight rates to the world so low that it will enable us to compete with all points in all parts of the world, in so far as the cost of transportation is concerned.

The opening of the markets of the world will at once stimulate the manufacturing industries of various kinds all through the Great West, and especially here at Los Angeles, in that strip of fertile territory lying along the thread of the Los Angeles River, which runs down to the harbor, where ship and car may come together. The deposits of iron ore in this section are among the richest in the world and of the best quality. As to copper ore, the globe has more of it than any similar area on the globe. In many other metals, we have rich deposits easily reached.

The cotton fields of Texas are as near to us as they are to New Orleans, and nearer than to Great Britain or any other cotton manufacturing country in the world. Right here at our own gateway we have in Imperial county a soil and a climate suitable for cotton that is, yes, as good as those of the sea islands off the coast of the Carolinas, yes, as good as those of Egypt.

For power, we have an abundant supply of that in our oil fields. This fuel is the cheapest to produce, to transport over the

CONTRACTORS WANT OPEN SHOP.

BUILDERS' EXCHANGE MAY COPY AFTER DENVER.

Brewery Plant Costing Two Hundred Thousand Dollars Projected for San Diego Site—Plan to Continue Sixth Street Through Balboa Park Announced.

SAN DIEGO, April 6.—Builders and material dealers will meet next Tuesday night to discuss the adoption of the Denver plan of conducting a building organization. The Builders' Exchange, composed of the leading contractors of the city, favor the open-shop. Learning that James B. Jackson, president of the Denver organization, was on the Coast, he was invited to a banquet, where he explained the method of building operations in that city. Jackson stated that in Denver the central organization backs its members in a contract where a bond is required by signing the contract as a co-partner with the builder. In this way the organization guarantees that the contract will be carried out according to specifications and takes the place of a bond.

In turn, the contractor pays one-half of 1 per cent. of the contract price to the exchange. The plan also provides that each member shall give to the treasurer his promissory note for $1000, bearing no interest, to be held by the association until extinguished by the payment of the one-half of 1 per cent. on the amount of business done.

The San Diego Builders' Exchange is officered as follows: President, E. L. Rambo; vice-president, J. W. Wilson; secretary, J. H. Moore.

In March San Diego spent $550,000 for new buildings. The number of permits issued was 325. Since the first of the year a total of 1096 permits has been issued, the value, with this week's amount added, aggregating $1,630,000.

A contract significant of large expenditure let this week was by the Bay City Brewing Company to Stephen Brown for the erection of a brewhouse and other buildings on Hancock street and the Santa Fe Railroad, to cost $69,000. The equipment will bring the cost of the plant up to $200,000. Richard Gresser of Chicago awarded the contracts Thursday.

Property owners have obtained permission from the Park Board to open Sixth street through Balboa Park from Date to Kalmia. The street also will be opened through private property from Upas street to University avenue. The cost will be from $35,000 to $40,000. The amount has been subscribed and the work of grading the street through the park will begin immediately. The purpose is to give another outlet from the business center to the extreme northern part of the city, a distance of three miles. By arrangements with the Park Board the strip to be constructed through the park will be 100 feet wide, parked and curbed. The grade from Ash street to B is to be reduced by cutting down the hill. When completed the new thoroughfare will afford an outlet for automobile and light vehicle traffic that is now confined to Fifth street on which the street cars operate. H. H. Timken and L. C. Masten, large property owners on Sixth street, engineered the deal.

Still Greater Construction Activity Predicted.

Small Stores and Flats Help Building Totals.

With all previous records for building activity in the opening quarter of any year completely eclipsed, the officials of the City Building Department declare that still greater construction activity is in sight. The prediction is based upon the fact of the phenomenal gain in the number of permits being taken out from month to month as well as on the knowledge of big projects definitely assured for the present year.

Never before in the history of Los Angeles were so many permits being taken out for small store buildings and flats in outlying sections. This is accounted for by the tremendous activity in home building, which is averaging at least $750,000 a month. New residence districts are springing up almost from month to month. All around the city's edge, and the stores and flats follow as a matter of course.

Equally pronounced is the animation in the wholesale and jobbing districts, where new buildings are being reared on every hand. The present year also promises to be the greatest of all in its record of apartment-house construction. And, as pointed out last Sunday in this department, at least $16,000,000 worth of metropolitan structures are under way or projected at this time in the downtown district.

Following are some of the projects at present to be found on local draughting boards:

The Richards, Neustadt Construction Company has signed the general contract at $61,250 for the erection of a four-story and basement reinforced concrete loft building on the west side of Broadway, between Seventh and Eighth streets, for Isaacs Bros. Edelman & Barnett are the architects.

Bids are being taken by the local branch of Swift & Co. for the erection of a three-story concrete and brick barn to be built at their present plant on East First street. The plans were prepared in Chicago and dimensions will be 100x30 feet.

The McCarthy Company will erect a two-story brick building, 60x102 feet, at No. 768 South San Pedro street. It will contain four store-rooms and thirty-three sleeping rooms.

W. M. Bell has the contract for the erection of a one-story brick garage, 50x200 feet, at No. 2219 Union avenue, running through to Hoover street, for Alvin L. Eagles. The construction will be red brick with pressed brick facing. The plans were prepared by G. M. Pardee.

H. E. Reed has the contract for a one-story brick store building, 46x63 feet, to be built for Rivers Bros., on the south side of Seventh between Hill and Olive.

C. E. Crary has been granted a permit to erect a one-story brick store building, 40x140 feet, at No. 514 West Eighth street. It will be divided into two store rooms.

The Council has instructed Chief Inspector of Buildings, J. J. Backus, to prepare plans for a combination fire engine house and police station and a public assembly hall to be erected on Cahuenga boulevard near Prospect avenue, Hollywood. The building will be of brick construction. An appropriation of $25,000 will be made.

Hunt & Burns are completing the plans for the proposed Children's Hospital to be erected at Sunset boulevard and Vermont avenue. There will be two buildings, one three stories and basement, both of reinforced concrete. The hospital will have accommodations for about 100 patients and will have modern equipment and conveniences.

The Allen-Knight Construction Company has the contract for the erection of a one-story brick commercial garage at Santa Fe avenue, between Seventh and Jessie streets, for Rivers Bros. Co., Inc.

NEW APARTMENTS.

The Pozzo Construction Company has signed the contract at $38,000 for the erection complete of a three-story and basement brick apartment house at No. 912 South Figueroa street for F. C. Finkle. It will contain seventy-seven rooms, divided into four three-room suites and thirty-four two-room suites, with private baths and wall and disappearing beds. R. B. Young & Son are the architects.

W. J. Bliesner is preparing plans for a two-story brick store and apartment building to be erected at Vermont avenue and Forty-eighth place for George T. Fourl. There will be four store rooms on the ground floor and two three-room and two-four-room suites on the second.

R. H. Walker is preparing plans for a three-story brick addition to a rooming house on Wall street between Fifth and Sixth, owned by Mrs. C. M. Hoffman. It will contain about forty rooms with three baths.

H. E. Kneer has the contract for the concrete and brick work on a two-story-and-basement brick apartment house to be built at No. 206 West Thirty-third street for Mrs. Sadie Hendricks. The building will contain twelve apartments with private baths and wall beds.

R. B. Young & Son have completed plans and are taking bids for the erection of a four-story-and-basement brick apartment house on West Fifth street near Witmer for Mrs. R. A. Yule. It will contain about forty rooms in two and three-room suites with private baths and disappearing beds.

Harry S. Harley has the contract for the erection of a two-story, 12 room frame flat building at No. 2717 West Ninth street for Will S. Pruitt.

M. Andresen has a contract to erect a three-story-and basement, 39-room frame apartment house on West Eleventh street for Mrs. Flora M. Cassiday.

Thornton Fitshugh has prepared plans for converting a frame residence at No. 1732 South Vermont avenue into a four-flat building for Mary E. Dennis. The building will be raised 12½ feet and a story constructed beneath.

S. Tilden Norton is preparing plans for a four-story-and-basement brick apartment house to be built on the west side of Bixel street between Seventh and Eighth, for himself. It will contain about sixty rooms in two and three-room suites.

G. T. Shoden has had plans prepared for a 16-room frame flat building which he will build at No. 1743 Dor-

NEW DEVICE HAIR RAISER.

Pier Thriller Will Simulate Head-end Collision.

Four Hundred a Foot for Santa Monica Frontage.

Finest Home in Palisades Is Projected by Easterner.

SANTA MONICA, April 6.—At an outlay of $50,000, exclusive of the investment represented by the site, a new riding device of unique and thrilling design is to be erected at the Dragon Gorge on Oceanfront near Kinney street. It will occupy a frontage of 100 feet, will consist of an automobile race and will be located with frontage in the present Gorge building and will extend seaward for a distance of 250 feet. The work of construction has been started and present plans are for completion and operation by the formal opening of the season for the summer, June 15. The new ride consists of two tracks running in opposite directions. Ten automobiles will be operated on these, with grade crossings at intervals of thirty feet. The thrill comes with the excitement of what appear to be collisions between the cars; but there are no meetings. The cars are operated by endless chains firmly anchored and collisions are a mechanical impossibility.

The mark for Pier avenue property was reached when R. L. Drake purchased from E. W. Murphy a frontage of seventy-five feet. The stated consideration was $400 per front foot. It is the announced plan of the new owner to build a two or three-story brick building on the site.

Edwin P. Benjamin, late of New Jersey, has purchased from the Edison corporation a frontage of 165 feet on the ocean and 480 feet on Colorado avenue, at the entrance to the municipal pier. The price paid is given as $33,000. Mr. Benjamin, who recently bought the Elks' clubhouse and converted it into his home, says he will at once build a four-story apartment-house at this corner. The building as planned will be in the shape of a Maltese cross and will contain 200 rooms. The expenditure in all is to represent more than $100,000.

PLANS FINE MANSION.

The plans have been accepted and the contract let for a mansion that is to be the finest of all the elegant homes in the Palisades. Dr. E. L. Crispin, late of Philadelphia, is the owner. Including the site, the mansion will represent an expenditure of more than $30,000. Dr. Crispin has a frontage of 300 feet on Alta street, a block east of the ocean. The central lot of 100 feet will accommodate the early English style of home that is to be erected. To the east will be the formal gardan, with pools, fountains and rare tropical and semi-tropical shrubs, flowers and ornamental trees. These are to be brought from the four quarters of the globe and the garden will in a very short time be one of the beauty pots of California. The west 100-foot frontage will be devoted to tennis courts.

The house, which is to be of brick and shingle, will consist of two stories, with basement and attic. It will have all modern equipments, including heating apparatus, three tile bathrooms, pergolas, sun parlors, balconies, etc. There will be an attractive feature to ornament the front of the building, this being a great brick bay which will run through the two stories. Work on this building is to be started without delay.

For a stated consideration of $35,000 E. P. Benjamin, late of Allenhurst, N. J., has purchased the old Edison Electric plant corner, at the foot of Colorado. The property has an ocean frontage of 165 feet on the broad walk and of 480 feet on Colorado. He has announced it as being his purpose to at once improve the site by the erection of a four-story hotel of 200 rooms. This will cost more than $70,000 and will be built in the form of a Maltese cross, with ground entrances for each floor. The hillside location makes this plan of construction possible. The east frontage of the building will be on Linda Vista Park and the purchase of the land involved an easement which permits of entrance by way of the park. In the work of construction particular attention will be given to sun parlors, outdoor sleeping-rooms and suites with ocean frontage.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN.

The month of March broke all previous records for activity among the builders, the total sum of permits issued for the month being $185,475. This brought the total for the first three months of the year to $564,540. The record for the year to this date is as follows: January permits, $95,025; February, $164,040, and the High School buildings, $170,000. Permits granted during the week included the following:

Henderson & Alden, Chinese theater on Fraser Pier, $1000; Henderson & Co., building for lion show on Frazier Pier, $1000; A. W. Fleming, residence on Adelaide drive in the Palisades, $15,000; E. L. Crispin, frame and brick residence on Alta drive in the Palisades, $15,000; Bristol Pier Company, repairing buildings on the Hollister-avenue pier, $1750; R. M. Risk, six-room bungalow at No. 3833 Lake, $1000; H. H. Greider, five-room cottage, No. 1544 Fifth, $1000; A. M. Walter, five-room cottage, No. 1454 Fourteenth, $950, and J. McPherson, bakery and store building on Ashland avenue at Speedway, $3000.

Work is progressing so well on the $700,000 group of High School buildings that April 11 has been fixed as the date for the dedication of the grounds and the laying of the corner stone. The entire day will be devoted to the exercises. On the construction of the Busch Casino the bricklayers are rushing operations and expect to have a part of the building completed by May 4, when the automobile road races will attract thousands to Santa Monica. The ground is being cleared for the beginning of work on the Elks' Clubhouse, the Masonic Temple and the Women's Clubhouse.

BUILDING IS ACTIVE.

CITY HALL STRONGLY URGED.

SOUTH PASADENA, April 6.—Building is active in the Grapefruit tract at the corner of Elm and Garfield avenues, a property recently placed on the market. Work has just commenced on a five-room modern bungalow, fronting Garfield avenue, for Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Keck, formerly of Albany, N. Y. Another house in the same tract which is nearing completion fronts on Elm street and is owned by Mrs. Ellen Stonehouse.

The South Pasadena Lumber Company is building a substantial addition to its planing mill on ground recently purchased for the purpose, adjoining the yards on El Centro street. Additional machinery will be installed, including a sticker and jointer.

W. H. Lowry, city building and plumbing inspector, reports that during the month of March building permits were taken out for houses aggregating in value the sum of $24,800, and plumbing permits for improvements aggregating $6086. Permits for homes above $1000 are as follows: A. D. Brown, North Oxley street, $2500; St. James rectory, No. 1319 Fremont avenue, $4460; H. L. Weber, No. 701 Mound avenue, $3000; A. J. Hoffman, Lyndon street, $2000; Georgiana Hoffman, Lyndon street, $2000; Miss Ruth, No. 1503 El Centro street, $2200, and W. E. Tussing, No. 1619 Avon place, $2500.

L. R. Whitney of Huntington Beach has bought a lot on the corner of Meridian avenue and Hope street, and is contemplating building a bungalow in the near future. The lot was purchased from S. H. Morril.

There is a discussion now in regard to the necessity of providing a municipal building for the purpose of housing the city officers, and steps to secure the construction of one will probably be taken in the near future. It is argued that the city is now of sufficient size and importance to possess such an improvement.

Promising.

FINE TRACT TO BE SUBDIVIDED.

PROPERTY OWNED BY WEALTHY PASADENANS.

Piece Consists of Eighty Acres South of Pacific Electric and West of Southern Pacific—Is in City Limits of Los Angeles, but Adjoins Glendale.

GLENDALE, April 6.—What promises to be one of the most important subdivisions in this valley is the large tract of land, consisting of eighty acres, a part of the Santa Eulalia Richardson estate, which was purchased this week by a syndicate of wealthy men from Pasadena. This tract lies south of the Pacific Electric line and west of the Southern Pacific, the entire portion being within the city limits of Los Angeles, but being industrially, commercially and socially a part of this city. This property lies on the opposite side of the Southern Pacific tracks from the Angelus Tract No. 2, which the Pacific Home Builders purchased recently and are now improving. The improvement of the new tract will consist of oiled and graded streets, curbing and sidewalking. The new owners stated this week that just as soon as the improvement work is completed about fifty new homes will be erected.

At the meeting of the Glendale Board of Trustees this week E. D. Goode, the railroad builder of this valley, was granted a franchise to build an electric line from the corner of Fourth street and Brand boulevard to Griffith Park. The line will run west on Fourth street to Pacific avenue; along Pacific to Vine street, thence along Vine to the western city limits. From this point it will cut across fields to Oak Drive, thence out west on Oak to and across the Los Angeles River, entering Griffith Park just south of the new aviation field. The river will be crossed over a long trestle. This line will connect with the branch road to be erected by the Pacific Electric Company from Ivanhoe, north to the aviation field. Mr. Goode states that work on the road will start as soon as it is legally possible, so that it will be ready for summer patronage.

BIG AREA VOTED IN.

At the recent annexation election, between 8000 and 10,000 acres of land lying to the north of Glendale and far into the Verdugo Canyon was voted into the city. This land includes Casa Verdugo, a part of North Glendale, Verdugo and part of Verdugo Canyon, the annexation line running at least three miles into the canyon, where lies the watershed of Glendale's water supply. It takes in the entire Ross and Thom ranches, consisting of more than 1000 acres, and also the Messanger ranch and the new city of Verdugo, which is being started in the canyon.

Peter L. Ferry has been awarded the contract for the improving of Verdugo road from Glendale's northern city limits to the southern limits, a distance of about two miles. The work will consist of grading and oiling of the streets and the laying of sidewalking and curbs. Only after extremely close bidding did Ferry annex the contract. This contractor is at this time improving Glendale avenue from Tenth street to the San Fernando road, a distance of more than a mile. Grading, oiling, curbing and sidewalking will be done, the work to be rushed to completion.

J. W. Flower has started work on his $6000 business block on Brand boulevard, south of Fourth street. The new three-store business block to be erected by Parker & Sternberg just south of the new Flower block, at the cost of $25,000, will be started this week. J. W. McIntyre is excavating for his new $10,000 business block, on Fourth street, just east of Glendale avenue. The Glendale News Company has just purchased from Anthony Ambrosini, the southwest corner of Fourth and Jackson streets, the price paid being $41,000. This company will start at once the erection of a $10,000 office and store building, on this lot.

The following building permits were granted this week: Lottie Moorhouse, Sixth street, near Everett, residence, $2000; Myrtle W. Beal, Sixth street, near Jackson street, five-room bungalow style, $1500; Chandler & Lawson, four permits for residences to cost about $2500 each and to be erected at Nos. 121, 125, 129, 133 Jackson street, and H. A. Wilson, No. 327 Louise street, flats, to cost about $3500.

George F. Heidet has purchased the residence at No. 1320 West Seventh street, built by Chandler and Lawson, and is furnishing it in elaborate style, preparatory to making it his home. A. O. Bishop has sold his property on East Fourth street, consisting of a house and a lot 75x200 feet in size, to D. F. Hartley, who, with his wife, has moved into the home. The purchase price is reported at $2700.

This week the city of Glendale completed the purchase of that part of L. C. Brand's electric lighting system lying inside the city limits, the purchase price being $5500. Manager Harry B. Lynch of the lighting department, has asked the Board of Trustees to consider the remaining portion of Mr. Brand's plant outside of this city's limits. Lynch has been advised to negotiate with Brand with the purchase of the plant in view.

During the month of March, building permits issued by the Glendale building inspector, totaled $63,750.

WEEK A BUSY ONE.

BUILDING ACTIVITY NOTABLE.

PASADENA, April 6.—Although no permits for large buildings were issued at the office of the City Building Inspector yesterday, the week, taken as a whole, was one of the most active in years in building circles. A large number of permits were granted and they averaged well. Those calling for improvements to cost $1000 or more, were:

Loren Howe, six-room frame bungalow, at No. 445 Hamilton avenue, $1400.

Rose Starrett, one-story, seven-room, frame bungalow, at No. 175 North Bonnie avenue, $2000.

NINETY NEW HOUSES.

Work on more than ninety new houses, ranging from comfortable ranch homes to pretentious country estates, will commence in the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands within the next few weeks, as a result of notices given property owners that they may take advantage of building discounts if they commence construction work in the shortest possible time. Nearly one hundred land holders, according to the Janss Investment Company, selling agents for this property, have signified their intention of building immediately, to save the discount involved. Contractors and architects are busy preparing for the season's rush. A noted eastern landscapist is also at work in this tract with a large crew of men. He has been retained to lay out the grounds for the homes of many wealthy residents in the valley and has started with the improvements at the costly home of H. J. Whitley on Sherman W

The cement work is now about completed in the first Kenilworth plat, and the gas mains are being laid. Six and four-inch water mains have already been installed throughout the subdivision. Several of the lots mentioned above will be at once improved.

RAPID CONSTRUCTION.

The erection of a bungalow in the period of seven days is the astonishing record reported by the Carlin G. Smith Company in its Du Ray Place tract, the new subdivision at the end of the West Adams street car line. This is the first home to be finished in this subdivision. Four other houses are also far along in construction. These comprise part of the first unit of forty homes for which the Buckler-Rennie-Smith Construction Company has the contract. In the first four days of the week, commencing with last Sunday, the Carlin G. Smith Company reports having sold $77,000 worth of lots in Du Ray Place.

PLANS BIG RESERVOIR.

The development of irrigation in the Perris Valley is about to receive a considerable impetus by reason of the construction of a large pumping plant and one million-gallon reservoir at Orange Vista by Emil Firth of Los Angeles. Mr. Firth has already let the contracts for this work as well as for about six miles of pipe line to be installed at once. The pumping plant, which is designed to supply water to the Orange Vista Tract, will be of 125 horse power. The plant is only one of a number which Mr. Firth intends to erect on his holdings of about 4000 acres in that district. The total development will consist of about 1000 inches of water, he states. Besides the Orange Vista project, a shaft and tunnel connecting three wells are now being finished at the Perris Irrigated Farms, which closely adjoin the Orange Vista property. These will be equipped with another large pumping plant of about 800 inches capacity. It is the purpose to have this work completed and ready to supply an abundance of water to both the Orange Vista lands and the Perris Irrigated Farms during the coming irrigation season.

SCENE OF DEVELOPMENT.

Ready response followed the placing of Gramercy circle on the market and within a brief time this part of the exclusive West Adams-street district will be built up with costly homes, it is believed. In the twenty years that these lots were withheld from sale the surrounding properties were developed with some of the most beautiful residences in the city. The following sales in the tract are reported for the week by C. H. MacGinnis, selling agent with the Braly-Janss Company: J. A. Alexander, $3500; M. A. Montague, $3500; H. L. Witherby, $3000; A. J. Brown, $3000, and a $3750 lot to a buyer whose name is withheld.

THE ACHIEVE

"AMAZING Trant."

More than merely amazing!" Young Luther Trant ground his heel impatiently into the hoar upon the campus walk.

"You saw the paper this morning, Dr. Refland? 'A man's body found in Jackson Park;' six suspects seen near the spot have been arrested. The Schallack's abduction or murder three men under arrest for that since last Wednesday. And then the big one 'Thirteen men held as suspected of complicity in the murder of Stevens, the prosecuting attorney.' Did you ever hear of such a carnival of arrest? And put beside that the fact that for ninety-three out of every 100 homicides no one is ever punished!"

The old professor turned his ruddy face, glowing with the frosty, early-morning air, patiently and question-ingly toward his young companion.

"Well, Trant," he asked now, "what is it?"

"Just that, professor! Five thousand years of being civilized," Trant went on, "and we still have the 'third degree!' We still confront a suspect with his crime, hoping he will 'flush' or 'lose color,' 'gasp' or 'stammer.' And if in the face of this crude test we find him prepared or hardened so that he can prevent the blood from coloring his face, or too noticeably quickening his lungs and controls his tongue when he speaks, we are ready to call him innocent. Is it not so, sir?"

"Yes," the old man nodded. "It is so, I fear. What then, Trant?"

"What, Dr. Refland? Why, you and I and every psychologist in every psychological laboratory in this country and abroad have been playing with the answer for years! For years we have been measuring the effect of every thought, impulse and act in the human being. Daily I have been proving, as mere laboratory experiments to astonish a row of staring undergraduates, that which—applied in courts and jails—would conclusively prove a man innocent in five minutes, or condemn him as a criminal on the evidence of his own uncontrollable reactions. And more than that, Dr. Refland! Teach any detective what you have taught to me, and if he has half the persistence in looking for the marks of crime on men that he has in tracing its marks on things, he can clear up half the cases that fill the jail in three days."

"And the other half within the week, I suppose, Trant?"

The older man smiled at the other's enthusiasm.

"It will not take a week."

"It may be so," Dr. Refland answered. "I have seen, Trant, how the work of the German, Swiss and American investigators, and the delicate experiments in the psychological laboratory which makes visible and record the secrets of men's minds, they first your imagination. But he demanded suddenly, "is a delicate girl like Margaret Lawrie to go across the campus at 7 o'clock of a chilly morning without coat or jacket?"

The girl who was speeding toward [illegible] an intersecting walk, had

SANTA MONICA'S CITY BUILDING PERMITS

AGGREGATE SO FAR THIS YEAR OVER $600,000

If the Building Activity Continues Throughout the Year at the Present Rate, 1912 Will Approximate $2,000,000, or In the Proportion of $20 Per Capita.

There is little wonder that people throughout the United States, Canada and even Europe, who are keeping in touch with the gigantic strides that Santa Monica is making, are beginning to regard its progress with a wonder that is akin to awe; to such enormous proportions are its developments reaching.

The First Floor of the $60,000 Busch Casino Is Built.

The new Busch Casino, which is to occupy a 100-foot frontage on Ocean avenue, Santa Monica, running to a 150-foot depth on Colorado avenue, now has its first floor completed. This Casino is to be one of the best of its kind in Europe or America. It is to be built of brick, with the upper portion of applied cement, finished with gables. The front is to have a marble entrance and stairs.

It is to have on its Northern side a fifty-foot by a one hundred and fifty-foot garden, which is to be laid out in a most picturesque manner, with flowers, winding walks and various rustic seats and "woodsy" ornaments. In addition it is to have a roof garden, casino, cafe and bar. The interior of the Casino will be of French mahogany.

Dr. Hunt to Build 100-Room Apartment-House.

Another new apartment-house is to be added to the already almost innumerable amount that has been built in the past few months. It is to be known as the Santa Monica Inn, and is to be built by Dr. Hunt.

The new apartment-house will be located on Third and Arizona streets. It is to be of an exceptionally high-class character, affording many new details of convenience and attractiveness that have so far not been incorporated in the recent apartment-houses.

An entire brick business block is to be erected at once on Third and Utah streets, in the vicinity of the new apartment-house. Both are to cost upward in the many thousands of dollars, and are to be of a most superior character.

Other improvements which, individually, will cost fortunes, are: a new block, to include a high-class apartment-house, which is to be built on Ocean avenue and Third street; also a thirty-five-room addition which is to be built onto the beautiful Windemere Hotel on Ocean avenue.

A new garage has just been opened up on Bender street. This will add largely to the already splendid provisions here for the motorists in this vicinity.

Immense Building On The Palisades. Sales In Past Week Near $300,000.

Certainly if there is a community in existence that is attracting national attention, due to its superb location, superior advantages and developments, it is the Palisades, Santa Monica.

Boasting of some of the very cream of Southern California homes and residents, it is developing and advancing into one of California's most coveted home spots.

The contract has just been let for the $30,000 home of Dr. Criffin on Alta avenue, near Ocean. This is to comprise three lots of 100-foot frontage each, the central one of which is to be occupied by the home, and the remaining two, are to have beautiful gardens and a tennis court.

The house will be of the early English architecture, of brick and shingle combination, and according to its plans, bids fair to be one of the most picturesque in the State.

Aside from the $285,000 represented in the sales that have transpired on the Palisades proper, in the past week an additional $100,000 worth has been sold in the superb new, J. J. Davis subdivision in the one month it has been on the market.

Ground will be broken Monday for the new F. E. Lee home to be built in the new subdivision, and to cost in the neighborhood of $6000. Plans are being drawn also for the $15,000 home of Dr. C. E. Thomas, which is also to be built here. Other homes are to soon follow, that will double and treble these even in value.

Picturesque Brentwood Park Also Building New Homes.

There is probably no homeplace on the coast that better deserves the title of picturesque than does the exclusive and beautiful Brentwood Park; located as it is, the very center of a panoramic scene that one would not likely surpass for its superb beauty, though he traveled from the remotest ends of the arctics to the extreme bounds of the tropics, or from the end to end of the Eastern and Western hemispheres.

Great, towering, purple and gray mountains as a background; deep, cool canyons bordering on either side and before it the great sweep of sapphire sea, with the crest of Catalina raising its stately head high over the horizon in the distance.

Brentwood Park is to have another beautiful home built in the very near future, in harmony with the high-class character of the rest of the homes here. Plans are now under course of construction. Brentwood Park is owned by the Braly-Janss Investment Co., 320 Pacific Electric Building.

Ethelwyn Manor, the charming home spot, owned by Robert Marsh & Co., is now forging ahead in its developments as never before. Several superb bungalows are nearing completion, the beautiful boulevards and walks, curbs and parkings are completed, and now Montana avenue has its roadbed complete to the sea. The cement walks and curbs are to be started at once.

The engineering work on the great Col. J. B. Lankershim and J. W. Mitchell project is now complete. This is of reinforced concrete, with two imposing monumental entrances at Idaho and Nevada avenues.

THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF LUTHER TRANT.

"AMAZING Trant."

More than merely amazing!"

Young Luther Trant ground his head impatiently into the hoar dust on the campus walk.

"You saw the paper this morning, Reiland? 'A man's body found in Jackson Park;' six suspects seen on the spot have been arrested. Mr. Schallack's abduction or murder; three men under arrest for that crime last Wednesday. And then the list of fifteen men held as suspects on complicity in the murder of Boudoir, the prosecuting attorney!' Did you ever hear of such a carnival of arrest? And put beside that the fact that for ninety-three out of every 100 homicides no one is ever detected!"

The old professor turned his ruddy face, glowing with the frosty, early-morning air, patiently and questioningly toward his young companion.

"Luther Trant," he asked now, "is it not that, professor? Five thousand years of being civilized." Trant said, "and we still have the 'third degree.' We still confront a suspect with the crime, hoping he will 'flush' with color, 'gasp' or 'stammer.' And in the face of this crude test the man is prepared or hardened so that he can prevent the blood from coloring his face, or too noticeably change it; if he inflates his lungs evenly and controls his tongue when he speaks, we are ready to call him innocent. Is it not so, sir?"

"Yes," the old man nodded. "It is true. What then, Trant?"

"What, Dr. Reiland? Why, you and every psychologist in every psychological laboratory in this country and abroad have been playing at the answer for years! For years they have been measuring the effect of every thought, impulse and act in the human being. Daily I have been using, as mere laboratory experiments to astonish a row of staring students, that which—applied in actual life—would conclusively prove a man innocent in five minutes, or condemn him as a criminal on the evidence of his own uncontrollable actions. And more than that, Dr. Reiland: Teach any detective what he has taught to me, and if he has the persistence in looking for the marks of crime on men that he has in tracing its marks on things, he will clear up half the cases that are now laid in three days."

"And the other half within the week, I suppose, Trant?"

The older man smiled at the other's dryness.

"It will not take a week."

"It may be so," Dr. Reiland answered. "I have seen, Trant, how the methods of the German, Swiss and French investigators, and the delicate instruments in the psychological laboratory which makes visible to you the secrets of men's minds, have fired your imagination. But," he demanded suddenly, "is a girl like Margaret Lawrie across the campus at 7 o'clock of a chilly morning without a coat or jacket?"

The girl who was speeding toward them on the connecting walk, had plainly caught up as she left her home, the first thing handy—a shawl—which she clutched about her shoulders.

"Prof. Reiland," she demanded, in a quick voice, "do you know where my father is?"

"My dear Margaret," the old man took her hand, which trembled violently, "you must not excite yourself this way."

"You do not know!" the girl cried excitedly. "I see it in your face. Dr. Reiland, father did not come home last night! He sent no word."

Reiland's face went blank. No one knew better than he how great was the break in Dr. Lawrie's habits that this fact implied, for the man was his dearest friend. Dr. Lawrie had been treasurer of the university twenty years, and in that time only three events—his marriage, the birth of his daughter, and his wife's death—had been allowed to interfere with the stern and rigorous routine into which he had welded his lonely life.

"When did you see him last, Miss Lawrie?" Trant asked.

"Dr. Reiland, last night he went to his university office to work," she replied. "Sunday night. It was very unusual. All day he had acted so strangely. He looked so tired, and he has not come back. I am on my way there now to see—if—I can find him."

"We will go with you," Trant said quickly. "Harrison, if he is there so early, can tell us what has called your father away. There is not one chance in a thousand, Miss Lawrie, that anything has happened to him."

"Trant is right, my dear." Reiland had recovered himself, and looked up at University Hall in front of them with its fifty windows on the east glimmering like great eyes in the early morning sun. Only, on three of these eyes the lids were closed—the shutters of the treasurer's office, all saw plainly, were fastened.

"There must be a gas leak," Trant commented, sniffing, as they entered the empty building and sped down the corridor.

At the door of Dr. Lawrie's office the smell of gas grew stronger. Trant stooped to the keyhole and found it plugged with paper. He caught the transom bar, set his foot upon the knob and, drawing himself up, pushed against the transom. It resisted; but he pounded it in, and, as its glass panes fell tinkling, the fumes of illuminating gas burst out and choked him.

"A foot," he called down, as he peered into the darkened room. "Some one on the lounge!"

Dropping down, he hurried to a recitation-room across the corridor and dragged out a heavy table. Together they drove a corner of this against the lock; it broke, and as the door whirled back, Trant rushed in, threw up the three windows, one after the other, and beat open the shutters. As the gray light flooded the room, a shriek from the girl and a choking exclamation from Reiland greeted the figure stretched motionless upon the couch. Trant leaped upon the flat topped desk under the gas fixtures in the center of the room and turned off the four jets from which the gas was pouring.

As the strong breeze eddied through the room, clearing the gas before it, while Reiland knelt by the body of his lifelong friend, it lifted from a metal tray upon the floor scores of fragments of charred paper which scattered over the room.

Reiland arose and touched his old friend's hand, his voice breaking. "He has been dead four hours. Oh, Lawrie!"

He caught to him the trembling, horrified girl, and she burst into sobs against his shoulder. Then, while the two men stood beside the dead body of him in whose charge had been all finances of this great institution, their eyes met, and in those of Trant was a silent question. Reiland answered it, "No, Trant, nothing lies behind this death. Whether it was of purpose or by accident, no secret, no disgrace, drove him to it. That I know."

The young man's eyes glowed into his, questioningly. "We must get President Joslyn," Reiland said. "And, Margaret, you must go home. Do you feel able to go home alone, dearie? Everything that is necessary here shall be done."

She gathered herself together, choked and nodded. Reiland led her to the door, and she hurried away, sobbing.

While Trant was at the telephone Dr. Reiland swept the fragments of glass across the sill, and closed the door and windows.

Already feet were sounding in the corridors; and the rooms about were fast filling before Trant made out the president's thin figure as he hurried across the campus.

Dr. Joslyn's swift glance as Trant opened the door to him considered and comprehended all.

"So it has come to this," he said, sadly. "But—who laid Lawrie there?" he asked sharply.

"He laid himself there," Reiland replied. "It was there we found him."

Dr. Joslyn's eyes passed on about the room, met Trant's direct look and followed it to the smaller desk beside the dead treasurer's. He opened the door to his own office.

"When Mr. Harrison comes," he commanded, speaking of Dr. Lawrie's secretary and assistant, "tell him I wish to see him."

"Harrison is late," he commented, as he returned to the others. "He usually is here by 7:30. We must notify Branower also." He picked up the telephone and called Branower, the president of the board of trustees, asking him merely to come to the treasurer's office at once.

"Now give me the particulars," the president said, turning to Trant.

"They are all before you. The room was filled with gas. These four outlets of the fixture were turned full on. And besides," he touched with his fingers four tips with composition ends to regulate the flow, which lay upon the table, "these tips had been removed, probably with these pincers that lie beside them. Where the nippers came from I do not know."

"They belong here," Joslyn answered. "Lawrie had the tinkering habit." He opened a lower desk drawer, filled with tools and nails and screws.

"The door was locked inside?" inquired the president.

"Yes, it is a spring lock."

"And he had been burning papers." The president pointed quietly to the metal tray.

"Someone had been burning papers," Trant softly interpolated.

"Someone?"

"These ashes were all in the tray, I think," Trant contented himself with answering. "They scattered when I opened the windows."

Joslyn lifted a stiletto letter opener from the desk and tried to separate, so as to read, the carbonized ashes left in the tray. They fell into a thousand pieces; and as he gave up the hopeless attempt to decipher the writing on them, suddenly the young assistant bent before the couch, slipped his hand under the body, and drew out a crumpled paper. It was a recently canceled note for $30,000 drawn on the university regularly and signed by Dr. Lawrie, as treasurer. But as the young psychologist started to study it more closely, President Joslyn's hand closed over it and took it from Trant's grasp. The president himself merely glanced at it; then, with whitening face, folded it carefully and put it in his pocket.

"What is the matter, Joslyn?" Dr. Reiland started up.

"A note," the president answered, shortly. He took a turn or two nervously up and down the room, then turned almost pityingly to the old professor.

"Reiland," he said, "I must tell you that this shocking affair is not the surprise to me that it seems to have been to you. I have known for two weeks, and Branover has known for nearly as long—for I took him into my confidence—that there were irregularities in the treasurer's office. I questioned Lawrie about it when I first stumbled upon the evidence. To my surprise, he refused to reply to my questions. He would neither admit nor deny the truth of my accusations; and he begged me almost tearfully to say nothing about the matter until the meeting of the trustees tomorrow night. I understood from him that at, or before, the trustees' meeting, he would have an explanation to make to me; I did not dream, Reiland, that he would make instead this"—he motioned to the figure on the couch, "this confession! This note," he nervously unfolded the paper again, "is drawn for twenty thousand dollars. I recall the circumstances of it clearly, Reiland; and I remember that it was authorized by the trustees for $2000, not twenty."

"But it had been canceled. See, he paid it! And these," the old professor pointed in protest to the ashes in the tray, "if these, too, were notes—raised, as you clearly accuse—he must have paid them. They were returned."

"Paid? Yes! Paid from the university funds! The examination which I made personally of his boks, unknown to Lawrie, showed that he had methodically entered the notes at the amounts we authorized, and later entered them again at their face amounts as he paid them. The total discrepancy exceeds $100,000!"

"Hush!" Reiland was upon him. "Hush." The halls resounded with the tread of students passing to recitation rooms.

Trant's eyes had registered all the room, and now measured Joslyn and Dr. Reiland. They had ceased to be trusted men and friends of his as he incorporated them in his problem.

"Who filled this out?" Trant had taken the paper from the hand of the president and asked this question suddenly.

"Harrison. It was the custom. The signature is Lawrie's, and the note is regular. Oh, there can be no doubt, Reiland!"

"No, no!" the man objected. "James Lawrie is not a thief!"

"How else can it be? The tips taken from the fixture, the keyhole plugged with paper, the shutters—never closed before for ten years—fastened within, the door locked! Burned notes, the single one left signed in his own hand! And all this on the very day before his books must have been presented to the trustees! You must face it, Reiland—face it as I do! Lawrie is a suicide—$100,000 short in his accounts."

"Luther," the old professor, turned stretching out his hands pleadingly to his young assistant, "do you, too, believe this? It is not so! Oh, my boy, just before this terrible thing, you were telling me of the new training which could be used to clear the innocent and prove the guilty. I thought it braggadocio. But if your words were truth, now prove them. Take this shame from this innocent man."

The young man sprang to his friend. "Dr. Reiland, I shall clear him!" he promised wildly. "I shall prove, I swear, not only that Dr. Lawrie was not a thief, but—he was not even a suicide!"

"What madness is this, Trant," the president demanded impatiently, "when the facts are so plain before us?"

"So plain, Dr. Joslyn? Yes, very plain, indeed—the fact that before the papers were burned, before the gas was turned on or the tips taken from the fixture, before that door was slammed and the spring lock fastened it from the outside—Dr. Lawrie was dead and was laid upon that lounge!"

"What, Trant?" Reiland and the president exclaimed together. But the young man addressed himself only to the president.

"You yourself, sir, before we told you how we found him, saw that Dr. Lawrie had not himself lain down, but had been laid upon the lounge. He is not light—someone almost dropped him there, since the edge of the lounge has cut the plaster on the wall. The single note not burned lay under his body, where it could scarcely have escaped if the notes were burned first; where it would most surely have been overlooked if the body already lay there. Gas would not be pouring out during the burning, so the tips were probably taken off later."

"Luther!" Dr. Reiland had risen. "You are charging murder!"

"Wait!" Dr. Joslyn was standing by the window, and his eyes had caught the swift approach of a lomousine automobile.

"We two," he said, "were Lawrie's nearest friends—he had but one other. Branover is coming now. Go down and prepare him, Trant. His wife is with him. She must not come up."

Trant hurried down without comment. Through the window of the car he could see the profile of a woman, and beyond it the broad, powerful face of a man, with sandy beard parted and brushed after a foreign fashion. Brandover had succeeded his father as president of the board of trustees of the university. At least half a dozen of the surrounding buildings had been erected by the elder Branover, and practically his entire fortune had been bequeathed to the university.

"Well, Trant, what is it?" the trustee asked.

"Mr. Branover," Trant replied, "Dr. Lawrie was found this morning dead in his office."

"Dead? This morning? Why! I was coming to see him—even before I heard from Joslyn. What was the cause?"

"The room was filled with gas."

"Asphyxiation!"

"An accident?" the woman asked, leaning forward. Even as she whitened with the horror of this news, Trant found himself wondering at her

CAT CANYON GUSHER.

SANTA MARIA, April 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Los Alamos petroleum well, latterly known as Palmer Annex A1, came in today as a gusher and is now producing from 2500 to 3500 barrels of 14 gravity oil daily. This well was first brought in during the summer months of 1910 and was immediately rated as a probable first-class producer. Somehow no true guage of the well's real worth seemed obtainable. It was a well of many vicissitudes.

TULARE.

TULARE, April 5.—Edward Smith until a few weeks ago a resident of a small town near Coates, Va., was arrested by Burns detectives on a ranch a few miles south of this city late yesterday afternoon, charged with having forged checks to the value of $3000. Smith had been sought for six months, and his arrest was due directly to the fact that he communicated with his wife. It is alleged that Smith, who was a farm hand in Virginia, secured the $3000 by his bad-check operations, and, giving his wife enough money to go to friends in Kansas, he disappeared. Detectives were at once put in watch of Mrs. Smith, and when Smith reached this district he is said to have wired her to join him. In the meantime he secured a position on the J. W. Guiberson ranch in the alfalfa district.

START THIRD THEATER.

Globe Amusement Company to Have Fine Picture Play House on Sunset Boulevard, Near Echo Park.

The Globe Amusement Company has signed a contract for a long lease on a $35,000 theater to be built for them by Henry C. Jensen on his property on Sunset boulevard, near Echo Park.

This theater will be known as the Globe Theater No. 3 and will be one of a circuit of fifteen proposed suburban houses to be built for the Globe Amusement Company in Los Angeles.

The house will have a capacity of 900. Over 2500 electric lights will illuminate the front and top of a mammoth dome will circle a large searchlight of 1000 candle-power.

All the Globe Amusement Company's theaters are to be built along the same lines. The interior will be richly furnished in the most up-to-date opera chairs, floor coverings and draperies. The ceilings and side walls will be tastefully decorated in subdued colors.

The foyers will be finished in Italian marble, white tile and stucco work. The prevailing color schemes will be in white, greens and red. Already the side walls of the Sunset-boulevard house have reached a height of many feet.

The Globe Amusement Theater No. 1, which was taken over by the present company, and which is situated at Fifth and Los Angeles streets, will be torn down this summer and in its place a ten-story office building will be erected by Chapman Brothers. On the ground floor will be installed a modern vaudeville theater, with a seating capacity of 1400.

The Globe Theater No. 2, being built by John Wagner on Central avenue, will be commenced within the next few days, it is stated by the officers of the company. The Central-avenue house will be a $30,000 proposition and one of the best suburban theaters in the city.

Central California Lands Advancing in Value.

PORTERVILLE, April 6.—Following the unprecedented record of March for transfers of residence, ranch and business property, April has started off with a rush. Southern investors, in particular, are being attracted to Porterville and Tulare county.

Quite the largest single deal of the week to be reported was the purchase by F. E. Fay, the Los Angeles laundry magnate, of property to the value of $110,000, his string of purchases including alfalfa, orange, deciduous and raw lands. The pieces purchased were half a section in the Angiola alfalfa district, south and west of this city; twenty acres of peaches, in full bearing, in the Farmersville district; ten acres of oranges half a mile north of the city limits trees in full bearing; half section in the Pixley district, partly in alfalfa, and eighty acres of alfalfa in the Woodville-Poplar district. Mr. Fay had previously purchased an eighty-acre tract of orange land in the Upper Tule district, part of which is to be parked and on which he is to build a country home, where he will spend his winters.

Following the example of his father, F. E Fay, Eli P. Fay, the day after the above transfers, purchased a thirty-five-acre orange orchard in the Upper Tule district from C. B. Reas. Of this tract of eleven acres, five and one-half acres are in 4-year-old early navels, and five and one-half acres in late 5-year-old Valencias, all in fine cultivation. The remainder is in side-hill land adapted to oranges, which will be developed in due course. Fay has bought this place for an income property.

D. B. Myers, a young mining engineer of Los Angeles, has purchased forty acres of alfalfa, all in crop, in the Zante district, the land lying half a mile from the Zante and Comet Citrus associations' packing-houses. Myers's purchase is for speculation. The price of the property is not given.

W. H. Crowley of Oxnard is another southerner to be added to the list of investors in this district, having closed this week a deal for the purchase of 240 acres of the Newkirk lands in the Woodville-Poplar district. The property is to be all put out to alfalfa and will be later stocked with fine cattle.

BUY RAW ACREAGE.

What is the largest transfer of raw lands recorded during the week and one of the large ones of the year was made late last week when A. O. Olesen, of Los Angeles, A. W. Quinn, banker of Exeter, and C. F. Balaam, also of Exeter, purchased of William Denman, the well-known San Francisco attorney, 900 acres of lemon and orange lands in the Lemon Cove Foothills. Three hundred and fifty acres of this tract is as level as a barn floor and, being perfectly sheltered, is especially well adapted to the culture of lemons.

The entire tract is to be developed and the new owners will put a force of surveyors at work at once to survey an auto road, from the Sunnyside avenue foothill line to their orchard property. The new owners are said to have paid approximately $100,000 for the property.

Frank Klinders, who recently came to this district from Southern California, and who purchased property in the Zante district, has added to his Zante holdings by the purchase of twenty acres of 5-year-old oranges from Frank Gidley, the grove being situated on Sunnyside avenue in the heart of the Zante Comet district. Klindera has bought the property as an income proposition and refuses to give out the price he paid.

SELL ELEVEN SECTIONS.

J. G. Brownson, the traveling land agent for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, stated today that the last of the large tracts of land belonging to the company in the Central California district has been sold for agricultural purposes, eleven sections of property lying in the foothills on the Kern county line having this week passed into the hands of a company of Fountain Springs ranchers. Mr. Brownson refused to give the names of the purchasers, not having their authority to do so. Although about 3000 acres of the property is mineral land suitable only for grazing and prospecting, there is about 1500 acres in one body which is adapted to agriculture. It is stated that the Fountain Springs ranchers expect to start their development of the property at once and a large proportion of it will be eventually put out to oranges and other citrus fruits.

A. L. Adams of Southern California has purchased from W. E. Porter of the Strathmore-Lindsay district ten acres of year-old Valencias, the new owner paying $9000 for the property. As an evidence of the rapid manner in which land values rise in this district when development work is done, it may be said that eighteen months ago this land was in poppies and wild oats and could have been bought for $150 per acre.

Development work is going on at a wonderful rate in this district and a large proportion of the southern buyers are planning on winter homes here, making this their residence during the orange marketing season at any rate. King C. Gillette, the razor magnate, is planning a fine country place in the Strathmore district, which will be the equal of anything in the south. A small army of landscape gardeners, orchard experts, surveyors and irrigation men are at work on his orchard, preparing for the occupancy of the owner this fall.

IS BUILDING FINE HOME.

C. L. Bullard of Los Angeles, who recently bought in the Monache, is building a fine bungalow home on the hill at the east of his property, and an auto road is now being built from Chico boulevard to this new house. H. L. Harrison of Los Angeles, who owns a five-acre residence site adjoining Bullard, is also planning a beautiful country home.

F. E. Fay will have a fine country place facing the river, at the top of the south bank of the Upper Tule, part of his plan being the construction of a road to connect his house with Worth avenue. Lucian J. Clarke, a young Los Angeles attorney, who recently bought Upper Tule property, has taken up his residence on his

F. L. Harrison of Los Angeles, who owns a five-acre residence site adjoining Bullard, is also planning a beautiful country home.

E. E. Fay will have a fine country place facing the river, at the top of the south bank of the Upper Tule, one of his plans being the construction of a road to connect his house with Fourth avenue. Lucian J. Clarke, a young Los Angeles attorney, who recently bought Upper Tule property, has taken up his residence on his country place, and will make his home here during the winter.

In spite of the continued and almost unprecedented demand for Central California foothill property, there has been but little advance in price, the only noticeable stiffening of quotations being on improved orchard property, which now rules at from $200 to $300 per acre over the prices for this season last year.

LIGHT FOR EVERY CORNER.

TO PETITION SUPERVISORS.

EL SEGUNDO, April 6.—Six carloads of material were shipped to the El Segundo Supply Company the first of the week. One car contains brick and the other five, lath, cement, shingles, hardware, plumbing materials, paints, oils and other building materials.

The El Segundo Home Builders have laid the foundations for the Smiley, Griffin and Black cottages in the Standard reserve and will begin on the frame work in a few days.

The El Segundo Chamber of Commerce held its regular weekly meeting last Thursday evening in the McCray building. The Electric Light Committee reported that the estimated cost of electric lights would be a little less than one-eighth of 1 per cent. And that seventy-five lights would be sufficient to put a light on nearly every corner in town. This does not include the acreage. They have also secured signers to the petitions to the Supervisors.

WILL BUILD FINE HOME.

Buyer in Windsor Square to Erect Mansion Costing About Twenty-five Thousand Dollars.

Charles Hall purchased late in the week a lot in Windsor square, through G. F. Cimiotti of the R. A., Rowan & Co., and has designed a costly home that is to be erected at once under his personal supervision. Mr. Hall selected a lot 100x180 feet, facing Windsor boulevard and just off of Fifth street, the price of which was $10,000. He expects to buy a second lot, adjoining and will either improve it with a second house or add it to the grounds of the first home.

The plans of the building cover a beautiful structure to cost about $25,000. The first floor has six rooms, pantry and screen porch. The living-room is exceptionally large and opens into the library. The dining-room is of ample dimensions and from it opens the breakfast-room. A servant's bedroom and bath is provided.

On the upper floor are four large bedrooms, with large closets, a solarium and two bath-rooms. The building will be 48x65 feet in dimensions, with hardwood floors and finished in quarter-sawed oak. A furnace and automatic water heater are provided for, as is a conservatory.

The garage will house two machines. The second floor has bedroom, bath and lavatory for the chauffeur. The site of the Hall home is near the center of the exclusive residence park and commands an excellent outlook.

HUMS WITH ACTIVITY.

New Town of Owensmouth, One Week Old, Scene of Greatest Animation in Realty Sales and Building

The "Los Angeles way" of placing a new townsite on the market and the eagerness with which conservative investors await the opening of a small city in a proven district is evidenced in the tremendous record-breaking business transacted in Owensmouth lots since its inaugural a week ago yesterday.

From noon of the opening day until Thursday of the past week the sales made through the Janss Investment Company, selling agents for the town, reached the big total of $178,000. Of this amount the afternoon purchases of the first day aggregated $104,100, despite the fact that the attention of the throng of visitors was taken from lot-buying to the aeroplane flights, motor car races, the big barbecue and other entertainments.

Yesterday the Janss company gave a big automobile excursion for the benefit of hundreds of persons who were unable to attend the "birthday" of Owensmouth. Scores of machines were taken out through the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands and over the great $500,000 boulevard that extends eighteen miles through the vast tract.

Hundreds of workmen are busy in the townsite, rushing the erection of the first bank, the first stores, residences, a school house and other structures. Street-builders, tracklayers, landscapists and other crews are putting the finishing touches on the new town, which already hums with activity.

The buyers who bought sites on the opening day were: H. A. Schoenborn, E. H. Branch, Ross E. Whitley, J. R. Grant, A. J. Newton, Roeser & Macon, E. M. Spates, William Stanley, Gertrude A. Bowles, James M. Holway, C. A. Shirley, R. W. Blair, Martha Shirley, Agnes M. Corrigan, J. M. Johnson, W. F. Henderson, M. J. Groshong, J. R. Lohmeyer, A. L. Cook, F. Luenberger, W. E. FORCED TO ENLARGE.

The activity in Rancho La Puente lands has been so great within the last few weeks, that the land department of Purcell, Gray and Gale, of which Sterling W. Banks is manager, has been forced to find larger quarters. These were obtained on the fifth floor of the H. W. Hellman building. Associated with Mr. Banks in handling the rancho property will be S. P. Rowland, as special agent and Joseph F. McNulty, a local real estate operator. The following sales are reported for the last part of the week: Dr. J. S. Johnson, five acres, $3000; Mrs. S. E. Roney, five acres, $2625; Andrew Nelson, ten acres, $5000, and George Madison, five acres, $2750.

ADD TO QUARTERS.

The growth of the business of George C. Peckham & Co., has necessitated a considerable increase in their office facilities, and two additional rooms have been taken on the second floor of the Hibernian building. The tract, rental and houseand lot departments will be further organized and increased. Four new salesmen have been added to the selling force. The company now has five tracts on the market: Orange Park, Live Oak Ranch, Altadena Acres, Peach Park and the Riverside Boulevard Tract.

DESCRIBES SOUTHLAND DURE.

An attractive booklet representing Southern California's varied resources, its bounteous present and its alluring future, has just been published by the National Home and Town Builders. The pages are filled with handsome reproductions in duotone, of actual photographic scenes, representing Southern California's business, its pleasures; showing its present, and indicating its future. This interesting souvenir booklet is being distributed free by the company.

BUYS LEMON LAND.

One of the big sales of the week of citrus land was made yesterday by Swank & Letton to C. A. Gilchrist of Chicago, who purchased 280 acres of the Sunny Slope Lemon Lands for $42,000. This land is a part of Alex Taylor's 9000 acres, which lie between Riverside and Corona. The 30-foot boulevard from Magnolia avenue to this land is fast nearing completion and when done will place the Sunny Slope Lemon Lands within one mile of transportation. Gilchrist will prepare and plant a large portion of his purchase to lemons.

CUDAHY RANCH SALES.

Sales for the past week of Cudahy half acres are reported by Beazell & Marshall, agents for the property, as follows: B. F. DeWeese, two lots; H. A. Ford, one lot; J. Andross, one lot; J. P. Paul, one lot; L. P. Hill, three lots; J. E. Wells, two lots; L. C. Gittus, one lot; E. D. Roe, one lot; E. Wagner, two lots; Vincent Aurem, one lot; John F. Rose, one lot; William F. Marks, one lot; John H. Clegg, two lots. The agents report that construction work on the new pumping plant to be erected on the property is to be started at once.

NEW VENICE TRACT.

The Nimmo Realty Company of Hollywood is subdividing sixteen acres in the Rancho La Ballona, facing on Vernon and Elena avenues, just east of Sixth street, in Venice. Cement curbs, sidewalks and ornamental street lights will be installed immediately, and the lots placed on the market. Venice is now enjoying remarkable realty and building activity and the demand for building sites is large in consequence.

REPORTS VENICE LEASES.

Carroll J. Daly & Co., at Venice, reports the following eases: To Patten-Davies Lumber Company, eight lots on Mildred avenue, opposite Pacific Electric freight depot, for a term of years. Rapidly increasing business necessitated the securing of additional ground by the lessee. To Smith & Smith, corner Alberta avenue and Center street, site for a building to be erected at once.

WILGARY TRACT OPENING.

The syndicate recently organized by Charles O. Middleton and which purchased from R. P. Perry and associates the eighty-five-acre tract just west of the Pacific Electric station of Thenard in the city limits of Wilmington, has had maps prepared by its engineer, D. S. Halladay, and has cut this piece of ground up into 500 residence lots and 185 business lots. The tract will be known as Wilgary and will be ready for the market about April 20. The tract is situated in an advancing industrial section around the inner harbor. It is adjacent to the Southern Pacific, Salt Lake and Pacific Electric railways. Twelfth street, which is the northern boundary of the Millside tract, put on two years ago by a syndicate represented by Charles O. Middleton, extends through the center of the Wilgary tract. The business section of Wilgary will be along Twelfth, the entire distance through the tract, and will extend back one block on either side. The Wilgary tract is owned by Mr. Middleton and associates. The F. P. Newport Company will represen the owners.

Real Progress and Genuine Success

WESTERN BUILDING & INVESTMENT COMPANY was incorporated February 14th, 1911. One year after organization, February 14, 1912, according to the audit of the Baskerville Audit Company, our assets were $688,093.63; surplus and undivided profits $69,588.63. Real Estate is carried on our books at 25% less than market value.

108 houses sold on contracts in our own tracts. 45 houses nearing completion, now ready for the market, with plans being drawn for 40 more houses, to be started at once on our beautiful Southland Park Tract. We have also erected a number of buildings for other people, which netted the Company a substantial profit.

Stock to the amount of $475,000 has been sold at an expense of less than 2%. We pay no fancy commissions. We never have had or never will have any promotion stock. There never has been any stock sold by this Companay for less than par value.

Aside from our genuine building activity and our many subdivisions, upon which we are rapidly building and selling homes, this Company owns a large piece of acreage facing on Vermont Avenue and Figueroa Street. According to the appraisement of one of the most conservative bank appraisers of one of the largest banks in Los Angeles, this property is worth, at the lowest estimate, $327,500.

We have a bona fide offer in writing from one of the largest dealers in close-in subdivisions in Los Angeles, of $2500 per acre for this tract of land. If we wish to sell this property at the price offered, it would net to the stockholders of this Company to the present stockholders at the present rate of dividend.

$163,750 Profit, Equal to 5 Years' Dividends,

It is the plan of this organization to convert this high-class suburban property into one of the finest close-in cities of model homes that there is in the entire Southwest.

Stock in this Company is intrinsically more valuable than the price at which it is selling at the present time. However, the Board of Directors have authorized the sale of

30,000 Shares of Stock at $1.35 Per Share

After this 30,000 shares is sold, our stock will be taken off the market until some future date at which time there will be a decided advance in price.

This reesolution dates from April the 2nd, so we strongly advise every person who can purchase from 10 to 1000 shares, to come in at once and reserve their stock.

Remember: Our Officers and Directors receive remuneration for their services, in so far as they can make this stock more valuable and pay larger dividends, in which you and they share alike. These men have joined together with determination to make this Company second to none in the United States from the standpoint of safety and income, and the enviable record and remarkable progress that we have made to date, now places this Company among the foremost of the financial institutions of Southern California.

This 30,000 shares will soon be subscribed, so we urge you, if you wish to take advantage of the present low price, and also

Participate in Our Quarterly Dividend, which will be declared this month, not to delay this important matter. Every new stockholder means more enthusiasm and more business. We sincerely ask your earnest investigation.

"Home Builders"

17% Dividends---4¼% This Month

—You will share in the cash dividend to be declared April 30 if you own stock on that date—On May First Dividend will be increased

SEVENTEEN cents on each share is the generous annual portion of Los Angeles prosperity which "Home Builders" stockholders enjoy. Yet as good as that is, on and after May first the rate will be increased to 18c on each share.

These dividends are paid every three months. On April thirtieth, 4¼c will be declared on each and every share of common stock issued on or before that day. All that you need to do to procure this three months' earning for less than a month's use of your money is to become a stockholder now.

Shareholders who have owned stock for the four years that "Home Builders" has been in operation, have already received in cash $60 on every $100 invested, and each $100 has a market value of $260.

Shares purchased this month, with the price at $2.60, and receiving this immediate dividend, means, that your money will earn 8 1-5 per cent. for the next year and fraction of this month.

[60]

THERE is no question about the continuance of these cash earnings. Last year "Home Builders" (only a four-year-old, remember,) earned and collected more from the interest on its mortgages, trust deeds, contracts, stocks and bonds, etc., than it paid out in cash dividends. It earned besides, a net profit of more than $50,000 from its building and other activities and which, with the premium received on the shares sold, added about $160,000 to its surplus, making that great safeguard total more than $415,000.

This proves the soundness of the institution for one thing, and it also emphasizes the great conservatism of its management.

The reason for this splendid interest earning lies in the fact that "Home Builders" puts all of its money into interest earning channels. It does not own real estate. Good and all as Los Angeles real estate is, "Home Builders" believes, just as you do, that a mortgage on a good piece of real estate is safer than owning it.

"Home Builders" develops most of its mortgages, trust deeds, etc., through its building operations and through which it earns a fine initial profit.

You can readily see to what size "Home Builders" is bound to grow. If it has done what it has the past four years, starting with one contract of $1250, and reaching a total resource of $1,297,226.99 in that time, then you should join interests with it and participate in what it is going to become in the next dozen years, for as sure as sound finances and good business management ever built up a big business, just so sure will "Home Builders" become many times its present size.

Why not your money also grow with it?

[61]

WE have such implicit confidence in the future of "Home Builders" that the "General Agency" is willing to, and does, give you its written guaranty providing the facilities of its office, as well as guaranty funds, for the resale of your shares, protecting you against loss of principal and also assuring that your money will have earned at least 8 per cent. while so invested, and for your further convenience, the guaranty creates loan privileges which will help you in time of need of ready cash without selling your shares.

The whole purpose of "Home Builders" and the "General Agency" is to safe-guard you.

Noteworthy Addition to the Wholesale District.

Large fireproof warehouse planned by W. J. Saunders for F. W. Braun.

LARGEST IN CITY.

Mammoth Fireproof Warehouse Well Under Way on Avery Street, Near Third.

Noteworthy among the many improvements in the wholesale and jobbing district is the large fireproof warehouse that is being constructed by F. W. Braun on Avery street, between Third street and Stephenson avenue. The building, which was planned by Architect W. J. Saunders, is of the most modern type of reinforced concrete construction and six stories in height. It covers a ground area of 100x200 feet. Switching facilities are provided by the Santa Fe Railway.

Three years ago Braun erected a concrete building averaging 135 feet in front and depth and having its north end on Third street. This building is side by side with the new structure and is served by the same tracks. It is the intention of the owner to join the two buildings with fireproof bridges. Mr. Saunders is the architect of the older structure as well as the fireproof building of the California Drug and Chemical Company, adjoining.

The new building is to have a floor space of 20,000 square feet on each floor, and with its basement will contain in all 140,000 square feet. With the older building erected by Mr. Braun, the combined floor space will be 230,000, making this the largest warehouse in the city. The contract for construction is held by F. O. Engstrum & Co.

The building now under way will have one freight elevator, with a platform for heavy duty and a second elevator for lighter work. A portable elevator working over a continuous belt will be a feature.

MUST HAVE OPEN SHOP.

San Francisco Waking Up to the Need of Industrial Freedom for Its Future Prosperity.

[San Francisco Daily Commercial News:] "San Francisco is destined to become a great manufacturing center, the logical outlet of a wonderful trade to be developed in the Orient," so declared Lovett M. Wood, commercial agent of the Bureau of Manufacturers, Department of Commerce and Labor, at a gathering of representative business men on the Exchange Tuesday.

This is absolutely valid, based on our magnificent strategic position on this Coast, our financial supremacy plus ability to do things, but the statement will come true only if we act wisely.

We must have industrial freedom—the open shop, absolutely and unreservedly, if we are to win our just heritage.

This signifies as much to the employee as to the employer—as much to the one whose capital is labor as to him whose capital is cash or securities.

Ten years ago we were a much more important manufacturing center than we are today. Why?

You may answer "Labor-union despotism is responsible." Very true, but not entirely. Back of this is a condition of affairs—a lack of spirit—non-co-operation, or—call it what you may—which created and fostered arbitrary labor bossism and an initiative of holding San Francisco for San Franciscans.

How long shall this continue? Can we really live unto ourselves? Shall it be for all time?

By no means—the handwriting is already on the wall. The only question is "How long" will the business community continue to be bossed by union-labor walking delegates and to assume that trade must come to us anyway.

We had better beware in connection with the Panama-Pacific Exposition. If closed shop is even thought of, or tolerated, the fair will never be international in the real sense of the term—it will never be the big success we aim to make it.

Shall a comparatively small proportion of the community—without capital or property worth mentioning—dictate what shall or shall not be done? Absurd!

Business men of San Francisco and all who believe in fair play—the issue is up to you!

LABOR'S TAX ON LABOR.

To Grant the Demands of the Coal Miners Will Add Sixty-seven Cents to Cost of Every Ton of Coal.

[New York Commercial:] If the demands of the anthracite miners are granted 67 cents will be added to the price of a ton of coal at the mouth of the mine. This will mean a dollar on the retail price when the dealer has a conscience and still more when he is without pity. Labor is the chief item in the cost of coal and nearly every other staple of commerce. Labor in other fields will pay most of the added wages of the miners.

The price of hard coal for domestic use has risen tremendously in the last ten years. This is due chiefly to an increase of about 26 per cent. in miners' wages and to the greater cost of mining thin veins of coal. Any further addition to the present price will make anthracite too expensive for steam purposes and bituminous coal or coke will have to be substituted for it, which will cut down the production of hard coal and the number of men employed in mining it. This will not be equalized by a corresponding increase in the number of soft coal miners, because the tonnage mined by each miner is larger in bituminous than in anthracite mines under existing conditions.

Union labor has no regard for the masses of the toilers and the unions have become close corporations for the exploitation of all outside their ranks. The unions can succeed only by the consent of the masses. The wage problem to be solved is how far the wages paid to union labor can be raised above the level of the pay of those who are outside the ring.

Members of labor unions are not to be blamed for trying to get all they can. That is human nature. But wage earners as a whole are much more interested in and affected by the increased cost of living due to increase in wages in a limited number of trades than is capital. If coal costs a dollar a ton more next winter the wage earners will feel it more than anyone else.

Wage earners are asked to support the cause of tariff reform, because lower duties will decrease the cost of living. Taking off the duty will lower the scale of wages of those making a particular article or put them out of work altogether. The cry of some that duties on wool and cloth should be reduced or taken off to teach the mill owners a lesson seems ridiculous, coming as it does from those who have been advocating higher pay for the mill operatives. If the tariff is reduced as much as these people demand, something else will drop. Either the wage scale will be lowered in proportion or the mills will close down.

In every case the consumer pays the wages. Cotton prints went up with wages in Fall River. Hard coal has been going up with every advance in wages. It is time for the masses to ask whether union labor is not trying to get more than its fair share. Capital has to take what money is worth in every case. There is no protective duty on money, and all the money in the world competes in every money market in the world. With the sole exception of patented articles, capital flows at once into any field of industry that shows large profits. This automatically limits within reasonable bounds the returns capital receives. The tax that one class of labor imposes on another is a more serious problem for the toilers.

CREATED SUPERSTITION.

Peculiar Experience of a Visitor to the Cairo Museum After Speaking Slightingly of an Egyptian Mummy.

[London Standard:] A correspondent of the Egyptian Gazette relates a strange adventure that happened to him. He visited the Cairo Museum, accompanied by a friend, and in the course of his inspection came across the mummy of Aamose I in the wall case not far from the jewel room.

He turned to his companion and made some remark about the extreme ugliness of the mummy's face. No sooner had he made that remark than he was overcome with a feeling of suffocation as if a cord was being tightened around his neck. The feeling lasted for about a minute and then gradually began to pass away.

The correspondent adds that he and his fellow traveler were considerably shaken by the accident, which was all the more extraordinary in that he had never had a day's illness in his life.

Doubtless scientists and medical men will have their theory for this incident, but all the same it has an uncanny flavor. There is, indeed, a popular superstition, whether fathered by the dragomans in order to mystify and overawe tourists one cannot say, that the mummies still retain the powers of wizardry, which, in the fullness of their life, they were credited with.

Want a Farm?

IF YOU DO, this advertisement will interest you for it tells where the best judges of farm land are buying. The California farmer is the best judge of California land. In selecting a farm he brings into play an expert knowledge gained often by long and costly experience. He satisfies himself, first, that the soil is rich and easily worked. Then there must be an abundant supply of water for irrigation. Markets must be accessible, transportation good. It is not often that he finds all these conditions to his liking. He is an expert and he is skeptical. Few tracts pass the test of his expert knowledge. Wherever you find the California farmer buying land, there you will find the conditions best for successful farming. Nine-tenths of the buyers in our are practical California farmers. Could there be a stronger endorsement of the land we sell?

FAIRMEAD COLONY comprises 14,000 acres in the great San Joaquin Valley. It is 30 miles north of Fresno. The soil, a rich sandy loam, is unexcelled for alfalfa, fruit, grapes and vegetables. There is an abundant and never-failing supply of water for irrigation. Drainage is excellent. The Southern Pacific railroad crosses the tract and the Santa Fe is but two miles distant. There is already a station on the land. San Francisco markets are only five hours away. A town, Fairmead, will be the shipping and supply point of the Fairmead colonies and 75,000 acres of rich adjoining land. Our hotel there is already open. Any 20 acres of this vast area, when irrigated, will support a family.

FAIRMEAD is the sixth tract to be colonized by the CO-OPERATIVE LAND & TRUST COMPANY in the San Joaquin Valley. We have settled more than 14,000 acres in small tracts during the past 3 years, nearly all to California farmers. Our last colony, 5500 acres, sold out in 9 months. Fairmead will go even faster. Settlers are already on the ground putting up buildings and preparing the land for crops. Development work is in full swing. Values will increase by leaps and bounds. The best locations and opportunities are open to those who buy today.

ANARCHY COMES FROM UNIONISM.

DANGEROUS INFLUENCE OF THE I.W.W. LEADERS.

The Recent Strike at Lawrence, Mass., Led by Anarchist Haywood and Others of His Kind, Proved the Importance of Suppressing Such Leadership at Once.

LAWRENCE (Mass.) March 23.—[Special to the Brooklyn Eagle:] How an American city of nearly 100,000 souls may fall prey over night to a traveling band of professional terrorists; how these terrorists with the aid of some 9,000 aliens held for eight weeks the remainder of its populace in their terrifying grasp; how the will of a peace-preserving majority may be set at naught by a mob wallowing in ignorance, are the amazing features of an amusing situation in which this New England community found itself from the beginning to the very end of the mill strike, now, happily for Lawrence, at an end.

The invasion of this gang of outside-born agitators, their schemes, set in motion under the guerdon of socialism; their success in accomplishing temporarily the cementation of a heterogeneous mass of humans numbering nearly 10,000; the campaign of terror and intimidation launched by these thousands, whose menace won to their side the half-hearted support of several thousands of the fear-stricken, furnishes the plot of a grisly industrial romance which, in the light of events, may with all of its blood-freezing possibilities, be reenacted in any other American city.

The Lawrence strike was the socialism of violence—not the socialism of the ballot, and it was only after the ratification mob in the Common had dispersed that the law-abiding element in the community realized that it had been sitting on a volcano for two months.

The strike began on January 12. At first it was in the guise of a strike of other days—a strike that bespoke another breach between the mill owners and the wage earner; a contest precipitated by the almost unanimous action of the 30,000 persons of both sexes employed in the Lawrence mills. Not so. Until shocked into a realization of the truth, an overwhelming majority of the strikers did not discover that it was a strike which was not led by leaders of their craft.

But they did discover, and too late, that they were in the grasp, willy nilly, of some twenty-five men visiting from other parts, said men being attended by a retinue comprising a score of stalwarts known as "gunmen."

At that moment they likewise discovered that a reign of terror was on. They learned, too, that their majority was really a minority in point of potentiality for, crushingly quick came the knowledge that they, 21,000 strong, were the playthings of an army of 9000 in which orders were shouted in fifteen languages among which little or no English was heard, and that the shouters represented the aliens, the non-citizens, the unskilled wage-earners, who had been drawn into the meshes of the industrial mob of a political society, the dream of which is confiscation.

In a fortnight it was too late. The mob had hit its stride, and, spurred by the increasingly violent platform utterances of their "carpet bag" leaders, it was in full possession of the city. And the strike was nearly three weeks old before a greatly enlarged force of militia and police succeeded in bringing the force of law and order into such prominence that the authorities were able to cope with the lawlessness that had raised its head lustily, defiantly.

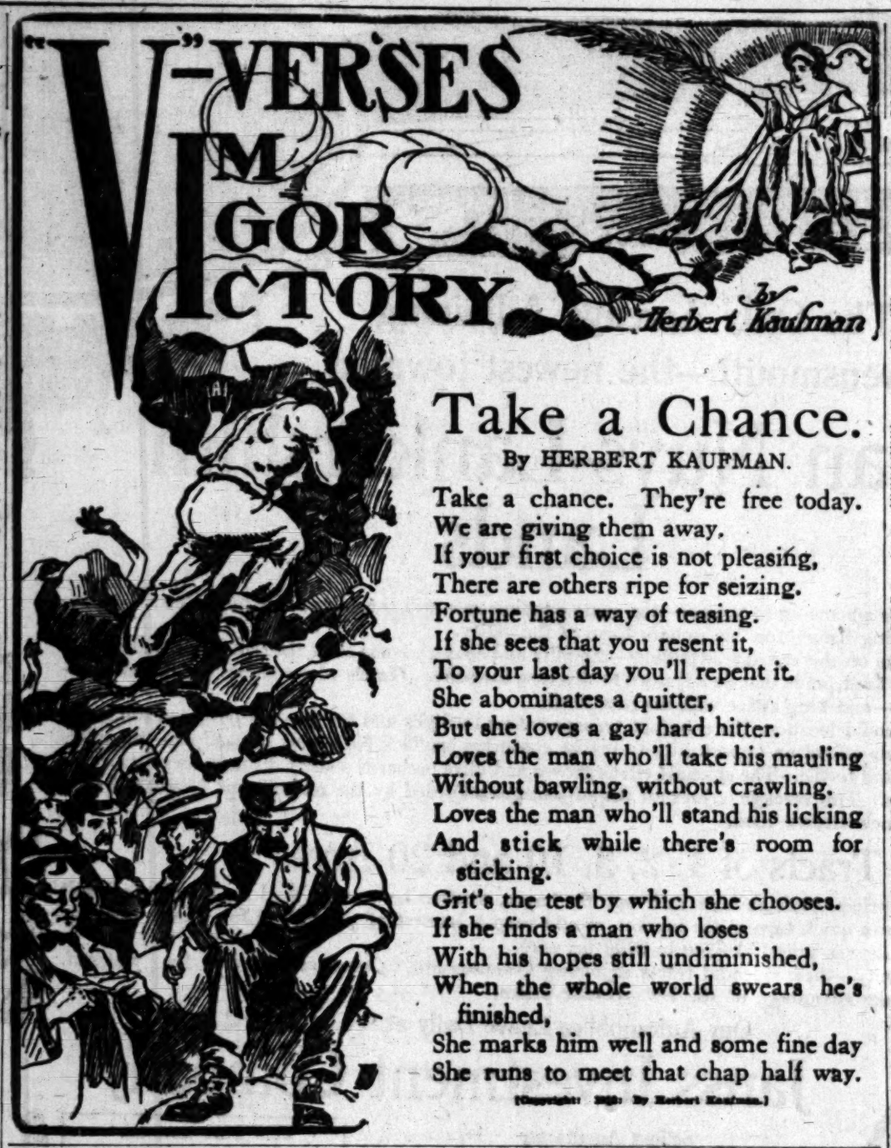
The leaders were not millworkers, they knew little of actual working conditions in the mills, and they didn't care to know more. They were here to make profitable the extension of political propaganda that preaches that force justifies itself in labor wars and frankly proclaims that it aims to abolish the wage system and establish a regime wherein the employes will take possession of the machinery of production and receive all the profits to be drawn from the manufacture or sale of any article.

When these principles were defined to the order of hundreds of the English-speaking strike followers cooled, but too late. The spine-chilling, house-to-house "night picketing" was in full operation. Fear of terrible consequences forbade them to repudiate the doctrine of the Industrial Workers of the World and return to work, or at least preserve a passive attitude, and with sinking hearts they listened to the expounding of principles which made it plain to them that no agreements entered into by their leaders with an employer could be honored for any length of time, for they knew they were the unwilling champions of a political faith which tolerated the employer only until the arm of violence could be swung to expropriate him.

Fully nineteen-twentieths of the deluded rank and file of this strange society was made up of Poles, Russian Lithuanians, Syrians, Franco-Belgians and Portuguese, most of whom had been on American soil less than three years. They knew little of the English tongue and a large percentage of them could not read or write in their own language. Also, these 9000 were the unskilled, and they received the lowest wage. The mill owners declared that these unskilled workers were receiving all they were worth, the tasks at which they were engaged requiring so little skill that boys could easily do the work that many of these men were doing and had begged for the chance to do it at wages less than the youths were receiving.

For actual strike purposes it was as the unskilled that the I.W.W. leaders first tried their cunning. The scheme was a success. In less than a week after the labor chieftains had entered Lawrence they had added this army of unskilled workmen to the number of 9000 to the I.W.W. membership. The organization of the mob took the form of branches representative of the motley of nationalities.

Before the strike there was no friction between Lawrence's English-speaking population and the foreign-born. But when one destructive riot showed how easily the aliens responded as the means of the industrial evangelism the anarchistic preachments of Haywood, Giovannitti and other "visiting" agitators, some of them anarchists prepared to translate their revolutionary doctrines into deeds, their purpose to free. And, while clinging to the belief that the strikers demanded a higher wage, they balked at subscribing to a belief that the 50,000 native-born and English-speaking Lawrence would countenance a revolution.



Take a Chance.

Take a chance. They're free today.
We are giving them away.
If your first choice is not pleasing,
There are others ripe for seizing.
Fortune has a way of teasing.
If she sees that you resent it,
To your last day you'll repent it.
She abominates a quitter,
But she loves a gay hard hitter.
Loves the man who'll take his mauling
Without bawling, without crawling.
Loves the man who'll stand his licking
And stick while there's room for sticking.
Grit's the test by which she chooses.
If she finds a man who loses
With his hopes still undiminished,
When the whole world swears he's finished,
She marks him well and some fine day
She runs to meet that chap half way.

When the militia and police were brought to a realization of the gravity of the situation their turnabout was complete. From that time forward they tackled the problem in a manner which left no room for criticism of their patience and efficiency. Today it is the boast of the uniformed men that only one fatality is marked against them in the progress of a conflict extending over eight weeks and involving 30,000 persons.

Today also the chance-met citizen here will tell you that the absence of a long list of assassinations and assaults may truly be attributed to the zeal of the soldiers and police. For, be it known, the 9000 alien malcontents, following a programme laid down by their leaders, gave heed to a belief that the only way to win was to prevent the 15,000 English-speaking operatives from remaining at work. This "programme" was the "night picketing."

Under cover of darkness houses in which lived operatives who refused to join the I.W.W. mob wing were daubed with red paint, "black hand" devices smeared over them and "scab" lettered on the face of the dwelling. Also in the night innumerable assaults were committed. Many of the arrests following these attacks went to swell the total of 500 odd arrests made during the progress of the strike. Threatening letters placed in the hands of children to take home were sent. Men of the "strong arm" persuasion were told off to visit the homes of working operatives in the absence of the latter, and while women or children only were to be found at the fireside. Then it was that the wife and mother was told that if she did not induce her husband, the bread winner, to remain away from the mill he would be found dead presently, with his throat cut. Red pepper thrown into the eyes of non-strikers was another argument used in the campaign of revolutionary education.

Another "number" on the I.W.W. programme, which further alienated the sympathy and support of the law-abiding confraternity, was supplied by the operation of the plan to "send away the children."

This was a master stroke of strike-advertising genius, the aim being to excite sympathy for the mob wing of the strikers by promising food and shelter for their progeny while they, unhampered by offspring, might continue the strike. No effort having been made by the police, however, to prevent the first detachment of children from being taken to New York for exploitation, the leaders believed that the scheme had "missed fire." The plan really did not materialize as a "sympathy asset" until humanitarians in all parts of New England denounced as inhuman the shipping of children out of Lawrence and that no more be allowed to leave the State.

This offered a conflict and the I.W.W. rose to it. They shipped another lot. The spectacle of this consignment of children being held up by the police and the fracas at the depot has been told in all its versions, including that which described mothers being torn from their children and women clubbed and hurled into the police wagon. In the interests of truth it is only fair to say that nothing like the scenes described occurred. Mothers were not torn from their children. The children were taken to police headquarters, where their parents claimed them. Several of the children were of that class known in every city as "neglected." Their parents failing to claim them, the children were sent to the poorhouse.

The testimony of P. Barber, local manager for the Boston and Maine Railroad in Lawrence, the ticket agent and the lunch-room attendants in the station and that of all impartial witnesses is that the police did not use unnecessary force in preventing the children from leaving the city.

The lesson and the cost of the strike may be summarized thus:

Length of strike, sixty-three days.

Operatives involved in strike averaged 26,000 of a total of 30,000.

Cost to mills estimated at nearly $1,000,000.

Estimated loss in wages to employees, $1,350,000.

TWENTY-FIVE MILLIONS LOST BY STRIKE IN 1911.

[Editorial.]

THE 1911 report of Gompers & Co. (American Federation of Labor) admits 1359 strikes in that year (October 1 to September 30,) involving directly 170,526 workers, at a cost for relief of $4,882,852. The number of workers indirectly involved and the cost to them is not stated; nor is any mention made of the enormous loss of wages by the strikers. Yet the total amount of Gompers & Co. money paid out for "strike benefits" in that year was only $4192 out of the $182,188 year's revenue of the federation. This was in spite of the fact that, as the report also shows, $16,010 of the revenue was collected for that very purpose, namely, "Defense fund for local trade and federal labor unions." The $4,882,852 "cost of strikes" was the amount paid out by national, international and local trade unions to sustain members on strike during the year. At the Atlanta federation convention last November Gompers loudly boasted that affiliated union labor had paid in 1911 about $5,000,000 for "industrial warfare," but he did not as loudly boast, nor boast at all, that the federation as such (Gompers & Co.) had only contributed $4192 out of the $182,188 collected from labor's wages in that federation year, for the relief of its 170,526 members on strike, though $16,010 was paid into the Gompers treasury for that purpose. Here are some of the admitted 1911 "strike costs," exclusive of the millions of dollars lost wages:

Mine workers	$1,942,566
Machinists	386,990
Molders	329,746
Garment Workers (ladies)	300,000
Carpenters	249,177
Miners, Western Federation	228,832
Cigar makers	221,044
Garment Workers, men's	133,823
Boilermakers	115,022
Printing pressmen	82,000
Granite cutters	66,830
Plumbers	66,218
Typographical	65,651
Brewery workmen	72,011
Photo engravers	52,463
Railway carmen	42,634
Barbers	12,200
Metal workers, sheet	24,700
Street railway employees	24,875
Hotel and restaurant employees	20,488
Metal polishers	20,000
Seamen	18,000
Paving cutters	17,000
Pattern makers	16,542
Cloth hat and cap makers	15,769
Marble workers	15,000
Blacksmiths	13,000
Book binders	12,273
Barbers	12,200
Electrical workers	12,000
Wood carvers	11,620
Textile workers	10,000

The other 1911 strikes which had to have relief out of union labor's wages in 1911 were asbestos workers, bill posters, boot and shoe workers, broom makers, amalgamated carpenters, carriage and wagon workers, commercial telegraphers, compressed air workers, lace curtain operatives, steam engineers, stationary firemen, watch-case engravers, steam fitters, foundry employees, glass bottle blowers, glass workers, hatters, hod carriers, iron and steel workers, laundry workers, lithographic press feeders, longshoremen, papermakers, piano and organ workers, plate printers, plasterers, potters, pulp and sulphite workers, quarry workers, spinners, stage employees, stereotypers and electrotypers, stonecutters, stove mounters, tailors, teamsters, tile layers, tip printers, upholsterers, "white rats," actors.

In the case of these strikes the strikers not only lost their wages of many million, but also this outlay of almost $5,000,000 for strike relief, and all in one twelve months, doubtless fully $25,000,000 in all. Did it pay?

Estimated loss to merchants and others, $80,000.

Estimated cost of maintaining regular and special police by city, $75,000.

Estimated cost to State in maintaining militia, $200,000.

Strike funds sent in from all over the country, approximately, $65,000.

Strike Committee treasurer's report—balance in treasury, forty-nine (49) cents.

Estimated number of arrests, 500, of which about one-half paid fines ranging from $1 to $100.

One woman and one man slain in clashes between strikers and police and strikers and militia.

Arrest of Joseph J. Ettor and Arturo Giovannitti, strike leaders, on charge of being accessories to the slaying of a woman.

Investigation by Congressional Committee, the United States Attorney-General, the Federal Bureau of Labor, a committee of the State Legislature and the Attorney-General of the State.

Sober-minded Lawrencians don't think the strike was worth the price paid.

Carborundum in Furnaces.

[Harper's Weekly:] Carborundum, the artificial substitute for emery, which is said to rival the diamond in hardness, is employed, because of its extraordinary resistance to heat, as a coating for the interior of furnaces. Finely powdered and made into a paste, it is applied with a brush, like paint, to the brick lining. It is said that a layer of only two millimeters in thickness will protect the bricks from the effects of the highest temperature that is produced in ordinary furnace combustion.

Carborundum is itself a product of the electric furnace, being composed of silica and carbon fused in the presence of salt and sawdust.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

From the wage-earning point of view it is gratifying to learn that our exports of wages-producing factory products were larger in February, 1912, than in any preceding February in our history. The same is also true of their total for the eight months ended February. Here are the Bureau of Statistics figures of such high-wages-producing exports for the past three Februarys:

1912	$82,500,000
1911	72,000,000
1910	62,000,000
1909	50,000,000
Increase in Feb., 1912, over Feb., 1911	10,500,000
Increase in Feb., 1911, over Feb., 1910	20,500,000
Increase in Feb., 1912, over Feb., 1909	32,500,000

Labor's share of these factory exports and increases is fully 40 per cent.

Now take it for the eight months ended February:

1912	$629,000,000
1911	571,000,000
1910	491,500,000
1909	420,000,000
Increase, 1912, over 1911	68,000,000
Increase, 1911, over 1910	80,000,000
Increase, 1910, over 1909	71,500,000
Increase, 1912, over 1909	219,000,000

Labor's share of these factory exports and increases was fully 40 per cent., as manufactures are our best wages-producing exports.

What sense could there possibly be in injuring this satisfactory state of affairs by exorbitant or otherwise impeding labor demands, unnecessary strikes, equally unnecessary union-labor agitation or ill-advised and hasty legislation, national, State or municipal? In the year 1911 we sent abroad in exchange for foreign gold (or its equivalent) over $1,000,000,000 worth of factory products in which American labor shared to the extent of $400,000,000. Could we have done that had strikes or labor agitation been anyway general in that year? The agitated factory is never the fully-productive factory, and in this country of enormous home consumption exports are only properly available when our factories are fully productive. We wage-earning voters should think of this when we are asked to strike or to vote against our own wages by indorsing for Congress the promoters or supporters of wages-destroying legislation.

Increasing Farm Wages.

According to the Department of Agriculture, American average farm wages have increased as follows:

Year.	—By the month— Without board.	With board.
1911	$28.77	$20.18
1910	27.50	19.24
1902	22.14	14.46
1899	20.23	14.07
1898	19.38	13.43
1896	17.69	12.02
Increase in 15 years	11.08	8.16
	—By day, at harvest— Without board.	With board.
1911	$1.95	$1.49
1910	1.82	1.45
1902	1.53	1.34
1899	1.37	1.13
1898	1.30	1.05
1896	1.14	.92

Where Coal Is a Luxury.

The London Times of March 9 says: "The wages of Herefordshire agricultural laborers are so deplorably low that coal is a luxury very little seen in their cottages."

Contrast that with farm-labor conditions in California, or, indeed, anywhere in the United States.

California Farm Wages Higher.

Comparison with the foregoing average farm wages paid in the country, as a whole, the rates paid in California are much higher.

Here is the comparison for 1911:

	California.	U. S.
Monthly, without board	$46.29	$28.77
Excess in California		18.43
Monthly with board	33.50	20.18
Excess in California		13.32
Day, at harvest:
With board	2.05	1.49
Excess in California		.56
Without board	2.55	1.95
Excess in California		.70
Day, other than harvest:
With board	1.48	1.09
Excess in California		.39
Without board	2.05	1.42
Excess in California		.63

As to wages, evidently California is the farm-workers' El Dorado.

Note the increases in California farm wages in 1911 over 1902—only nine years:

Monthly, with board:
1911	$33.50
1902	29.39
Increase	4.11
Monthly, without board:
1911	$46.29
1902	40.90
Increase	7.39
Day, at harvest, with board:
1911	2.05
1902	1.54
Increase	.51
Day, at harvest, without board:
1911	2.55
1902	2.15
Increase	.40
Day, other than harvest, with board:
1911	1.48
1902	1.39
Increase	.09
Day, other than harvest, without board:
1911	2.05
1902	1.62
Increase	.43

Taking into consideration the fact that farming is an all-the-year-round proposition in California, these increases and excesses in farm wages mean far more to the farm worker than would similar increases and excesses mean in the other States where farm employment is affected by the seasons and the weather, and is therefore intermittent — North Dakota, Montana, Minnesota, etc.

Wage Increases.

More than 120,000 textile operatives in New England have received (March 25) wage increases aggregating over $12,000,000 a year, on a total pay roll of over $120,000,000. The workers benefited are located as follows:

Massachusetts	82,000
Rhode Island	25,000
New Hampshire	5,000
Vermont	900
Total	121,900

In addition, 5000 mill workers in Connecticut got a raise of wages on April 1, as also did 1500 workers in the carpet mills at Clinton, Mass.

Labor's Share.

[Albany (N. Y.) Evening Journal:] Among other accusations that have been made against the United States Steel Corporation is that it underpays and overworks its wage-workers. In view of that, an analysis of figures in the annual report of the corporation, which throws some light on the compensation of the employees, will be of interest.

In the year 1911 the average number of employees of the corporation was 196,888.

The total amount paid to them was $161,419,031. The average per capita amount was a fraction of a dollar over $819.

In the year 1910 the average number of employees was 219,435.

The total amount paid to them was $174,955,139. The per capita average was a fraction of a dollar less than $800.

It appears from this that, while in a year of depression, the number of employees was necessarily reduced, their earnings were even a little better than in the previous year.

The corporation economized in every other possible way, but the wage scale was fully maintained.

Now a glance at how the amount paid to employees compares with earnings.

The total earnings of the corporation for 1911, after deduction of operation expenses including maintenance and ordinary repairs, special compensation of employees under the bonus plan, corporation tax and fixed charges of subsidiary companies, were $104,305,468.87, or $57,113,566 less than the amount paid to employees.

In these figures everyone can read his own answer to the frequent assertion that labor does not get its due share of the value of the things which it produces.

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES ON AND OFF AND STRIKES COMING.

IT IS to be hoped that the British coal strikers and coal owners have fully agreed to the adoption of the minimum wage scale, regulated by conditions and localities, as just made possible by legal enactment, and by such adoption will have ended the strike—England's greatest calamity of centuries. The suffering has been and is intense. The miners are to vote on the proposition on April 4. Riots by women and destruction of property have occurred in Staffordshire. Also riots in Denbyshire. Thousands of soldiers are ready to occupy the coal areas. The railroads have stopped carrying any but perishable goods. Water supplies are being cut off from night till morning to reduce the consumption of coal for pumping. Poor children in the schools are only getting one meal a day, except on charitable provision by the cities. Raids on bread shops and vans and on coal and wood stores have become frequent. The price of the four-pound loaf has gone up to eleven cents. Civic corporations are selling coke in small quantities at reduced prices. Society entertainments in London are curtailed, throwing 50,000 people out of employment at a loss of wages of from $400,000 to $500,000 a week. Poverty is forcing many of the strikers back to work. Many children at Sheffield have been without food for a week (report of March 26.) Many families are on the verge of starvation at other places. The situation in the English industrial centres is daily getting worse, and many of the manufactories supplying the daily needs, such as gas, have been compelled to shut down. Outside of the striking miners the casual laborers in other trades are in a pitiful condition, suffering from cold and hunger. English warships cannot get coal at English ports, nor can many of the trans-Atlantic liners.

The ladies' garment workers of New York (International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union) are expected to strike. Employers will welcome a big strike, as they are sick of a minimum wage scale. It will be

VOLCANOES AS ROAD BUILDERS.

CHANGES BEING MADE IN BERING'S STRAIT.

Eruptions Are Changing the Bottom of the Sea from Year to Year, and the Floor May in Time Emerge Above the Water, Joining the Occident With the Orient.

[Technical World Magazine:] Over the Florida Keys, the hand of man has just completed a great viaduct—a railway across the seas. At the other extremity of the North American continent nature is building a similar causeway that may one day connect America and Asia. It is possible, writes William Thornton Prosser that the volcanic fires now disturbing southwestern Alaska and the 1000-mile chain of Aleutian Islands will combine with other causes to raise the floor of Bering Sea until it emerges high and dry, joining the Occident with the Orient. He goes on to say:

"Nor is this possibility so remote, for the western reaches of Alaska with the Aleutian dots of land form the earth's most agitated volcanic region. Half a hundred volcanoes have been counted west of Cook Inlet, some of them smoking and quavering, and throwing ash and lava far and wide, while the famous Bogoslof Islands just off the route of steamship travel into Bering Sea rise high in the air and sink again into the sea with an attendant demonstration of such grandeur and awe-inspiring magnitude as eye-witnesses declare will be their most vivid remembrance until their dying day.

"Even in the Gulf of Alaska the restless forces of nature are extremely active, for within the last two or three years submarine mountains have suddenly arisen in the depths of the sea, snapping the government's Alaska cable in twain with such a jerk that the ends, on one occasion, were separated by more than a mile. Repeatedly has the copper strand been separated in this way, and soundings have shown the earth to have arisen much nearer the surface of the Gulf than it was ever known to be before in that particular locality.

"Much of Bering Sea's floor is a great level stretch only a few fathoms down, and constantly approaching the water-level. Scientists and members of the United States Geodetic Survey attribute the upheaval beneath the sea to the same subterranean convulsions that blow a fiery breath through the nostrils of so many volcanoes. Assisting this action in making Bering Sea a pond, preliminary, it may be, to obliterating it altogether, are the rivers of Alaska, which bring down annually vast sedimentary deposits of alluvial matter that are scattered far out toward the Siberian shore.

"A dozen volcanoes, some apparently dead and others at intervals showing decided signs of life, dot the west shore of Cook Inlet and the Alaska peninsula, which separates Bering Sea from the Alaska Gulf. No fewer than forty-two volcanoes have been counted on the Aleutians, stretching westward from the mainland. Some of these are so remote from the lines of travel that they are only seldom seen, while others in the vicinity of the ship-channel through Unimak Pass are within the visual range of almost every voyager into Bering Sea.

"The volcano most commonly seen by voyagers into Bering Sea is Shishaldin, standing on Unimak Island, not far from Dutch Harbor, which is the coaling-station of the Aleutians. Coincident with the 1910 upheaval in the Bogoslofs, Shishaldin awakened into eruption, and on previous occasions synchronous activity had been noticed. Shishaldin spread smoke and ash in every direction. Vessels reached Nome with their decks covered with volcanic deposits. One seemingly fabulous story related that the ash assayed showed particles of gold—yet why not? Seven or eight years ago Shishaldin became a great torch of the Arctic; fire spouting from its crater was visible one hundred miles away.

"The 'Noise-Maker of the North' is the sobriquet given Akutan volcano, situated forty miles from the settlement of Unalaska, on the island which bears its name. Often at Unalaska can be heard the booming of this peace-disturber of the Aleutian solitudes. Sudden and violent are its explosions, like the detonations of huge quantities of explosive far down in the earth. In more ways than one does the action of Akutan resemble the discharge of great cannon. Perhaps in the volcano's heart large volumes of gas come in contact with tremendous heat.

"Pavlof's eruptions are usually concurrent with those of Shishaldin and disturbances in the Bogoslofs. Shumagin Islands, sixty miles away, were covered to a depth of half an inch with the Pavlof effluvia in 1910, and at the period of greatest activity Pavlof sent cannonading thunders through a circle 100 miles across. The ash upon the surface of the sea is whipped into snowballs that finally are heaped upon the beach."

This list, Mr. Prosser tells us, includes only a few of the better-known volcanoes of this region, some of them marked by the Indian designation, while others bear the names given them by Russian explorers and geographers years before the United States came into possession of Alaska. Besides those given there is Kupreanoff, standing at the head of Stepakof Bay, on the mainland, which is unique in that its crater lies in the center of a field of glacial ice. Smoke and steam rise through the crevasses in a hundred different places. With these crevasses covering a wide area it has been virtually impossible to explore the exact center. Again:

"Redoubt Peak and Becharoff are well up the peninsula; both are rather difficult of access, and neither has been thoroughly explored. To the north and east of Becharoff is Iliamna, towering above the 12,000-foot level, and having three distinct craters. Douglas, looking as if a huge octopus gripped its vitals, stands up sheer and bold above Cook Inlet, not far from Chenaboro volcano, on Augustine Island. This likeness to an octopus is produced by the chilled streams of lava that streak down from the summit of the peak, vividly suggesting tenacles. Farther inland the Alaskan range has other peaks that occasionally give forth evidences of life, while in addition to the active volcanoes there are hunreds of dead craters in the mountain chain that buries itself in the sea in a seemingly vain endeavor to reach the Asiatic shore.

"Alaska is becoming a better-known land every year, and the time will come when all her mountain ranges, her valleys and her plains will be thoroughly explored, but it is no exaggeration to say that the Russians knew as much about her coast-line as we have learned in the last half-century. Controller Bay, of recent notoriety, was discovered before Admiral Vancouver found Puget Sound!"

STRIKS ON AND OFF.

a big battle, as the union is twice as large as when the last strike was on and the employers are better organized. The union has 7000 members, as against 2800 last year.

The Westphalia, Germany, coal strike goes on. To pay the 15 per cent. increase in wages, which the strikers demand, would increase the yearly pay roll by $21,250. Over 200,000 men are out.

The Belgian miners demand 15 per cent. more wages, the minimum wage principle, and that myth of myths, "recognition of the union."

French miners struck for twenty-four hours to show their union solidarity and influence. They are holding over the heads of the government and Parliament demands for shorter hours, higher wages and pensions under threats of a general strike.

It was a girl who started the strike in the Botany Worsted Mills, the largest in Passaic, New York, by presenting a list of demands, the first of which was recognition of a "shop committee," just another form of recognition of the union. Refused by the manager, she waived the paper aloft, shouting "Strike! It's a strike. They won't give in," and all the operatives went out. By this strike the older workers lose their annual Christmas bonuses of $100 each and the newer employees lose in proportion.

The threatened strike of $5,000 operatives in the cotton mills of Fall River, Mass., is off. They wanted a 15 per cent. raise, but have settled for a 10 per cent. one, as offered by the mill owners. The cotton operatives at New Bedford, Providence and elsewhere, will get the same. Others are standing out for 15 per cent.

A million and a quarter coal and other workers will be idle if the American coal strike (both kinds of coal) becomes general.

Striking in some of the mills at Lowell, Mass., has caused the shutdown of all, and 20,000 people are out of employment. Socialist Trantman has been imported from Lawrence to lead the strike for the I.W.W.'s.

The Lynn, Mass., boot and shoe strike of 2000 is over. The stitchers have got the advance of two cents per dozen pairs of shoes which they asked.

The coal situation in Spain is alarming. Most of the mines and shipping are paralyzed. The crisis affects 20,000 persons in Bilbao alone.

Fourteen thousand carpenters of Chicago are on strike for an increase of five cents an hour.

Owing to the coal strike here, the Chicago and Alton railway shops at Bloomington, Ill., closed on April 1, throwing 1500 men out of employment.

Belgian coal miners demand an increase of 15 per cent. and upward in wages under threat of strike.

Twenty thousand coal miners have gone on strike in Bohemia.

The proposed copper strike at Butte, Mont., because some men were discharged for violent socialistic agitation directly against their employers is not materializing.

Some 12,000 silk workers are now on strike in New Jersey and others are going out.

The locomotive engineers on fifty eastern railroads will vote on April 10 as to striking or not striking. They want the same wages as paid on western roads, where living is dearer and freights are higher. The demand is unreasonable. The increase asked would cost the eastern roads $7,553,792 a year. The pay roll in 1911 was $518,781,000, against $479,364,000 in 1910, an increase of $39,000,000.

SOCIALIST WAR MINISTER'S NEW NAPOLEONIC GLORIES.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PARIS, March 4.—Not since the days of the first Napoleon has militarism been so dominant as it is just now in France—and this under a Socialist Minister of War, the able and energetic Millerand. The weekly tattoo is heard once more. "The Marseillaise" is played again at stated times and called for often. A crowd of 5000 people, who went out the other day to hear the revived tattoo on the square of the City Hall, clamored for "The Marseillaise."

A subscription started to help to build a big fleet of military airships has swept the country, and now Millerand caps it all by reappointing Gen. Gustave Leon Niox, a distinguished old soldier, commander or governor of the Hotel des Invalides, under the golden dome of which rest the ashes of the Great Emperor. The office of governor of the Invalides was an important post in the distant past. It declined till Gen. Andre, the War Minister, who introduced a system of espionage in the French army—the same whom the veteran Rochefort calls "the old alcoholist"—did away with the office altogether.

Gen. Niox, who was commander of the Invalides a decade ago, is 72 years old, and for all practical purposes is a Parisian, having been born at Provins in the department of the Seine and Marne. He is a man of learing and the son of Col. Niox, who died in the Crimean War. Gen. Niox has written several works of a historico-geographical nature, including one on the Franco-German War, another on the Russo-Japanese War and a historical account of the expedition to Mexico.

The Hotel des Invalides, of which he is appointed commander, was built by Louis XIV as a home for old soldiers, and is the oldest establishment of the kind in the world. It was originally intended to accommodate 7000. Now, however, there are only 100 remnants of military life in this famous establishment, and they help Gen. Niox to take care of the treasures. Their chief duties are to guard the tomb of the Emperor and the trophies taken in battle. The tomb, which was built from 1843 to 1861, is the most finished monument in the world. It is constructed of fine blocks of red Finland marble. The inscription taken from the last will and testament of the Emperor is read by every tourist and translated into every tongue. Napoleonic enthusiasts read with moistened eyes the words: "I wish that my ashes should rest on the banks of the Seine, among the French people whom I love so well." In side chapels are monuments of two minor Napoleons—Joseph Bonaparte, King of Spain, and Jerome Bonaparte, who married Bessie Patterson of Baltimore, deserted her, and became King of Westphalia.

The military museum entrusted to the care of Gen. Niox contains 2333 cannon brought from Vienna by Napoleon the Great. There are other fierce-looking pieces, which were captured by the Emperor, and now used for firing salutes on the Fourteenth of July, the anniversary of the destruction of the Bastile, and other great occasions. There are over ten thousand pieces in the Artillery Museum. Of course, it holds intimate souvenirs of the Emperor himself, such as his hat, his sword, his pistols and one of his famous gray riding coats.

In the nave of the Church of St. Louis are two rows of flags, all taken in the Crimean War and in more recent battles. The flags captured in the olden time were all burned, to the number of 1500, to prevent them from falling into the hands of the allied armies after Waterloo.

It is certain that the ashes of the great Emperor, brought to Paris in 1840 under King Louis Philippe, revived the Napoleonic idea, and prepared the way for Napoleon the Little.

The setting of the Hotel des Invalides is quite in keeping with the most magnificent tomb in the world. The Esplanade des Invalides is 550 feet long and 270 feet in width. Rows of stately elms adorn it. The most decorative avenue on the planet, that upon which the Bridge Alexander the Third is built, connects the Hotel des Invalides with the peerless Champs Elysees. Because of the tomb of Napoleon, the Hotel des Invalides attracts more visitors than does even the Louvre Museum.

THE MIDDLEMAN.

Oh, I am a member of that clan
The much-bedeviled old Middleman.
I deal in bacon and bonnets and tea,
And spring-lamb, chops and hominee;
I deal in butter and lard and eggs,
In pants and sugar and wooden legs;
I deal in kettles and picture-hooks,
In silks and satins, and pies and books,
Canary birds and dogs and cats,
In dressing-gowns and beaver hats.
If anyone wants a pair of socks,
A barrel of prunes or a line of frocks,
A flannel shirt or a length of hose,
Or a pair of shoes to protect his toes;
Or a bottle of rum or a yard of lace,
Or something to color a pallid face;
A brush for his boots, his teeth, or hair,
An apple tart or an Empire chair—
Whatever's been made since the world began
He's got the same from the Middleman.

Now, who are the Middlemen today
The world is howling to put away?
The druggist, the butcher, the man who bakes,
The fellow who sells you your hoes and rakes,
The chap who opens a shop and sells
Pajamas, suspenders and dinner-bells.
The "gent" who hands you your ties and shirts,
The fellow that pleases your wife with skirts
And lures the ladies in glad array
With any old thing on bargain day.
He's You. He's Me. He's Him. He's Her!
Wherever the wheels of commerce whir
He toils and sweats to pay his score
And hold the Vulpine away from his door.
He didn't ask to come onto the earth,
And you can't blame him because of his birth,
But now that he's here in this Vale of Murk,
B'gosh, my friends, he's a right to work!
So what's he to do and what is your plan
When you have got rid of the Middleman?

UNIONISM CAUSED MURDER.

The Acquittal of Hicks Necessary to Make Portland a Safe Place for Peaceable Business Men.

[Portland Spectator:] What a record of brutality and crime is exposed in the Hicks trial. We find from the testimony that organized gangs of thugs gathered at every shop where independent workmen were employed, and that these workmen were beaten and mauled in pursuance of the union policy of peaceful "picketing." Whenever a non-union employee was found unprotected by his fellows or the police, he was pounced upon, knocked down, beaten with clubs and brass knuckles, and kicked. Workmen were followed to their homes, and at their own doors were brutally assaulted. These dastardly attacks were an incident to the peaceful "picketing" practiced by the unions.

It has been shown that the peaceful "pickets" assaulted the workmen at Hicks's machine shop; that without the protection of the police, Hicks's employees could not go to and from their work unmolested; and that Hicks's life was threatened.

The union thugs prowled in gangs of from four to thirty men; they rarely attacked more than one workman at a time, conscientiously refusing to take any chances at the hands of two or three opponents. When two or more workmen were together, the thugs contented themselves with calling the men vile names.

Hicks, who is on trial for killing one of the peaceful "picketers"—the one who was the leader of the thugs who attacked unprotected workmen—carried a revolver as a means of protecting his life. He had been followed and insulted and threatened very often; he was followed and insulted on the night he killed the leader of the "picketers." Hicks did not seek a quarrel with the man he shot; indeed, to escape him and his fellows, Hicks left his workshop under the protection of the police. When the police withdrew, the picketers overtook Hicks, and it was because he thought his life was in danger that Hicks fired. The unions are trying to have him hanged for protecting his own life, and have employed private prosecutors to secure his conviction.

The Spectator would very much dislike to see Mr. Hicks hanged. He has been of inestimable service to this community. For a principle—the right to conduct his business without the dictation of walking delegates—he suffered severely; the unions tried to ruin him, but he struggled on; for many months he patiently bore their insults and thuggish attacks; driven to desperation, and fearing for his life, he killed one of his assailants. Since his trial began there has been a notable falling off in the number of attacks by "picketers" on workmen. If Hicks is acquitted and the principle is established that a man who is daily followed by thugs, and whose life is threatened by thugs, and who is attacked by thugs has the right to shoot one of the offending thugs, Portland will be a safe place for peaceable citizens to do business in.

FACTORY COST OF WAGES.

Increased Wages Raises Expense of Production Unless it Causes Higher Efficiency of Men and Machines.

[New York Commercial:] When a Fall River mill offered its operatives an increase of 10 per cent. in wages its selling agents in New York promptly marked up the price of cotton cloth to maintain profits. This first advance was made before any settlement was reached, and prices will go up a little more than wages to keep the percentage of profit at least the same as before. Wage earners will pay the advance in mill wages when they buy cotton goods. This can go on until it pays better to import and pay duty than to make cotton cloth here. Then the mills will close and the operatives will be out of work. Also, this will happen if the duty is reduced by Congress.

Labor complains of the high cost of living, but every advance in wages adds to it in the aggregate a sum greater than the increase in the total sum paid to labor. If wages are raised all around labor gains nothing in reality. If only part of the whole number secure higher pay the rest are poorer, because living costs more. The problem is not to be solved merely by raising wages. The only thing that actually adds to the wealth of the country and makes labor better off is increased production, both individual and collective. This is the fundamental fact underlying social economy, and it is set forth accurately in the Bible in reference to the man who makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before. It applies equally to the farmer and the spinner. Every farmer knows it, but organized labor does not.

In actual practice wages usually lag behind commodity prices, while both are rising, but the price of labor holds better than the price of goods in falling markets. When the cost of living advances it is due to a lack of production, and increased production with prices on a reasonable basis is the only solution of the problem.

BIG LAND OPENING

Tuesday, April 16, 1912

The well known DUNLOP Ranch, four miles East of Redlands and one-and-a-half miles from the S. P. and S. F. Railroad Stations at Crafton, will be offered to Farmers, Fruit Growers and Investors in 5, 10, 20 and 40-acre tracts. Each acre carries a water ownership with it. All old timers know this famous Ranch, for its wonderful rich soil as well as for its ample water supply. The East end of this tract is a very deep peat soil, full of decomposed vegetable matter, excellently adapted to the growing of Pears, Peaches and all deciduous fruits, as well as Potatoes, Sweet Potatoes, Alfalfa, Walnuts, Tomatoes, Cantaloupes, etc. All sorts of truck has been grown here for years, the land bringing a yearly rental of

$30.00 an Acre

Do you know that Redlands, with its 8000 acres of Oranges, has not one acre of truck land; therefore, our truck farmers have a wonderful market, right at their door.

We say without fear of contradiction that here is the richest land in Southern California, and we know that all old timers will uphold us in this statement.

We have had numerous applications for reservation on this tract, but are not going to sell an acre of it until Tuesday, April 16th, 1912, when we are going to give to all an equal chance to make their selection.

There is nothing you can put your money into as a farming of fruit growing proposition, or as an investment that will equal this opportunity we are offering you here. We urge you to join us on the above named date and make your selection of any sized tract that you may wish.

It is used in the manufacture of sulphur, sulphuric acid, and salts of iron, but not to so great an extent as ordinary pyrites. It is also employed for ornamental purposes, formerly it was made into shoe-buckles, bracelets, watch-cases, set in pins, etc. . . . Marcasite takes a good polish, and is cut in facets like rose-diamonds. In this State it possesses all the brightness of the polished steel without its tendency to become oxidized by exposure to the atmosphere." The marcasite of commerce (including pyrite) is generally small, and rarely that of the size of a two carat stone.

Clay.

LONG BEACH, March 15.—Q.: Will you please inform me what is the name and nature of the enclosed sample brought from a deposit in San Bernardino county in the vicinity of Victorville? What are its uses? Has it a commercial value?

Yours truly, W. M.

A.: The sample is chiefly kaolin, but there is no certainty that the entire deposit is represented by the sample. In a practical way, go to dealers and manufacturers interested in the clay industry. For uses, etc., consult Mineral Resources of the United States.

Magnetite.

LOS ANGELES, March 16.—Q.: Will you please state the name of the sample in this package? Taken from near Victorville. It is in crystals. Is it tungsten?

A Lively Carbonate.

LOS ANGELES, March 16.—Q.: Under another cover (tin box marked "Regal") I mail to your address sample of marl (?.) Would this be of value as a fertilizer in its present state or could it be converted into a direct or indirect fertilizer of any value. Found in Los Angeles county. "REGAL."

A.: The sample is a mixed carbonate of lime and magnesia and it is of value as a source of carbonic acid in its present state. It is probable that the deposit is pseudomorphic after Dolomite. There is no phosphoric acid in the sample, and as fertilizer (direct or indirect) it possesses no great value.

Common Opal.

LOS ANGELES, March 16.—Q.: Under separate cover you will please find some samples of what I classify as opal. It comes from near Searchlight, Nev. Is it of value in the jewel trade? G. W. L.

A.: The sample is not transparent, and it is mixed with iron oxide impurities. It is of doubtful value for any of the commercial uses.

Iron Carbonate.

TEMPE (Ariz.) March 16.—Q.: In a red tobacco sack I am mailing you some samples that are pronounced to be sure indicators of oil, and the rock is in place near Tempe. Does it show any oil? C. P.

A.: The sample is Siderite. Poor showing for oil territory!

Litmus Papers.

SANTA BARBARA, March 17.—Q.: It being important for me to secure the best possible litmus papers, please oblige me by giving the method for preparation in modern chemistry. M. D.

A.: None better than the following: "Litmus paper, when used to detect the acidity or alkalinity of solutions, may give variable results, according to the method of its preparation, the amount of salts present in the paper and the character of the paper itself. To make a good blue paper 1.4 per cent. of chemically pure litmus is dissolved in distilled water with continued shaking for about one hour. The solution is allowed to stand over night, is carefully decanted from the sediment and C.P., sulphuric acid, added, drop by drop, until the alkalinity is reduced to the point where a piece of paper made from the solution will assume a perceptible red color when placed for a half minute in N 2000 C.P., hydrochloric acid. To make red litmus a 10 per cent. solution is required, and C.P., sulphuric acid, is added until paper made from the solution will show a distinct blue color with N 4000 caustic soda solution."

Magnesium Silicates.

LOS ANGELES, March 16.—Q.: Will you please tell me what the two samples are that I am sending you? No. 2 looks like talc, and it lies beside iron ore. No. 1 is the hanging wall of a silver and copper ledge of high-grade ore; what is the rock? Both samples come from the Armogosa range, and near the Keane-Wonder mine. G. C.

A.: The rock sample is altered (in part trachyte,) and among the pseudomorphic matter are iron oxides trace, with magnesium silicate. No. 2 is a fairly good talc.

Eatable Soapstone.

LOS ANGELES, March 17.—Q.: Will you please state what the enclosed sample is and if it has any commercial value? It is found in San Diego county. E. M.

A.: The soapstone carries aborescent forms of dendritic manganese (forest-rock of the mining boys.) The poor people of some of our southern States use a similar variety as part of their food. Some experiments are now going on in Philadelphia, Pa., looking to the use of the mineral for paint mixtures.

Asphaltic.

LOS ANGELES, March 17.—Q.: Want to know in regard to oil-bearing qualities, judging from sample.

A.: Very doubtful.

Sulphides With Oxides.

CALEXICO, March 17.—Q.: Am sending under separate cover two samples of ore. Please tell me what they are. They are from my Angora mines. J. W. S.

A.: No. 1 is quartzitic with lime and talc in the rock. Iron carbonate is present with pyrite, pyrrhotite (magnetic pyrite,) and zinc. No. 2 limonitic iron oxide with lead present, and trace of vanadic acid.

Opal Silica.

LOS ANGELES, March 17.—Q.: Inclosed find samples Nos. 1 and 2. Please tell me what these two samples contain. J. E. R.

A.: No. 1 is a mixture of opal silica, manganese, iron and trace of chrome present. No. 2 crystallized lime carbonate (calcite.)

Volcanic Glass.

POMONA, March 17.—Q.: Please inform me what this sample may be. Found in a vein seven miles from Pomona. A. J. S.

Silicates.

LOS ANGELES, March 17.—Q.: Am sending you under separate cover three samples, Nos. 1, 2 and 3. Would you please tell me what they are? Samples are from near Eagle Rock. A. M. S.

A.: No. 1 is a gritty, impure Fuller's earth. No. 2 hornblendic with black, friable tourmaline. No. 3 augitic rock.

Gypsum.

NEWHALL, March 18.—Q.: Sample from a four-foot ledge not far from Newhall. Is it lime or gypsum?

A BUSINESS MONARCH.

King Kalakaua Sold to His Legislature Some Cannon Presented to Him by the Austrian Emperor.

[Pacific Advertiser:] The digging up of three rusty—but loaded and ready to go off—shells in Kapiolani Park last week, and the facts of their history as dug up for The Advertiser, started a flood of old-time "revolution" reminiscences, one of the most interesting of which dealt with the presentation to Hawaii of the particular Austrian battery with which the old shells were connected. It appears that when King Kalakaua was making his royal tour of Europe, being entertained by Kings and Emperors, he wandered to the capital of the Austrian Monarch, Emperor Frans Joseph. By way of impressing upon his Sandwich Island royal cousin the greatness of Austria-Hungary, the Emperor took Kalakaua to a grand field review, where Austrian gunners shot holes in targets to demonstrate the Austrian field pieces had no peers existing, especially when Austrian marksmen sighted them.

Kalakaua was properly impressed, so much so, in fact, that he ventured to ask the price of a battery, such as he had seen in use. He intimated that he might find business, at the Crossroads of the Pacific, for just such wicked implements of death, especially as the "Supremacy of the Pacific" idea was incubating in his headpiece. He was told, very politely, that Austria's cannons were not on the market, but that, as from Monarch to Monarch, the ruler of Austria might make the ruler of the Sandwich Islands a gift of a few guns. The gift was made and Kalakaua shipped his battery to Honolulu, where it was used later in Kapiolani Park to scatter the revolutionists out against the republic and perched along Diamond Head ridge. The sequel to the presentation is the funny part of the story, however.

Kalakaua came home in triumph from his trip, and his Austrian guns barked out a welcome salute, which reminded him. The trip had cost money, even if there had been no hotel bills, so Rex sat him down and made out a bill to the Legislature for his guns. The figures on the bill called for $29,000, which the Legislature had to appropriate and pay over to the private treasurer of the royal household.

For a gift, those guns came high.

Ruskin as a Grocer.

[London Chronicle:] Ruskin was once a grocer. In 1874 he opened a shop in Paddington street, Notting Hill, in order, as he announced, "to supply the poor with pure tea in packets as small as they choose to buy, without making a profit on the subdivision, large orders being, of course, equally acceptable from anybody who cares to promote honest dealing." The shop did not attract. Ruskin complained in Fors Clavigera that "the poor only like to buy their tea where it is brilliantly lighted and eloquently ticketed, and as I resolutely refuse to compete with my neighboring tradesmen either in gas or rhetoric, the patient subdivision of my parcels passes little recognized as an advantage by my uncalculating public." The shop soon closed down and the grocery trade lost the most distinguished representative it is ever likely to possess.

COUNT NOSES ON COMETS.

Surprising Census for Past Year Just Completed.

Twelvemonth Holds Twentieth Century Record.

Many New Sky Vagrants Are Collared by Science.

Censuses of all kinds, from the gross population of the world, to the number of kittens born to Kalamazoo cats, have been compiled with accuracy and care for the year 1911 and docketed in archives imperishable for the edification of posterity. So far as is known, however, the most unique census of all is that which has just been completed by the astronomical section of the Southern California Academy of Sciences—that of the almost unprecedented number of comets which called upon the sun between January 1, 1911, and January 1, 1912.

In counting noses—or, more properly, tails—on these celestial vagrants, Chairman William H. Knight directs attention to the fact that, while eight comets may appear to the unlettered as a rather meager year's supply, it is really a very unusual record for a twelvemonth. In the eleven years of the twentieth century already completed, fifty-three comets have come to their perihelion from various parts of the celestial vault. Minus those of 1911, this gives the other ten years forty-five comets among them—four and a half apiece, if there were such a thing as half a comet.

COMET CATALOGUE.

The comets which came into view last year were designated, in the order of their discovery, as comet 1911a, 1911b, and so on. But after this year they will be designated in the comet catalogues 1911-I, 1911-II, and so on, in the odrer of their arrival at perihelion. This changes their order somewhat, for it often happens that a comet discovered towards the end of the year does not arrive at perihelion until sometime in the following year.

No comets were discovered in 1911 till June 10, and then they came in a bunch, and in the next two months no less than six were telescopically visible. The first, 1911a, was a small comet, discovered by Max Wolf at Heidelberg. This and two others—Encke's and Borrelly's—were periodic and expected. Comet 1911b was discovered by C. C. Kiess, a young astronomer at the Lick Observatory. Computations show that it has a period of about 121 years. In referring to the comet catalogues it was found that three other comets have a similar period, whence it is inferred that these bodies may belong to the comet family of a very distant planet exterior to the orbit of Neptune. Neptune is 2,800,000,000 miles from the sun, and the hypothetical planet would be about 4,500,000,000 miles from the sun.

Comet 1911c was discovered by that indefatigable comet-hunter, William R. Brooks, director of the Smith Observatory of Geneva, N. Y. It was his twenty-sixth comet, a larger number than any other astronomer has to his credit. This proved to be a bright comet, shining in the morning skies with a splendor which well matched Halley's comet at its best. It came within 20,000,000 miles of the earth and its tail reached a length of seventeen degrees. Comet 1911d was discovered by Dr. Connesiat at the Algiers Observatory in Northern Africa. It proved to be the return of Encke's comet, which has the short period of three and a half years.

It is a dull comet without a nucleus or tail, but has one extraordinary peculiarity. When it first comes in sight, about 130,000,000 miles from the sun, its diameter is nearly 300,000 miles—more than one-third that of the sun. But when it reaches its perihelion, 2,000,000 miles within the orbit of Mercury, it has shrunk to about 14,000 miles in diameter. Herschel explains this by supposing that certain elements in the comet are melted and evaporated by the heat of the sun and become invisible, but are again frozen and become visible by reflected light when the comet gets away from the neighborhood of the sun.

Comet 1911e was discovered by Knox Shaw at the Helwan Observatory in Egypt. It proved to be the return of Borrelly's comet of 1905. Owing to planetary perturbations it arrived at perihelion several months sooner than the calculated time. Comet 1911f was discovered by Quenisset at Flammarion's Juvisy Observatory, near Paris. Its distance from the sun at perihelion was 72,000,000 miles—being 5,000,000 miles outside the orbis of Venus.

Comet 1911g was discovered by Beljawsky at the Semeis Observatory in Russia, the only comet ever discovered by an astronomer in that country. It suddenly appeared from the region beyond the sun, swung around that luminary at a distance of 3,000,000 miles, sending forth a bright streaming and forked tail, and after presenting a brilliant sight for a few days, returned whence it came, probably not to return for thousands of centuries. Comet 1911h was discovered by Schaumasse at Nice, in the south of France, on November 30, a faint object, and the last of the 1911 series.

It is noteworthy that two of these comets were discovered by astronomers in the United States, two in France, two in North Africa and one each in Germany and Russia. All but two—Wolf and Brooks—were new names in comet literature.

Up to His Father.

[Oklahoma Oklahoman:] Returning home from a health trip to Colorado, a young New Haven man told his father about buying a silver mine for $2000.

"I knew they'd rope you in," exclaimed the old man. "So you were ass enough to buy a humbug mine."

"Yes, but I didn't lose anything. I formed a company and sold half the stock to a Connecticut man for $7000."

"Y-you did?" gasped the old man as he turned white. "I'll bet I'm the one who bought it."

"I know you are," coolly observed the young man as he crossed his legs and tried to appear very much at home.

ON FAMOUS SECTION.

The Pan American Oil Company, which is operating on the famous section 32, 12-23, Maricopa district, including the B. A. Oil Company lease, has its well down 2605 feet and is in the gusher sand. When the drill struck the oil stratum a solid column of oil was hurled against the crown block. Shortly thereafter the well sanded up. The Pan American is controlled by J. V. Hoffman, Edward Fox and B. M. Howe, and the well will be reopened at once.

Howe, who is one of the best-known oil men of the field, will have charge of the development work and will equip the property along the lines of the Miocene lease owned by Jack Spreckles. Howe states that within sixty to seventy-five days he will have the Pan American well producing as much or more oil than the Miocene well.

Hoffman, Fox and Howe, also control the Metropolitan Oil Company property on section 4, 11-23, the west one-half of the northwest quarter, consisting of eighty acres. W. H. Coons of Maricopa is also interested in the property. This oil land is patented and is considered a fine piece of gusher territory. Drilling is going on day and night with a rotary rig and a picked crew, and excellent results are expected within a reasonable time.

Improving Nature.

UNCLE SAM CREATES FISHES.

EXPERTS HAVE DEVELOPED SEVERAL NEW BREEDS.

Crossing Shad and Bass Has Produced a Successful Hybrid—So Also Have California Salmon and Brook Trout—New Breed of Whitefish Made in Lake Erie.

[Chicago Inter-Ocean:] Think of inventing an entirely new kind of animal! Such a thing has often been declared impossible, even in imagination, yet the United States Fish Commission has accomplished it in reality.

The government fishery experts have already created several brand-new kinds of fishes, such as were never thought of by conservative old Dame Nature, and every one of them is a wonder in its way. Alive? Very much so. Just as much alive, indeed, as any normal things with fins and scales that swim in ocean or river. Yet, being turned out by peculiar artifices in the hatchery, they are as truly laboratory products as any inanimate articles of scientific manufacture.

Though creation is nature's business peculiarly, and interference with her work in this line was formerly deemed almost impious, at the present time all sorts of "monkeyings" are attempted with normal methods of propagation, and, by one means or another, man is trying to control the reproduction of species on the earth. The creatures that are of no use to him are being killed off, while those he finds valuable are multiplied at a marvelous rate with the help of incubating machines and in other ways.

But the inventing of new kinds of fishes is a distinctly novel idea and, this problem having been solved, the only question remaining is how far the plan can be extended to other animals—such, for instance, as crustaceans and molluska. The shad-bass is already an accomplished fact. It lives and swims and has its being, though a creature unknown to natural history. Experts of the Fish Commission have evolved it successfully at Havre de Grace, Md., and several thousand specimens have been liberated in the waters thereabout. They were reared in tanks to the age of ten days and then set free by gently immersing the tin milk cans containing them.

The shad-bass, as its name might imply, is a cross between the striped bass and the shad—two fishes that never breed together in nature. They represent, in fact, not merely different species, they are not simply of different genera, but they belong to different orders, wide apart. One of them is spiny-rayed and the other soft-rayed, a distinction of utmost importance, from a scientific viewpoint. It might seem, at first blush, as easy to cross a tiger with the hippopotamus as to produce a hybrid between the shad and the striped bass. Yet the thing has been accomplished, and the way of doing it was wonderfully simple. The eggs of the shad were sprinkled with the "milt" of the male bass, and, being thus fertilized, were subsequently hatched in a glass jar full of water. At ten days old, when liberated they were as long as the end joint of one's forefinger, and seemed as healthy and lively as any "straight" shad fry of like age.

What they will be like after growing up nobody can say, but perhaps some of them will be caught at a future time to afford instruction and amusement to pisciculturai sharps.

Fortunately, the Fish Commission people have succeeded in making a similar cross between the shad and the river herring, and a number of the liberated hybrids have been subsequently caught. They are extremely bony fishes, these half-breeds, as one might imagine, much larger than the herring and of little value to the table for the reasen mentioned. As freaks they are a conspicuous success, but for commercial purposes worthless.

Now, in trying to obtain such hybrids, the method adopted is the same as for breeding ordinary fishes. The roe is pressed from the mother fish into a thin pan by passing the hand gently down the belly, and the milt from the male (obtained in like manner) is poured over the eggs. In this way the latter are impregnated, and then they are transferred to the glass jar, through which a current of water is kept perpetually flowing by means of a siphon arrangement. This particular experiment of mating the shad with the herring was performed, not so much for scientific purposes as through necessity. Male shad (as often happens) were scarce and so an attempt was made to fertilize the shad eggs with herring milt. There is every reason to suppose that herring eggs could be fertilized in similar fashion with shad milt, thus accomplishing a cross in the opposite way.

It would be most interesting to observe the difference between the two crosses, but observation of like phenomena in the case of other species of fishes points to the conclusion that the offspring of the herring mother (with a shad for father) would be much smaller than those of the shad mother, referring for paternity to a herring. A shad egg is many times larger than a herring egg, and the creature hatched from it is proportionately bigger to start with, and is bound to attain superior size.

In Lake Erie, at the hatching stations, it has happened occasionally that there was a scarcity of ripe male whitefish, and, having a number of ripe egg-laden females on hand, the operators have thought it expedient to fertilize the eggs of species belonging to the tribe of whitefishes, but not even of the same genus as the true whitefish. As the result, the halfbreeds, well-formed fishes, weighing about two pounds when full grown, with a suggestion of the long lower jow of their papas, are becoming quite plentiful in those waters, and are seen now and then in the markets.

Success has been obtained lately in crossing the brook trout with the salmon in California, a remarkable achievement certainly, in view of the great difference in point of size. Of course, all species of trout and of salmon belong to the same family of salmonide, so a hybrid of the kind is hardly abnormal. In this instance the cross has been made both ways, and (as might be expected) the half-breeds hatched from salmon eggs reach a much larger size than those from trout eggs. The most noteworthy experiments in crossing different species of trout (such as lake trout and brook trout) have been made by Dr. W. J. Moenkhaus of Chicago University. He has evolved some very interesting hybrids, and next summer will extend the investigation to various salt-water fishes at the Marine Natural History Farm which the government maintains at Wood's Hole, Mass.

So far the inquiry is only in an experimental stage, but it may be turned to account in a practical manner at a future time. It is entirely possible that in this way new and useful kinds of fishes may be produced—as, for example, by crossing the cod with the haddock, with the hake, with the pollock and with the cusk. All of these five species spawn at the same time of year, so artificial interbreeding would be easily accomplished. In the same manner the common mackerel might, without much difficulty, be interbred with the bullseye mackerel, the Spanish mackerel or the kingfish—all three sufficiently nearly related to offer excellent prospects of success.

As for fresh-water fishes, the black bass might be crossed with the cropple and rock bass; the common carp would be likely to afford hybrids with the golden ide and the goldfish, and many other combinations would suggest themselves. The carp family would grant exceptional opportunities for artificial mating, being the most numerous in species (over 200 there are) of all the fish tribes.

The United States Fish Commission in the way of hybridizing fishes has already advanced so far that is is suggested, if this sort of thing can be done with finny creatures, it may be practicable with mollusks or crustaceans, and at no distant day the crab may be successfully crossed with the lobster and the oyster with the clam thus affording novel marine delicacies to tempt the appetite of the epicure. One should not venture upon too much guessing, however, lest one be betrayed into a mistake such as that made not very long ago by an enthusiastic person, who gravely advocated the mating of the jellyfish with the shad for the purpose of getting rid of the latter's bones—an ingenious notion, but hardly practicable from a pisciculturai standpoint.

There are things about fish eggs which even the fish commission people do not yet undertsand, and one of these is the occasional production of monsters—fishes with two heads, three eyes and various other deformities.

Going to Europe.

The Mexican Petroleum Company is having several large oil tank ships built in England at the present time. The annual meeting of the company will be held in this city on April 9.

ONE GARAGE STARTED.

Work Begun on Handsome New Home of Mitchell Car—Building Is of Mission Style.

Work has been commenced upon the substantial and attractive garage projected by the Greer-Robbins Company, agents for the Mitchell car, at the southeast corner of Twelfth and Flower streets. The building, which was planned by R. B. Young & Son, will be two stories in height and of the mission type of architecture. It will be of brick construction, the walls being plastered and the roof being of red Spanish clay tile. Altogether it will be one of the handsomest structures of its type on the coast.

No columns will enter into the arrangement of the salesroom, the second floor being carried on a heavy truss. Here, as in the offices, the woodwork will be in solid mahogany. Heavy staff cornices and beams will contribute to the ornamentation. The floors will be of tile.

The site has a frontage of eighty feet on Flower by 155 feet on Twelfth, and was purchased by the present owners from E. P. Bryan for a consideration of $54,000. Glenn N. Bland of the Wright-Callender-Anderson Company handled this transaction.

TO BATTLE MOSQUITOES.

Improved Methods Devised at Panama for Permanent Improvement.

[Army and Navy Journal:] Soldiers of the regular army who are in the canal zone or are to go there for the purpose of defending the fortifications will be pleased to know that experiments are going on now with a kind of fortification that has to do especially with the health of that region. Col. William C. Gorgas, medical corps, U.S.A., chief sanitary officer, has worked out a scheme for a permanent system of ditches which will make them proof against the breeding of the mosquito. Having found that by controlling the incubation of insects, the fever situation was always kept in hand, the zone sanitary department turned its attention to the ditches which are so fertile a place for the production of mosquitoes, and the idea was hit upon of lining or "fortifying" them against the mosquito. So now there is being tried at Gatun a new scheme for permanent ditch lining with concrete blocks, made of a mixture of sand, cement and cinders. After a while there will be no chance for the poor mosquito at all in the zone. The army sanitarians are now making tests to ascertain the effect of wind upon the travels of the insect, both against and with the prevailing air currents, and it is thought that approximate or exact data along that line will have a marked effect upon the cost of anti-malaria work. No data are available to show that the anopheles, or malaria insects, are blown by the wind or travel with it.

Population in Terms of Water

[World's Work:] According to W. J. McGee, the possible population of our country ought to be measured, not according to the amount of land we possess, but, according to the amount of water—in other words, according to the amount of rainfall. By his estimate, the country can comfortably support one person to five acre-feet of water (one foot of water spread over five acres surface.) Now the annual rainfall of mainland United States—the sole original source of our fresh waters—is barely 5,000,000,000 acre-feet; it averages hardly two and one-half feet (thirty inches) over our 2,000,000,000 acres. So our greatest possible population, measured by our highest standards of primary production, would not exceed 1,000,000,000—a number which at the current rate of increase will be reached in three centuries, or when the span since the landing at Jamestown is doubled.

The Nobel Prize.

[World's Work:] The Nobel roll of honor affords a unique opportunity to see which nations are doing the most for civilization as indicated by the sixty-five individuals who since 1901 have received this award. Germany has been so honored sixteen times and stands at the head in all five departments except peace. France stands second with ten Nobel prize men, followed by England with seven and Holland with five. Then come Russia, Italy, Switzerland and Sweden, with four each; and Denmark, Spain, Belgium, Austria and the United States with two each, and Norway with one.

It is humiliating to American pride to be put in the lowest rank with countries as small as Denmark or as backward as Spain; the justice of the awards we do not question. The trouble goes farther back than that. We have not achieved, and we have not deserved.

But, why haven't we?

Missionaries Raise Coffee Price.

[Rochester Herald:] A New Englander gentleman reports the receipt of a letter from a coffee planter in Brazil, referring to complaints in this country concerning the high price of coffee. The letter says:

"Your people sent missionaries to tell the workers on our plantations that it was wrong to go naked, which was the custom, or partly so, in the majority of cases. Now they not only wear clothes, but they long to possess three or four pairs of those 'yellow shoes' which were sold down here by your Boston drummers. Furthermore, our travelers to the States upon their return tell us of the great quantities of a beverage called beer consumed by your people, and sold at 5 cents a glass. Now, any one who understands the coffee business knows that it costs more to produce a good cup of coffee than it does a glass of beer—and there can be no question as to which is the most beneficial. You must either call home your missionaries, both religious and commercial, or pay the price."

A Youthful Smoker.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] Wilbur Rhodes Lovern, 3 years old, of Pelham, Mass., has smoked his great grandfather's pipe since he was a year old. When Wilbur was an infant and cried for something to play with, his grandfather, to whom the pipe had descended, gave him the pipe. When Wilbur's mother discovered that he had learend to smoke she tried in vain to break him of the habit.

"I took the pipe away from him for a time," the mother said, "but he made such a fuss I had to give it back. When he does not have it he will get a knife and whittle at a piece of wood, and put it in his mouth and try to smoke it. When anybody passes by he will run out and ask for tobacco."

Mrs. Lovern fears the authorities will not permit her son to attend school unless he gives up smoking. The family physician says the practice is not injuring the child's health. Last week Mrs. Lovern bought Wilbur a little curved stem pipe, which he insists upon taking to bed every night.

How He Gets His Living.

[Boston Journal:] A good story regarding one of Boston's judges comes by way of a fisherman lawyer. He was up in one of the camps far into the Maine woods and got into conversation with a native. The latter, in talking of Boston, asked the visitor if he knew there a lawyer named Pierce—"Ned" Pierce.

"I'm not sure of a lawyer by that name. But there is a judge of the Superior Bench."

"Wa'al" said the Maine man "I b'leeve I have heard he got his livin' by judgin.' "

Aluminum Deposits.

Considerable attention has been attracted lately to the deposits of aluminum ore in California. The Alumina Oxide Manufacturing and Mining Company controls 2240 acres near Long Beach, and 300 acres east of Oroganda, in San Bernardino county. Government engineers have examined the deposit and pronounced them workable.

Pacific Home Builders

The reason for the increased dividend rate was due to the greatly increased earning power and profits made by the sale of houses and real estate. With a sufficient amount remaining in the surplus fund, proving conclusively that the enlarged dividend was warranted.

SHILOH—SUNDAY, DAY AND NIGHT—AND MONDAY, APRIL 6 AND 7, 1862.

By MAJ.-GEN. M. F. FORCE, U.S.V.,

Formerly Commanding First Division Seventeenth Army Corps. [From "Campaigns of the Civil War," Scribner's Sons.]

I.

"THE GATHERING OF THE FORCES."

THIS is the title of the distinguished author's detailed and authoritative chapter, in "Campaigns of the Civil War," which immediately precedes his luminous and comprehensive narrative of the battle itself. From this thirty-page introductory to that historical narrative (following "Fort Henry and Corinth"), only these sentences are here extracted:

On Saturday, April 5, 1862, Gen. Grant sent this dispatch to Gen. Halleck: "Just as my letter of yesterday to Capt. McLean, Assistant Adjutant-General, was finished, notes from Gens. McClernand's and Sherman's adjutants-general were received, stating that our outposts had been attacked by the enemy, apparently in considerable force. I immediately went up, but found all quiet. The enemy took two officers and four or five of our men prisoners, and wounded four. We took eight prisoners and killed several. Number of the enemy's wounded not known. They had with them three pieces of artillery, and cavalry and infantry. How much cannot, of course, be estimated. I have scarcely the faintest idea of an attack (general one) being made upon us, but will be prepared should such a thing take place. Gen. Nelson's division has arrived. The other two, of Buell's column, will arrive tomorrow or next day. It is my present intention to send them to Hamburg, some four miles above Pittsburg, when they all get here. From that point to Corinth the road is good, and a junction can be formed with the troops from Pittsburg at almost any point. Col. McPherson has gone with an escort today to examine the defensibility of the ground about Hamburg, and to lay out the position of the camp, if advisable to occupy that place." Earlier on the same day Gen. Grant also telegraphed to Gen. Halleck: "The main force of the enemy is at Corinth, with troops at different points east. Small garrisons are also at Bethel, Jackson and Humboldt. The number at these places seems constantly to change. The number of the enemy at Corinth, and within supporting distance of it, cannot be far from eighty thousand men." Gen. Halleck was preparing to leave St. Louis and come to the front to take immediate command of the combined army for the march on to Corinth. He advised Buell he would leave in the beginning of the coming week."

II.

SHILOH—SUNDAY.

THREE companies of the Twenty-fifth Missouri, which regiment formed the right of Col. Peabody's brigade, Prentiss's division, were sent out on reconnoissance about 5 o'clock in the morning of Sunday, April 6th. Following the road cautiously in a southwesterly direction, oblique to the line of the camp, they struck the enemy's pickets in front of Gen. Sherman's division. Gen. Johnston, at breakfast with his staff, hearing the fire of the encounter, turned to his son Preston and to Capt. Munford, and directed them to note the hour in their blank books. It was just fourteen minutes after 5 o'clock.

Order was given to advance. To communicate the order along the line required time. Gen. Beauregard says the advance began at half-past five. The three companies struck a battalion under Maj. Hardcastle, on Hardee's picket line. Maj. Hardcastle was posted on picket with a battalion of the Third Mississippi, a quarter of a mile in front of Wood's brigade, Hardee's corps. Lieut. McNulty was posted with a small party, one hundred yards, and Lieut. Hammock with another small party, two hundred yards, in front of the center of the battalion. Cavalary videttes were still farther to the front.

The major reports: "About dawn the cavalry videttes fired three shots, wheeled and galloped back. Lieut. Hammock suffered the enemy to approach within ninety yards. Their lines seemed to be 350 yards long and to number about 1000. He fired upon them and joined his battalion with his men. Lieut. McNulty received the enemy with his fire at about 100 yards, and then joined his battalion with his men, when the videttes rode back to my main position. At the first alarm my men were in line and all ready. I was on a rise of ground, men kneeling. The enemy opened a heavy fire on us at a distance of about 200 yards, but most of the shots passed over us. We returned the fire immediately and kept it up. Capt. Claire, aide to Gen. Wood, came and encouraged us. We fought the enemy an hour or more, without giving an inch. Our loss in this engagement was: Killed, four privates; severely wounded, one sergeant, one corporal and eight privates; slightly wounded, the color-sergeant and nine privates. At about 6:30 o'clock a.m. I saw the brigade formed in my rear, and I fell back."

At 6 o'clock Col. Moore of the Twenty-first Missouri, also of Peabody's brigade, was directed by Gen. Prentiss to move out with five companies to support the pickets. About half a mile from camp he met the three companies of the Twenty-fifth returning. Dispatching the wounded on to camp, and sending for the rest of his regiment, he halted with the detachment of the Twenty-fifth till joined by his remaining five companies. So reinforced, he continued his advance 200 yards, met the advance of Shaver's brigade, halted on the edge of a field and repulsed it. Col. Moore being wounded, Lieut.-Col. Van Horn took command, and was further reinforced; after an engagement of half an hour, was overpowered and fell back to the support of the brigade.

According to Gen. Bragg's report, Johnston's line of battle, after marching less than a mile beyond the scene of the first attack made by the three companies of the Twenty-fifth Missouri, came upon the strengthened National pickets, which he calls advanced posts. These fell back fighting. The army advanced steadily another mile, pushing back the fighting pickets, and then encountered the National troops "in strong force almost along the entire line. His batteries were posted on eminences, with strong infantry supports. Finding the first line was now unequal to the work before it, being weakened by extension, and necessarily broken by the nature of the ground, I ordered my whole force to move up steadily and promptly to its support."

Thus opened the battle of Shiloh. A combat made up of numberless separate encounters of detached portions of broken lines, continually shifting position and changing direction in the forest and across ravines, filling an entire day, is almost incapable of a connected narrative. As the first shock of the meeting lines of battle was near the right of the National line, an intelligible account may be given by describing the action of the divisions of Grant's army separately, beginning with the right, or Sherman's.

The direction of Gen. Johnston's advance was such as to bring him first in contact with Sherman's left and Prentiss's right. To preserve even an approximate alignment of a line of battle of two miles of front, marching with artillery, through wet forest, over rough, yet soft ground, with regiments in column doubled on the center, the advance was necessarily slow. The reports show that portions of the second line, instead of keeping the prescribed distance of 800 yards in rear of the first, overtook it, and had to halt to regain the distance. The National pickets, posted a mile in front of the camps, were struck about 6:30 o'clock. Col. J. Thompson, aide-de-camp to Gen. Beauregard, in his report to his chief, says: "The first cannon was discharged on our left at 7 o'clock, which was followed by a rapid discharge of musketry. About 7:30 I rode forward with Col. Jordan to the front to ascertain how the battle was going. Then I learned from Gen. Johnston that Gen. Hardee's line was within half a mile of the enemy's camps and bore from Gen. Johnston a message that he advised sending forward strong reinforcements to our left. From 9 o'clock to 9:30 the cannonading was very heavy along the whole line, but especially in the center, which was in the line of their camps. About 10 o'clock you moved forward with your staff and halted within about half a mile of the enemy's camps."

SHERMAN'S DIVISION.

The Seventy-seventh Ohio, of Hildebrand's Brigade, was ordered the evening before to go out to See's Sunday morning, and reinforce the picket reserve stationed there, and was up early Sunday morning. Gen. Buckland, having slept little in the night, rose early. While at breakfast he received word that the pickets were heavily attacked and were falling back toward camp. He at once had the long roll sounded, and his brigade formed on the color-line. He rode over to Gen. Sherman's headquarters, a few hundred yards off, and reported the facts.

Meanwhile, the brigades of Hildebrand and McDowell formed on their respective color-lines. The division was formed—Taylor's battery on a rising ground in front of Shiloh church; Hildebrand's brigade to its left, the Seventy-seventh Ohio being next to the battery, and four guns of Waterhouse's battery placed between the Fifty-seventh and Fifty-third Ohio—the Fifty-third detached and forming the extreme left. The other two guns of Waterhouse's battery were advanced to the front beyond Oak Creek.

Buckland's brigade formed to the right of Taylor's battery, and McDowell's still farther to the right, on the bluffs of Oak Creek, near its junction with Owl Creek, and separated from Buckland by a lateral ravine which opened into Oak Creek. Behr's battery was with McDowell. One of its guns, with two companies of infantry, was stationed still farther to the right, commanding the bridges over Oak Creek and Owl Creek, immediately above their junction.

The advanced section of Waterhouse's battery fell back before an approaching skirmish line and took position with the battery. Gen. Sherman rode to the front of the Fifty-third, to the edge of a ravine, the continuation or source of Oak Creek, and saw, through the forest beyond, Johnston's lines sweeping across his front toward his left. At the same time, Gen. Johnston was a few hundred yards off, on the other side of the ravine, putting Gen. Hindman with one of his brigades into position for attack. Hindman's skirmishers opened fire and killed Sherman's orderly. Sherman's brigades advanced to the sloping of the ravine of Oak Creek; Sherman had already sent word to Gen. McClernand asking for support to his left; to Gen. Prentiss, giving him notice that the enemy was in force in front, and to Gen. Hurlbut, asking him to support Prentiss.

The first line of Johnston's army, commanded by Gen. Hardee, opened, widening the intervals between brigades as it advanced. The two brigades commanded by Gen. Hindman, having less rough ground to traverse, outstripped Gen. Cleburne. Hindman's own brigade, commanded by Col. Shaver, inclining to the right, struck Prentiss's right. Gen. Hindman in person, with Wood's brigade, came to the front of the Fifty-third Ohio. Gen. Johnston, having put it in position, rode back to Cleburne and moved his brigade to Buckland's front. The battle opened. The Fifty-third Ohio, detached by the position of its camp from the rest of Hildebrand's brigade, being off to the left and farther to the front, was first engaged. According to the report of Lieut.-Col. Fulton, the advancing line of Wood's brigade having twice recoiled before the fire of the regiment, Col. Appler cried out to his men to fall back and save themselves. The regiment retired in confusion behind McClernand's Third Brigade, which had come up in support; but, soon rallied by the lieutenant-colonel and Adjt. Dawes, it returned to the front to the bank of the stream. The colonel reappeared and again ordered a retreat. The regiment was now fatally broken. Adjt. Dawes, however, rallied two companies and attached them to the Seventeenth Illinois, of McClernand's Third Brigade, while a considerable detachment joined the Seventy-seventh Ohio, then commanded by Maj. Fearing. In the afternoon Lieut.-Col. Fulton, with the greater part of the regiment reunited, acted as support to Bouton's battery.

Gen. Patton Anderson, with his brigade, and Capt. Hodgson's battery of the Washington Artillery, pressed forward from Johnston's second line, commanded by Gen. Bragg, into the gap between Hindman and Cleburne. Posting his battery on high ground, he advanced his brigade down into the wet and bushy valley of Oak Creek and charged up the slope. Taylor's battery and the Fifty-seventh and Seventy-seventh Ohio instantly drove him back. His regiments, not discouraged, charged singly, and, when broken, charged by battalion, but could not withstand the fire, and as often fell back. Gen. Johnston, who had passed on toward Arkansas "halted under the brow of an abrupt hill." The Second Tennessee had moved to the rear, and did not rejoin the brigade during the battle. Cleburne was not again severely engaged during the day. Col. Pond kept his brigade, in pursuance of Gen. Bragg's order, watching the crossings of Owl Creek.

But the brigades of Anderson and Wood pressed on. Trabue's heavy brigade of five regiments, two batallions and two batteries, had been detached from the reserve at Beauregard's request for reinforcements, and sent by Johnston to his extreme left. Skirting Owl Creek, he came in full force upon Sherman's right flank, at half-past 12 o'clock. McDowell's two remaining regiments, the Sixth Iowa and Forty-sixth Ohio, were quickly moved to confront Trabue. McDowell's regiments were more alert in movement and opened a hot fire before Trabue was completely deployed and in position. A steady combat through the timber and underbrush, and across the ravines, lasted an hour and a half. The Sixth Iowa lost fifty-one killed and 120 wounded; the Forty-sixth Ohio, losing fewer killed, but more wounded—thirty-four killed, 150 wounded, and fifty-two taken prisoners—was quite shattered, and took no further part in the battle. Col. Trabue's estimate of the character of the fighting at this point appears from his statement that his command in this encounter killed and wounded four or five hundred of the Forty-sixth Ohio alone. It appears also from his report, which has never been officially published, but which is printed in the "History of the First Kentucky Brigade," that, of the 844 casualties in the brigade in the two days' battle, 534 were in the four regiments engaged in this encounter. Sherman readjusted his line, resting his right on a deep ravine running to Owl Creek, and keeping his left in connection with McClernand. Trabue was reinforced by Gen. A. P. Stewart and part of his brigade, and a part of Anderson's brigade, which had been resting in a ravine in the rear. The struggle lasted with varying intensity and alternate success.

There were charges and counter-charges, ground was lost and regained; but the general result was a recession of the battered division to the left and rear. About 4 o'clock, during a lull, Sherman moved his reduced command still farther in the same direction, and took position so as to cover the road by which Lewis Wallace was to arrive. Here, with an open field in front, he was not further molested, and here he bivouacked for the night. At this point, Capt. Hickenlooper, who had been engaged all day in the sturdy defence made by Prentiss, joined Sherman with his battery. Buckland, rejoined by the Seventieth Ohio, was ordered, late in the afternoon, to take his brigade to the bridge over Snake Creek, by which Lewis Wallace was expected. From this point the Forty-eighth Ohio marched to the landing for ammunition, and was there detained as a portion of the force supporting the reserve artillery till next morning. The bridge appearing free from peril, Buckland returned to the place of bivouac, constituting the right of Sherman's line. The Thirteenth Missouri in W. H. L. Wallace's division, was ordered in the morning to take a designated position on the Purdy road. This brought him on the left of Gen. Sherman's new line. The remnant of Hildebrand's brigade formed on Wright's left and operated with him.

Meanwhile Gen. Grant, at breakfast at Savannah, nine miles below Pittsburg Landing by river, but six miles in an air-line, heard the firing. He at once sent an order to Gen. Nelson to march his division up the river to opposite Pittsburg; and, not aware that Gen. Buell had arrived the previous evening, sent a letter out to meet him, advising him of the order given to Nelson and explaining the reason for not waiting in person for his arrival. Steaming up the river, he stopped at Crump's Landing at 8 o'clock and directed Lewis Wallace to hold his division in readiness to move. Arrived at Pittsburg Landing, Col. Pride, of his staff, at once organized ammunition trains, which were busy all day supplying the troops at the front. The Twenty-third Missouri, just arrived by boat, he hurried out to reinforce Prentiss. The Fifteenth Iowa, first arrived, and the Sixteenth, sent by Prentiss to the Landing for ammunition, he directed to form line, arrest the tide of stragglers from the front, and organize them to return. Riding to the front, he found Gen. Sherman a little before 10 o'clock in his hottest engagement, still holding the enemy at bay in front of his camp; told him that Wallace would come up from Crump's Landing; sent word to Wallace to move; to Nelson, to hasten his movements; returned to the landing, dispatched the two Iowa regiments to reinforce McClernand, and proceeded to visit the other divisions in the field.

The loaded wagons of McDowell's brigade, hurrying to the rear along the Purdy road, interfered with the formation of Sherman's new line. Behr's battery, galloping to the position assigned to it—the center of the line—added to the difficulty. This battery was hardly in position and under fire before Capt. Behr was killed, and the men abandoned their guns, fleeing from the field with the caissons. The line so disordered and broken was hard pressed by the enemy, and Sherman selected another line of defense, to his left and rear, connecting with McClernand's right. McDowell, nearly cut off by the enemy pressing through the gap left by Behr's men, brought the remaining gun of this battery from its position near the bridge, and by a rapid fire pressed back the advance. His regiments became separated while struggling through dense thickets to the new position. The Fortieth Illinois found itself marching by the flank, with a deep ravine along its left, and a confederate regiment marching in parallel course not far to its right. Thus cut off, the Fortieth formed with its rear to the ravine, with a desperate effort drove its dangerous companion out of the way, and, pushing through the timber, came into a valley in rear of McClernand.

Not all the force engaged in the two hours' fight in front of Sherman's camp followed him to his new position. Cleburne had difficulty in reforming his shattered command. The remnant of the Sixth Mississippi marched to the rear under command of the senior surviving captain, disabled for further service. The fragment of the Twenty-Third Tennessee remaining near Cleburne was sent to the rear to hunt up the portions that had broken from it in the contest. Cleburne, proceeding for his other regiments, was stopped by Gen. Hardee about noon, and directed to collect and bring into action the stragglers who were thronging in the captured camps. With the aid of cavalry he gathered up an unorganized multitude, but, finding he could do nothing with them, he resumed the search for his remaining regiments. About 2 o'clock he found the Fifth and Twenty-fourth Tennessee and Fifteenth Arkansas "halted under the brow of an abrupt hill." The Second Tennessee had moved to the rear, and did not rejoin the brigade during the battle. Cleburne was not again severely engaged during the day. Col. Pond kept his brigade, in pursuance of Gen. Bragg's order, watching the crossings of Owl Creek.

But the brigades of Anderson and Wood pressed on. From this point the Forty-eighth Ohio marched to the landing for ammunition, and was there detained as a portion of the force supporting the reserve artillery till next morning. The bridge appearing free from peril, Buckland returned to the place of bivouac, constituting the right of Sherman's line. The Thirteenth Missouri became separated from the division of the last struggle, was incorporated for the night in Col. Marsh's collection of regiments, constituting for the night McClernand's right. The position of the Thirteenth during the night was close by the headquarter tents of Gen. McArthur of W. H. L. Wallace's division. The Fifty-third Ohio bivouacked with the Eighty-first Ohio, in front of the camp of the Second Iowa, in Tuttle's brigade of W. H. Wallace's division. McDowell's brigade had disappeared from the division. Portions of the Fifty-seventh and Seventy-seventh Ohio, with Lieut.-Col. Rice and Maj. Fearing, were still with Sherman, and formed the left of his line in the bivouac.

M'CLERNAND.

The Forty-third Illinois, of McClernand's brigade, being out by permission, Sunday morning, to discharge their pieces, which had been loaded since they marched to the picket line, Friday evening, distant firing was heard. This being reported to Gen. McClernand, he sent an order to Col. Reardon to hold the brigade in readiness for action. Col. Reardon, being confined to bed by illness, directed Col. Raith to assume command. There was some delay in getting the brigade formed, owing to the sudden change of commanders and to the incredulity of the officers in some of the regiments as to the reality of an attack. The brigade being at length formed, advanced, and took position, with its right near Waterhouse's battery—its line making an angle with Sherman's line, so as to throw the left of the brigade upon and along Oak Creek. Col. Marsh of the Twentieth Illinois, heard considerable musketry on the left of the national camp. This continuing without material interruption for some time, he ordered regimental commanders to be in readiness to form, and soon after received an order from Gen. McClernand to form the brigade. Soon after the brigade was formed an order was received to advance to the support of Gen. Sherman, who was reported to be heavily attacked. The brigade moved to the left to a position assigned by Gen. McClernand. The first brigade was ordered to form three regiments on the left of the second, and to post one regiment the Eleventh Iowa, in reserve, in rear of the right of Col. Marsh's brigade. The alignment of the third brigade, by Col. Raith throwing his left too far to the front, so as to be exposed to a flank attack and also to cover Col. Marsh's right, Col. Raith wheeled his left to the rear to connect with Marsh. The right of McClernand's division, as thus formed, connected with Sherman, but the left was uncovered.

Gen. Johnston sent two brigades from Polk's corps, Col. Russell's and Gen. B. R. Johnson's, to reinforce his extreme left. Gen. Beauregard, who had taken immediate command on the Confederate left, sent them farther to his right, and they went into position on the left of Wood's brigade. Two regiments of Russell's brigade formed on the left of Wood, the rest were marched by Gen. Clark, the division commander, still farther to the right. Three of Gen. Johnson's regiments formed on the right of Russell's two, while Gen. Bragg moved Johnson's remaining two regiments off to his right, to another attack. The assault on Col. Marsh was made with great fury. In five minutes most of the field officers in the brigade were killed or wounded. The enemy's fire seemed especially directed at Burrow's battery, posted in the center of Marsh's brigade, all the horses of which were killed or disabled. The colonel and lieutenant-colonel of the Forty-eighth Illinois being wounded and taken off the field, the regiment finally became disorganized and retired in disorder. The other regiments fell back. The battery was lost. The First Brigade, which had not been severely engaged, next retired in some disorder. The Third Brigade, being now enfiladed and turned on its left flank, Col. Raith refused his left regiment, and was himself soon mortally wounded. Wood's brigade then wheeling to its left and advancing, the Third Brigade fell back, leaving Waterhouse's battery on the flank of Sherman's division exposed.

The division formed again, its right connected with Sherman's left on the Purdy road. When Sherman fell back from the Purdy road, McClernand adjusted his right to connect again with Sherman's left. While his right connected still with Sherman, his left for a while almost joined W. H. L. Wallace in the position which he had assumed, and, when pushed back still farther, his left was yet to some extent protected by the character of the ground, rough, intersected by ravines, and dotted with impenetrable thickets that intervened between it and W. H. L. Wallace. McAllister's battery, and Schwartz's battery commanded by Lieut. Naspel, were reinforced by Taylor's battery, commanded by Capt. Barrett, brought over from Sherman, and by Dresser's battery, commanded by Capt. Timony.

A determined and desperate struggle ensued, which lasted, with occasional intermissions, till late in the afternoon. Shaver's brigade, which, after a severe and protracted contest, had overcome Peabody's brigade of Prentiss's division, was ordered to the attack upon the left of McClernand's line. Advancing across a wide and open field, he encountered so hot a fire in front and on his right flank that his brigade recoiled back to the shelter of timber and halted paralyzed, till later in the day he was ordered to attack in another quarter. Gen. B. R. Johnson was wounded, and his brigade so severely handled that it retreated from the field, leaving its battery, Polk's, behind. McClernand's whole division advanced in line, pushing the enemy back half a mile through and beyond his camp. This success was only temporary. Changing front to meet fresh attacks, refusing first one flank, then the other, clinging desperately to his camp, but, on the whole, shifting slowly back from one position to another, he formed, in the afternoon, in the edge of timber, on the border of an open field, and here, during a pause of half an hour, supplied his command with ammunition. The respite was followed by a more furious assault. Falling back from his camp toward the river, to the farther side of a deep ravine of Brier Creek, he formed his line, facing west with wings refused, the center being the apex, and still connecting on the right with the remnant of Sherman's division. Several fitful onslaughts at intervals forced McClernand to refuse his left still farther.

The swinging around of McClernand's left, while he receded in a general direction toward the northeast, left a wide interval between his command and W. H. L. Wallace. The force which had been massed against him and Sherman had been diminished by detachments sent to aid in the attack against W. H. L. Wallace and Prentiss. The remainder drifted through the gap to Wallace's rear. Pond's brigade, to which had been assigned the special duty of guarding along Owl Creek against any advance around Johnston's left flank, constituted the extreme Confederate left. This brigade had been very little under fire during the day. The battery attached to it, Ketchum's, now was detached to aid in the assault upon Wallace's front. Pond, with three Louisiana regiments of his brigade, was directed to move to the left along the deep ravine which McClernand had crossed, and silence one of McClernand's batteries. Trabue's brigade, which had been struggling through the tangled forest, covering rough ground, separated by a lateral ravine from the ground in rear of Wallace and Prentiss, through the dense thickets of which ravine no command had been able to penetrate, was just emerging from the forest, and crossing the Brier Creek ravine toward Hurlbut's camp. Trabue's men, catching sight of the blue uniform of Pond's Louisiana regiments, fired upon them. This being silenced, Pond's brigade continued down the ravine, and up a lateral ravine toward the river, Col. Mouton's Eighteenth Louisiana in advance. As they neared the position the battery withdrew, unmasking a line of infantry. A murderous fire was opened by this line. Pond's brigade faltered, recoiled, withdrew; the Eighteenth Louisiana, according to Col Mouton's report, leaving 207 dead and wounded in the ravine.

This was the final attack on the National right. But scarcely was this over before Hurlbut's command came falling back through his camp, pushed on by Bragg and Breckenridge. W. H. L. Wallace's regiments, finding the force which had been contending with Sherman and McClernand closing on their rear, faced about and fought to their rear; some regiments succeeded in cutting their way through and streamed toward their camp. This sudden, tumultuous uproar, far in the rear of the day's conflict, infected McClernand's command, and a large part of it broke in disorder. The broken line was partially rallied and moved back to what McClernand designates as his eighth position taken in the course of the day and here he bivouacked for the night, his right joining the left of Sherman's bivouac; the left swung back so as to make an acute angle with it. Col. Marsh formed the right of the line. His "command having been reduced to a merely nominal one" in the afternoon, he had been sent back across the Brier Creek ravine before the rest of the division, to form a new line, arrest all stragglers, and detain all unattached fragments. Col. Davis, with the Forty-sixth Illinois, was resting in front of their camp in Veatch's brigade, Hurlbut's division, but on Col. Marsh's request took position on Marsh's right; McClernand, when he fell back, formed the rest of his command on Marsh's left. The line consisted of the Forty-sixth, Forty-eighth, Twentieth, Seventeenth, Forty-ninth, Forty-third and Forty-fifth Illinois, the Thirteenth Missouri and the Fifty-third and Eighty-first Ohio. The Forty-sixth Illinois lay in front of its camp, being the right of Veatch's brigade camp, Hurlbut's division. The Forty-eighth and Twentieth lay on its left. The Seventeenth and Forty-ninth and Forty-third moved around to connect with Sherman's left. The position of the Forty-third was between the bivouac of the Forty-sixth Illinois and the Thirteenth Missouri, and midway between the camp of the Ninth Illinois and McArthur's brigade, W. H. L. Wallace's division, and the camp of the Forty-sixth Illinois. The Fifty-third and Eighty-first Ohio were in front of the camp of the Second Iowa, Tuttle's brigade, W. H. L. Wallace's division. Col. Crocker, Thirteenth Iowa, who has assumed command of the First Brigade on the wounding of Col. Hare, bivouacked with his regiment in front of the camp of the Fourteenth Iowa, Tuttle's brigade. The Eighth and Eighteenth Illinois spent the night with the reserve artillery.

Col. Veatch, commanding Hurlbut's Second Brigade, formed his command at 7:30 o'clock in the morning, and was shortly after ordered to march to the support of Sherman. He reached a point not well defined, between 9 and 10 o'clock, and was placed in reserve. He soon became hotly engaged on McClernand's left. His two right regiments, the Fifteenth and Forty-sixth Illinois, became separated from Col. Veatch with the other two regiments, and then separated from each other. The Forty-sixth aided the Sixth Iowa and Forty-sixth Ohio in their desperate struggle with Trabue, and after continual engagements, being forced back to within half a mile of its camp, repaired thither about 2 o'clock and had a comfortable dinner. The Fifteenth suffered severely. The lieutenant-colonel and the major, the only field-officers with the regiment, were killed, two captains were killed and one wounded, one lieutenant was killed and six wounded. Col. Veatch, with the Twenty-fifth Indiana and Fourteenth Illinois, continued fighting and maneuvering with skill and determination till he retreating division of Hurlbut passed along his rear. Col. Veatch then reported to Hurlbut, and formed part of his line of defense in support of the reserve artillery at the close of the day.

PRENTISS AND W. H. L. WALLACE

Prentiss's division in the front line, and W. H. L. Wallace's on the plateau between the river and Brier Creek, were more widely separated in camp than any other two divisions; but in the contest of Sunday they operated together.

Col. Moore, of the Twenty-first Missouri, being wounded early in the encounter with the Confederate advance, Lieut.-Col. Woodyard took command of the regiment, together with the accompanying detachment of the Twenty-fifth Missouri and four companies of the Sixteenth Wisconsin, sent out the night before to reinforce the pickets. Pushed by Shaver's brigade, he fell back after a struggle on the edge of a field, to the farther side of a narrow ridge, about half a mile from camp, where he was joined by Col. Peabody with the rest of the brigade. After a contest of half an hour, Shaver was repulsed and fell back. Gen. A. S. Johnston, observing men dropping out of the ranks of the retreating brigade, rallied it himself and ordered it to renew the attack. Peabody recoiled under the fresh onset, and falling back, took his place, constituting the right of the line of battle of the division formed a quarter of a mile in advance of the camp.

Gladden's brigade, forming part of Bragg's corps, on the second line of Johnston's army, was moved forward to extend the right of Hardee on the first line, when, by the divergence of Lick Creek from Owl Creek, Hardee's line became inadequate to fill the distance between them. The line of Johnston's advance being oblique to the line of Prentiss's front, Gladden arrived in front of Prentiss's left after Shaver had become engaged with Peabody. Col. Adams, who took command of the brigade upon the death of Gen. Gladden, and who made the full report of the brigade, says the brigade arrived in position at 8 o'clock. Col. Deas, who took command when Adams was wounded, says they arrived a little after 7 o'clock. Col. Loomis, who was in command on the return to Corinth, says in his report, made April 13, that the engagement of this brigade began at half-past 7 o'clock. Wheeling to the left and deploying into line, the brigade moved confidently forward. Gladden was mortally wounded and his command fell back in confusion. Gen. Johnston ordered it to return to the attack, but on inspecting its condition, countermanded the order.

Chalmers's brigade, coming up from the second line, made an impetuous charge. Jackson's brigade, which followed in rear of Chalmers, moved forward and joined in the attack. Prentiss fell back and made a stand immediately in front of his camp. After a gallant, but short struggle, his division, about 9 o'clock, gave way and fell back through his camp, leaving behind Powell's guns and caissons and two of Hickenlooper's guns, all the horses of Hickenlooper's two guns being killed. The line was broken and disordered by the tents. The Twenty-fifth Missouri, and portions of other regiments drifted to the rear. On the summit of a slope, covered by dense thicket, not far to the rear of his camp, Prentiss rallied the Eighteenth and Twenty-first Missouri, Twelfth Michigan and Eighteenth Wisconsin. The Sixty-first Illinois and Sixteenth Wisconsin were also rallied, but detached to form in reserve to Hurlbut. The Twenty-third Missouri, arriving by boat at the landing after the battle had begun, moved out at once and took position in Prentiss's new line. In this position his left was near the extreme southern head of the ravine of Brier Creek; thence his line extended along an old, sunk, washed-out road running a little north of west, and reached nearly to the Corinth road. Prentiss in person put Hickenlooper's battery in position immediately to the right of the Corinth road, near the intersection of the roads. Prentiss's men used the road cut as a defense, lying down in it and firing from it. Gen. Grant, visiting Prentiss, approved the position and directed him to hold it at all hazards. The order was obeyed. Continually assailed by successive brigades, he repelled every attack and held the position till the close of the day.

Gen. W. H. L. Wallace, commanding Smith's division, formed his regiment at 8 o'clock. Some of the regiments loaded their wagons and received extra ammunition. At half-past eight o'clock the division moved; McArthur, with two of his regiments, the Ninth and Twelfth Illinois, went to support Stuart's brigade at its isolated camp at the extreme left of the National line, having sent the Thirteenth Missouri to Sherman, and left the Fourteenth Missouri and Eighty-first Ohio to guard the bridge over Snake Creek, on the Crump's Landing road. Wallace led his other two bridages to the support of Prentiss, placing Tuttle on Prentiss's right, and Sweeney to the right of Tuttle. Tuttle's left was about 100 yards to the right of the Corinth road, and the division line extending northwestwardly behind a clear field, Sweeney's right reached the head of a wide, deep ravine—called in some of the Confederate reports a gorge—which ravine, filled with impenetrable thickets, extended from his right far to his rear and ran into the ravine of Brier Creek. Wallace added to the defence of this ravine by posting sharpshooters along its border. Gen. Wallace detached the Eighth Iowa from Sweeney' brigade and placed it across the Corinth road, filling the interval between the two divisions.

Wallace's line was barely formed when, at 10 o'clock, Gladden's brigade, now commanded by Col. Adams, moved again against Prentiss. Advancing slowly up the slight ascent through impending thickets, against the unseen foe, it encountered a blaze of fire from the summit, faltered, wavered, hesitated, retreated and withdrew out of range. A. P. Stewart led his brigade against Wallace's front, was driven back, returned to the assault, and was again hurled back; but still rallied, and moved once more in vain, to be again sent in retreat.

The Confederates gave this field slope the name "The Hornet's Nest." Gen. Bragg ordered Gibson with his brigade to carry the position. The fresh column charged gallantly, but the deadly line of musketry in front and an enfilading fire from the well-posted battery, mowed down its ranks; and Gibson's brigade fell back, discomfited. Gibson asked for artillery. None was at hand. Bragg ordered him to charge again. The colonels of the four regiments thought it useless. The order was given. The brigade struggled up the tangled ascent; but once more met the inexorable fire that hurled them back. Four times Gibson charged, and was four times repulsed. Col. Allen of the Fourth Louisiana, one of Gibson's regiments, rode back to Gen. Bragg to repeat the request for artillery. Stung by the answer, "Col. Allen, I want no faltering now," he returned to his regiment, led it in a desperate dash up the slope, more persistent and therefore more destructive, and returned with the fragment of its command that was not left strewn upon the hillside.

As the line of Sherman and McClernand continually contracted as they fell back, the successive reinforcements pushed in toward the left of the Confederate line, gradually pressed Hindman's two brigades—for wholly against McClernand's front, then against his left, then beyond its line. These two brigades were then moved to the front of W. H. L. Wallace. Flushed with victory, they advanced with confidence. The resistless fire wounded Hindman and drove back his command. Led by Gen. A. P. Stewart, the brigades gallantly advanced again and rushed against the fatal fire, only to be delivered into fragments that recoiled, to remain out of the contest for the rest of the day.

The commander of the Confederate Army was killed farther to the right at half past 2 o'clock in the afternoon. As the news of this loss spread, there was a feeling of uncertainty and visible relaxation of effort in parts of his command. In front of Prentiss and Wallace attack was suspended about an hour.

Hickenlooper's four guns, standing at the salient where Prentiss and Wallace joined, sweeping both fronts, all day long been reaping bloody harvests among the lines of assailants that strove to approach. So near, so far, in plain view, yet out of reach, the little battery exasperated the baffled brigades while it extorted their admiration. Gen. Ruggles sent staff officers in all directions to open in all the guns they could reach. He gives the names of eleven batteries and one section which he placed in a great crescent, pouring in a concentric fire. From this tornado of missiles Hickenlooper withdrew his battery complete, and, passing to the rear, through Hurlbut's camp, reported to Sherman for further service.

The terrible fire of this artillery was supplemented by continued but desultory infantry attacks. The Crescent regiment of Louisiana ceased to charge, but recoiled. Patton Anderson led his brigade up, but was driven back. About 4 o'clock, Hurlbut, whose right had joined Prentiss's left, finally gave way, and Bragg, following him, passed on to the rear of Prentiss. By half past 4 the fighting in front of Sherman and McClernand had ceased, and Chalmers, Trabue, Johnson and Russell, finding themselves supported by the Forty-first Illinois, coming to his aid and going into position by the headquarters of Sherman's regiments (the Seventy-first Ohio,) formed his line, the Seventy-first Ohio and Fifty-fifth Illinois to the left of this battery and facing nearly west, the Fifty-fourth Ohio and their left and facing south. He sent four companies as skirmishers across the ravine to the south of his camp, which discharges eastwardly into Lick Creek. His skirmishers were unable to prevent the establishment of a hostile battery on the heights beyond the ravine. While he was on the bank of the ravine observing the enemy with his glass, Mann's battery, after firing a few rounds at the hospital battery at a range of 1100 yards, withdrew with the Forty-first Illinois back into the field, to connect with their brigade. The Seventy-first Ohio, without orders, at the same time retired. The Seventy-first Ohio was engaged in supporting distance of the brigade in its first combat, though without the knowledge of Col. Stuart; but it was not with the brigade during the rest of the day. The adjutant, however, returned with a score of men after the regiment disappeared.

Gen. Johnston, having personally met the battle begun on his left and center, proceeded to reconnoiter the rational right and try the feasibility of turning it. Chalmers, called from the attack on Prentiss, retired a short distance and halted half an hour, waiting for a guide and further orders. He then marched directly south, across the ravine, which runs eastwardly and debouches into Lick Creek, near the site of Stuart's camp, 1862, advancing along the high land beyond, eastwardly toward the river, arrived opposite Stuart's camp. Here a fire of the skirmishers sent across a ravine by Stuart threw the Fifty-second Tennessee into disorder. Chalmers, finding it impossible to rally more than two companies of the regiment, ordered the remaining eight companies out of the line, and they took no further part in the battle.

confronted by the brigade
Pugh, but its flank was by the Seventeenth and Kentucky, which Gen. promptly wheeled to the left,

against the fence bounding the westerly face of the field. The assault made in this field was gallant and deliberate, but brief and sanguinary.
Pugh's command remained still until the lines, advancing over the open field, were near. Then rising, they poured in a volley, and continued firing into the smoke until no bullets were heard whistling back from the front. The two Kentucky regiments poured in their fire upon the flank, and when the smoke cleared away the field was so thickly strewn with bodies that the Third Iowa, supposing it was the hostile force lying down, began to reopen fire upon them.

Before Withers's division became thus engaged with Huribut, McArthur, and Stuart, Gen. Johnston had dispatched Trabue's brigade, of Breckenridge's reserve, off to his extreme left, to report to Gen. Beauregard, who, stationed at Shiloh Church, was superintending operations in that quarter. The three brigades, Bowen, Statham, Trabue, composing the reserve, had marched in rear of Gen.
Johnston's right in echelon, at intervals of eight hundred yards. Johnston, observing with anxiety the stubborn resistance opposed to Withers's division, and eager to crush the National right, called up the remaining brigades of the reserve, Bowen and Statham, and pushed them forward.
Bowen was first engaged, and the National left, in a series of encounters with the increased force in its front, gradually but slowly receded, always forming and rallying on the next ridge in rear of the one abandoned.

The Forty-first Illinois, constituting the left of Huribut's division, held its position, and the Thirty-second Illinois was moved from its place to support the Forty-first. The afternoon was come. Johnston directed Statham's brigade against this position.
Statham deployed under cover of a ridge, facing and commanded by the higher ridge held by the Illinois regiments, and marched in line up the slope. On reaching the summit, coming into view and range, he was received by a fire that broke his command, and his regiments fell back behind the slope in confusion. Battle's Tennessee regiment on the right alone maintained its position and advanced.
Lytle's Tennesse regiment three times rallied and advanced; but, unable to stand the fire, fell back. Every time it fell back, the Thirty-second Illinois threw an oblique fire into Battle's regiment, aiding the direct fire of the Forty-first, and preventing Battle's further advance. The Forty-fifth Tennessee could not be urged up the slope. Squads would leave the ranks, run up to a fence, fire, and fall back to place; but the regiment would not advance. Gen. Breckenridge, foiled and irritated, rode to Gen.
Johnston and complained he had a Tennesse regiment that would not fight. Gov. Harris, of Tennessee, who was with Johnston, remonstrated, and riding to the Forty-fifth, appealed to it, but in vain. Gen. Johnston moved to the front of the brigade, now standing in line, rode slowly along the front, promised to lead them himself, and appealed to them to follow. The halting soldiers were aroused to enthusiasm. Johnston, Breckenridge, and Gov. Harris in front, followed by the brigade, charged up the slope and down the hollow beyond. Unchecked by the hot fire of the Illinois regiments, they pushed up the higher slope, and the position was gained.

The Illinois regiments fell back slowly, halting at intervals to turn and fire, and were not pursued. One of those Parthian shots struck Gen.
Johnston, cut an artery, and, no surgeon being at hand, he bled to death in a few minutes. His body was carried at once by his staff back to Corinth. Gen. Beauregard, at his station at Shiloh Church, was notified of the death, and assumed command.
Albert Sydney Johnston was a man of pure life, and, like McPherson, full of the traits that call out genuine and devoted friendships. He was esteemed by many the ablest general in the Confederate service. His death was deplored in the South as a fatal loss. It was half-past 2 when Johnston fell. The loss paralyzed operations in that part of the field, and for an hour there was here a lull. The two Illinois regiments, though not followed, failed to rally, and fell back to a bluff near the landing, where Col. Webster was putting batteries into position.

Gen. Bragg, hearing of the death of Gen. Johnston, while he was superintending operations in front of Prentiss and W. H. L. Wallace, rode to the Confederate right. He there found a strong force, consisting of three parts, without a common head;
Gen. Breckenridge, with two brigades of his reserve division, pressing forward; Gen. Withers, with his division greatly exhausted and taking a temporary rest, and Gen. Cheatham, with his division of Polk's corps, to their left and rear. Bragg at once assumed command, and began to assemble these divisions and form them for a general advance. Huribut, observing these preparations, moved Lauman's brigade, which had already twice replenished its boxes and expended 100 rounds of cartridges—to his left to fill the gap made by the retreat of the Thirty-second and Forty-first Illinois. Willard's battery, that accompanied McArthur's brigade, was posted near the road from the landing to Hamburg. Huribut brought up two twenty-pound guns of Maj. Cavender's artillery, which were served by Surgeon Cornine and Lieut. Edwards. A little after 4, according to Bragg, about half-past 3, according to Huribut, Bragg moved forward. The artillery, aided by the rapid fire of Huribut's infantry, checked the first impulse and made the advancing line pause. Huribut, taking advantage of the lull, and first notifying Prentiss, withdrew Lauman's brigade and the artillery.
Bragg's line advanced again. Huribut attempted to make another stand in front of his camp, but the attempt was ineffectual. He fell back to the height behind Webster's batteries.

The Third Iowa and Twenty-eighth Illinois, under Col. Pugh, made a desperate effort to maintain their position, but were ordered by Gen.
Huribut to fall back when Lauman retired. These two regiments fell back fighting, forming wherever the ground gave vantage, and turning upon their pursuers. In the little field they halted and replenished their cartridge-boxes. Here the Twenty-second Alabama attacked them, but was so roughly handled that it took no further part in the contest that day. As these two regiments fell back thus slowly, from time to time turning at bay, portions of Bragg's command were pushing behind them and the troops of Hardee, coming from the front of Sherman and McClernand, were reaching toward their front. A narrow gap was left, and through a gauntlet of fire, still fighting, the little band pressed on and joined Huribut behind Webster's artillery.

The gunboat Tyler, commanded by Lieut. Gwin, fired from ten minutes to 3 o'clock until ten minutes to 4 upon Breckenridge's brigades, and, joined by the Lexington, commanded by Lieut. Shirk, fired later upon the portion of Bragg's command close to the river bank, for thirty-five minutes. This fire drove a battery from its position, threw Gibson's brigade and a portion of Trabue's brigade into disorder, killed ten and wounded many of Wood's brigade, killed and wounded a number of Anderson's brigade, and compelled it to seek shelter in a ravine.

As the National lines were drifting back toward the landing, Col. Webster, of Gen. Grant's staff, gathered all the artillery within reach—Maj.
Cavender's six twenty-pounders, Sil-versparre's twenty-pound Parrotts, and some light batteries—on a commanding position from a quarter to half a mile from the landing. Immediately above the landing a wide and deep ravine opens to the river.
For some distance back from the river its bottom was filled with backwater and was impassable. Half a mile back it was still deep, abrupt, and wet, though passable for infantry. Here Col. Webster gathered from thirty-five to fifty guns. Two of Huribut's batteries — Mann's commanded by Lieut. Brotzman, and Ross's—had done brilliant service;
Brotzman's battery of four pieces had fired off one hundred and ninety-four rounds per gun. Ross's battery was lost in the retreat. Brotzman lost so many horses that he was able to bring off only three guns. These took place in Webster's frowning line. Huribut was joined at this position by half of Veatch's brigade, which had been with McClernand through the day, and reformed his division in support of the artillery. Gen. Grant directed him to assume command of all regiments and coherent fragments near.
The Forty-eighth Ohio, of Buckland's brigade, being then at the landing, some of W. H. L. Wallace's regiments, that succeeded in breaking through the encircling force, and other detachments, reported to him. Squads of men, separated from their commands, fell in. Huribut thus gathered in support of the artillery a force in line which he estimated at four thousand men.

Gen. Bragg proposed to push his success and attempted to withdraw his two divisions, Ruggles's and Withers's, from the tumult which accompanied the surrender, and ordered them to press forward and assault the position to which Huribut had fallen back. When Ruggles received Bragg's order for farther advance, one of his brigades, Pond's, was on the extreme Confederate left, near Owl Creek; Gibson's brigade was in confusion, caused by the fire of the gunboats; Anderson's was apart in a ravine, taking shelter from the same fire. But Ruggles began at once to assemble what force he could. Of Withers's division, the First Brigade was scattered. The brigades of Jackson and Chalmers received the order while they were resting in the field where the Third Iowa had rested and filled their cartridge-boxes, and where Jackson was about to replenish the empty boxes of his men. Withers immediately moved these two brigades forward to the deep ravine whose farther bank was crowned with the grim line of artillery, behind and to the right of which stood Huribut's command.

While there was this activity at the front, the aspect at the rear, about Shiloh Church, where Gen. Beauregard kept his position, was very different. As the Confederate lines advanced, men dropping out of the ranks filled the woods with a penumbra of stragglers. Hunger and fatigue, stimulated by the remembrance of abandoned camps passed through, later in the day led squads
—Beauregard and some of his staff say, led regiments—to straggle back from the fighting front to the restful and attractive rear. Language cannot be stronger than that used by Gen.
Beauregard. The fire of the gun-boats, many of the shells passing over the high river bank and exploding far inland, appeared even more formidable than it really was; and Beauregard was assured by a dispatch, which he received that day on the field, that Buell, instead of being near Pittsburgh, was, in fact, before Florence, and could not effect a junction. It must have been about 5 o'clock or a little later when Beauregard sent an order to his command to retire and go into bivouac.
The order was delivered by his staff not only to corps commanders, but directly to commanders of divisions and brigades. Gen. Ruggles, while attempting to assemble a force in pursuance of Bragg's order, received the command to retire.

According to Withers's report, he moved his division forward, and just entered a steep and precipitous ravine when he was met by a terrific fire. He sent to the rear for reinforcements, and ordered his brigade commanders to charge the batteries in front. The orders were about being obeyed, when, to his astonishment, he observed a large portion of his command move rapidly by the left flank away from under the fire. He then learned that this was in accordance with Gen. Beauregard's orders, delivered directly to the brigade commanders. Jackson reports that he began a charge, but his men, being without ammunition, could not be urged up the height in face of the fire of Huribut and the batteries.
Leaving his men lying down, he rode to the rear to get an order to withdraw, when he met a staff officer bearing such an order from Gen. Beauregard. Gen. Chalmers plunged into the ravine, and the order to retire did not reach him. He was not aware that his brigade alone, of all the Confederate army, was continuing the battle. He brought Gage's battery up to his aid, but this battery was soon knocked to pieces by the fire of the heavier national artillery. The gunboats, having previously taken position opposite the mouth of the ravine, opened fire as soon as the assault began. They opened fire at thirty-five minutes past 5 o'clock.

Chalmers had not ended his useless attempt when the boats bearing Ammen's brigade of Nelson's division of Buell's army crossed the river and landed. Gen. Nelson, when ordered by Gen. Grant, early in the morning, to move up the river, sent out a party to discover a route. No practicable way was found near the river; one, a little inland, was ascertained, practicable for infantry, but not for wheels. The division moved at 1 o'clock. Gen. Ammen's brigade, composed of the Thirty-sixth Indiana and the Sixth and Twenty-fourth Ohio, being in advance, crossed the river first.
The Thirty-sixth Indiana, landing first, pushed up the bluff through a great mob of fugitives from the field, some thousands in number, and, by direction of Gen. Grant, Gen. Ammen sent it forward to the support of the batteries. One soldier was killed while the regiment was forming; one was killed and one wounded after it reached its position. The Sixth Ohio marched up under like order in reserve to the Thirty-sixth Indiana. The Twenty-fourth Ohio marched half a mile to the right of the batteries, scoured the country half a mile out to the front without finding any enemy, and there went into bivouac.
The day's battle was over.

Prentiss was driven back through his camp about 9 o'clock; Sherman was forced from his about 10 o'clock; at the same time, Stuart took position in rear of his. McClernand was compelled finally to abandon his camp about half-past 2 o'clock, and at half-past 4 Huribut fell back through his. When night came, the national troops held W. H. L. Wallace's camp and an adjoining portion of Huribut's, while Beauregard's army occupied Sherman's, McClern-and's and Prentiss's.

When Prentiss and Sherman were attacked there was a wide gap between their lines. A little after 10 o'clock the national line was connected, Sherman on the right, Mc-Clernand next, then W. H. L. Wallace, and next, on his left, Prentiss, and Huribut and McArthur filling the space between Prentiss and Stuart.
The right was gradually forced back on a curve, till at half-past 4 o'clock there was a gap between McClernand and Wallace. Huribut held his ground till 4 o'clock, but by half-past 4 o'clock he retreated, leaving Prentiss left in air. Through the two gaps thus made the Confederate left and right poured in and encircled Prentiss and Wallace. After their surrender there was no fighting, except Chalmers's bold, but idle, assault.

In this day's battle the national loss was nearly ten thousand killed, wounded and captured. The Confederate loss was as great in killed and wounded, but the loss in prisoners was small.

SHILOH—NIGHT, AND MONDAY.
JOHNSTON'S TACTICAL ERROR.

The vice of the formation of Johns-ton's army into three long, thin, parallel lines, together with the broken character of the ground and the variable obstinacy of resistance encountered, produced a complete and inextricable commingling of commands. Gen. Beauregard left it to the discretion of the different commanders to select the place for bivouac for the night.

Col. Pond, retiring from his disastrous repulse toward the close of the afternoon, found himself wholly separated by an interval of more than a quarter of a mile from the nearest support, the whole of the Confederate left having drifted from him toward the southeast. Assembling all his brigade, except the Crescent Regiment, which had become detached, and recalling his battery — Ketchum's — he remembered that the special duty had been assigned to him, by Gen. Bragg, of guarding the flank along Owl Creek.
When night fell, he moved to his rear and then to his left, and bivouaced in line facing to the east, on the high land west of Brier Creek.
Ketchum's battery was placed in a field a little back from the ravine.
He posted pickets to his rear, as well as to his front. The other two brigades of Ruggles's division spent the night to the east of Shiloh Church.

Jackson's brigade of Withers's division, when it recoiled from its fatal attack on Huribut and the reserve artillery, went to pieces. Jackson, with the battery, marched to Shiloh Church and reported to Gen. Beauregard. He saw nothing more of his brigade till he rejoined it at Corinth.
Chalmers, abandoning his vain assault, was astonished to find that the army had fallen back, leaving him alone. He fell back to the field where Prentiss surrendered, and there rested. Of the remaining brigade, Gladden's, the merest fragment cohered;
this little band, or detachment, biv-ouaced near the Hamburg road. Trabue's brigade, except one regiment which had become separated, spent the night in the tent of McDowell's brigade camp; Breckenridge's other two brigades were between Shiloh
Church and the river.

Of Gen. Polk's command, Clark's division, though partially scattered, rested, the greater portion of it, between Breckenridge and Shiloh Church. The other division, Cheatham's, which remained the freshest and least disordered command in Beauregard's army, moved off the field; and, accompanied by Gen. Polk and one regiment of Clark's division, marched back to its camp of Saturday night.

Of Hardee's corps, so much of Cleburne's brigade as remained with him, slept in Prentiss's camp; Wood's brigade slept in McClernand's camp;
Shaver's brigade was disintegrated and dissipated.

In the National army, what men were left of Prentiss's division were gathered about the landing and with Huribut. The regiments of W. H. L.
Wallace that had escaped capture returned to their division camp. Huribut after dark moved his division out to the front of the reserve artillery.
Being relieved by Gen. Nelson, he formed his line with its left near the reserve artillery and the right near McClernand. McClernand's command bivouaced along the eastern face of the camp ground of W. H. L. Wallace's division. Sherman's left joined McClernand; his right, Buckland's brigade, lay along the field at the south flank of McArthur's brigade camp, and along the east bank of the ravine of Brier Creek. Stuart's brigade, the Fortieth Illinois of Mc-Dowell's brigade, and the Forty-eighth Ohio of Buckland's brigade, spent the night near the reserve artillery.

Capt. Baxter, of Gen. Grant's staff, brought to Lewis Wallace at 11 or half past 11, a verbal order to move his division. The first brigade had already moved out to Stony Lonesome, and the division was ready to march.
Gen. Wallace believed the attack at Pittsburg was a feint, and that the real attack was to be made at Crump's Landing, on account of the great accumulation of stores at that point, and desired the order requiring him to move away from Crump's Landing should be in writing. Capt.
Baxter wrote and gave him an order to march to the Purdy road, form there on Sherman's right, and then act as circumstances should require.
The two brigades at Stony Lonesome were at once put in motion. When the head of the division had just reached Snake Creek, not much more than a mile in an air line from the right of Sherman's camp, Capt. Rowley came up and informed Wallace of the state of affairs, and that the national line had fallen back. Wallace countermarched the two brigades to keep his right in front, retraced his steps (being joined on the way by Maj. Rawlins, Grant's adjutant, and by Col. McPherson,) the greater part of the way to Stony Lonesome, and there took a rude crossroad which came into the river road from Crump's to Pittsburg Landing, about a mile from the bridge, which had been guarded for his approach. McPherson and Rawlins confirmed Capt. Rowley's statement of the disastrous failing back of the National lines toward the river. The wagons were not allowed to accompany the column, but continued on through Stony Lonesome to Crump's Landing, and the Fifty-sixth
Ohio and one gun from Thurbur's battery were detached to guard them.
Whittlesey's brigade, at Adamsville, received at 2 o'clock the order to march. Sending the wagons with the Sixty-eighth Ohio as guard to Crump's Landing, the remaining three regiments pushed through the mud, the field officers dismounting to let broken-down men ride, and overtook the other brigades as they were beginning to cross Snake Creek. The Twenty-fourth Indiana, in advance, crossing the bridge just after sunset, deployed skirmishers in front, marched along the road along the east bank of Brier Creek, and halted in front of the camp of the Fortieth Missouri, which regiment was occupying its camp. The Twentieth Ohio, the rear regiment of the division, halted on the bank of Brier Creek ravine, in front of the camp of the Eighty-first Ohio, at 8 o'clock. The division facing to the right, making a front to the west, along the ravine, brought the Twenty-fourth Indiana to the left and the Twentieth Ohio to the right of the division. The batteries having been left at the junction of the crossroad and the river road, till all the infantry had crossed, followed in their rear, and were posted near the bank.

The remainder of Nelson's division followed Ammen's brigade late in the evening. Crittenden's division arrived in the night. McCook receiving orders to hasten forward in the morning, while twelve miles out from Savannah, halted at the outskirts of the village at 7 o'clock p.m., rested his men two hours, marched to the landing, seized such boats as were there and such as arrived, and reached Pittsburgh Landing at 5 o'clock Monday morning with Rous-seau's brigade and one regiment of Kirk's brigade.

Gen. Grant and Gen. Buell met at Sherman's headquarters in the evening; it was there agreed that Buell with his army should in the morning, attack on the left, and Grant's immediate command should attack on the right. Buell formed Nelson's division about two hundred yards in front of the reserve artillery, with his left near the river, facing south. Crittenden, when he arrived, was placed in rear of Nelson, half a mile from the landing, where his command stood at arms all night. At 11 o'clock a heavy rain began to pour. All the National troops and most of the Confederate lay on the ground without shelter. The gunboats every fifteen minutes through the night, fired a shell over the woods, to explode far inland and banish sleep.

Early Monday morning, Nelson on the extreme left, on the Hamburg road, and Lewis Wallace on the extreme right, by Snake Creek, moved to the attack. Beauregard knew then that Buell had arrived and the junction of the two National armies had been effected. The opening of the battled proclaimed what the conclusion would be.

Nelson moved in line with Ammen's brigade on the left, Bruce's in the center, and Hazen's on the right, his left extending a little beyond the Hamburg road towards the river. A remnant of Gladden's brigade, between two and three hundred men, under Col. Deas, some fragments of some of the regiments of Jackson's brigade, with some regiments that had strayed from their proper commands, the Fourth Kentucky from Trabue's brigade, the First Tennessee from Stephens's brigade, the One Hundred and Fifty-four Tennessee from Gen.
B. R. Johnson's brigade, and the Crescent Regiment from Pond's brigade, scattered about, were roused by Nelson's advance and retired before it. At 6 o'clock Nelson was halted by Buell to allow Crittenden's division to complete its deployment and form on Nelson's right. Nelson again advanced. Gen. Withers meanwhile had thrown the heterogeneous fragments into an organized force, added Chalmer's brigade to it, and strengthened it by the addition of three batteries. Nelson, when he again advanced, came upon this consolidated line, which drove him back.
Nelson was without artillery. His batteries, unable to get through the soft mud, which the infantry traversed, remained behind at Savannah. Gen. Buell sent to his aid Mendenhall's battery from Crittenden's division. The rapid and accurate fire of Mendenhall's guns silenced the central opposing battery.
Hazen's brigade charged upon it, captured the guns and drove in retreat the cannoneers and their support.
Bowen's brigade of Breckenridge's reserve corps, commanded by Col. Martin since Gen. Bowen was wounded Sunday afternoon, was coming up in support. Col. Martin made his brigade lie down in a ravine till the torrent of fugitives passed over, then rising, charged the pursuers. Hazen's brigade, torn by the fire of two batteries, one on each flank, and now charged by a fresh brigade, suffered in a short time, more than half the whole loss suffered by the division in the entire day. The loss of the division in killed and wounded, was ninety killed and 558 wounded. The Forty-first Ohio, in Hazen's brigade, out of a total engaged of 371, lost 140 killed and wounded. This shattered regiments streamed back in confusion, leaving a gap in the division line.

Ammen's brigade, was sorely pressed. Constituting the left of the army, it was in constant risk of being turned. Bruce's brigade, now put in hazard by the recession of Hazen, could give only indirect assistance to Ammen. Just then, Ter-rill's regular battery, of four twelve-pounders (Napoleons) and two ten-pound Parrotts, having arrived from Savannah, and missed its way to Mc-
Cook's division, was ordered by Gen.
Buell to Nelson's relief. Dashing out to the skirmish line in front of Col.
Ammen, in order to get the range of the enemy's batteries, Terrill's guns became the target of the concentrated fire of the opposing batteries and the line of infantry. He was compelled to retire; but, firing as he retired, he kept at a distance the long line that followed and essayed to charge. Col. Tuttle, who had been marching what was left of W. H.
L. Wallace's division in reserve, in rear of Nelson and Crittenden, sent the Second Iowa forward in aid of Terrill. At the same time the Fortieth Illinois, of McDowell's brigade, Sherman's division, which had been marching in reserve to Nelson, filed to the front around Ammen's left flank, and the Confederate line retired to their position in the timber.
Ammen's line, which fell back under the galling fire, called out by Ter-rill's artillery charge, now returned to the front and occupied the timber, where the enemy had been. It was now nearly 2 o'clock. There was no more fighting in Nelson's front.
Terrill's battery suffered so severely that the Sixth Ohio was detailed as its special support, and supplied artillerists from its ranks. From an advanced position in Nelson's front, upon his skirmish line, this battery succeeded in opening an enfilading fire upon the troops in front of Mc-Cook, and one section advanced far enough to take in reverse the batteries that were engaged with Crittenden and McCook.

Gen. Crittenden's division moved a little after 5 o'clock to Nelson's right.
Col. W. S. Smith's brigade connected with Nelson and continued his line. Gen. J. T. Boyle's brigade was formed in rear of the left wing of Smith's brigade. A little after 6 o'clock McCook marched to the front with Rousseau's brigade, and formed on Crittenden's right, but facing to the west. The Fourteenth Wisconsin, assigned to Prentiss's division, not arriving at Pittsburgh till Monday morning, reported to Gen.
Crittenden, and acted during the day as a part of Col. Smith's brigade.

Gen. Buell describes the line thus formed as follows:

"The force under my command occupied a line of about a mile and a half. In front of Nelson's division was an open field, partially screened toward his right by a skirt of woods, which extended beyond the enemy's line, with a thick undergrowth in front of the left brigade of Crittенden's division; then an open field in front of Crittenden's right and Mc-Cook's left, and in front of McCook's right woods again, with a dense undergrowth. The ground, nearly level in front of Nelson, formed a hollow in front of Crittenden, and fell into a small creek or ravine, which emp-ties into Owl Creek, in front of Mc-Cook. What I afterward learned was the Hamburg road (which crosses Lick Creek a mile from its mouth) passed perpendicularly through the line of battle near Nelson's left. A short distance in rear of the enemy's left, on high, open ground, were the encampments of McClernand's and Sherman's divisions, which the enemy held." This line is almost identical with the line held by McArthur, Huribut, Prentiss, and Wallace, Sunday afternoon.
Buell's cavalry was not brought up, and, from want of transportation, only three batteries—Bartlett's and Mendenhall's of Crittenden's division, and Terrill's of McCook's division. But these were served with remarkable efficiency.

When Crittenden took position, his skirmishers were advanced across the open field to the edge of the timber in front. This dense growth, called in the reports "chapparal" and "jungle," covered both slopes of a hollow, which was threaded by a rivulet with muddy borders, and was the scene of many a bloody repulse the day before, in the repeated assaults upon Prentiss. The skirmishers soon became engaged, and a battery concealed in woods on rising ground beyond, played upon the troops in line. The skirmishers retired to the line, but were sent back to their original position, while Bartlett's battery silenced the hostile battery, and, by accurate fire, compelled it several times to shift its position.
A line of battle appearing in the timber preparing to charge, the skirmishers were called back, Bartlett swept the bushes with canister and shrapnell, Boyle's brigade charged into the brush, encountered the fire of the Confederate line at close quarters, replied, charged, and drove the enemy through the timber to an open field beyond. The enemy rapidly crossed the field and took position in woods on its farther side. A line of cavalry appearing at one end of the field, which was also commanded by the enemy's battery, Boyle withdrew his regiments to their original position. Bartlett's battery, aided by Mendenhall's, was in constant activity.
The infantry, with intervening pauses of cessation, met and made charges into the chapparal. Mendenhall's battery, in the course of the day, expended five hundred and twenty-six rounds of ammunition, or about eighty-eight to the gun. Bartlett, by noon, had fired his entire supply, six hundred rounds, and took his battery to the landing to replenish. When he returned, the fighting had ceased.
After an hour of quiet, a furious attack was made on Smith's brigade.
The contest that ensued is described in Col. Smith's report; "The enemy soon yielded when a running fight commenced, which extended about a mile to our front, where we captured a battery and shot the horses and many of the cannoneers. Owing to Santa Maria.

PALMER UNION DEAL'S EFFECT.

Old Managers Yet in Charge of the Property.

Stimulus to Development in Santa Maria Field.

Los Alamos Gusher Will Add to the Interest.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SANTA MARIA, April 5.—With the consummation of the Palmer Union Oil Company deal there is a noticeable stimulus to oil affairs in the Cat Canyon district. This gigantic deal is thought, by some of the operators, to be a forerunner to other projects yet to come.

The Palmer Union Company, as a protective measure to the stockholders, is to remain under the active control of the Brown-Walker-Simmons Company of San Francisco as long as 25 per cent. of the stock shall remain in the hands of the present holders. As a guarantee of good faith in the productiveness of the properties, the company has contracted to deposit $1,000,000 worth of its stock with the foreign corporation until the output of the wells shall have reached a daily yield of 6000 barrels. The foreign corporation in mention is in part the directorate of the Cunard Liner Steamship Company and is headed by Balfour and Chamberlain. It is known as the Imperial Foreign Oil Corporation of London. The British operators intend to push development, will build a pipe line to seaboard, the prime object bein to supply vessels coming through the Panama Canal.

It is conceded that the recent coal strike in England has brought about a change of attitude in the fuel question. Oil has come into favor. It has been intimated that other great liner systems have negotiations under way, and it may be that a general conversion of European vessels to oil-burners will be an event of the not far distant future.

Frank L. Brown, in his cablegram announcing the sale of the properties, said: "It is the best outlook since the discovery of California oilfields with absolute assurance of a broad market for oil securities."

An added impetus to Cat Canyon development will undoubtedly be lent by the sudden coming in as a gusher of Palmer Annex A No. 1. This well, which was formerly known as the Los Alamos Petroleum, came in on the spouting list last Wednesday and is now flowing at the rate of from 2500 to 3000 barrels daily. This well was finished up nearly two years ago at about 3100 feet. Although its operators and other local oil men generally conceded that the well would be more than an average producer, predictions failed of verification until this week. Time after time when it appeared that the well was about to produce big the prevalent Cat Canyon sand troubles would crop out and weeks or months would be consumed in getting a flow started again. Finally the air compressor was brought into requisition, with the result that the well now appears to be one of Cat Canyon's best.

Palmer Union Oil Company's well No. 5 has been completed at 3100 feet, after having passed through 180 feet of oil sand. This well will be immediately put upon the pump. No. 6 is drilling around the 2500-foot mark and is nearing the oil sand. No. 4 is spouting at the rate of 1000 barrels daily. This well has been a most consistent producer, having flowed from 300 to 500 barrels per day almost continuously for over a year.

The well of the Oilfields Syndicate on the John Bell tract is 2550 feet deep with 180 feet of oil sand. A test is being made at this depth. Under the handling of Superintendent Frank Herrin this well should be a success, as no man in the field is capable of displaying more judgment and aptitude.

Princess No. 1 on the Muscio tract, in the Tinaquaic, is down 2500 feet and is in an oily brown, shale. A strike is confidently looked for within a few weeks. The geological features appear extremely favorable. The No. 2 well, on the Tunnell ranch in Tepusquet is temporarily suspended, but it is reported that work will be resumed soon.

Palmer Annex No. 2 has a fine showing of 15 deg. gravity oil. A temporary delay has been occasioned by the losing of a swab, in the hole. Fishing for the plug is now going on. No. 6 is 2700 feet in blue shale, with the 8-inch casing. This well has made great progress, having been under way less than 6 months.

Brooks No. 2 well is still being swabbed and is producing 400 barrels daily of 14 deg. gravity oil.

The New Pennsylvania Petroleum Company's and the West Oil Company's wells, on adjoining tracts, are being cleaned out, both looking the best of any time since completion.

The Santa Maria Midway well is down 3100 feet in gray shale. There is a considerable showing of gas in the hole, and a test will be made when the next sand is encountered, which same is expected to be the pay-streak.

Over on the Lompoc side the Pacific Slope is down 4000 feet, and is being put on the pump. There is a fine showing of oil.

The Purissima Hills well is down 3600 feet in brown shale with a fine showing of oil. Discovery here will open up a big new area.

The Dome Oil Company's well, on the Gem tract, is building rig No. 3 and will soon be drilling.

COALINGA OIL FIELD.
VALLEY MAKES STRIKE.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

COALINGA, April 5.—The stockholders and directors of the Valley Oil Comppany are jubilant today as a result of the bringing in of their well No. 1 on Section 32, 20-15 yesterday. The well started to flow about 11 o'clock in the morning at a 250-barrel clip and along toward evening, with a little agitation the production was slightly increased. Today the flow is about the same as when she first started and there is very little sign of the well sanding up.

The Valley well was started nearly three years ago in what might be called wild cat territory, being over a mile from the nearest proven territory, and considerable trouble has been encountered in getting a producer. Over a year ago the tools were sent through a fifty-four-foot stratum of good oil sand and for a time a fair production was secured by pumping. Water soon developed and a number of experiments were made to ascertain the source of the trouble. After a number of tests had been made, it was found that water was coming in from the upper water sands and with considerable trouble this was finally shut off.

Another short period of drilling in the oil sands let the tools through a shell under which lay a water sand with a strong pressure, and it is this sand that Superintendent Prindle has shut off with cement.

The casing is down now to about 3275 feet and the water trouble seems to have been overcome as there is practically no showing of moisture in the present output of the well. The pump is being used to agitate the flow. The oil from the Valley tests 17.4 Baume.

The St. Paul Consolidated Oil Company started redrilling well No. 6 on its property in this field. The ten-inch casing will be carried down and the water shut off. It is the intention of the company to produce from the lower sand which is considered more prolific.

Well No. 4 of the W. M. & M. has been completed in the neighborhood of 1800 feet. The tubing is being lowered into the hole and as soon as it is in place the well will be put on the beam.

Lured to Los Angeles.

B. F. Moffatt of Chicago, who has large oil interests in California, has become so enamored of the Southern California climate that he has decided to build a magnificent home at Oak Knoll, and has opened an office in the Story building. He has not given up his Chicago business, where he has been established for many years, and where he publishes two magazines, but will engage here in the real estate, bond and stock business, at the same time maintaining his Chicago office.

SHOW INTEREST IN ORANGE WELL

Precautions Taken to Keep Down Gas Pressure.

Birch Oil Company Has Two Wells Under Way.

Standard Making Progress With Drilling.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

FULLERTON, April 6.—Spectacular things are looked for in the Orange well No. 3, which is now in the deep sand reached in the Menges well in Brea Canyon. The Orange well is now under extreme pressure and phenomenal performances are expected most any day. Over 800 barrels of water are kept in the hole to retain the gas pressure under control until preparations are finished on the surface. A gas trap has been erected and every effort will be made to handle the well when it comes in.

The Birch Company, which owns the Big Menges producer of light oil, has spudded in No. 9 and has No. 6 down into the hard sand at 2895 feet. On well No. 7 they are waiting for reinforced pipe.

On the east side of the Fullerton field both the Union and the Petroleum have encountered hard ground. The Union on the Loftus property has gone through extremely hard formation, but is now able to put Nos 2, 3 and 5 back on the rotary at about 1100 feet. The Petroleum up to this time has had easy going in very soft ground and made remarkable progress, but about 2100 feet down on its first well the company has struck hard drilling in conglomerate. It is the intention to complete this well with the rotary if possible.

The Amalgamated in the same territory has spudded in No. 12. No. 2 is still flowing about 600 barrels a day. The company has started construction work on a cement storage and general warehouse. The payroll of the company has been considerably increased.

The Fisher is down about 2400 feet and is figuring on cementing at 2700 feet. The Fisher management is moving very cautiously to prevent the infiltration of water, a thing which all operatives in the field must guard against. If oil is found in the first well two more will be started at once.

The Standard Yriarte well is showing increased gas pressure and it is expected that it will be producing shortly. The drilling was stopped at about 2900 feet. After a considerable wait work has been resumed on the Williams.

The firm of Walker and Schaffer has acquired a lease of forty acres of the Pittman land and will start drilling shortly.

The Anaheim Union Water Company will be ready in a few days to fire up its boilers on the Amalgamated lease and will transport its share of the oil through its own pipe line to Placentia, where a storage tank is being built.

The Delaware Union in Brea Canyon has begun the installation of a rotary on its lease. It seems that the rotary will come into general use throughout the field. The combination rig has given the best service.

SEVERE BLOW AT ATHLETIC

OBVIOUSLY AFFECTS NAVY, SA SURGEON-GENERAL STOKES

Deaths and Disability of Officer Attributed to Over-Exercise Their Undergraduate Days—Medi cal Records Have Been Searche for Information for His Report.

[New York Times:] Surgeon-G eral Stokes of the United States na deals a severe blow to athletics practiced at the Naval Academy Annapolis in his annual report. finds that long distance racing p duces serious physical injury, and tributes the deaths and disability a considerable number of naval o ers to over-indulgence in athletics their undergraduate days.

He also says that the quarte physical test for officers is a failu Here is the report:

"The bureau is of the opinion th competitive and spectacular athlet are undesirable in the service, ex ially among midshipmen who a prone to overtrain for, or hazard t much in, a contest.

"The function of the Naval Ac emy is to equip young men menta and physically for their chosen pr fession. Physical training and at letics generally should be indulged so as to safeguard the interests of t government and the individuals well. While football may be som what hazardous as played, it is t disabling after effects that, in m opinion, make it questionable as sport to be encouraged where futu naval officers are being trained.

"The prolonged rigorous course physical exercises necessary to exc lence in physical sports is believ to be dangerous in its after effec upon those who indulge in athlet sports sufficiently to excel therein.

"When, under the conditions service at sea, it becomes impossib to continue rigorous exercise, the i dividual easily falls prey to degene ative changes, tends to become obe to lose physical stamina, and in t and he fails to render as many yea of efficient service under service co ditions as does his less athletic, bu symmetrically developed, classmat

"Recently the medical records 25 former athletes of the classes 1901 to 1911 have been examined determine the bearing of early ove training upon physical efficiency after life—nine have died and twel have retired.

"Of these twenty-one casualties, s have been due to tuberculosis, eight mental or nervous diseases, (three su cides on account of ill health, two l directly to alcoholism, one death eac to acute dilation of the heart and va cular disease of the heart, both direc ly attributable to track and crew ra ing, and one to an injury received in football contest. Of the remainin 204 in the service, 198 have disabiliti or abnormal conditions of sufficien moment to be of official record, and t which their record as athletes bears possible or probable causative relatio and while not in most instance physically incapacitating the indiv dual tends toward an imminent p premature loss of service.

"Of these 198, forty-eight are refer able to the heart or blood vessels, suc as arteriosclerosis, organic heart di ease, heart murmurs, irregular or rapi heart action, and hypertrophied o dilated hearts. The joints or moto apparatus are involved in sixteen, an the kidneys in eleven cases. Seven are either frankly tuberculous o have had symptoms indicative o tuberculosis. Neurasthenia, associate with gastric complications in severa instances, occurred in sixteen cases The presence of twenty-five cases o appendicitis and fifteen of hernia i this series is of interest, especially i the case of the latter disability, which appears to be associated particularly with a football record.

The opinion that long-distance crew or foot racing is not beneficial but productive of serious harm, is one not held alone by the naval medica officer, but by those in civil life bes qualified to judge, and it is believed that it needs but a decided stand on the part of an institution of the stand ing of Annapolis for the adoption of a safe and sane standard in these and other endurance contests to initiate a similar movement in the athletic world, making success dependent more upon skill and less upon brute force.

"The more or less permanent em ployment of professional coaches and trainers is believed to be not to the best interests of the navy. The chief goal and aim of such professional trainers is to produce winning teams, upon this depends largely their reputation and occupation. It would appear that the navy possesses those among the graduates who, with specially detailed medical officers, are capable of this duty, and the importance of the subject should justify the assignment of such officers for this purpose.

"An examination of the reports on the physical condition of the four classes at the academy shows a marked gain in average weight and strength during the first year, a slight loss of average weight and a decided loss of strength during the subsequent years of training.

"As this bears a constant relation to the decrease in compulsory exercise during these years, as shown by the reports, it is evident that the mind is operated at the expense of the body in the case of the third, second and first classes.

"The Swedish system of exercise is now being tried at the Naval Academy. Upon the recommendation of the Surgeon-General a number of officers and men of the Marine Corps were detailed for a course of instruction in the Swedish system of gymnastics under the medical officer in charge of physical training at the Naval Academy. The object was to implant this system in the Marine Corps. It is now in operation and giving satisfaction results." The Surgeon-General has this to say relative to physical exercise in so far as it applies to the officers and men of the navy.

"Special attention is being devoted to the improvement of the system of physical training of the personnel of the service. It is urged that general physical uplift is the desideratum, and that overtraining in some special line. The aim should be to develop a strong, resistant body, rather than to make an athletic of a given individual.

SEVERE BLOW AT ATHLETICS.

SERIOUSLY AFFECTS NAVY, SAYS SURGEON-GENERAL STOKES.

Health and Disability of Officers Prohibited to Over-Exercise in Their Undergraduate Days—Medical Records Have Been Searched for Information for His Report.

[New York Times:] Surgeon-General Stokes of the United States navy deals a severe blow to athletics as practised at the Naval Academy at Annapolis in his annual report. The bureau is of the opinion that competitive and spectacular athletics are undesirable in the service, especially among midshipmen who are liable to overtrain for, or hazard too much in, a contest.

The function of the Naval Academy is to equip young men mentally and physically for their chosen profession. Physical training and athletics generally should be indulged in only so far as to safeguard the interests of the service and the individuals as such.

While football may be somewhat hazardous as played, it is the drinking after effects that, in my opinion, make it questionable as a sport to be encouraged where future naval officers are being trained.

The prolonged rigorous course of physical exercises necessary to excellence in physical sports is believed to be dangerous in its after effects upon those who indulge in athletic sports sufficiently to excel therein.

When, under the conditions of service at sea, it becomes impossible to continue rigorous exercise, the individual easily falls prey to degenerative changes, tends to become obese, loses physical stamina, and in the end he fails to render as many years of efficient service under service conditions as does his less athletic, but symmetrically developed, classmate.

Recently the medical records of the former athletes of the classes of 1910 to 1911 have been examined to examine the bearing of early overstraining upon physical efficiency in later life—nine have died and twelve have retired.

PALACE FOR LONDON COUNCIL.

Foundation Laid for a Ten-Million-Dollar Building Where the Thames Once Flowed.

[London Times:] King George has laid the foundation stone of the new palace of the London County Council on the south side of Westminster bridge.

Since the institution of the London County Council the offices of that body have been scattered about in various buildings, none of them worthy of the metropolis. Last year a site for a new hall was selected on the south side of the Thames, almost directly across the river from the houses of Parliament, and in the interval an embankment, in conformity with the rest of the improved portions of the river front, has been erected and excavations made for the new hall.

That the site was once the bed of the river has been shown by the material taken out, including an old Roman boat, which has found a place in the new London Museum.

The site covers an area of between five and six acres, and the cost of the improvement, including the land, building and embankment, is estimated at $10,000,000. A large portion of this has been spent on the foundations, which have been placed on London clay thirty-five and one-half feet below the high-water mark, this great depth being decided on in view of the possibility of the river being deepened at some future time.

Spain for Antiquities.

[Consular Reports:] Spain is considered by art collectors a lucrative field; and many interesting antiques are picked up here from time to time. Seville has numerous shops where antiquities are sold, and where the old Spanish needlework may be purchased. This section of the country has so recently (comparatively speaking) been invaded by tourists that art buyers claim to find here many desirable things of which the more frequented countries have long since been almost "sold out." Probably the old Spanish needlework and the wood carvings are the most characteristic "finds," though the antique Spanish and lustrous Moorish tiles are also much sought. Of course, paintings are eagerly scanned, and occasionally a Murillo school picture comes to sale. As the history of this section of Spain is so rich, there are many antiquities that date from the Roman period, such as earthen vases and earthen lamps, also a little jewelry and many trinkets, which are constantly being dug up in the ruins of buried cities; there are several such in this district, notably Italica, near here.

Beer and Superstitions.

[London Chronicle:] Some curious superstitions gathered round even so eminently practical a thing as beer. In Scotland it used to be the custom to throw a handful of salt and a little dry malt into the mash to keep the witches from it; and the cautious housewife, in houses where they brewed their own beer, used to throw a live coal into the vat to save the liquor from the frolicsome interferences of fairies. The addition of salt, by the way, to beer in the course of brewing, was supposed to be for the unholy purpose of exciting thirst. It may possibly have been used to this end by the unscrupulous, but the real reason was legitimate. Salt moderates the fermentation and makes the liquor fine.

Parrot Stops a Fire.

[Washington Post:] Never again will the pet parrot in the Clark home, in New Rochelle, N. Y., be published for violation of the rules of polite conversation, or for any other cause. If it hadn't been for this self-same parrot, the Clark home might today be in ruins. While polly was enduring her punishment by incarceration in a small cage in the attic she discovered a fire there and gave the alarm. Consequently her term of three weeks' imprisonment has been recalled. The parrot had been so disobedient of late, especially in the matter of the looseness of her conversation, that she was put in the attic. Her pleas for mercy were in vain.

While workmen were cutting down trees near the estate a twig became ignited by a live wire. A gust of wind blew it into the attic of the Clark home, a window having been left open for the benefit of the bird. Soon Polly saw smoke coming from the ceiling and screamed her alarm.

Wants a Father-in-law.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] Setting out to find a good husband for her mother, who wishes to be out on a ranch, "away from the city," is the task Miss B. Eckles of Kansas City, Mo., has set for herself.

She has written a letter to Mayor Rushlight, asking him to have it published, in helping on the work she has undertaken, expressly with her mother's consent and approbation. Her letter follows:

"I have a mother and I want to find a good husband for her. She has two daughters, one 18 years of age, and the other one 17; one son, 14. She is a good housekeeper, neat and clean, and the man must have a home and plenty to provide for her. She has made so many wishes to be out on a ranch some place away from the city, and I asked her if I would find her a good husband if she would have him and she said 'Yes.' So I thought I would advertise for her. She dresses nice and is pretty. Any man writing in answer to this must send photograph."

Miss Eckles's address is 2324 Bellevue avenue, Kansas City, third floor.

His Money's Worth.

[New York Herald:] An up-State Assemblyman went to a local hotel of unpretentious character a short time ago and said he wished to rent a room for 75 cents, if possible, and if not, for $1. The clerk told him there were no 75-cent rooms and that it was only on rare occasions that they let anything for less than $1.50. It was finally agreed that the man should get a dollar room, and a bellboy started him off toward the roof.

Early the next morning the Legislator came down to the desk in a state of great excitement.

"Say," said he to the clerk, "what kind of a place is this, anyhow? Why, in the middle of the night two great big rats got out on the floor right in the middle of my room and had a fight."

Psychology of Events.

[London Chronicle:] The phenomena of rumor—its mysterious origin and marvelous spread—so impressed the ancient Greeks that they made of it a deity, Phoeme, to whom altars were raised. This deity, however, was not so completely personified as the later Roman Fama, but considered rather as a divine voice—the vox Dei, as Grote puts it, passing into the vox populi. The classic case is the news of the Greek victory over the Persians at Platae, in Boeotia, which "Phoeme" was said to have communicated to the Greeks as they went into action at Mycale, on the other side of the Aegean, a few hours later, although there was no telegraphy in B.C. 479. Grote compares Michelet's account of the storming of the Bastille which more than once emphasizes the fact that nobody proposed it—the whole populace seemed simultaneously inspired.

Had Told Him So.

[New York Sun:] John Drew tells this story of Forrest, the great tragedian:

Forrest was playing in "Richard III," and the part of Catesby had to be taken by a low comedian, who sauntered on the stage at the wrong moment and uttered the famous words, "My lord, the Duke of Buckingham is taken," in the wrong place.

Forrest clenched his fists in rage, but otherwise took no notice of the remark.

Later on the comedian repeated the words in the right place, and when the King expressed surprise at the news Catesby folded his arms, walked boldly down the stage, and remarked to the great actor in loud tones:

"I told you so before, Mr. Forrest, but you wouldn't believe me."

The Final Objection.

[Indianapolis News:] A colored couple was taken before Judge Newton M. Taylor, in Juvenile Court, and against the man was placed the charge of neglecting his children. Judge Taylor gave advice as to what should be done to straighten out the family trouble so the couple could continue to live together and support the children.

"You are earning $8 a week, and have three children to support on that," said the judge. "It is evident that you must cut your expenses down as low as possible. You are paying for a piano by installments. You will have to stop that, for people in your circumstances can't afford to have a piano.

"You must leave the house you are living in and move to a smaller one with lower rent. You ought not to pay over $5 or $6 a month for rent." The mother objected to this, saying that she could not live in a respectable neighborhood under such conditions.

The judge found that they belonged to different churches, and he advised that the wife join her husband's church. He added that it was proper that the husband hold the purse strings. After many other difficulties had been smoothed over the case was continued two weeks to give the new methods a trial. The couple left, but at the door the woman turned to the judge and said:

"Dat will be all right, but Ah must insist dat he pinch his mouf an' stop talking about me."

By the Carload.

LATEST PRODUCT IS ASPARAGUS.

Tender Vegetable Flourishes in This Vicinity.

Great Quantity Is Shipped Here and East.

Splendid Crop Forces Price to Lowest Mark.

Asparagus growing, a Southern California industry, which is assuming great proportions this year, seems to have been almost overlooked as a highly-profitable business by tillers of the soil.

Owners of several tracts of land in Los Angeles and Imperial counties, where the soil seems especially adapted to the raising of the succulent vegetable, now send to the local and eastern markets more than two carloads of asparagus a day, and the height of the season has not been reached.

Last year there was not enough local asparagus grown to have much effect on the Los Angeles market, and the product of the Sacramento Valley held sway here. This year a wealth of local-grown asparagus has forced the price down to the lowest it has ever been, from 4 to 7 cents per pound. The local-grown asparagus, green and tender, commands as high a price as the best sent from the North.

Shipments of asparagus by refrigerator express from California to Chicago, New York and Boston now average five carloads per day, according to E. R. Jones, general superintendent of Wells-Fargo & Co. The amount of asparagus shipped from here is more than 40 per cent. greater than that shipped last season, according to figures compiled by Jones.

SPLENDID QUALITY.

Four new asparagus ranches, totaling seventy-eight acres, this year increase the crop grown in Los Angeles county, and it is said by produce men that the local product is fully up to the best northern-grown variety in quality.

As yet the industrious Chinese dominate in the raising of asparagus, but in Fullerton J. H. Barger has a tract of twenty-eight acres this year, and Warren Black has a tract of eighteen acres near Hyde Park on the Inglewood line. They propose to show that Caucasians can be as successful in raising asparagus in Southern California as the men from the celestial republic.

Last year the acreage planted in Los Angeles county was about sixty. This year more than 140 acres is given over to the growing in the immediate vicinity of Los Angeles, in addition to the Barger ranch at Fullerton. In Imperial two large ranches of 120 acres each and several smaller asparagus farms make daily shipments to Los Angeles and the East.

The American Express Company handles most of the asparagus consumed in California, and also ships to the East a considerable quantity every week. A carload of asparagus is consumed in Los Angeles every day, it is estimated. The reasonable price of the vegetable this year has vastly increased the consumption. At 5 cents per pound, the price prevailing for some sorts yesterday, asparagus is placed within the reach of all.

PROFITS PROBLEMATICAL.

The profits per acre in the growing of asparagus are as yet problematical because of the well-known reticence of the Chinese, who have dominated the growing up to this year, to tell just how they came out financially in the business. It is stated by produce men, however, that as only certain soils are adapted to the growing of asparagus, and as the growers seem to be perfectly satisfied with the low price now obtaining, they must be making money.

Two years are required to produce a crop of asparagus, or rather twenty months. Early in September the seed is planted on high ridges, well watered and fertilized through the next year, and the following spring the tender green shoots appear. The third year is better than the second in production. Ordinarily a fair crop is 400 boxes of four pounds each per acre per year.

At Hobart Station there are three asparagus ranches, totaling forty-five acres. So important is this section in the growing of the vegetable that the railroads have established a station there for the shipment of the product. The electric roads handle the asparagus grown on two ranches in Hyde Park, one at Sixty-first street and Moneta avenue, and one just east of Huntington Park.

While the Sacramento River asparagus is large and white the local-grown asparagus is of the variety now much in demand here and in the East, small, green and tender. The conditions for growing the vegetable in Southern California are excellent, according to experts, and it is predicted that even at the rate of increase in asparagus acreage this year the 1913 crop will double the present one.

Don't Sell Their Queues.

[New York Tribune:] Not all the queues cut off in China under the reform now progressing there are to find their way into "switches" and "rats" and other things feminine. Consul-General Anderson writes from Hongkong that, generally contrary to the impression in Europe and the United States, "the queues when cut are not sold. This is an absolute rule, so far as South China is concerned, and it is the custom all over those portions of China from which the writer has been able to secure reliable data on this subject. The queues are preserved, according to general statement, for burial with the owner."

Lazy Man's Resourcefulness.

[London Answers:] "Yes, my first husband was a nice enough man, but that lazy!" said Mrs. Jones, the washlady, in a reminiscent tone. "Oh, he was lazy!"

The mistress of the house smiled invitingly.

"How do you mean he was lazy?" she asked.

"Well, you remember that awful snowstorm we had the first winter I worked for you, mum?"

"Yes."

"That there husband o' mine was too lazy to go out and sweep the snow off the path, so he just hid in the front room and pinched the baby's ear until the neighbors came to see what the little dear was 'owling for. You see, mum, they trod the snow down!"

THE BATTLE OF SHILOH.

the presence of a hostile line of battle. At the same time Pond's brigade and Ketchum's battery became aware of the fact that only the valley of Brier Creek separated them from troops that had arrived in the night. Col. Pond was dismayed by the further discovery that he was nearly a mile in advance of his nearest support. After a short engagement he withdrew his infantry, leaving Wharton's regiment of mounted Texas Rangers to support the battery. After a sharp artillery duel, Ketchum drew off his battery, covered by the mounted regiment. Gen. Grant, directing Wallace to push his line of attack to the west, directly from the river, the division advanced, the brigades in echelon, the First to the front and left, the Third to the right and rear, sweeping the bluffs facing Snake Creek and Owl Creek, and coming out in the fields in the rear of Sherman's camps. Wheeling, the division to the left, he soon became hotly engaged, first Thompson's battery with another battery, then infantry with opposing infantry.

There was yet a gap between Sherman and Wallace, but the conflict now raged about Shiloh Church with a fury surpassing any portion of the battle Sunday. McCook, with his well-closed division, McClernand and Sherman with their attentuated but persistent commands, Wallace with his fresh and compact division, with the batteries of Bouton, McAllister, Weed, Thompson and Thurber, formed a curved line concentrating upon the convex line comprised of part of Clark's division, Wood's brigade, Trabue's brigade, Cheatham's division, and Ruggles's division, with the batteries of Ketchum, Byrne, Bankhead and others. McClernand, Sherman and Wallace all speak with admiration of the splendid fighting of McCook's division. Ammunition was becoming exhausted. Buckland withdrew his regiments to all their boxes. Stuart's brigade, now commanded by Col. Kirby Smith, plunged forward to make up with renewed vigor for diminished numbers. Wallace's left flank was exposed. The Eleventh Indiana, changing front, faced the danger on its flank. The First Nebraska having used its last cartridge, the Seventy-sixth Ohio leaped to its place. Thompson's battery having expended its last round, Thurber's guns took their place so quickly that there was no intermission in the fire. The Twentieth Ohio, sent off to the right to meet a force springing up in that quarter, met with a sudden discharge at close range, dashed through a fringe of bushes and drove a battery from the field beyond.

Wood's brigade, charging on Rousseau, was knocked to pieces and retired to the rear, where Gen. Wood, with the aid of cavalry, gathered up 1500 stragglers into an ineffective reserve. McCook pushed his line forward to Sherman's camp. The lines were pressed closer and the fire was hotter than ever. Gen. Grant called two regiments, and in person led them in a charge in McCook's front, and broke the enemy's line. Endurance has its limits. The intense strain of two days was telling. Beauregard saw his men were beginning to flag; exhausted regiments were dropping out of line. It was now 3 o'clock. Two hours before Gen. Beauregard had sent word to his extreme right in Nelson's front, to retire slowly in alternate lines. Breckenridge, put in command of the movement, had drawn Statham's brigade from Crittenden's front. Beauregard was fighting to secure his retreat.

Col. Thompson, aide-de-camp to Beauregard, says in his report: "While I was engaged in rallying our disorganized troops to the left and rear of the church, you seized the banners of two different regiments and led them forward to the assault in face of the fire of the enemy; but from the feebleness of the response I became convinced that our troops were too much exhausted to make a vigorous resistance. I rode up to you and advised that you should expose yourself no further, but should dispose your troops so as to retire from Shiloh Church in good order." Col. Whittlesey, in his report, states: "There being signs of a retreat farther to the south, Lieut. Thurber was directed to sweep the ground in front, which he did with his two howitzers and three smooth-bores in fine style. Two prisoners captured near there, one of them an officer of the Creole Guard, state that Gen. Beauregard was endeavoring to form a line for a final and desperate charge on our right when Lieut. Thurber opened upon him, and the result was a disorderly retreat."

The battle was over. Gen. Beauregard posted a battery and a brigade on the rising ground south of Oak Creek, commanding the ground about Shiloh Church, and withdrew his worn troops behind them. Gen. Beauregard says this was at 3 o'clock. Cheatham fixes the hour when he retired at half-past 2 o'clock. The national commanders fix the close of the contest at about 3 o'clock. At Woods's, about two miles beyond, a rear guard took position again. At Mickey's, where Breckenridge had already arrived, he was detailed with his command as rear guard, and the rest of the army passed on to Monterey.

There was no pursuit of the retreating army. All advance by the national troops ceased about 4 o'clock. McCook went into bivouac near the camp of Peabody's brigade, Prentiss's division. Wood's division, arriving too late to take part in the battle, pushed to the front and engaged his skirmishers with the light troops covering the retrest. Mendenhall's battery, far off toward Crittenden's left, catching some glimpses of the retiring column through openings in the forest, sent some parting rounds. Wood and Crittenden went into bivouac in front of Prentiss's camp. Gen. Buell pushed Nelson forward on the Hamburg road, near to the crossing of Lick Creek, and the division bivouacked near Stuart's camp. The divisions, or what was present of them, of McClernand, Sherman, Hurlbut and W. H. L. Wallace, returned to their camps. Lewis Wallace advanced his division across Oak Creek to the large field. Co. A, of the Twentieth Ohio, obtaining permission to proceed farther, advanced to the Confederate hospital, and was deploying to drive off a detachment of cavalry that was burning a commissary train, when it was recalled to rejoin the division, then returning across Oak Creek, to bivouac in front of the camp of McDowell's brigade.

McClernand and Sherman formed part of the line of battle. Prentiss's division was gone. The other two divisions, what was left of them, acted in reserve. Hurlbut formed his division in the morning complete, with the exception of the Forty-sixth Illinois, which served for the day with McClernand. It was a skeleton division. The Third Iowa was 140 men under the command of a lieutenant. In the forenoon Gen. Grant sent Hurlbut out to act as reserve to McClernand. The Twenty-eighth Illinois took place for a while on McClernand's left, and Veatch with his three regiments took place on McCook's left when he diverged from Crittenden. Col. Tuttle, senior officer in the Second Division, by the death of W. H. L. Wallace and the wounding of McArthur, gathered the remaining regiments of his division, except the Fourteenth Missouri and the Eighty-first Ohio, added to them Col. Crocker and three regiments of McClernand's First Brigade, and marched in reserve to Crittenden. He sent the Second Iowa to Nelson, when Nelson's line was broken by the gallant but disastrous charge of Hazen; the Eighth and Eighteenth Illinois moved out to the left of Crittenden when he diverged from Nelson, and the Seventh Iowa, moved into the front line later in the day.

The number of Johnston's army has already been given as 40,000 men. Badeau says the effective force present in the National camps Sunday morning was 32,000 men. Gen. Sherman makes the number 32,000. William Preston Johnston, in the life of his father, makes the number of the National troops, the "grand total in Sunday's battle," 41,543. These various statements arise from the different ways of making and reading returns. Forty thousand does not represent the total force which A. S. Johnston led to Shiloh. Forty thousand "present for duty" is exclusive not only of the brigade of detailed teamsters and cooks that Gen. Johnston complained of, but of all regular and permanent details. It appears from some reports which give numbers, that it was also exclusive of temporary details made for the occasion of the battle—hospital men, train guards, ammunition guards, sappers and miners, infantry detailed to act with batteries, etc. It appears from some of the reports which state numbers, that the "enlisted men" "present for duty" in the "Field returns of the Confederate forces that marched from Corinth to the Tennessee River," comprised only non-commissioned officers and privates, and was therefore exclusive of musicians, buglers, artificers, etc., though enlisted as such. The 40,000, therefore, is the number of the combatants engaged in the battle. The field return is susceptible of further explanations, the character of which does not appear. The field return, for example, gives the "present for duty" in the artillery in Polk's camp, as twenty officers and 331 enlisted men—351 in all; while the official report of the chief of artillery of the corps, of casualties in the battle, giving each battery separately, states the number actually engaged in the battle as 21 officers, 56 non-commissioned officers, and 369 privates, making a total of 446. It is clear, therefore, that the 40,000 is intended as the number of officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates actually engaged in the battle, and a comparison of the reports of Gen. Polk's chief of artillery with the returns suggests that in some way it may not be the full number of combatants engaged.

The aggregation of returns making 41,153 present for duty in Grant's army at Pittsburgh Landing, Sunday morning, is not a consolidated return, but a collection of footings of regimental returns, the nearest in date attainable to April 6th, for the most part furnished by the War Department to Col. Johnston, the rest either taken from reports of State adjutant-generals, or else estimated. The statement includes the Fourteenth Wisconsin and the Fifteenth Michigan, neither of which arrived until after the close of Sunday's battle. Deducting the "present for duty" given for these 1400 leaves, in round numbers, as in Gen. Johnston's army, 40,000. But "present for duty" in the returns of the National forces includes musicians, buglers, artificers, etc.; all men present for the duty for which they are enlisted. The army was clothed with music. There were seventy-two regiments present, including these which arrived Sunday morning. The field music of 720 companies, with the buglers of cavalry and artillery, made three thousand men. Besides there were bands so numerous that an order was shortly afterward made restricting the number of bands to one to each brigade. Where the battle reports give the number taken into action, the difference in the number given and the number of "present for duty," as given by the War Department at Col. Johnston, suggests that many had gone on to the sick list, or been detailed, between the date of the return and April 6th; or that many men present for duty were left behind in camp. Probably all were true, and 33,000 or 32,000 is the number of officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates actually engaged in Sunday's battle on the National side. The reinforcements of Monday numbered, of Buell's army, about 20,000; Lewis Wallace, 6500; other regiments, about 1400.

There ought to be no uncertainty in the reports of casualties. Yet, while the general result is clear, precision in detail is now hardly attainable. Ben. Beauregard's report gives his loss as 1728 killed, 8012 wounded, and 959 missing; making an aggregate of 10,699. Of the reported missing many were killed or wounded. These numbers are the aggregate of losses reported by brigades. They cannot include casualties at division, corps, or army headquarters, happening either to the generals commanding, or to the officers on their staff, or to enlisted men on duty. And while batteries were attached to brigades, the cavalry was a wholly independent command, not attached or reporting to brigades or divisions; two regiments were not attached to any corps. Their casualties cannot be included in brigade reports. Col. Johnston, after much examination, "finds a possible variation of 218 more casualties, principally in missing, that might be added to Gen. Beauregard's report."

The generally accepted official report of the National loss is: In Grant's army, 1437 killed, 5679 wounded, and 2934 missing, making a total of 10,050; in Buell's army, 263 killed, 1816 wounded, and eighty-eight missing, making a total of 2167. The two armies aggregated 1700 killed, 7495 wounded, and 3022 captured—making total, 12,217. The War Department, in the printed collection of battle reports, does not give the casualties of the two armies separately, but gives the aggregate, 1574 killed, 7798 wounded, and 2794 missing—making a total of 12,163. The "Medical and Surgical History of the War" makes the loss 1735 killed, 7882 wounded, 3956 missing—making a total of 13,573. The loss of the Army of the Ohio, as given above, is the report of Gen. Buell on April 15. Six days later, the medical director of that army made to Gen. Buell a tabulated statement of killed and wounded in each regiment, brigade, and division engaged, which makes the number 236 killed and 1728 wounded. All these estimates are based upon the same material—upon the field reports. As the revisers of the reports for publication have had the best opportunity for deliberate examination and for comparison of the reports with muster-rolls, their estimate of casualties is perhaps the most trustworthy.

The loss in artillery on each side was about equal. Gen. Sherman lost seven guns and captured seven. Gen. McClernand lost 6 guns and captured three. Prentiss lost eight guns. Hurlbut lost two batteries. The Army of the Ohio captured about twenty guns, many of them being recaptured guns, lost on Sunday. One of Breckenridge's brigades threw away their arms, taking in place better arms, picked up on the field. There was a great destruction of camp equipage and stores. The quartermaster of the Third Iowa, in Hurlbut's division, packed everything in wagons, safely carried stores and baggage to the landing, and let down the tents to save them from damage by shot. Before the wagons of Prentiss's division went to the rear, while the division was still engaged at the front, Col. Miller's servant gathered everything in the colonel's tent, packed it in one of the wagons, carried it safely off, and kept all in good order till Miller returned from captivity. But such thoughtfulness was the exception, and the returning troops found much missing and more destroyed.

Heavy rain fell again Monday night. Next morning Gen. Grant sent Gen. Sherman with his two brigades, and Gen. Wood with his division and the Fourth Illinois Cavalry in pursuit. The miry road was lined with abandoned wagons, limber-boxes, and with hospitals filled with wounded. The advance was suddenly fallen upon by Forrest and his cavalry, and driven back in confusion. Forrest coming upon the main column, retired, and was pursued in turn. Gen. Sherman advanced about a mile further, and returned to camp. Breckenridge remained at Mickey's three days, guarding the rear, and by the end of the week Beauregard's army was again in Corinth. The battle sobered both armies. The force at Pittsburg Landing saw rudely dashed aside the expectation of speedy entry into Corinth. The force at Corinth, that marched out to drive Grant into the river, to scatter Buell's force in detail, and return in triumph to Nashville, was back in the old quarters, foiled, disheartened.

When news of the two days' fighting was received at the North, the people of the Ohio Valley and St. Louis were stirred to active sympathy. Steamboats bearing physicians, nurses, sisters of charity, and freighted with hospital supplies were at once dispatched and soon crowded the shore of Pittsburgh Landing. There was need for all the aid that was brought. Besides the thousands of wounded, were other thousands of sick. The springs of surface water used in the camps, always unwholesome, were now poisonous. The well lost their strength; of the sick, many died every day. Hospital camps spread over the hills about the landing, and the little town of Savannah was turned into a hospital. Fleets descended the river bearing invalids to purer air and water.

Gen. Halleck arrived at the landing on April 11, established his headquarters near the river bluff, and assumed personal command. Gen. Pope, with the Army of the Mississippi, summoned from the operations just begun before Ft. Pillow, arrived on the 21st, and went into camp at Hamburg. Seasoned troops from Missouri and fresh regiments from recruiting depots arrived. The camps were pushed out farther from the river, and Halleck found 100,000 effective men under his command. The army was organized into right wing, center, left wing, and reserve. The right wing comprised all the army of the Tennessee, except the divisions of McClernand and Lewis Wallace, together with the division of Gen. Thomas, from the Army of the Ohio, and was commanded by Gen. Thomas. The remnants of the commands of Prentiss and W. H. L. Wallace were incorporated in two new divisions. The center, composed of the Army of the Ohio, except Thomas's division, was commanded by Gen. Buell. The left wing, the Army of the Mississippi, to which Gen. Granger's cavalry division was still attached, was commanded by Gen. Pope. Gen. Pope, Gen. Rosecrans having been assigned to him for duty, divided his command on May 29 into two wings, the right commanded by Gen. Rosecrans, the left by Gen. Hamilton. The reserve, under Gen. McClernand, comprised his division and that of Lewis Wallace. Gen. Grant was appointed second in command, without command or duty attached to that position, though he still remained commander of the District of West Tennessee.

Beauregard was reinforced, almost immediately after his return, by Van Dorn with 17,000 troops seasoned by campaigns in Missouri and Arkansas, raising his effective strength to [illegible] 000. The Confederate government at Richmond and the State governments in the Southwest strained every source to increase his force. Important posts were denuded of their garrisons, new regiments were recruited, and Price, of Missouri, at the government at Richmond had refused to recognize, was ordered to major-general. Beauregard found his force amounted on the [illegible] to an aggregate of more than [illegible] But sickness and absence were prevalent that the return of effective never quite reached 53,000. The position at Corinth was [illegible] strong. . . .

LOS ANGELES GAS AND ELECTRIC CORPORATION.

How a Great Public Service Company Conducts Its Business—Modern Ideas of Management—Interesting Manufacturing Developments—Growth of Enterprise Now Third in Rank in the United States.

BY BARON BARD.

EDITORIAL NOTE.—Few cities have experienced the embodiment of so many really great commercial and industrial enterprises of recent years as has Los Angeles. In instances their growth has been nothing short of phenomenal, and even greater expansions are planned for the immediate future. Believing that these subjects, capably treated, will attract the readers of THE TIMES, the publishers have arranged to have prepared a series of illustrated special articles on "big business," to appear from time to time under fitting titles. The accompanying article is one of the series.]

NOT VERY many years ago the public service corporation was considered an "insolent monopoly." And it was. It was a product of the exclusive franchise and of public dependence. Public sentiment denounced it a thing unpopular and indefensible; and, as usual, the public undertook to devise a remedy—the feeble, municipal ownership. It was a blunderbuss to scare the monopolies. And it scared them. It scared them so thoroughly that a few men of big, progressive ideas saw that public opinion was a power, and that, wooed and won, it was the biggest asset a big public service business could have back of it. These men set about accepting unpopular public service properties, and devoting themselves, by employment of new and unheard-of ideas of management, to turning out a new and unheard-of product—popularity. It was not easy to do—at first. The public was wary, eager to grab whatever of good was offered but wary. But the formula was found in the end. And it was simple after all. It read thus: The biggest possible efficiency always, plus public courtesy, equals popularity. And it does, so soon as the public feels that those things are permanent, that they are not mere makeshifts. And they are permanent wherever the experiment has been fairly tried, for they have been found to pay.

I used to hate the gas man. He took all that I needed and tucked it away for so long as I was his customer on a guarantee that I would pay my monthly bill. And when I dropped in at his office to pay that bill he was cold and uncivil. If I thought, was sure that the charge was too high, that my meter had "lied," or that it had not properly read, I got no satisfaction from him, not at all. The man couldn't lie, the company's men never made mistakes—the company, in short, was infallible. If I reported a clot in the pipes, it was investigated at the company's convenience. The electric lighting companies were the same. I didn't like them any better than I liked the gas companies. I once lived in a town where the municipal government operated these public utilities. The conditions were much the same; the rates, the inefficiency, the pay-your-money-and-pass-on attitude. And I understood that the municipality was losing money on the plant. Possibly it was an exception. Probably it was not. And then I came to Los Angeles.

Now you know that Los Angeles has approximately the cheapest (and the best) gas and electric service in the United States? It has. And it has more. It has service that is cheap, prompt, courteous. As to its cheapness consider a few comparative figures:

Per thousand cubic feet—
Los Angeles	$ .80
[illegible]	.85
[illegible]	.85
Philadelphia	1.00
Washington	1.00
[illegible]	1.15
[illegible]	1.00
Portland (Or.)	1.15
[illegible]	1.50
Evansville	1.00
Kansas City	1.00
[illegible] Moines	1.00
[illegible]	1.25
[illegible]	1.00

Electric service (lighting and power) is sold in Los Angeles at the rate of 5 cents per kilowat hour—lower than in the great water-power cities of Portland, Tacoma, Seattle and Spokane. In Los Angeles you burn twenty 16-candle power electric lights an hour for 7 cents; you can buy a horse power an hour for less than a nickel. Your lighting costs you less than the tallow dip of your grandmothers' cost them. You can have the power of a horse for 5 cents an hour, and you don't have to stable him.

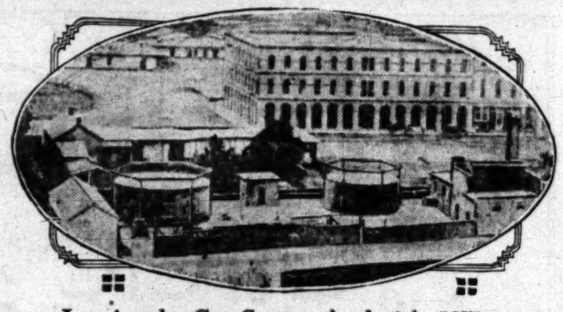
These conditions were largely, if not entirely, brought about by the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation. They did not obtain when the company began business in Los Angeles a few years ago. Not by any means. When this now-great company bought out the old Los Angeles Gas and the Consumers' Gas Light and Power Company (the Gas and Electric Company,) in 1906, the price of gas was $2.50 per thousand cubic feet. The new company inaugurated its business by reducing the price to $2.25. The following year the price was lowered to $2. In 1908 the price was clipped to $1.75, and a year later to $1.75. Then came a series of reductions to $1.50, $1.25, $1.00, 90 cents, 85 cents, finally to $80, the present rate.

As the price was going down, the gas, voluntarily, and without any popular clamor usually attending such reductions, the efficiency of the gas itself improved, as modern science and experimentation rendered improvement possible, and the company's attitude to the public was made better and better understood. It was becoming popular, with a quality of confidence and appreciation. Wherever it was extending its lines in advance of development seemed to warrant it, with the idea that for the future, secure in the knowledge that Los Angeles would continue to grow, progressive, enterprising, it was a full pace ahead of the requirements of the hour.

I have come to register a "kick" with me to register a "kick" against the one-time "complacent" department, where formerly I was told to pay up and pass on, to the investigation department. But the people of the United States have received more courteous treatment. Although we are the company, the customer. Whatever complaint is investigated immediately. If we are in the wrong, the matter is adjusted at once. If we are not shown where we are wrong, if we cannot or will not see that a settlement is made any way, I am left satisfied and a champion of a company that does business honestly and so liberally. You would think this would lead to imposition on the company. Such cases are extremely rare, too rare to affect the practicability of the policy, which is essentially to make the company's customers its friends. And when you stop to realize how many friends it makes, it seems mightily worth while, for there are approximately 127,000 of them—the company's consumers—3000 more than on the first of the present year, a gain of a thousand friends a month.

Before leaving the investigation department, let us imagine another case. A man comes in, or telephones, saying that there is a leak of gas in his house. While he is talking, a button is pressed. In the garage a man immediately cranks an emergency automobile, equipped with every necessary repair or testing device, and a clerk dashes to the rear of the building and hands him an order, and he is off to the scene of the trouble. It is all done so quickly that we wonder how it is done at all. That is service, service of the kind the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation affords in making and retaining its friends. It is the kind of service that moulds and cements a friendly public sentiment. It is good business. The emergency auto is first on the scene of fires, first to respond to every call where it is needed.

Everybody cooks with gas today. At least everybody cooks with gas where gas is to be had. The day of exploiting the gas range is happily past.



Los Angeles Gas Company's plant in 1871.

The people demand it. They demand it because it is the cleanest, most convenient and most economical way to cook. It is demanded also for many other uses to which it has been adapted—for house-heating (furnaces and grates,) for hot-water heating (the turning of the water faucet in kitchen, bathroom, or lavatory, automatically operates the heater,) for practically every use where heat is needed, and everywhere it preserves its triple attributes of cleanliness, convenience and economy. For one thing or another nearly everybody uses gas. Yet nearly everybody is ignorant of the interesting processes of gas manufacture. How is gas made? The average person will say it is made of coal. In most places it is. It was so made, in Los Angeles years ago. The Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation have found a better way.

Visit the Aliso-street works with me. You have passed this great plant on the street cars many times. By day it is a forbidding spectacle from without. It fulfills my idea of what Libby Prison may have looked like during the Civil War. At night, with its lurid flames, it is spectacular, like a conflagration. Day or night, within, it is full of interest. It is an "oil" plant. That is, the gas is generated from crude oil instead of coal. Coal is expensive in Los Angeles. Oil is cheap. Ergo, make gas from oil. And a remarkable thing about it all is, a by-product of the process is a carbon residue that, manufactured into briquettes, is a fuel similar to and better than coal itself. Imagine using oil because coal is too dear, and having something better than coal left over after the gas is made. It sounds like two times two makes fifty, doesn't it? This is the mathematical or scientific phenomenon that is achieved by the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation.

The vast generator-room of the plant contains a wilderness of great black iron-bellied cylinders, like the trunks of huge trees. They are the generating machines, if they may be called machines. All are large, ponderous, only some are larger and more ponderous. They stand in rows, closeset, and there are so many of them that one does not pause to make a count. There is a progression of sizes, each a complete generator in itself, and the progression in a manner and in fact expresses the successive gradations of the company's growth. The cylinders have expanded with the business. The largest are approximately twenty feet in diameter and thirty feet in height. Inside at the base is a furnace or fire-box into which crude oil and air are injected with such force that the oil atomizes to promote combustion. Above the fire-box is a fretwork of fire brick reaching within a few feet of the top, or dome, of the cylinder, constructed to admit the passage of smoke, fumes and heat, with an escape port, or cap, which is opened during the firing. About fifteen minutes' firing is required to bring the fire brick to a temperature of 2000 deg. Fahrenheit, the heat required for making gas. Then the oil and air are shut off below, and a jet of oil and air atomized into the chamber above. The vent cap has been previously closed, so that the oil and air filter through the heated brick work where the gas is formed. This process continues half an hour, when the bricks must be reheated. Thus a third of the time is spent in heating, and two-thirds in making gas. As the gas is made, it passes through a conduit at the base of the cylinder to an air-tight "washing tank" filled with water, which eliminates the carbon residue—the carbon that is better than coal. From this tank the gas passes to another washing, or spraying tank, where the tar residue is removed, and from this tank it passes to an immense holder preparatory to being ridded of its taint of sulphur. It is then pure oil gas, and is conveyed to another holder, where it is mixed with "water" gas. The water gas is a product of the carbon residue, used as fuel, and oil injected as in the making of oil gas, with the exception that the process is continuous. Mixed with oil gas this makes the best commercial gas for lighting and heating. The tar refuse is used again as fuel, and in some cases sold for other commercial uses, but it is of inferior grade and of small value as a by-product.

LOS ANGELES GAS.

The briquette plant is of especial interest. In the early experimentation in the making of gas from oil the carbon residue was a problem. So far as was then known, its commercial value was negative. It piled up like the dump of a mine or the slag of a smelter, and the question was, in a congested city like Los Angeles, what to do with it. It could not be drained into the dry riverbed, there was scant room for it on the premises, and it was expensive to haul it off and dump it where the company would be permitted to leave it. There was more experimentation. It was discovered that, compressed into briquettes, it made a really excellent fuel. Tests showed that it would burn longer and produce more heat to the ton than coal. It had the advantage of being cleaner and easier to handle. And, being refuse that the company wanted to rid itself of, the only feature to consider was the cost of manufacturing it into briquettes. It was found that this could be done and the product sold at a profit of $9 a ton—several dollars cheaper than coal at its lowest figure. It was like finding a coal mine in your dooryard. Today the man who has not heard of carbon briquettes is a man who has not bought his fuel in the cheapest market. It is shipped all over Southern California. Six motor trucks are required to make deliveries for the Los Angeles trade alone. In time another question will confront the company: how to supply the demand. The only answer is more people to burn gas, more gas to be made, more carbon residue to make into briquettes. The briquettes are made by compression, the same as pressed brick, and are in two forms—one like a brick, the other a solid cylinder smaller than a brick. They make a beautiful glowing fire for grate or furnace, have a minimum of ash and smoke, and do not klinker.

I might conduct you through the plant for removing sulphur, through the compressor plant, where the great engines that drive the distributing pumps do their work; but you would probably grasp little more than an idea of immensity and power. Of greater impressiveness is the giant holder, with its 6,000,000 cubic feet capacity, recently completed. As one passes a block away on the street cars, it looms mighty in dimensions, but it is to be fully appreciated only by closer observation. It is the largest holder in the West, and its construction is on a tremendous scale throughout. Yet it is but one of many holders required to store the day's supply of gas required for the use of the company's consumers. The total storage capacity is 13,900,000 cubic feet. The total generating capacity is 24,900,000 cubic feet a day. Perhaps it may give you a better idea of the immense volume of this daily capacity to illustrate it as a string of foot cubes of gas, end on end. Each day the company could turn out enough of these cubes to reach from Los Angeles to New York and half-way back again, a solid column 4734 miles in length for every twenty-four hours. The company has 1030 miles of gas mains for its high and low-pressure distribution. These cover underground Los Angeles like the web of a Titanic spider; they overspread Pasadena, South Pasadena, Alhambra, Huntington Park, Hollywood, Watts, Sherman, Eagle Rock, Vernon and Ingleside. Branch offices are maintained in Pasadena, South Pasadena, Alhambra, Hollywood and Watts, and there are three branches in the residence districts of Los Angeles, besides the general offices at No. 645 South Hill street. More than a thousand men are employed in the various departments, and all of them are men who are specially trained and experienced in the work assigned them. All are schooled in the policy of the company, all required to deal courteously with the public in their various capacities. A violation of this requirement spells quietus to a man's connection with the company. If an enemy is made the company will see to it that he is not a consumer. But the men do not forget that the interest of the company is their own best interest, and I should say that, all in all, the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation is an excellent school of mannerly address for any man, employee or otherwise.

I have hesitated about describing the electric plant. After being shown through it, and hearing its great mechanisms explained, I left realizing that a man is very ignorant of a mighty big thing if he doesn't know more than the average man knows of electricity. And that was the net result of the impressions gathered, unless I note a few of the biggest wheels I ever saw, most of them busily spinning, and the whole array of machinery well-groomed and efficient-looking. Suffice it to say, the electric plant of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Company is modern to the last degree. Its present daily capacity of 24,200 horse power is soon to be increased to 34,200. The company has fifteen miles of underground electric conduits, and 450 miles of electric lines in the city. The city itself is the company's largest consumer, using at present 3353 arc and 2139 incandescent lights. The electric plant is operated by steam, and oil is used under the boilers. The oil for both the gas works and the electric plant is pumped directly from the oil fields to the company's storage tanks, which hold in the aggregate nearly 200,000 barrels.

The old Los Angeles Gas Company, one of the companies bought by the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation in 1889, began business in 1867—forty-five years ago. It was the first gas business established in Southern California. The Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation became, therefore, by succession, the pioneer gas company of Los Angeles. The present owners and directors have been continuously identified with the business for nearly a quarter of a century. With them making gas has been a life study, and from it they have evolved new and economical methods to which Los Angeles owes the rate of 80 cents a thousand cubic feet, by which she benefits today. And if the manufacture of gas was their profession, the courteous treatment of the public has been their religion. They have assumed that the public is entitled to something better that good service; that it is entitled to perfect service; that it is entitled to perfect service, and to render perfect service, that it is necessary to study the art of making loyal friends as well as honest gas—gas that is at all times high in candle power. They consider it as important to have a corps of skilled mechanics at the command of consumers day and night at their general offices, as to have efficient men in their chemical laboratory. The result is expressed in one of the finest gas and electrical plants in the entire United States.

It would be interesting, if it were possible, in analyzing the development of great enterprises, to know to just what extent they are the expression of a single dominant personality. Such a knowledge in the instance of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation is not difficult to arrive at, if one were to accept the verdict of the men who work with and about and around Walter B. Cline. Their testimony would be unanimous and it would credit him with the whole thing. If Mr. Cline were consulted on the subject, he would bestow the credit on his really remarkable organization, the loyal and able support of men associated with him, not only as directors, but as employees, down to the lowest on the pay roll, to whom the "company" is a mighty source of pride. Perhaps a better test is, after all, the great, big public. And the public grants much to Mr. Cline. It takes him at his true value, as a man of positive genius in the business of making a public service corporation popular with the people. For Mr. Cline has been the president and directing, creating energy back of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation for twenty-three years. By gathering Los Angeles men and capital about him, he has made the enterprise distinctly a "home corporation," and by his capable and forceful dealing with the vital problems of progressive management, he has achieved a miracle. I congratulate Los Angeles on possessing a public service corporation that is popular with its patrons. It is a substantial achievement any time and anywhere—to please the people!

VISALIA, April 5.—Visalia will soon be in the throes of a third saloon fight, the wet advocates having filed with the city officials a petition containing the requisite number of signatures for the call of an election to decide on the question. Today the City Council issued formal instructions to the City Attorney to draw up the necessary legal papers for the calling of the special vote.

RUSSIA'S NAVAL EXPANSION.

Plans to Lead the World in Sea Fighting Power. Contracts May Come to American Firm.

[New York Tribune:] That the Russian government has for several months past been negotiating with the William Cramp and Sons Ship and Engine Building Company, of Philadelphia for the construction of two of a number of modern 30,000-ton dreadnoughts with which Russia is to rehabilitate her navy, has been admitted by officers of the local company. They declared, however, that no contracts have been awarded, or bids submitted, nor asked for.

The announcement of these negotiations brings to light a programme for the building of a Russian navy which, if carried out, will give that country the most modern sea-fighting equipment of any country in the world. Officers of the Cramp company say that the two battleships they are after the contracts for will cost at least $12,000,000 each, and probably more.

These dreadnoughts will be more powerful and larger than any now in existence or in the course of construction.

The rehabilitation of the Russian navy will be along gigantic lines. Officers of the Cramp company say the Russian government has already turned over its St. Petersburg navy yards to the Vickers Sons and Maxim companies, and a yard on the Black Sea to the Armstrongs. These are the largest ship building companies in Europe. Loans have been negotiated with French and German interests to finance the programme.

The negotiations with the Cramp company were opened when the Russian government asked the local company to establish a shipyard on the Black Sea in order to build the ships that could not be handled by the Vickers Sons and Maxims and the Armstrongs.

President Henry S. Grove of the Cramp company said: "We have been secretly negotiating with the Russian government for several months, and we hope to land the contracts, as the big European shipbuilding companies have more work than they can handle. It was because of this fact that the negotiations were started.

"It is the biggest programme for a navy ever started by any country," he said, "and will give Russia one of the most formidable navies in the world."

Expensive Dowries in India.

[Indian Nation:] The custom of extorting dowries has grown into the very fabric of the social life, and is a standing disgrace to the Bengali community, which has no justification to plead or apology to offer. The practice has now assumed alarming proportions of parents of boys extorting costly dowries as a condition of marrying their sons. The marriage of a daughter among Bengalis has become an expensive affair, and the amount in cash demanded by the father or guardian of the boy, and paid by the father or guardian of the bride varies with the educational attainments of the bridegroom. The Indian Daily News published a few days ago a piteous appeal from respectable Hindu parents of dowerless daughters.

Inspect San Jacinto's New Water System

The recent Water Discovery and Development at the foot of Mt. San Jacinto attracts outside attention. Engineers and water experts of three States seek data on Citizens' Water Company's model plan of development. Conditions are pronounced exceptional, and system ideal, with phenomenal possibilities for further development.

Many new and interesting theories have been advanced and proven in this development. Even the two narrow streaks of clay, called the Italian Wash and Indian Creek, which crosscut the upper part of the valley (meaning little to the untrained eye.) play an important part in creating the source of this immense water supply. For centuries these two little gullies have been pulling down the clay from the surrounding hills and depositing its putty-like formation, layer upon layer, along their entire course, slowly but surely building the great submerged dike or dam, sufficient in length and depth to retain the millions of inches of water that are today stored in the great subterranean lake, proven to exist above its wall. This great reservoir has existed for centuries, and will continue to exist for as many more. The outcropping of surface water, called the cienega, immediately above this dike, gave mute evidence of this impoundment and supplied the incentive for its full exploitation. The existence of this dike was proven by placing a series of test wells along its lower or west side. No perceptible water supply was obtainable at three hundred feet in these holes, while in a corresponding string of holes directly opposite to these, but above the dike, flowing water in unlimited quantities was obtained in every case within a few feet of the surface. Many hundreds of test holes were placed over an area of five square miles, with the same result as the latter, proving conclusively that this supply is not only inexhaustible, but that it is separate and distinct from other water supplies in the valley.

Miles of submerged pipe line, with perforation on top side, to admit the percolating waters, are already in commission, conveying the flow by gravity from every direction to the company's immense headgates, or main lines of distribution.

We wish to state to our readers, especially those who are seeking locations, that this is truly an exceptional condition for this country, and can have but one meaning, unparalleled and continued prosperity for this beautiful little valley, and a snug fortune for all who are lucky enough to secure a share of its rare offerings at even double the price obtainable at this time. For further information address the San Jacinto Board of Trade, San Jacinto, Cal.

A Sensible Man's Want and Our Answer

WANTED—I want to become associated with a large number of people in a clean, dignified business enterprise. One in which all are on an equal footing—where the man who can invest from $5.00 up per month will be welcome. I want my associates to be those who will appreciate the fact that there is no difference whether one man invests a million, or a thousand invest it. I want them to realize the truth of the motto: "In union there is strength"—by uniting—getting together—we can earn as much money as the capitalist does on his. We should receive all the profits on our investments instead of only a part, as most of us have done in the past. Our motto must be, safety first, profits second, equality third. There must be no promotion stock, no rake off, no speculation, no heavy expenses. I want to hear from those who are willing to organize a corporation answering these requirements. If there is such an institution now operating along these lines, I would be glad to know of it. Address with full particulars, etc., etc.

OUR ANSWER

You sir, have the correct idea as to the best kind of an investment, you are wide awake and will succeed.

The UNITED MORTGAGE CORPORATION, capitalized $500,000.00 par value $10.00, was organized for the purpose of doing exactly what you are seeking. To enable every one to participate equally in the safest and one of the most profitable investments, i.e., loaning money on mortgages in Los Angeles. This meets the first word of your motto—SAFETY. Also your second, the business being exceedingly PROFITABLE. Limiting the amount of stock sold to any one, prevents control by any individual of the corporation, the majority always controlling its affairs as they should.

Not one share has been, is, or will be sold below par, meets your third requirement—EQUALITY. Present price, $10.00 per share or sold in monthly installments of 50 cents per share to be advanced in the near future.

There is but one other business that is more profitable than this, i.e., banking. And when sufficient funds have been accumulated it is proposed to reorganize to do a general banking business. Every stockholder in the mortgage corporation then becomes a bank stockholder, and by having 1000 or more stockholders, there is practically no limit to what may be accomplished and large dividends will be earned in both the mortgage and banking business, and will be paid quarterly.

You or any others are invited to call for full information at the offices of the corporation.

IRON SMELTER NOW A SUCCESS.

Pig Iron Will Be Turned Out at Heroult Plant.

Electricity the Power that Moves the Works.

Prospectors Ready to Invade High Grade Camp.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

REDDING (Cal.) April 5.—The electric iron smelter at Heroult has graduated from the experimental into the commercial stage. Such is the statement of President H. H. Noble and other officers of the Noble Electric Steel Company. For years the company has been endeavoring to manufacture pig iron on a commercial scale at Heroult, and the goal of success has been finally attained. The single furnace at present in commission is producing twelve to fourteen tons of high-quality pig iron daily, at costs averaging around $14 per ton. Two more furnaces will be installed immediately and within a year the company expects to be sending hundreds of tons of iron weekly to Coast markets.

The plant is at present consuming 2000 electrical horsepower per day and arrangements have been made whereby ample electric power will be constantly delivered. In addition to the commercial iron, it is also planned to produce chrome and other high-grade steels. Users of the iron already marketed pronounce it of exceptionally fine quality, and the industry is expected to revolutionize the employment of iron on the Pacific Coast.

The company has arranged for more active work at its iron mines in the Pit River Canyon, and an air compressor and machine drills will soon be installed. At present eighty men are employed, and more will go to work as soon as the smelter capacity is augmented. The magnesite deposits have been systematically developed and large reserves of high-grade ore demonstrated. The company owns the old Shasta iron properties, and extensive acreages of adjoining estates.

Approximately $300,000 has been expended by the company on experimental work and smelter construction. In addition to the iron smelter is auxiliary annex for the manufacture of carbon, wood alcohol and other by-products has been provided. With the entire plant operating at full capacity the company anticipates smallest profits. Considerable Southern California capital is interested. The success of the plant is considered one of the most important events ever recorded by California mining.

High Grade Stampede.

With the disappearance of snow in the High Grade district it is evident a wild stampede into the district will develop. Joseph Breuner, a prominent Denver mining man, has arranged to bring a party of 250 Colorado mining men to High Grade by means of a special train. The train will run to Alturas, via Reno, and stages and autos will meet the visitors at Alturas and transport them to the mines. Breuner and other Colorado experts are enthusiastic over the possibilities of the new gold camp and predict the inception of a second Goldfield. The special train is but one of several planned to bring Rocky Mountain people to the region. Throughout Nevada, Utah and Northern California miners and prospectors are turning their eyes toward High Grade. Los Angeles people have been fortunate in getting hold of some of the best mines in the field, including the Ft. Bidwell Consolidated group and the noted Sunshine bonanza claim. The Ft. Bidwell is the biggest property in the district, and is owned by Detroit and Los Angeles interests, with considerable stock held by Colorado and other western people. Numerous engineers are expressing confidence in the camp and the Angelenos appear to be on excellent way of winning magnificent rewards.

Among the latest to become interested in the district is Miss Lillian L. Malcolm, the famous girl prospector. She has arrived at Ft. Bidwell with her outfit and will go into High Grade as soon as weather permits. Miss Malcolm was active in Goldfield during the great boom, and recently prospected the Funeral range and other portions of Death Valley. Many of the old prospectors and miners of the Southland will learn of her new activity be of interest.

Magnates in El Dorado.

The Placerville Gold Mining Company is arranging for extensive operations on the big group of gold mines located near Placerville. The corporation controls five miles of territory along the mother lode, including the noted Pacific, Excelsior and other known mines. Considerable work has been done in past years, but under the new plans deep mining will be conducted and the downward extension of the vein system explored. The company is composed of Eastern financiers, including Alexander Hague, residing at Santa Barbara, and A. Baring-Gould, at present of Placerville. Millions are behind the properties and the owners are encouraging to greater activities by the magnificent records of the Kennedy, South Eureka and other noted mother lode mines.

Melones' Strike Grows.

The phenomenal discovery recently made in the M Iones mine, near Sonora, continues to claim wonderful attention. It is estimated nearly $250,000 has already been extracted, and the shoot is declared to be showing excellent strength as development progress. The ore is of exceptional richness that the miners have been excluded from the mine and the manager and other officials are themselves mining the rich stuff. The strike was made on the 1250-foot level, while sinking to 1300 feet. At the point of intersection the quartz assayed $4000 per ton, and values increased with development until some of the ore assayed as high as $50,000 per ton. The shoot is twenty inches wide, and by some thought to be the extension of the famous Morgan vein, which contributed so largely to the fortune of James G. Fair. The strike is the richest in the history of the Melones district, and compares favorably with the greatest gold strikes ever made in California.

Central Eureka Improving.

This Central Eureka is again promising to resume its position among the profit-disbursing mines of the mother lode. Recent ore developments in lower levels have been of a most satisfactory nature and the mill is running steadily on good grade quartz. Approximately 100 men are employed and extensive development work is progressing. The property adjoins the dividend-paying South Eureka, and lies next to the famous old Eureka, which is about to be actively operated by Col. E. H. Green and associates.

Suit Against Tarr Mines.

Suit has been brought against the Tarr Mining Company in the Superior Court of Yuba county, by Jacob and Joseph Weisbein, San Francisco financiers. It is claimed the noted Blue Point, or Paddy Campbell placers, located near Smartsville, were illegally sold to the Tarr company by Campbell, the former owner, while the Weisbeins owned the mines on a mortgage. The suit is entered to recover the mines. The Tarr Mining Company recently reopened the mines after a long term of idleness and by means of a combined hydraulic and dredging system, handled the gravel successfully. A large amount of capital was expended in placing the property in its present position. Considerable Southern California capital is concerned.

Mammoth Baghouse Effective.

Recent widely circulated reports that the farmers were denouncing the Mammoth company's baghouse as ineffective are stamped as groundless by officials of the Farmers' Protective Association and the Mammoth Copper Company. Representatives of the farmers state that while some little damage is possibly being done by the small quantity of smoke escaping, the injury is of such a slight nature that it is unworthy of attention. The Mammoth is now keeping three furnaces in constant operation and the baghouse is proving its ability to handle the fumes along satisfactory lines. With a few minor improvements it is likely that even the small percentage of noxious gas still escaping, will be arrested.

ATLANTA MINES IN THE BALANCE.

Company to Be Reorganized at Next Meeting.

Goldfield Consolidated Is Keeping Up Work.

Florence Goldfield Strike Vigorously Denied.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) April 5.—Reorganization of the Atlanta Mines Company takes place at the annual meeting next week at Phoenix, Ariz. It is three years since the Atlanta has had a meeting, as the last time an attempt was made the company was so badly split into factions that neither side could muster enough stock to elect a board of directors. Thus the company has maintained the outward appearance of prosperity, when, in fact, it was almost moribund and incapable of doing anything for itself. Several efforts have been made to remedy this state of affairs, but no one seems to have had the faculty of bringing the forces together until about six weeks ago the first meeting was held with southern stockholders in Los Angeles.

This brought about a better understanding and then the rest of the proposition was easy. Wingfield and Clark, Zabriskie and "Borax" Smith were drawn into the deal, and as soon as concessions were offered the route was paved for an easy transmission of shares to the hands of a trustee. Nevertheless, while all appears plain and simple on the surface, the public at large will be treated to something of a surprise when the final denouement rounds out the story.

Instead of the present capitalization, the Atlanta Mines Company will have an issue of $5,000,000, or more than double what is offered on the market today. When the first tidings of the plan were circulated the stock took a balloon trip and then fell flat when it was learned what the designs of the reorganizers meant. Besides this the Atlanta will likely join the ranks of assessable corporations and the stockholders will be called upon to come through with whatever the directors choose to assess them. All of which is not of the most palatable character to stockholders who have held the security for the last seven years without a single chance of doing anything that would let them out of their holdings at a profit.

The Atlanta has had more work done on the estate than any other property in the district and yet the company has never spent a dollar for development. Every foot of improvement has been secured through leasers who have sunk in the aggregate probably $500,000 gophering, drifting and sinking, without deriving a dollar's benefit from the vast estate. The company's stock at one time sold as high as $1.25 per share, but through lack of confidence the price never held over night and the average speculator considered it a good thing to fight shy of. Thus the fortunes of the Atlanta have wavered and advanced without any material satisfaction to the holders and it remains to be seen if the present deal will bring any more reliance than what has been expressed. The Weber management will be retired, which of itself is taken as a good augury of the future, but the forecast will depend on how energetically the plans will be pushed to consummation. In any event, some of the insiders have made a good thing of the movement, as several fat fees are dependent on the final triumph at the election. Another week will tell the tale and the market will reflect the effect on the minds of local investors.

GOLDFIELD CONS. MILL.

The monthly estimate of the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company for March shows no material change from the months which have preceded it. The most satisfactory feature is the grand performance of the big mill, which continues to treat an average of 1000 tons daily. The grade of ore does not show any improvement and the gross value recovered is placed at $685,000, operating expenses at $200,000, and the net recovery at $485,000. The physical condition of the property was amply set forth in the official report for the preceding month and there is said to be no change in that respect.

There is a strong probability that development work will be resumed on the White Rocks and Kawbawgam properties, the closest inside claims of the camp which have been idle for a period of six years after doing an extensive line of exploitation which failed to realize the expectations of stockholders. The main shaft is situated almost in the heart of the city and Superintendent Gill is authority for saying the Begole syndicate which controls the mines will return to Goldfield with plans for doing work on an extensive scale. The territory owned by these two companies consists of 120 acres adjoining the January, February and Hazel Queen claims of the Consolidated Mines Company on the west. Only a limited amount of work has been done on the two groups and many people have held the ground in light esteem owing to the popular belief that it is on the anti-incline or footwall side of the productive veins of the district. On performing the annual work on this group recently a strong quartz vein was exposed that contained low-grade material at a

We're busy on this ranch. We're in a position, right now, where our profits are a certainty, not a chance. We have thousands of date trees already growing on the ranch. We have developed 250 miner's inches of water. We're raising grain and alfalfa and hogs enough to pay dividends of 8 per cent. in a year. And when the entire tract is planted to producing date palms, that will bear 200 pounds of fruit to the tree and that grow 50 to the acre, we shall have a crop that, even if marketed at only 10 cents a pound, will yield dividends of

200% Yearly

That means that $500 invested with us now will be worth $20,000 fifteen years from now. Could there be a more profitable investment, ABSOLUTE SAFETY considered.

From the "Indio Date Palm" March 27, 1912 The Moyer & Gilbert Ranch

It was our pleasure to visit the Moyer and Gilbert date ranch recently. For real live things in the ranch line, it is about the liveliest thing that we have seen.

It consists of two tracts of land, one of 320 acres and the other of 160 acres. The 320-acre ranch is the one that we are referring to in this article.

We found it all cleared and the grading was just being completed. There were fifty-one horses and mules and twenty-two men working on the place.

There are already seven good artesian wells, representing a cost of at least $4000 and furnishing an abundance of water. Two reservoirs, one 150 by 185 feet and the other 150 feet square, and both five feet deep, give a storage capacity of 1,645,500 gallons. These reservoirs are so constructed that the entire contents can be drawn off, leaving no stagnant water in the bottoms.

There is a good barn, 37 by 50 feet and 20 feet high to the eaves, with a shed 20 by 50 on one side. This gives ample storage for hay and other feed.

There is a forty-acre tract of alfalfa, all fenced with good hog fence and cross-fenced into five-acre tracts, making about five miles of fencing in all. Two hundred fine, thrifty hogs are pastured.

In clearing the land 500 cords of mesquite wood were cut and are ready to sell at $6.50 per cord on board the cars.

We noticed a nursery of 6000 Malaga grape cuttings that are being rooted and a date orchard planted in the conventional form, 30 feet by 6 feet apart in the rows. They range in age from one to three years and are a remarkably good stand.

One tract contains forty acres of green and thrifty barley.

The ranch is well supplied with wagons, plows, harrows, scrapers, etc.

It is the declared intention of the Moyer and Gilbert Date Company to continue development and planting until the whole of the two ranches are planted and producing dates.

If this program is carried out, as we have no doubt that it will be, and if our estimation of $10,000 per acre for ten-year-old date orchards is correct, it will amount to a trifling sum of $4,800,000. Not much money when it comes to building a railroad or financing a war, but a tidy sum for a private horticultural enterprise.

We are told that the contract for wells and for clearing and grading the other 160 acres has already been made and work will start at once.

We Are Following in the Footsteps of U. S. Gov't. Experts

Uncle Sam's specialists have been experimenting for years with date culture. They have found what soil is best, how much water is needed, how to make the trees yield profitably. And we are following the results of their successful experiments. We are and shall continue to be guided by their advice. We shall succeed, as they have succeeded, in growing dates that are the equal of the finest and most costly Algerian varieties.

KNOX SPEECH IN GUATEMALA.

Urges Strict Conformity to Washington Convention.

Says the Country's Prosperity Hinges on Obligation.

Text of the Utterances by Secretary of State.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GUATEMALA CITY (Guatemala,) March 16.—Guatemala has not been especially punctilious in observing its obligations under the Central American peace pact of 1907, and only recently Salvador had occasion to complain and invite the good offices of the American State Department to secure her territorial rights against Guatemalan aggression.

Mr. Knox evidently had this in mind when he delivered his formal address at the President's dinner tonight. It must have required some courage after the kingly style in which he had been entertained, and surrounded by men who appeared to draw their breath by sufferance of the host, for the Secretary to stand up and declare in language that could not be misunderstood that the strict adherence of Guatemala to the Washington conventions was inseparable from any hope of future prosperity, advancement and peace. These conventions provide that disputes between the five republics shall be submitted to the peace tribunal at Cartago; that no government shall invade the territory of another, or permit within their own boundaries the outfitting of revolutionary expeditions against a sister republic. The Secretary said in part:

THE SPEECH.

"Guatemala in its position of close proximity to the United States, where there is ever ready an eager market for its products, and with its dense population occupies indeed an enviable position among the Central American nations. This position will be rendered increasingly desirable as time goes on and the development of your country's enormous possibilities is accomplished. And Mr. President, I may here remark without, I am sure, indulging any view not equally shared by yourself, that the continuous development and permanent advancement of the republic depend on its stable economic conditions as well as upon its domestic contentment and consequent repose. The unvarying friendship of the government of the United States for republican institutions in this hemisphere and its desire to see them conserved free from interferease are too well known and understood to need words of reassurance from me. From the very inception of, and even before the independence of the Latin-American nations, the attitude of the American government, which later was unmistakably announced by President Monroe was well known and it continues undiminished to the present day.

"To Central America the United States has a special interest not only because of the proximity of the five republics to the great commercial highway now nearing completion in Panama, but also because of its moral obligations under the Washington conventions. The maintenance of peace and stable conditions in these republics is a matter of first importance to my government. The faithful observance of those conventions will, in the opinion of my government, go far towards the elimination of the turmoil that has hitherto shaken the very foundations of some of the less fortunate and less tranquil countries.

"In conclusion, Mr. President, allow me to indulge the hope that the relations between our respective countries may become increasingly cordial and close, to the mutual benefit of both."

This speech if published here, as it probably will not be, may reassure a good many who have admired the Secretary because of his part in breaking the tyranny of President Zelaya of Nicaragua and some of whom, unfamiliar with the necessities of diplomacy, must have been bewildered to see this champion of republicanism accepting the hospitality of the most notorious dictator now tolerated under a pretense of popular government.

NO CENSORSHIP.

An editor of a local paper asked if the government censorship was severe replied: "No, there is no censorship. It is unnecessary. The editors understand perfectly what the government wishes published or not published." The city has two papers recognized as official organs and a third, La Compana, the unthrottled "opposition" weekly. The latter bold voice of the people spoke the only word of discourtesy regarding the American mission. In its issue of two weeks ago today, a copy of which was surreptitiously furnished for inspection, Mr. Knox was described as a bird of ill omen and its readers were advised to drape their windows in black on the day of his advent in the capital. In as much as every intelligent Guatemalan knows that La Compana is also secretly directed by the government as constituted in the person of Cabrera, its attitude offers a subject of speculation. Perhaps it was a rap for the "antis," and possibly like the appearance in public of the President, it was intended to direct attention to the freedom of republicanism in Guatemala on the same theory that a partial admission is stronger sometimes than an unequivocal denial.

WORK OF VANDALS.

Late tonight many of the street lamps were stripped of their decorations by vandals, it was explained. A similar incident occurred upon the first night of Admiral Swinburn's visit some years ago, and no political significance was to be attached to the matter, the camp followers of Knox were told. Indeed, no significance, political, or otherwise, is to be attached to anything done in Guatemala without the express direction of the President.

A few years ago the entrance to the palace where the correspondents were received this afternoon was spattered with blood when William Heimke, now American Minister to Salvador, called to present his credentials to Cabrera. A company of cadets, at a prearranged signal, had fired upon the President as he appeared in the doorway. They were young and nervous and their aim was bad. Cabrera received a bullet through a hand which he had raised to protect his face. The palace guard, alarmed at the sound of firing, fell upon the cadets before they could fire again, and there followed a massacre that no Guatemalan will describe truthfully. Twenty-five or thirty cadets were killed on the spot, but so quickly were the bodies removed that when Mr. Heimke drove up a few minutes later only pools of blood in the courtyard remained to tell of the tragedy, and these were soon washed away. The captain of cadets, who escaped the onslaught, was promised his life if he would reveal the identity of the master mind of the conspiracy, but the young officer told the President, so the story runs, that he would not do so. Not one party to the plot weakened, but the widow of a slain cadet, out of gratitude for financial assistance from the government, turned over certain personal effects of her husband, and among them, innocently, some correspondence was found, it is alleged, which led to wholesale arrests. It is said that in the year following the attempt 500 lives were exacted in retribution for the bullet wound in Cabrera's right hand.

The most recent known attempt upon the President left him unharmed, but cost the life of his coachman, who was a party to the plot of one or two others, and the wounding of a general who was in a carriage with the President. The coachman had been instructed to stop the Presidential carriage at a certain point where a mine was to be exploded beneath it. He made the error of stopping not the carriage, but the horses directly over the explosive, and upon its discharge, was blown to pieces with the team.

In justice to Cabrera and his methods, it should be added that under his rule, Guatemala has prospered in peace, while some republics, notably Nicaragua, have all but bled to death from self-inflicted wounds. Its better class are intelligent and fine looking. The public buildings are works of art and the schools are a credit to the country. Strange enough many Americans in the capital, while prepared to admit almost any accusation against the President, defended his rule and asked how otherwise could be controlled 2,000,000 people, three-fourths of whom are half-tamed Indians? These cynically pointed to Mexico, under Diaz, and Mexico now, adding "After Cabrera, what?"

Doing Business.

HAS DOUBLED IN TEN YEARS.

RAPID INCREASE OF PRODUCTION OF FACTORIES.

One Season's Total Value of the Manufactures of the United States Was Over Twenty and a Half Billion Dollars—The Meat Packing Business Leads All Others.

[New York Times:] The proof of the progress that the United States is making in this decade in manufactures appears conclusively in a final summary of the census of manufactures showing the totals, the number of establishments, the output and the States and cities that lead in manufacturing activities. The grand aggregate of manufacturing output for 1909, the year of the manufacturing census, was $20,672,052,000, an increase of 39.7 per cent. over 1904, when the last previous census of manufactures was taken. This is almost a doubling of output in ten years, the total for 1899 having been $11,000,000,000

Few would guess what staple stands first in value of the leading articles that enter into this mighty total. In their order of amount in value the list runs; Meat, foundry, and machine shop products, lumber, iron and steel, flour, grist mill products, printing, cotton goods, men's clothing, boots and shoes, women's clothing, sugar, furniture, copper and tin products, canning and preserving, patent medicines, and chemicals.

Our slaughtering and meat packing industry manufactures a total product amounting in value to $1,400,000,000 a year. Foundry work amounts to a little over $200,000,000 less. Lumber runs up to $1,156,000,000. Iron and steel we make to the amount of $953,000,000 a year. Flour products come next with $883,000,000. Our printing foots up $787,000,000. This includes books, papers, and all kinds of printing and publishing. Our cotton goods come to $628,000,000. Of men's clothing we make $568,000,000 worth. Of bootos and shoes, $513,000,000.

Of various kinds of woolen goods the total is $485,000,000. Tobacco comes next at $416,000,000. Our achievements in the way of liquor demand millions to tell the total. In malt they were $374,000,000; in distilled liquors $204,000,000. During the year there were railroad cars manufactured to the value of $123,000,000. Our manufacture of sugar went up to $279,000,000; of butter to $274,000,000.

Agricultural implements, $146,000,000; chemicals, $116,000,000; confectionery, $134,000,000; paper and wood pulp, $267,000,000; petroleum, $236,000,000; carriages and wagons, $159,000,000, and patent medicines, $141,000,000.

WAGE WORKERS EMPLOYED.

Out of our 91,000,000 population the average number of wage earners engaged in manufacturing is 6,615,046 and the number of establishments was 268,491. This is an increase in the number of persons employed in manufacturing of 21 per cent. over 1904.

The increase added to values by manufacturing since 1904 is 35 per cent.

The three Middle States—New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania—have to their credit over one-third of the entire value of manufactured products of the country. The New England States manufactured one-eighth of the total of the country.

The greatest increases in manufacturing appear in Texas, Washington, Oregon, Utah, Oklahoma, Idaho, North Dakota, and Nevada. But the most conspicuous advances appear in Ohio, New Jersey, and Michigan, which now hold the fifth, sixth, and seventh places, respectively, in amount and value of output.

There are interesting data to be observed in the returns for some industries. For instance, where the country made $31,000,000 worth of bicycles in 1899, in 1909 the total was less than one-third of that, or $10,098,000.

But in the matter of automobiles we went ahead some. The growth of this industry is phenomenal and even surpasses anything we saw twenty years ago in the manufacture of bicycles. As a matter of fact, the figures deal mainly with the last five years, as the returns ten years ago were included with those of the manufactures of carriages and wagons. And that year, 1899, there were only 2897 automobiles reported as having been made in the United States. In 1909 we made 127,287, which were worth $349,302,075. In 1904 the value of the total output was $30,032,536.

Gasoline machines formed 95.5 per cent. of the number made in 1909 and 86.2 per cent. in 1904. Of the total number manufactured in 1909 3.26 or 2.5 per cent., were rated as fifty horse power or more; 51,218, or 40.5 per cent., at from 30 to 49 horse power; 35,257, or 27.8 per cent., at from 20 to 29 horse power; 29,353, or 23.2 per cent., at from 10 to 19 horse power, and 7539, or 6 per cent., at less than 10 horse power. Passenger vehicles constituted 97.4 per cent., of the total, the number of business vehicles 2.6 per cent.

In 1909 there were 76,114 touring cars made, 36,204 runabouts, closed limousine cabs, etc.; 5206 omnibuses, sight-seeing wagons, and ambulances, patrol wagons, 1232; delivery wagons 1862, trucks 1366, buggies 4582.

While the bicycle industry fell off in the ten years that statement does not fairly give the history of the industry. There was a falling off from 1899 to 1904 from $31,915,000 to $5,153,000, but in 1909 it recovered mainly by the general use of motorcycles, and the value of the output that year was $10,698,000.

STREET CAR INDUSTRY.

Another peculiar fact stands out in this matter of rapid transit. There was a falling off in the manufacture of street cars which in 1904 totaled $10,844,000, and in 1909 $7,809,000. But half the number of closed street cars were made in the latter year, as compared with 1904. Of open cars ninety-five were made in 1909, and in 1904 there were 554.

In the matter of railroad passenger cars the number built in 1909 was 1819 against 2446 in 1904. The number of freight cars was 96,648 to 117,494 five years before.

The manufacture of phonographs and graphophones increased fivefold from a total value of $2,246,374 to $11,725,000. The number made five and ten years ago was not taken in the censuses of those years. The manufacture of records now constitute 42.7 per cent. of the business.

The relations of the printing trade are instructive. The total value has nearly doubled in ten years. The value of newspapers and periodicals now printed is $337,596,288, of which $135,062,000 is credited to subscriptions, and $202,533,000 to advertising.

The value of newspapers alone for 1909 is put at $232,993,000, of which subscriptions are $84,438,702 and advertising $143,554,000.

The value of books and pamphlets was $62,930,000. Job printing amounted to $207,940,000. The total of newspapers and periodicals is put at 22,141, a slight increase, and the aggregate circulation is placed at 164,463,000. The total of daily circulation is 24,000,000, of weekly 40,822,000.

TEXTILE MANUFACTURING.

The steady increase in textile manufacturing continues, according to the latest figures. There were 881,128 wage earners in this industry in 1909, an increase of 140,000, and the output in value was $1,684,636,499, an increase of $240,000,000. Cotton spindles constituted 83.2 per cent., silk 5.2 per cent., and woolen and worsted 11.5 per cent. of all. The increase of output of carpets from 1899 to 1909 was 53.5 per cent., and the total output in the latter year was 81,218,000 yards, worth $66,966,000.

The character of ownership in manufacturing industries is, as might be expected, shown to be in gradually tending to the form of corporations.

Partnerships, (including limited partnerships,) controled about one-fifth of the total number of manufacturing establishments in 1909, and individuals rather more than one-half of the total number.

Of the total number of establishments reported as engaged in manufacturing industries in 1909, 25.9 per cent. were under corporate ownership. The corresponding figure for 1904 was 23.6 per cent.

While corporations thus controled only about one-fourth of the total number of establishments, they gave employment to a large proportion of all wage earners reported, namely 75.6 per cent. in 1909 and 70.6 per cent. in 1904.

The value of the products of the factories operated by corporations represented 79 per cent. of the total value of products for all establishments in 1909 and 73.7 per cent. in 1904.

These figures show that even during this short period of five years the so greatly that it represented an appreciably larger proportion of the manufacturing interests of the country in 1909 than in 1904.

GET NEW TRIAL.

The Supreme Court has affirmed the decision of the Superior Court of Los Angeles county in granting a new trial to James B. Lankershim and Achille Biorci in the action brought by John A. Gordon against the Roberts Construction Company, Lankershim and Biorci, to recover damages on account of injuries received by the plaintiff while engaged in the construction of a building owned by Lankershim on which the other defendants were the contractors. In the lower courts Gordon secured a verdict for $2000 and Lankershim and Biorci asked for a new trial. This was granted and the plaintiff appealed from that opinion.

San Diego only recently voted one million dollars for preliminary work on her magnificent harbor, which will be the first port of call for the great ships of commerce, coming through the Panama Canal.

The Hour of Opportunity in City Heights SAN DIEGO

OPPORTUNITY—Such as knocked at the door of Los Angeles ten years ago—is knocking at the door of San Diego today.

To the man of broad vision, the early completion of the Panama Canal, the world's greatest achievement—the gigantic exposition in 1915, that will bring hundreds of thousands of visitors—the building of the San Diego and Arizona Railroad, directly connecting the city with the great Imperial Valley and the East—the phenomenal jump in population from 17,000 in 1900 to over 50,000 today—the building permits that have leaped from $150,000 in 1900 to $5,700,000 in 1911—the bank deposits that have grown from $1,800,000 in 1900 to over $12,000,000 in 1911—these are irresistible facts to which no man can close his eyes—these are facts that assure the inevitable greater San Diego—the "Marvel City of the Pacific Coast."

Now, while this great future is in the making—is the time to get in at San Diego on the ground floor.
The key to San Diego's residential expansion is "City Heights." Limited in growth on the north and south by valleys and canyons—and on the west by the bay—the greater San Diego is forced directly to City Heights.

This splendid community lies 350 feet above the sea—and is only 25 minutes from the city's business center by double track electric car line—5c fare—no transfers. Has electric lights, gas, water, telephones, fine soil—protective building restrictions—graded streets—magnificent view—unequalled climate and much of the district has sidewalks and curbs. City Heights is already dotted with attractive homes and populated now with two thousand people, and growing at the rate of 50 per cent. a year.

LUTHER TRANT.

beauty. She was an unknown American girl, whom Branower had met in Paris and had brought back to reign socially over this proud university suburb where his father's friends and associates had had to accept her and—criticize.

"Dr. Lawrie asphyxiated," she repeated, "accidentally, Mr. Trant?"

"I—hope so, Mrs. Branower."

"There is no clew to the perpetrator?"

"Why, if it was an accident, Mrs. Branower, there was no perpetrator."

"Cora!" Branowe. ejaculated.

"How silly of me." But Dr. Lawrie's lovely daughter; what a shock to her!"

Branower touched Trant upon the arm. He dismissed his wife hurriedly. "Now, Trant, let us go up."

President Joslyn met Branower's grasp mechanically and acquainted the president of the trustees, almost curtly, with the facts as he had found them.

"It seems Joslyn," Branower used almost the same words that Joslyn had used just before his arrival, "like a—confusion!"

"I can see no other solution," the president replied, "though Mr. Trant—"

"And I might have saved this, at least!" The trustee's face had grown white as he looked down at the man on the couch. "Oh, Lawrie, why did I put you off to the last moment?"

He turned, fumbling in his pocket for a letter. "He sent this Saturday," he continued, pitifully. "I should have come to him at once, but I could not suspect this."

Joslyn read the letter through with a look of increased conviction. "This settles all," he said, decidedly, and he reread it aloud:

"Dear Branower: I pray you, as you have pity for a man with sixty years of probity behind him facing disgrace and disgrace, to come to me at the earliest possible hour. Do not, I pray, delay later than Monday. I implore you.

"JAMES LAWRIE."

Dr. Reiland buried his face in his hands, and Joslyn turned to Trant. On the young man's face was a look of deep perplexity.

"When did you get that, Mr. Branower?" Trant asked, finally.

"He wrote it Saturday morning. It was delivered to my house Saturday afternoon. But I was motoring with my wife. I did not get it until I returned late Sunday afternoon."

"Then you could not have come much sooner."

"No; yet I might have done something if I had suspected that behind this letter was hidden his determination to commit suicide."

"Not suicide, Mr. Branower!" Trant interrupted curtly.

"What!"

"Look at his face. It is white and drawn. If asphyxiated, it would be blue, swollen. Before the gas was turned on he was dead—struck down."

"Struck dead? By whom?"

"By the man in this room last night! By the man who burned those notes, plugged the keyhole, turned on the gas, arranged the rest of these materials, and went away to leave Dr. Lawrie a thief and a suicide to—protect himself! Two men had access to the university funds, handled those notes! One lies before us, and the man in this room last night, I would say, was the other—the man who at this hour of nine has not yet appeared at his office!"

"Harrison?" cried Joslyn and Reiland together.

"Yes, Harrison," Trant answered, curtly. "I certainly prefer him for the man in the room last night."

"Harrison?" Branower repeated, contemptuously. "Impossible."

"How impossible?" Trant asked, dejectedly.

"Because Harrison, Mr. Trant, was struck senseless at Elgin in an automobile accident Saturday noon. He has been in Elgin Hospital, scarcely conscious, ever since."

"How did you learn that, Mr. Branower?"

"I have helped many young men to positions here. Harrison was one. Because of that, I suppose, he filled in my name on the 'whom-to-notify' line of a personal identification card he carried. The hospital doctors notified me just as I was leaving home in my car. I saw him at Elgin Hospital that afternoon."

Young Trant stared into the steady eyes of the president of the trustees. "Then Harrison could not have been the man in the room last night. Do you realize what that implies?" he asked, whitening. "I preferred, I said, to him as Harrison. That would mean both Dr. Lawrie from being the friend and close personal intimate of Harrison being the man who struck the blow here last night. But with Harrison not here, the treasurer himself must have known all the particulars of this crime," he struck the assembled note in his hand, "and been planning it for—that close friend of Dr. Lawrie came here with him. You see how very terribly it simplifies our problem! It was some one close enough to Lawrie to cause him to conceal the thing as long as he could, and some one intimate enough to know of the treasurer's tinkering habits, so that even in great haste, he could find at once of the gas nippers in Lawrie's private tool drawer. Gentlemen," the young assistant tensely added, "I must ask you which of you was the one in this room with Dr. Lawrie last night?"

"What!" The word in three different tones burst from their lips—amazement, anger, threat.

He lifted a shaking hand to stop them.

"I realize," he went on more quickly, "that after having suggested one charge and having it shown false, I am now making a far more serious one which, if I cannot prove it, must cost me my position here. But I make it now again, directly. One of you three was in this room with Dr. Lawrie last night. Which one? I could tell within the hour if I could take you successively to the psychological laboratory and submit you to a test, but perhaps I need not. Even without that, I hope soon to be able to tell the world for which of you Dr. Lawrie concerned himself with this crime, and who it was that in return struck the blow last Sunday night and left him under a double disgrace as a suicide."

The young psychologist stood an instant gazing into their startled faces, then, frightened at his own temerity in charging thus the three most respected men in the university; then, as President Joslyn eyed him sternly, he caught again the enthusiasm of his calling.

"One of you, at least, knows that I speak the truth," he said, determinedly; and without a backward look he left the room and, running down the steps, left the campus.

It was 5 o'clock that afternoon when Trant rang the bell at Dr. Joslyn's door. He saw that Mr. Branower and Dr. Reiland had been taken into the president's private study before him; and that the manner of all three was different toward him than he had expected.

Dr. Reiland and Mr. Branower had come to hear the Coroner's report, Joslyn explained. "The Coroner says Lawrie did not die by suffocation. An autopsy tomorrow will show the cause of his death. But, at least, Trant—you made accusations this morning which can have no foundation in truth, but in part of what you said you must have been correct; for obviously some other person was in the room."

"But not Harrison," Trant replied. "I have just come from Elgin, where, though I was not allowed to speak with him, I saw him in the hospital."

"You doubted he was there?" Branower asked.

"I wanted to make sure, Mr. Branower. And I have traced the notes, too," the young man continued. "All were made out as usual, signed regularly by Dr. Lawrie and paid by him personally, upon maturity, from the university reserve. So I have made only more certain that the man in the room must have been one of Dr. Lawrie's closest friends. I came back and saw Margaret Lawrie. I found her prostrated. Her memory is temporarily destroyed. I could make her comprehend little. Yet she knows only of her father's death; nothing at all has been said to her of the suspicions against him. Does his death alone seem cause enough for her prostration? More likely, I think, it points to some guilty knowledge of her father's trouble and whom he was protecting. If so, her very condition makes it impossible for her to conceal those guilty associations under examination."

"Guilty associations?" Dr. Reiland rose nervously. "Do you mean, Trant, that you think Margaret knows anything of the loss of this money? Oh, no, no; it is impossible."

"It would at any rate account for her prostration," the assistant repeated quietly, "and I have determined to make a test of her for association with her father's guilt. I will use in this case, Dr. Reiland, only the simple association of words—Freud's method."

"How? What do you mean?" Branower and Joslyn exclaimed.

"It is a method for getting at the concealed causes of mental disturbance. It is especially useful in diagnosing cases of insanity or mental breakdown from insufficiently known causes.

"We have a machine, the chronoscope, which registers the time to a thousandth part of a second, if necessary. The German physicians merely speak a series of words which may arouse in the patient ideas that are at the bottom of his insanity. Those words which are connected with the trouble cause deeper feeling in the subject, and are marked by longer intervals of time before the word in reply can be spoken. The nature of the word spoken by the patient often clears the causes for his mental agitation or prostration.

"In this case, if Margaret Lawrie had reason to believe that any one of you were closely associated with her father's trouble, the speaking of that one's name or the mentioning of anything connected with that one, must betray an easily registered and decidedly measurable disturbance."

"Excellent," the president of the trustees agreed, "if Margaret's physician does not object."

"I have already spoken with him. Can I expect you all at Dr. Lawrie's tomorrow morning when I test Margaret to discover the identity of the intimate friend who caused the crime charged to her father?"

Dr. Lawrie's three dearest friends nodded in turn.

Trant came early the next morning to the dead treasurer's house to set up the chronoscope in the spare bedroom next to Margaret Lawrie's.

The instrument somewhat resembled a brass dumb-bell very delicately poised upon an axle so that the lower part, which was heavier, could swing slowly back and forth like a pendulum. A light, sharp pointer paralleled this pendulum. The weight, when started, swung to and fro in the arc of a circle; the pointer swung beside it. But the pointer, after starting to swing, could be instantaneously stopped by an electro-magnet. This magnet was connected with a battery and wires led from it to the two instruments used in the test. The first pair of wires connected with two bits of steel, which Trant, in conducting the test, would hold between his lips. The least motion of his lips to enunciate a word would break the electric circuit and start swinging the pendulum and the pointer beside it. The second pair of wires led to a sort of telephone receiver. When Margaret would reply into this, it would close the circuit and instantaneously the electro-magnet clamped and held the pointer. A scale along which the pointer traveled gave, down to thousandths of a second, the time between the speaking of the suggesting word and the first associated word replied.

Trant had this instrument set up and tested before he had to turn and admit Dr. Reiland, Mr. Branower and President Joslyn soon joined them, and a moment after a nurse entered supporting Margaret Lawrie. Dr. Reiland himself scarcely recognized her as the same girl who had come running across the campus to them only the morning before.

Trant nodded to the nurse, who withdrew. He looked to Dr. Reiland. "Please be sure that she understands," he said, softly. The older man bent over the girl, who had been placed upon the bed.

"Margaret," he said tenderly, "we know you cannot speak well this morning, my dear, and that you cannot think very clearly. Mr. Trant is merely going to say some words to you slowly, one word at a time; and we want you to answer—you need only speak very gently—anything at all, any word at all, my dear, which you think at first. I will hold this little horn over you to speak into. Do you understand, my dear?"

The big eyes closed in assent. Reiland took the receiving drum at the end of the second set of wires and held it before the girl's lips. Trant picked up the mouth metals attached to the starting wires, seated himself beside the able which held the chronoscope and took a pencil to write upon a pad of paper the words he suggested. The words associated and time elapsing. Then he put his mouthpiece between his lips.

"Dress," he enunciated clearly. The pendulum, released by the magnet, started to swing. The pointer swung beside it in an arc along the scale. "Skirt," Miss Lawrie answered feebly, into the drum at her lips. The current caught the pointer instantaneously, and Trant noted the result thus:

Dress—2.7 seconds—skirt.

"Dog," Trant spoke, and started the pointer again. "Cat," the girl answered and stopped it. Trant wrote:

Dog—2.6 seconds—cat.

A faint smile appeared on the faces of Mr. Branower and Dr. Joslyn, but Reiland knew that his young assistant was merely establishing the normal time of Margaret's associations through words without probable connection with any disturbance in her mind.

"Home," Trant said; and it was five and two-tenths seconds before he could write "father." Reiland moved, sympathetically, but the other men still watched without seeing any significance in the time extension. Trant waited a moment. "Money," he said, suddenly. Dr. Reiland watched the swinging pointer tremblingly. But "purse" from Margaret stopped it before it had registered more than her established normal time for innocent associations.

BIG EARNINGS FROM COPPER.

Phelps-Dodge Company Pays Unusual Dividends.

Calumet and Arizona Also Is Good Producer.

Strike in San Juan Grande Causes Sensation.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) April 5.—The annual report of Phelps-Dodge and Company shows no signs of bad times. During the past year the subsidiary companies had a gross income of $7,283,508, from which dividends were paid amounting to $5,400,000. The net earnings of the subsidiary Companies were: Copper Queen Company, $4,155,010; Detroit Copper Company, $930,945; Moctezuma Copper Comany, $1,206,182; Stag Canyon Fuel Company, $345,-071.

During the year Phelps-Dodge and Company sold 180,301,965 pounds of copper, of which 48,974,963 pounds came from outside properties. The average price in New York was 12.36 cents per pound. From the Copper Queen report it is shown that 23,-000 more tons of copper were mined in 1911 than 1910, from ores averaging three tenths of 1 per cent. less copper contents.

The total production of the Calumet and Arizona Mining Company, together with the Superior and Pittsburg, for the year 1911, was $6,842,-463 out of which the sum of $2,525,-721 is set down as net earnings. Reference is made in the annual report to an appropriation granted by the board of directors in December of $1,948,143 for the erection of a new smelter just south of the present plant. The new works are to be in operation by August 1, 1913. In the latter part of the year an option was taken on the property of the new Cornelia Copper Company in Ajo district, in Pima county, forty-two miles south of Gila on the Southern Pacific. Drilling has developed the presence of a large body of carbonate siliceous ore, and it is expected that further exploration will result in finding masses of concentrating ore which may be mined from open pits. Nothing has been done by the company during the past year on its claims at Courtland.

An additional shift of men has been put at work by the Shattuck Company, and there is a prospect for exceptional activity around that property.

G. J. McCabe, a former member of the Board of Supervisors and a well-known miner of this district, is now developing the Moctezuma property in the Huachuca Mountains. These mines formerly were owned by the Mitchell Mining Company. McCabe has purchased a compressor and will install power drills for driving a couple of tunnels.

Rich gold ore has been found at the depth of 135 feet in an exploration shaft, which is being driven by the Commonwealth Extension Mining Company at Pearce. In the same camp I. N. Kinsey has sold his contract with the Commonwealth Mining Company for the old Commonwealth tailings dump to the Calumet and Arizona Mining Company, for $15,-000, in cash. The tailings are highly siliceous and make very good converter linings.

Two new converters are being added to the present seven in the works of the Cananea Consolidated Copper Company, at Cananea, as well as an additional electric crane and a large Nordberg compressor.

In a two-foot vein in the San Juan Grande mine, twelve miles from Soyopa, Sonora, is said to have been found ore running 60 per cent. copper, twenty-five ounces in silver and from $2 to $10 a ton in gold, at the bottom of an incline shaft, now down fifty feet. The owners of the property are R. E. Faver and A. G. Pace of La Colorada.

POTASH DEPOSITS.
FOUND IN NEVADA.

G. L. Sheldon, writing from Ely, Nev., gives some interesting information concerning potash deposits and the use of the mineral. Among other things he says:

"The only commercial potash product in the world is at Strassfurt near Harz Mountains, in Northern Germany. It was discovered in 1857, when drilling for rock salt, at a depth of 1080 feet. At first it was thrown away as of no value. Through the labor of Prof. Justus von Liebig in 1860 its importance to agriculture became known. In 1861 the first factory for refining crude potash was built. Now there are forty-five large active establishments in operation, with many millions invested, and an annual production of over 5,000,000 metric tons. While its greatest importance and tonnage is as a fertilizer, large quantities are used in the manufacture of chemical products, carbonate of potash, caustic, nitric, chlorate, alumnate, bromide, permanganate of potash, cyanide of potassium and other compounds. Doctors, photographers, painters, dyers, cleaners, bleachers, soap makers, weavers and electricians use it. Large quantities are used in refrigeration, fireworks, gunpowders, matches, paper, glass and in the extraction of gold and silver. On account of Germany having an ironbound trust on its production and price the United States government, realizing its great importance to agriculture, which is only limited by its cost and freight, has during the past year, under appropriations by Congress, through the Geological Survey, endeavored to discover it in paying quantities.

"At Fallon, Nev., the government is now drilling a well to test it. At Railroad Valley, eighty miles from Ely, this being the nearest shipping and supply point, potash is known to exist. It was first known thirty years ago, when salt was made there for the chlorization of ores at Tybo, forty-five miles distant. The amount of potash in it interfered with its use. Last October the Geological Survey sent in their engineers to examine.

"In 1906, the consumption of potash in the United States was over one-half million metric tons. If it can be produced in the United States for agricultural purposes alone, the amount used would be many times this, on account of freight costs."

depth of 160 feet. This vein has been opened further north and east on the February claim where at a depth of from 100 to 150 feet it yielded some of the richest ore found in the district, carrying silver in quantities as high as 900 ounces per ton. This vein was followed from the old January workings during the earliest operations of the ground and the ore was found to extend into the adjoining claims. No systematic development has been done on either the White Rocks or Kawbawgam ground and much interest will attach to the opening of this territory on a broad scale.

The Pacific Coast Silica Company has been organized by James R. Clark in order to protect his rights to a deposit of silica he found near Shoeshone station on the Tidewater railroad, south of Goldfield. More than three years ago Clark discovered this deposit of silica he found near Shoing it, introducing it to consumers and working with the railroads for a low freight rate that would permit of shipping it with profit. He donated two carloads to the United States Chemical Company of Los Angeles for testing purposes. This drew attention of experts to the value of the find and the ground was jumped. Carload lots of silica shipped to Los Angeles were attached and Clark in turn secured an injunction against the chemical company. J. Eysenmayer of Pasadena and Alexander Yeoman have joined with Clark in forming and financing a company which will have funds to establish a line of auto trucks and machinery for handling the sand along economical lines. This silica is an aqueous deposit of silica or pure white quartz and because of its deposition it is about pure and impalpable, which conditions are said to make it more valuable than any other known deposit of silica. Investigations conducted by Clark show that it is superior for the manufacture of glass, for which industry the Quartz Glass Manufacturing Company of Los Angeles has signed a contract for 200 tons a week at the beginning. At another point about fourteen miles south of Zabriskie Clark has discovered a mountain of saponaceous clay extensively used for paper-making and has closed a contract with another Los Angeles firm for 150 tons a week to be applied to papermaking in Washington mills.

STRIKE IS DENIED.

Rumors of a new strike on the Florence Goldfield are denied by the management. The work outlined before destruction of the mill is being carried forward at a good speed, the shaft timbers have been straightened out, shaft ladders have been installed, repairs have been made to the shaft where necessary by swelling ground or seepage and a station is now being cut on the 1000 level, from which lateral development will be carried on. The shaft now down 1060 feet well be continued to a depth of 1260 feet and lateral work will be prosecuted from the 1200-foot level. Development is in progress from several points in the mine.

Operations on the Diamondfield Black Butte are to be extended shortly by the resumption of work in the original shaft of the Campbell lease, at the west side of the Butte and the south of the main shaft, where the Black Butte Mining and Leasing Company is now operating. The Campbell shaft is over 200 feet deep, but most of the work of recent months has been conducted from the station at a depth of about 100 feet, the rest of the shaft having filled with water. For sometime it has been the intention of this company to unwater the shaft and drive for the main Quartzite vein.

At the Vernal the management is working along distinct lines mapped out at the time the controlling interest was acquired by Philadelphia parties, who since that time, have also bought the holdings of Thomas B. Lockhart of Los Angeles. The work was started from an old shaft in Goldfield-Belmont territory, near the line of the Vernal, from which prospecting began from the fifty and 112 levels. On both of these levels good assay values were secured and one ore shoot of considerable promise was exposed while driving on the north of the 112-foot level, while drifting on the Belmont vein. The object of this drift was to explore the Belmont vein, in order to determine the location and pitch of the ore shoots and to connect with the shaft of the Uncle Sam claim, which has been made the main working shaft of the company. The work is on the northern extension of the Goldfield-Belmont vein, from which that company has already extracted a considerable tonnage of shipping ore above the 300 sill floors, and which, the latter company, has penetrated the ore shoot on the 400-foot level. This is regarded as one of the most consistent and uniform veins in the district and can be traced for a considerable distance through several properties in the Diamondfield belt.

The Round Mountain Company through its president, James R. Davis, reports the company is now treating 170 to 180 tons daily in its mill, the recovery effected, being from 90 to 92 per cent., by simple plate and amalgamation, the product being all free gold. The process is a simple crushing and grinding through Huntington and tube mills. The annual meeting will be held May 20, when the reports will indicate in detail the earnings of the past year, which have been highly satisfactory. Placer operations will be started within a week or ten days on the Sunnyside and Great Western claims by lesee, Llwellyn, who has a sublease from the Round Mountain Water and Power Company.

CHAMBER MINES AND OIL.
RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

At a meeting, last Thursday, of the directors of the Chamber of Mines and Oil, the plan suggested by the Mining and Metallurgical Society of America for the government of the newly-established Bureau of Mines was approved by resolution.

The chamber also placed its members on record as being opposed to the bills before Congress providing for the establishment of various so-called mining experiment stations in certain western States. Copies of the resolutions adopted will be forwarded to the California members of Congress

GOOD MILLING ORE.
IN MAMMOTH MINE.

Maj. H. M. Russell, president and owner of the Mammoth Mountain Mining Company, operating in the old Keyes district of Kern county, reports the strike, on the 600-foot level, of a six-foot ledge of ore that mills $26 a ton. This property is near the Big Blue mine, that made millions for its owners.

The Mammoth mine is equipped with a ten-stamp mill and electric power is used. Maj. Russell has driven a tunnel 1300 feet from the side of the hill under the old workings. He has been developing the property for several years and is beginning to get good results.

OLDFIELD REINSTATED; RACES AT SANTA MONICA

The Marathon.

DETAILS ARRANGED FOR GREAT RACE APRIL 20.

"The Times" Modified Marathon Gathers Class as the Time Draws Near—Many New Entries — Splendid List of Prizes Offered Contestants—Next Run to Be Held Wednesday Afternoon, Enter Now.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

THE last days of the past week have been warm ones for the directors of The Times Modified Marathon, but they have done the work and all the details for the big event are practically arranged at the present reading of the minutes. The cups for the race have been selected and will be on exhibition at the various sporting goods houses this week, there are twenty cups up for the contestants and there are also fifty gold medals to be awarded to the runners who finish within the time limit of two hours, in order, after the cup winners. Besides the cups put up by The Times, H. H. Eling, of A. G. Spalding and Brothers has donated three cups; Ed Tufts, of the Tufts-Lyon Arms Company has put up one cup; Fesgans and Company have also come in with a splendid trophy, others are the Berlin Dye Works, W. A. Johnstone and Company and Wm. Hoegee Company.

This large prize list will give everybody a chance to carry home something to remember the race by after it is all over. In the past, many of these races have been only two and three-man affairs, as far as the prizes go but this time every man finishing within the time limit will be it.

SEBASTIAN APPROVES.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors Friday afternoon, the matter of policing the course was taken up with Chief of Police Sebastian and was fixed up with much gusto. The Chief was greatly interested in the event and assured the board of his hearty co-operation in all ways possible. He and Lieut. Butler will be taken over the course Monday morning at ten thirty, by the directors and means for policing the course at the various checking stations and at the start and finish, will be taken up and definitely arranged. Pat Higgins will handle this end of the race for The Times and is at the present time working on the feature.

The checkers and judges of the race itself were selected at the meeting of the directors. At Station 1, Fay Halbriter will be in charge; at Station 2, Morris Hartman; Station 3, Art Coover; Station 4, S. E. Tipton; Station 5, Less Henry; Station 6, Dal Jeffries; Station 7, Joe Fitzpatrick; Station 8, the finish, Ralph C. Noble will be in charge, with Harry A. Chamberlin, Tom Oxman, W. A. Reynolds, Al Ritzer, C. A. Webster, Roy Haslett and Bual A. Funk. These men, with Noble, will be the official judges of the finish and will check all the contestants as they cross the line, giving them their official place in the race, taking name, number and time of each.

ACCURATE TIMING.

Brock and Company, jewelers, have been appointed official time keepers of the race and will have watches at the start and at all the checking stations. All the time pieces will be tested, so any records made will stand as read. This care has been taken, as three of the runners are out for the world's record over the 12-mile cross country course and then the marching squads of the Seventh Regiment are also out for a record under light marching order; as well as for the Gen. Otis cup.

As this race has become so widely known, there is but little doubt that the runners making a good showing, will be given a look-in for the Olympic marathon team.

Bob Weaver was appointed official checker of the race and will count noses at the Athlete Club, before the runners are brought to the starting point, at First and Broadway, and then will take the toll before they are sent away by Mayor Alexander, who fires the starting gun.

The runners will meet at the Los Angeles Athletic Club at 1:30 p.m., on the day of the race, April 20, will get into their war togs and have their citizens' cloths checked, then they will be carried to the starting point in three Moorland Auto trucks. Each runner should provide himself with a grip, so it will make the checking of his belongings easier.

CHECKING CAPTAINS NOTICE.

The captains of the checking stations should at once send in the names of their assistants, so the directors can provide official badges and vest them with the proper authority. The selection of the assistants at the checking stations will be left in the hands of the captains.

All the contestants are requested to watch the "Times Pink" for called meetings of runners, trial runs and final instructions. The next trial spin will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, April 10, and any of the contestants wishing to run are requested to send in their names before Tuesday night to Owen R. Bird, at the sporting desk of The Times.

After dealing with the material matters of this race we will now take a flyer into a few personalities. Last night two more entries came in and from the dope that came along with them there will be quite a little class attached to the contestants.

The first recruit was Frank W. Reynolds, 57 years of age, who will join forces with Dr. Warman, Henry Wheeler, and S. T. Stagg. From 1879 to 1881 he held all the long distance records around Providence, R. I. In 1890 he defeated the world's famous Sam Merritt, who made a famous record in the Madison Square Garden, New York, some weeks after this race by three miles in another 24-hour race. He has not done anything since this time in running, but has kept in fair condition, and thinks he can land Bert Eling's prize for the senior division.

BECKER LOOKS GOOD.

The other entry was Louis Becker of San Diego, who, at the present time is training over the hills of Santa Barbara. He took sixth place in the Venice-Los Anelcs road race, two years ago, but is coming out in The Times Modified Marathon to make a better showing than ever, before the local fans, as he thinks he has the goods this time.

Among other feats pulled off by Mr. Becker, we find that he won the Baltimore to Washington cross country race three years ago, and then won the great Canadian cross-country run of fifteen miles, beating Bill Stering in 1hr., 45m., 3 3-5s. This record should hold them for awhile.

In 1909 he ran at Madison Square Garden in the ten-mile championship, finishing seventh, so it would seem that he is some tough bird and would make Peter George and Charlie Swiggit travel for the big trophy. Louis says that he is after Peter George's scalp as he had to take his dust when he ran in the Venice road race, two years ago.

After the showing made by little Julius Schon, on last Wednesday afternoon, in the trial over the course, several members of the rising generation came to Bert Eling and wanted to go over the course at once, saying that they could "cook" Julius without a pain, so this bunch will be out next Wednesday afternoon and will go after Julius and his record. This is a special invitation to the school boys to be on hand and have a try-out and see what they can do. All the youngsters will be looked after by the members of the board of directors and all interested can rest assured that none of them will possibly come to harm.

Thus endith the reading of the lesson today, Selah.

BOOKMAKERS BUSY.

The latest scheme proposed for securing the reopening of the race tracks in New York State is through the appointment of a legislative investigating committee. This committee will be asked to devise a plan for permitting horse racing "in a manner satisfactory to both the race track owners and those who fear the letting down the bars against betting." The committees will confer with representatives of the Jockey Club, agricultural and county fair societies, the State Agricultural Department and the reform associations.

LAKESIDE AUTO TOUR.

Automobile Club of Southern California Plans to Cover Route of "The Times" Tour.

The semi-annual club run of the Automobile Club of Southern California promises to be a great success, and at this early date Secretary S. A. Geary reports 125 machines booked to appear at the start on the morning of the 15th.

Five hundred members of the club have given notice of their intention to make the trip, and it is expected that many more will join the forces before the date for the run arrives.

The programme calls for the run to San Diego over the Coast route. This course at present is in excellent condition. The San Diego Chamber of Commerce is making elaborate preparations for the reception of visitors.

A trip to Lakeside is planned. Here Walter Hempel will have one of his famous Lakeside Inn chicken dinners ready to serve to the hungry motorists.

The same evening there will be entertainment provided at Coronado and San Diego; and the following morning the return trip will be made over the inland route.

FLY PEKING TO PARIS.

NEW YORK, April 6.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] The Paris Matin plans to organize a flying race for aviators of all nations between Peking and Paris. The distance between the two cities is 7500 miles. The route proposed is one laid out by Prince Iciplo Borghese in a motor car, in 1907.

Can He Come Back?

BARNEY OLDFIELD TO DRIVE IN SANTA MONICA RACE.

Former Speed King of the World to Start in Free-for-All Against Ralph de Palma, David Bruce Brown, Ralph Mulford, Wishart, Bragg, Dingley and Ted Tetzlaff in the Greatest Thrill Producer Ever Carded.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

BARNEY OLDFIELD will drive in the Santa Monica road race. The daring pilot, who once thrilled the motor world with his speed dashes, is ready to drive in the $10,000 grand prize, free-for-all and is pitted against the world's best racing drivers.

Never before in the history of motordom has such an aggregation of racing drivers been matched. At last Oldfield and Ralph de Palma will meet. Both of these daredevils are endered in the lists for the great race and when Starter Fred Wagner fires the gun, Oldfield and De Palma will be sent away on a 300-mile battle that will test their skill on the road for the first time in any western meet.

Locked in a duel that will be witnessed by 100,000 excited spectators these two champions will fight it out for hour after hour. There are those who think Oldfield will have his own way and there are others who feel certain that De Palma will trim the man who was once the speed king of the world.

Ralph Mulford will be in the Santa Monica road race to drive against the two champs. He will pilot a Knox. That decision was only reached a few days ago, and in a communication to a friend in this city, Mulford announced his determination to drive. The man who won on the Locier is ready with a fast Knox.

BIG BENZ.

David Bruce Brown is entered with his Benz. Here is a man who will give Oldfield and De Palma the race of their lives. Mulford was the man who fought things out with Brown and beat him in the last Vanderbilt Cup race, only to be beaten by Brown in the Savannah Grand Prize. Now the two are to start together in a western race meet.

Caley Bragg is another bright star who will shine on the Santa Monica road race course. He is the only man who ever defeated Oldfield in a western meet and Caley will have his Fiat tuned up for a dash that will show the crowd thrills never witnessed before. Bragg has the same car he used in the Savannah Grand Prize.

Now, as if that was not a great enough aggregation of brilliants, Wishart, the Mercedes fiend, is entered in the Santa Monica road race and plans to drive over the course at a speed that will send him into a world record. The man who made such a remarkable showing at Fairmount Park will be here in a week or two ready for the time trials at Santa Monica.

LOCAL STARS.

For the local end of the racing game, Bert Dingley is one of the stars who will shine on a Simplex. The racing car reached here on Friday and is ready for a dash over the course at a pace that should send Bert into a world record. He has his heart set on a victory that will surprise everybody and he has a chance to win both the prize and fame.

Teddy Tetzluff, who won the Santa Monica road race in 1910 in a Lozier, will be on a Fiat this year. He is in line for something big. He is picked by E. E. Hewett to win first place. Hewlett has equipped his car for a race in which he hopes to send Teddy out with a chance to profit by experience.

Last year Tetzlaff played in bad luck. This year he expects to show his friends, and the public generally, that he can come back right. He believes he can beat Oldfield, De Palma, Wishart, Brewn, Bragg, Mulford and the rest of the fast ones with the car he has been trying out for the past year.

When the race was first planned there was not a dealer who believed the fast card of drivers could be secured for the Santa Monica classic. The men are all in line. The cars are coming and a number of them are here already. It means big things for the racing situation with such a galaxy of men in the cars that are promised for the contest.

Most of the machines to appear in the Santa Monica road race will be shipped back for the Indianapolis affair. The cars are being used in try-outs here and will be ready for other world records on the two-mile speedway.

SMALLER CARS.

Another announcement of particular interest was from the Mercer factory at Trenton. The new local agent, Louis F. Benton, received word yesterday that the car that won the medium car race at Savannah will be shipped here to be driven by Ralph De Palma. He also learned, much to his gratification, that David Bruce Brown will drive a Mercer in the medium car race here, in preparation for the big free-for-all.

The Mercer cars have figured in race meets, and have always been drawing cars. Last year Harris Hanshue drove a Mercer and made a consistent showing. This season such drivers as De Palma and Brown are scheduled for these cars, and they should again make a great showing.

The light car event promises to be a great one. The Buick, which won the race last year is to be entered and driven by Louis Nikrent. A Buick "30" also is entered, with the driver not announced. There will be two E.M.F. cars and a Flanders, a Reo and a Regal, the latter to be driven by Roscoe Anthony. The largest entry list ever promised for this race seems certain.

The Dick Ferris trophy is up for the free-for-all. The Leon T. Shettler trophy is to be offered, the Jacob Jepsen trophy is in the hands of A. M. Young, and the Chandler & Lyon trophy is to be put up tomorrow. This makes the longest list of cups ever offered for the big race.

CHRISTY'S CONDITION BAD.

NEW YORK, April 6.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Christy Mathewson, star pitcher of the New York Nationals, will not be ready to work for some days, according to Manager McGraw, who brought his club home today after the spring training trip. Mathewson will need several days of warm weather before he is in shape to pitch and the burden of the work of the first games of the season will fall therefore on Marquard, Ames and Wiltse. The rest of the players are in good condition, Mcgraw said.

Young, manager of the big race meet, who will conduct the grand prize contest, in which such men as David Bruce Brown, Ralph Mulford, Caley Bragg, Teddy Tetzlaff and a score of other racing stars will shine.

BASEBALL RECORDS WORTH A THOUGHT.

Here are some of the baseball records made in the old days which the veterans delight to talk about:

In the thirteen years between 1877 and 1900 "Silver" Flint caught 825 games, and in 833 of them he wore neither mask, glove nor chest protector.

In the sixteen seasons between 1876 and 1892, Adrian C. Anson played in 1582 games and made 2252 hits. His batting average for the entire sixteen years was .344.

In 1875 Boston won every game played on the home grounds.

In 1455 games, covering twelve consecutive seasons, Mike Kelley had a batting average of .321.

Hugh Duffey, with the Boston Club in 1884, had the unprecedented batting average of 478.

The first no-hit game ever pitched was by Joseph Mann of Princetown, N. J., against Yale, New Haven. The game was played in 1875.

BIG TRUCKS IN LONDON.

In London some of the big trucks are getting as high as 30,000 miles out of a set of solid rubber tires, yet there are cities in America where the tire maker will not guarantee 8000 miles. Deplorable conditions of the street pavement are responsible for this. It is further a fact that it is possible in America to get nearly twice as much tire mileage in one city as in another, due solely to the street pavements.

Monument to Rodgers.

SHETTLER GETS IN ACTION WITH BOOST FOR AVIATOR.

LEON T. Shettler has a plan for the building of a monument in this city to the memory of Calbraith Perry Rodgers, the aviator who was first to cross the continent, and who lost his life at Long Beach, Tuesday afternoon.

The plan for raising the funds, as suggested by Shettler, is a subscription list with the amount given by each individual limited to one dollar.

It is proposed to erect the column at the function of Spring and Main near Ninth street, where a small triangle has been roped off for the safety of pedestrians. This Shettler says would add to the attractiveness of the busy junction and serve the city as a waiting station for the Main and Spring street cars.

"Rodgers did much for this section of the country," said Shettler yesterday. "He put Los Angeles on the map in big bold letters and it is up to us to show the world and the aviators who will cross the continent at a later date that we are worthy of their best efforts."

Last Wednesday, Joel F. Lindsay of the Leon T. Shettler Company, created a sensation in the citrus regions by going over the Arrowhead grade on the high, in a little five-passenger Apperson "4-45."

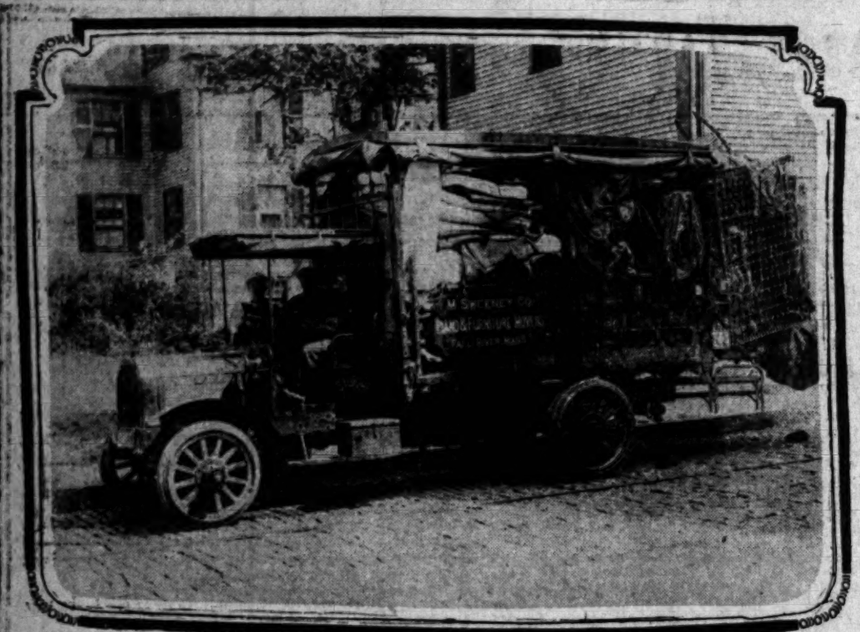
Shettler's man was visiting J. L. Warnock, the San Bernardino agent, on a matter of business and in a conversation with some automobile enthusiasts of the section made the statement that he could drive an Apperson "4-45" up the difficult grade.

He was at once called, and had to make good. The car went up as claimed and on the strength of the demonstration Walter Kohl ordered a car from the local Apperson agent.

The door of Shettler's new Jack Rabbit home looks like a Quartermaster's office when the doctor is "out to lunch." There is not a car on the floor and in the garage there is only one, well worn, little demonstrator.

With the "sold out" sign on display and orders booked well ahead the popular Leon is still selling cars, and has a standing order with the factory for a car load of Appersons every three days. The last two shipments have been delayed on account of the floods but a large supply of the fast selling machines is expected to arrive very soon.

ADDITIONAL SPORTS Page 8, Part I.



Big Peerless Truck With All the Goods That It Is Possible to Pile Into Its Capacious Body.
This is one of the handsome commercial cars which H. O. Harrison is selling and which has made good on some of the most strenuous tests. Harrison is making a great record in San Francisco and in Los Angeles, but is having a hard time to get enough cars.

Business Is Booming.

PEERLESS CARS YEAR AHEAD.

Early Announcement of the High-priced Line.

H. O. Harrison Ready to Spring Big Surprise.

Everitt and Waverleys Prove Very Popular.

Nineteen-thirteen models of the Peerless line are to be announced within a few days, according to H. O. Harrison, California agent for the Peerless and Everitt. This is the earliest date ever set for any automobile concern and the Peerless people have decided to do this after much thought. The idea is to offer the new models for early touring.

The following dispatch was received from H. O. Harrison yesterday:

"Peerless motor cars for 1913 will be announced unusually early. This announcement is expected in the next few days. With the prospect of long summer tours not far away we have determined to show the public just what may be expected. This would make it possible to get a delivery in time for a tour this year across the continent. The fact that summer has become the favorite time to purchase cars makes a big difference to the prospect if he can secure the machine he wishes as early as possible."

Just what the Peerless line will be like it is hard to announce just now. While no radical changes are anticipated the improvements shown for 1912 were so surprising that Peerless owners are ready for most anything from the man who is an authority in the high-priced line.

GREAT RECORD.

Since he has been in San Francisco, Harrison has made a great record with the Peerless. He took the car there at a time when only a few were sold and disposed of 100 the first season and last season he bettered that mark considerably.

According to the latest report from the Peerless chief this year is excellent and the volume of business already recorded exceeds that at the same date last season. The cars have made a great hit in the Bay City and are going out in numbers which surprise even the Peerless boosters.

In this city, where Tom Williams is the branch manager, business has been good. The Everitt lines have been attractive and the outside agents have been clamoring for cars. The dearth of Everitts the early part of the year was serious, but this has been overcome.

The Waverley electric, which has been added to the H. O. Harrison line, is one of the popular electric cars now on the market. A large number of these have been sold in this city and the demand is such that Manager Williams is planning to rush a number of Victorias here in anticipation of a busy season.

NEW BLOOD IN AUTO SERVICE.

EDDIE MAIER TAKES HELM OF EMERGENCY CONCERN.

Big Plans Made for This Season and Auto Emergency Company Promises to Do Even More for the Owners and Dealers Who Have Expressed Their Appreciation.

The Automobile Emergency Service Company recently held a meeting of the directors at which the new officers and directors were elected as follows: E. R. Maier, president; J. W. Catron, vice-president; J. E. Brade, treasurer; J. M. White, secretary, and E. H. Pendleton. These men are all well-known business men of Los Angeles and their election will possibly mean great things for the concern, and a greater expansion of the system.

The company deserves a great deal of credit for the work already done in the short time it has been in business. E. H. Pendleton, ex-president of the company, is the originator and designer of the emergency plan, making it possible to have telephone service in an automobile. He will now have charge of the contract and commercial department. Pendleton intends to go East soon in the effort to install the service throughout the Atlantic Coast.

There are now over eighty stations throughout Southern California. The value of the automobile telephone has been fully tested. It is considered to be one of the greatest time savers ever invented. After a short time the work will be completed south of Bakersfield, and then the work in the North will begin. A motor truck is being used for the work and is equipped to carry all supplies and men.

It is estimated that there are nearly 2000 chauffeurs in Minnesota. More than 700 have been examined this year. They have paid $2100 and the expenses approximated $300.

We Agree.

MOTOR TRUCKS HAVE BIG PLACE.

EXPERT POINTS OUT THE NEED FOR COMMERCIAL CARS.

Trucks Can Be Worked All Day, but Horses Must Have Rest. They Are Invaluable on City Streets Where Traffic Problems Are Hard to Solve.

T. R. Lippard, vice-president of the Lippard Stewart Motor Car Company of Buffalo, believes that the motor truck will now come to the front in place of the pleasure cars. Business men must have these conveniences and certainly a truck is a convenience and a money-saver. In a recent interview he says:

"The automobile got the start because it ministered to the pleasure-loving instincts of the people. The motor truck was meant for business purposes, and business men are conservative. The merchant who had an automobile was slow to contemplate the removal of horses and wagons for the transportation of his goods. The change would involve expense. He would have to dispose of the plant he had, at a sacrifice, and the initial price of the truck being greater it would be costly at the outset. But they are rapidly being converted.

"Unlike the horse the truck can work all day long. It does not obstruct the streets like the horse-drawn wagon. The public is for motor delivery, for this reason, that it would reduce the traffic congestion in cities about 20 per cent. This should appeal forcibly to the merchant. The saving in money through the motor car must appeal to him when he is made to see it.

"It is well for the automobile dealers that the horseless vehicle is being accepted by the business men. A large and profitable market opens before them, even if the public should profess itself fully stocked with automobiles, or because of a sudden streak of economy, about buying new ones, for the new demands of the trade will mean good business for the dealers."

The armored automobile recently shipped to Mexico from New Orleans is fitted with light steel plates inclined at a slight angle, which protect the car and occupants from rifle fire. The purchaser is the War Department of the Mexican government, and it is stated that it is to be used in carrying funds between Mexico City and Cuernavaca for the payment of the garrison in the latter place.

MUSEUM FOR OLD ANTIQUES.

Oldsmobile Agent Has Novel Problem to Face and Settles the Question Like a General.

That the spirit of the dealer in antiques is manifested strongly among some of the owners of the early Oldsmobile models is evidenced in a statement by the general manager of the Olds Motor Works, to the effect that during the last month three owners of the wire-wheel curved-dash runabouts have endeavored to dispose of them to the factory, declaring they will prove valuable in an advertising way.

It is needless to say that there was no deal put through in which the ancient cars figured and the general manager announced that the Olds factory is not exactly an annex to the Smithsonian Institute. Still every Oldsmobile agent points with pride to the fourteen years of progress and calls for a comparison between the old curved-dash and the Limited or Autocrat types of the present day.

In every city of any size there are a number of the old "one-lungers" still in use and it is believed that the factory could muster some hundreds of the antiques if such were their desire.

Look-You Knockers-Look!

Does this sound as if there is anything wrong with the KNIGHT MOTOR?

Los Angeles, Cal., March 21, 1912.

Smith Brothers,
742 S. Olive St.,
Los Angeles, Cal.
Gentlemen:

Referring to my Stearns, as a user of the Knight engine, would say that I have driven a Russell Knight, manufactured in Toronto, Canada, equipped with a Knight engine, for the past two years, and have had the greatest satisfaction possible, never having lost five minutes on the road on account of engine trouble, nor have I ever had a break.

I recently lost my Canadian car through a fire, and having decided to tour California, purchased a Stearns-Knight in San Francisco. This was the only Stearns that I was able to procure and had been used as a demonstrator covering 1450 miles. Notwithstanding this, I paid full price for the car, and have driven it to this point without a mishap of any kind. The engine has never made a miss.

I had the misfortune to be caught in the recent heavy rains, and encountered a number of high grade cars with the old style motor which were hung up and obliged to be shipped in by rail, nevertheless, the Stearns-Knight came successfully through. At times I was obliged to battle for hours over heavy adobe roads.

I have nothing but praise in connection with the Stearns-Knight.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) C. A. Godson.

Are you going to be one of the first with the new type motor or one of the last with the old?

New Series.

NATIONALS ON WAY FOR SANTA MONICA ROAD RACE.

THOSE new National cars are due this week. The stylish machines for which so much is promised are on their way. Many inquiries have been made during the past week at the National Motor Car Company and Earl Y. Boothe has been busy answering those who are anxious to get the first glimpse of the handsome cars.

Following the announcement that a National is to appear in the Santa Monica road race the boosters for this line are ready to hear almost anything about the cars. There are important though not radical changes in the new National, but the snappy appearance of last year's car is not lost, but is rather augmented by the changes introduced. The racer entered in the Santa Monica road race should reach here not later than the middle of this month.

The first shipment left the National factory in Indianapolis last week and is expected in Los Angeles within the next ten days. The railroad company has promised to hurry these cars along and Manager Booth is making special preparation for the reception of the new models. The first shipment contains a toy tonneau, and a five-passenger touring car of series "V" and a toy tonneau of series "S" which will be continued. This will give the National company two distinct types of bodies with slightly different chassis construction.

The new Nationals will have three-quarters elliptical springs on the rear, a self-starter and electric lights. The new models will also have a left hand drive and center control. The wheel base of the roadster is 120 inches, and the touring and toy tonneau 128 inches. Every improvement and the best material known to modern automobile construction has been put into these cars.

The crank shaft is of vanadium steel, ground to one-thousandth of an inch, with extra long Parsons white bronze bearings. The National has an aluminum crank case, interchangeable parts, and the valve stem and springs are completely inclosed, eliminating noise and affording protection. The clutch is self-contained and has an aluminum cone, leather face, spring cushioned, giving gradual engagement.

The transmission is sliding gear selective type. Three speeds forward and one reverse. The gears are made of the special alloy steel, oil-tempered. Annular ball bearings are on the main and counter shafts.

"The Times" Leap Year Orange Grove Motor Tour.

Pleasant Outing.

LEAP YEAR PINK TOUR.

Orange Groves of Southland Viewed by Autoists.

Buick Is Driven Through the Golden Wonderland.

Afternoon Drive of Beauty Mapped by Nikrent.

Fifty-five miles through the orange groves of Southern California is the tour offered this week to the tourists. The Buick "twenty," driven by Louis Nikrent, one of the greatest road drivers in this country, was sent over the roads on Thursday, for an afternoon's outing and came humming back with a route mapped to the wishes of any motorist.

From The Times office the car was driven out Main street to Eastlake Park, where the El Monte road was taken. When the Warner speedometer registered 7.5 miles the Ramona convent was in sight and when the nine-mile notch was reached the car was skirting the roads of Alhambra. One of the problems of the Lower road was settled by the Buick on this run. The car was turned at right angles and was sent away from the main road now in course of construction. This detour was made at exactly the 11-miles notch. At San Marino even the Buick was driven parallel with the new county road to a point 1.1 miles away, and then was turned back to the county road leading to El Monte at the 13.4-miles mark.

Once back on the county highway the car was sent along to the sandy grade which was reached 11.9 miles from Los Angeles and after traveling for less than a mile to the 12.4-mile mark, good roads were struck and the Buick skimmed through Arcadia and then reached El Monte, 14.7 miles away.

GOLDEN FRUIT.

Orange groves had been passed at Alhambra. The golden fruit looked good to the tourists. No one would have thought that frost ever harmed the orange. The fruit was ripe and it was tempting to the babies. It hung low over the roads and could have been plucked into the tonneau of the car if Nikrent had cared to turn aside.

Instead of following the road to Monrovia, which is smooth and inviting, Nikrent turned the Buick into the Covina turnpike, which has just been completed, and at the 17.4-mile mark reached the turn, and then proceeded to Bassett at the 17.6-mile mark.

Baldwin Park was the next point of interest and was reached at the 19.6-mile notch. The railroad was passed at 21.2 miles, and the city limits of Covina were reached at the 25-mile mark, where the Buick was turned into Citrus avenue. This avenue is rough, and the change from the smooth county road was noticeable.

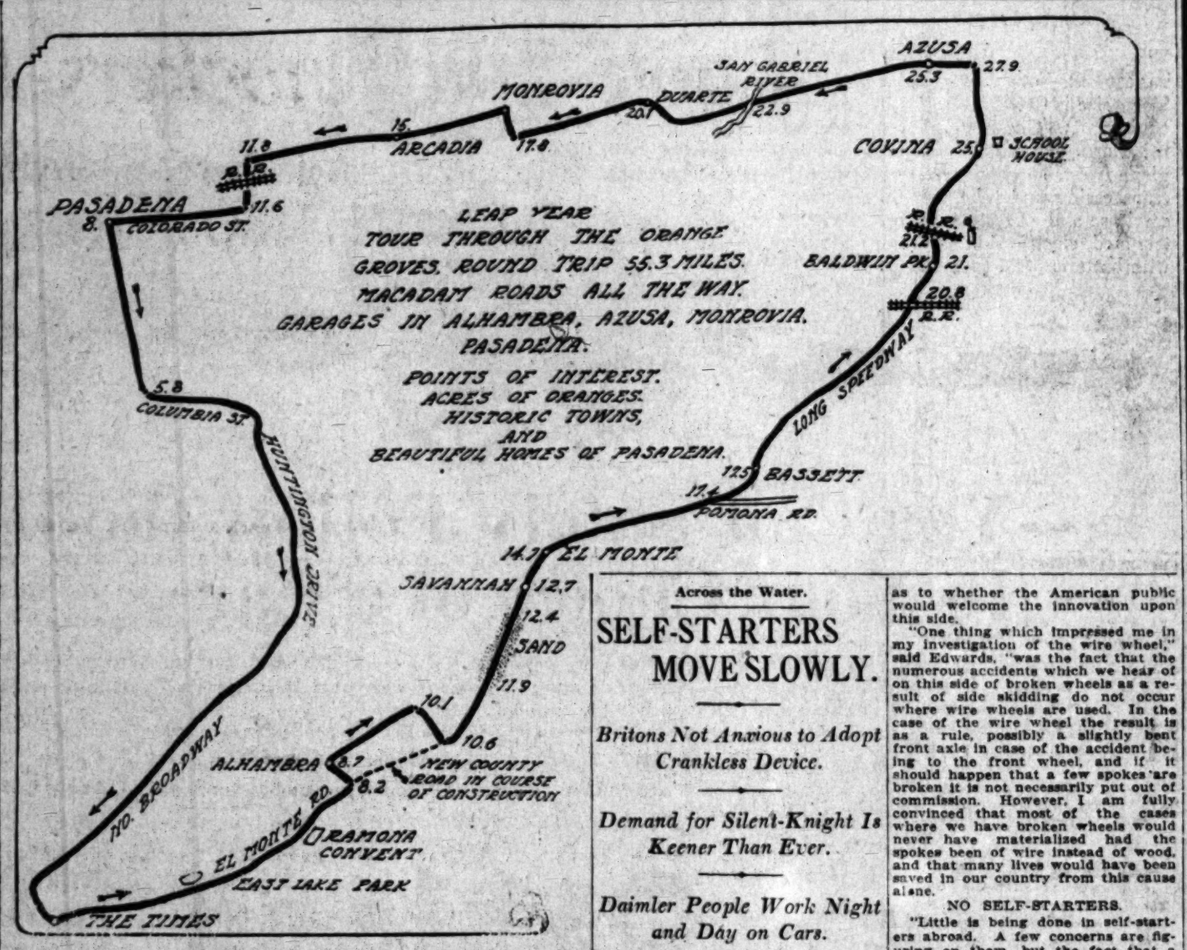
After driving to a point where the odometer registered 27.9 miles the car went skimming along once more to Azusa, where the figures showed 31.6 miles for the trip, and the car was on its way home with only twenty-five miles from The Times office.

OVER THE RIVER.

The San Gabriel River was crossed at the mileage marked at the 30-mile notch, and then Duarte was reached at the 32.5-mile mark. Only a short distance further it was noted that car had traveled 34.3 miles and at the 35-mile mark Monrovia grounds were toured.

Seven miles from Monrovia the car was speeding through Arcadia, the home of Lucky Baldwin, and was brought on to the point where the odometer read 40.3 miles, and the 41-mile mark the railroad was crossed. This is one of the danger points of this tour. The Buick was turned into Colorado street in Pasadena.

After driving through Pasadena to the Lake Grove avenue the car was turned and was driven to South Pasadena, Columbia street. Here the car was turned at Fremont Park, where the speedometer registered 47.8 miles and was swung into Huntington Boulevard, driven through the subway tunnel and reached The Times office with the total of 55.3 miles.



The Times Leap Year Tour

Through the orange groves of Southern California as mapped by Buick car. This is the novel afternoon run where there is more to be seen in four hours than on almost any other route that can be selected in the Southland. Good roads all the way. Louis Nikrent piloted the Buick "20" over the roads and made the run in three hours and thirty minutes without a stop.

Silent-Knight Displayed as Working Model.

J. S. Conwell Plans Attractive Show for Cities.

Columbias and Maxwells to Be on Dress Parade.

J. S. Conwell, president of the Los Angeles Motor Car Dealers' Association, and who managed the Los Angeles Automobile Show so successfully for two years, will leave tomorrow on a novel outing. He will tour through Southern California with a pageant of motor cars, which are to be shown in the larger towns. For the first time in the history of the Southland an automobile show will be free.

The Columbia Silent-Knight is to be the centerpiece of the attractive display planned by the Maxwell-Columbia man. He will have a working model of this car in operation, showing the sleeve-valves and the methods for which so much is claimed by Charles Y. Knight. In addition to this he will have the Columbia touring car and roadster and the Maxwell specials.

This makes one of the most attractive displays that has been planned this year and in each town in which a stop is made space will be secured and the cars will be put on dress parade by a man who knows just how to display them. This should mean much to the trade in general, as it should do a great deal to stimulate interest in the late model motor cars.

NOVEL DISPLAY.

During the past week, Manager Conwell, of the United Motors-Los Angeles Company, has spent many hours preparing his routine for the nine-days tour. He will make the different towns at a certain time and will set up his show for a stay in each place of from one to three days. This means a round of pleasure for the automobile lovers and instructive sessions for those who are anxious to examine the new motors technically.

The Silent-Knight has been well received in Southern California. The sales already recorded are remarkable. As a matter of fact, it has been impossible to get enough cars to supply the demand. The Silent-Knight will be shown for the first time in many of the smaller cities and will also be shown for the first time as a working model.

"This is to be a show," said Manager Conwell, yesterday, "where the public will have a chance to see the cars without paying any price for admission. We expect to interest the farmers in this display and will show them just how they can save money with the machines, which are now in such a high stage of perfection.

"We will give everybody more than his money's worth. While the Silent-Knight will be one of our attractive models we will show a number of other machines including every model of the Columbia and the Maxwell lines. I am positive that everybody who sees the display will be pleased."

The show dates are: Pomona, April 9-10; Riverside, April 11; Redlands, April 12-13; San Diego, April 15-16; Santa Ana, April 18-19.

Line complete, embraces every type, as follows: Maxwell runabout, medium and high-powered roadsters, small and large touring cars, including Maxwell "Special" 36, winner of this year's Glidden Tour, Columbia "Cavalier," the perfection of poppet-valve construction, Silent-Knight and Maxwell special, long-stroke "36."

The commercial truck is attracting the attention of the business world and no exhibit would be complete without a display of commercial cars. The Sampson trucks will be included in these shows. The Sampson was one of the first trucks on the American market and as experience is the basis of all success in motor construction, it stands unrivaled as a line in the elimination of weaknesses or faulty design. In other words, its experimental stage is past and the Sampsons are offered with every assurance of their reliability and true economy.

AUTOS MAY HAVE FREE ENTRY.

Stickel Bill May Have Chance to Pass in Spite of Early Set-back. Motorists Hopeful.

The Stickel bill was called for reconsideration recently by the House of Assembly at Trenton and was passed by a vote of 11 to 9 after being defeated by a margin of one vote in the Senate. This means automobile reciprocity for New Jersey. It will now have to be ratified by the Assembly for increase in fees and then will go to Gov. Wilson for his signature, who has signified a favorable attitude, so the prospects are now very bright.

The Stickel bill provides for fifteen days' free entry of the State by automobilists who have fulfilled the demands of the statutes of their home States. It no longer compels a man to designate a certain State officer as legal attorney to accept service for him in case of any alleged infraction of the law during his visit. The new bill will open New Jersey to automobile tourists and will mean by far the largest volume of tourist business in the history of the State.

The Touring Club of America has been actively working for this project for several years and with the aid of the different clubs and trade organizations of the State have won the fight. Former Gov. J. Franklin Murphy, who was a stumbling block for ten years, was recently won over by the automobile. After taking up the work he took the field actively and lent his influence toward pushing the matter through.

Conde Nast, president of the Touring Club of America, is pleased with the action of the State Senate and is confident as to the effect the law will have on touring. Austin Colgate, commander of the automobile forces in the Senate, handled the operations on the floor, forced the issue to the front and, holding the bill ready for submission to the Senate until the right moment. He acted in co-operation with Walter E. Edge, leader of the majority.

TOUR TO GRAND CANYON.

E.M.F. and Flanders Cars to Be Sent on Long Arizona Run Soon.

The Arizona Motor Company, Inc., of Phoenix, Ariz., has sent out entry blanks and schedule to cover a trip which will be pulled off some time in the near future from Phoenix to the Grand Canyon. It will be an interesting tour as there will be over a hundred E.M.F. and Flanders cars in the run.

This is expected to be one of the biggest events ever tried in the West. Something of interest has been planned for every minute, and nothing will be left undone to make it the success of the year. Among those who will be in the party is the Governor of the new State, with his staff, and Atty.-Gen. Bullard, and many other persons who are prominent in Arizona affairs.

Arrangements have been made to plant the first post of the Canadian highway at Alberni, B. C., Saturday, May 4. The driving of this post will be an interesting ceremony, the mallet being wielded by the Lieutenant-Governor.

The Omaha Automobile Dealers' Show Association has decided to hold an open week show, in the fall, probably during the Ak-Sar-Ben carnival. Instead of the cars being shown in the Auditorium, each dealer will have a private exhibit in his show room, but they will combine in advertising the show, in lighting the streets, etc.

Across the Water.

SELF-STARTERS MOVE SLOWLY.

Britons Not Anxious to Adopt Crankless Device.

Demand for Silent-Knight Is Keener Than Ever.

Daimler People Work Night and Day on Cars.

H. J. Edwards and C. G. Stoddard, recently returned from a visit to England, where they had gone to get the latest ideas regarding foreign practice, the latest developments in the Knight engine, before deciding definitely upon the design of their new car. Both men were formerly associated with the Stoddard Dayton Motor Car Company, and also the United States Motor Car Company, but have recently organized the new Edwards Motor Company.

There is great progress being made in the sleeve-valve type motor in the foreign country. They report the Knight factories running day and night shifts to try and keep up the demand and large additions being added to the plants of the Daimler Company of England, and the Minerva Company in Belgium. They were particularly impressed with the prospects of the wire wheels and worm drive. They are somewhat skeptical as to whether the American public would welcome the innovation upon this side.

"One thing which impressed me in my investigation of the wire wheel," said Edwards, "was the fact that the numerous accidents which we hear of on this side of broken wheels as a result of side skidding do not occur where wire wheels are used. In the case of the wire wheel the result is as a rule, possibly a slightly bent front axle in case of the accident being to the front wheel, and if it should happen that a few spokes are broken it is not necessarily put out of commission. However, I am fully convinced that most of the cases where we have broken wheels would never have materialized had the spokes been of wire instead of wood, and that many lives would have been saved in our country from this cause alone.

NO SELF-STARTERS.

"Little is being done in self-starters abroad. A few concerns are figuring on them, but the fact that a large percentage of cars are driven by professional chauffeurs and that the engines upon an average are smaller than we have here, they do not feel the need to furnish self-starters. There is much progress and refinement in body design across the water as well as the tendency towards luxurious finish and the elimination of all vibration from the chassis.

"Business has to the present time been good in England, as well as in all European countries. The entire business situation at the time I left was greatly affected by the coal strike. Many men have been thrown out of work from this cause, more than a million and a half in England alone, and the fact that they were heavily threatened with a revolution puts the business situation, as regards automobiles, in a precarious condition."

The street department of Milwaukee has purchased four street-flushing machines, making a battery of eight, to keep the asphalt-paved streets of the city clean during the summer.

ELMORE MAN HERE READY FOR STRENUOUS CAMPAIGN.

A. J. SMITH, one of the well-known autoists of the coast, was in Los Angeles last week and established a branch of the Elmore factory here, with R. A. Wood in charge. Smith has outlined a programme that means an entry in the Santa Monica Road Race, provided the cars make good in the big 200-mile road race planned for Fresno Saturday, April 21.

Here is what Smith has to say regarding his plans:

"I have made final arrangements for the opening of a direct factory branch of the Elmore Manufacturing Company in Los Angeles. I have just completed arrangements for a branch of this kind at Fresno, and it will be opened there Monday. Both of these branches will be under my direct management, with a local manager at each place.

"C. W. Hobson will be the local manager at Fresno and R. A. Wood will be the manager at Los Angeles. Wood will be in Los Angeles about Monday with his 1912 demonstrator, an Elmore thirty torpedo touring car.

"I wish also you would put me on record right here that there will be Elmore cars in the road and track races pulled off in San Francisco, Fresno and Los Angeles. We have a wonderful car for 1912 and we are going to let the public know it."

On Friday night Smith left here after a conference with Local Manager Wood determined to return here for another week during the Santa Monica Road Race. At that time he will establish communications with all his California branches and will outline a plan whereby he can keep in touch with every agent.

"Elmore" Hobson, one of the best-known Elmore men on the Coast and a man who has been almost as prominent as A. J. Smith himself, has accepted the position as manager of the Fresno branch. While Smith will retain the general charge of the Fresno branch he will give Hobson a free rein when it comes to dictating policies which pertain to the Fresno end of the situation.

When Hobson took the Fresno agency in 1906 he began with a record that surprised a great many people. He has made good ever since, though he was forced to resign for a year. Now he is back in the saddle again and things are looking good all along the Coast.

Never before in the history of the Elmore were affairs brighter. Smith was here with his wife and daughter and started something that already is felt in local motoring circles. He is ready to outline his policy to the different agents and is prepared for a strenuous season.

To Hear Resolution.

BIG HIGHWAY BOOST IS DUE.

Federal Aid Proves Topic of Interest to Many.

Many Good Roads Bodies Ready for Convention.

Important Topic to Be Most Carefuly Considered.

Chairman Henry of the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives has given April 10 for the date of the hearing on the Underwood resolution, providing for the naming of a joint committee of Congress to consider Federal participation in road building. This committee would be "authorized and directed to report to the Congress all information obtained from investigation, with the recommendations as to the advisability of Congress granting national aid to the maintenance and building of post roads and national highways in the United States, and to make recommendations as to the proper legislation to be enacted by Congress."

There are eleven members of the House committee, and several are in favor of Federal participation in roads building. These men are from different States, and it is believed that the good roads resolution will be favored with a report soon after hearing, as measures emanating from the Rules Committee of the House usually receive the most prompt attention.

There will be many good roads bodies represented on the date set. The forty-two State associations and 320 clubs of the A.A.A. will be represented through its National Good Boards Board, of which George C. Diehl is chairman. Among other bodies represented will be National Grange, Farmers' Union, American Road Builders' Association, American Automobile Association, Ohio Good Roads Federation, Alabama Good Roads Association, Florida Good Roads Association, Illinois Association for Highway Improvement, Indiana Good Roads Association, Michigan State Good Roads Association, Missouri Old Trails Association, New Santa Fe Trail Association, North Carolina Good Roads Association, Southern Appalachian Good Roads Association, Virginia Peninsula Good Roads Association, Memphis to Bristol Highway Association, Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association, Texas Good Roads Association and Inter-Mountain Good Roads Association.

"Interstate travel by road is a natural sequence of the general adoption of the motor-driven vehicle," said Diehl, chairman of the National Good Roads Board for the A.A.A. "A municipality should have up-to-date pavements; a prosperous country requires a comprehensive system of county roads; in like manner the State must provide for the continuous routes and adequately maintain them. Then there would remain the need of interstate highways to provide for interstate communication by road, something which benefits the country as a whole, and aids materially in effecting a solidified nation. Therein lies the logic of Federal participation in national highway construction and maintenance."

MOTORCYCLES IN DEMAND.

Gasoline Horse Looks Good to the Farmers Who Are Ready to Secure Many Machines.

The motorcycle is becoming so popular with the men on the farms that by many it is regarded as a "gasoline horse." It is used extensively for making trips to town, taking long jaunts at any hour of the day or night and the twist of the wrist on a single tracker has taken the place of "hitching up the old mare."

One out of every eight farmers in the northern part of Indiana owns a motorcycle. The farmer uses the motor horse for a truck wagon, and instead of making the trip to town once a week, he goes in every day, with a carrier box attachment, which is much faster than the jogging horse.

WILCOX IN NATIONAL.

Harold Wilcox is not in terror of the cold eastern winds, for he is daily out on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway tuning up National cars. Wilcox expects to carry off a great many honors during the next year's racing season. He is one of the best-known motor speed pilots before the public, holding many records, among them the world's stock straightaway mile of 49.32s., which he made in a National car. At every opportunity Wilcox may be seen speeding on this track, in all kinds of weather, and turns out a few miles to keep in good practice.

RAMBLER CROSS-COUNTRY.

Make Long Trips in Stylish Model Which Is Becoming More Popular Than Ever.

Announcement of the remarkable guarantee which is being given by the Thomas B. Jeffrey Company for the benefit of the Rambler owners is being made public in all important cities of the country, where Rambler dealers are located. Ten thousand miles seems a long distance and if you stop to realize how long it will take you, perhaps, you will wonder if you will ever travel the distance. You might cross the American continent a number of times.

"We are making this guarantee," said Charles T. Jeffrey, president of the company, "because of our confidence in every part that goes into every Rambler car. We make 96 per cent of the parts and we know what each one can do. The first Rambler Cross-Country that left the factory made a 3000-mile test trip through nine States, over the mountains of Pennsylvania to New York, Albany, Boston and back to the factory.

"The fame of this car has spread and its service has extended to every State in the Union, to every province in Canada, to Mexico, Australia, South America, Europe and the Orient. Everywhere the Rambler has gone its performance has strengthened our confidence in its ability to fulfill this guarantee. This is why we do not hesitate to send out this announcement to our agents and the Rambler branches in Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, New York, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Sacramento and San Francisco."

Still Growing.

NELSON READY FOR NEW HOME.

DIAMONDS TO HAVE MORE COMMODIOUS QUARTERS.

Phenomenal Business Done by Concern—Extra Room Is Demanded for Storing of Tires and for Increased Shipping Facilities. Handsome Headquarters.

Within the next week the Diamond Rubber Company will be established in the handsome new building at Eleventh and Olive streets. With the exception of installing the mahogany woodwork in the main salesroom and office the work on the building has been completed and the task of moving the immense Diamond stock from the old branch on Main street to the new home will be begun Monday.

The new building is of glazed white brick and is 55x120 feet. The basement is 60x125, which gives the branch 12,500 square feet of space. The salesroom is inclosed by large plate glass windows on both the Olive and Eleventh street sides and the mahogany fixtures will make it one of the handsomest tire houses in the West.

From the standpoint of a tire man the best part of the new quarters will be away from public gaze. This will be the immense basement, where the reserve stock will be stored. The building was erected for storing tires. It is a well-known fact that tires deteriate rapidly if stored in a place where the temperature varies and is not right. This is one of the most important things to be watched and the tire company which stores tires in improper places will have trouble.

On account of the tremendous growth of the Diamond business it is necessary to carry an extra large stock and Manager F. O. Nelson says it will be his aim to meet every order without delay. To do this it will be necessary to carry the largest stock on the Coast.

The new building was planned to a great extent by F. O. Nelson. The popular manager has been the head of this company since the establishment of the branch here and the growth of the business under his management has bordered on the spectacular.

When plans were started for the building Nelson studied the locations of the automobile houses and picking what he considered the heart of the trade district, secured the property. The site is one of the most desirable in the city.

Then it was necessary to plan the building to fit its use. One feature will be an entrance on Eleventh street, which will permit cars to be driven into the building, where tires can be put on instead of the work being done in the street or a dirty alley.

There will also be a large shipping-room and adjusting department on the Eleventh-street side. Nelson announces that his sales force will be increased next week and he intends having the best force in the Southland.

Latest estimates are that 1200 cars were sold during the Boston show week, or 25 per cent more than were sold last year. The attendance also broke records, footing up 225,000, as compared with 180,000 last season.

REO MOTOR TRUCKS MAKE GOOD WITH HEAVY LOADS.

R. E. OLDS of the Reo Motor Truck Company, is of the opinion that there is a great future for the truck business, as it is a real money-maker and a money-saver. He believes it is growing in popularity among business men as is evidenced by the number of light delivery wagons and heavy trucks owned by firms through every section of the country. According to Olds the coal dealer is one of the latest converts to the use of the power vehicle. Scores of coal and wood dealers who have used the $750 Reo light delivery wagon for six months or more are doubling their orders with dealers for the light truck. They are convinced that it will do at least the work of four heavy horses.

The Reo truck man recently received a letter from Herbert Crabtree, the largest coal dealer at New Brighton, Staten Island, N. Y., in which he states that the Reo truck which he purchased last August from the local dealer there has been in use every day since, and has each day hauled fifteen loads of coal, every one weighing a ton. This is 500 pounds more than the advertised load capacity. Crabtree figures that he saved at least $1500 during the season, as he usually hired extra teams for the delivery of coal to that amount, but since he bought the Reo truck he has been up with the deliveries and his customers have received better service.

The president of the Reo factory does not believe in using a truck to more than its capacity. A motor truck should not be overloaded, or overtaxed any more than a man or a good horse should be. There is greatest economy in keeping the margin of safety when loading a truck of any description. The good drivers will also seek at all times to save his truck from as hard spots as possible. By so doing, the life of the truck may be easily doubled, and all troubles will be eliminated to the lowest minimum possible.

EXTRA STOCK OF TIRES.

Shawmut People Plan for Promised Increase in Business During Coming Months.

Coleman & Bentel have just put in a large stock of Shawmut tires and will make a feature of this brand. In order to be in a position to take care of its big business it was necessary to secure 800 casings on the first order and within the next two weeks this order will be duplicated.

George Bentel, who is in the East, wired last week that he was ready to go the limit for this tire as he considered it one of the best made in the world. He has been giving the tire situation considerable study and after several days at the Shawmut factory was satisfied that the construction of this extra size and extra strong tire was just suited to California travel.

The Automobile Club of Minneapolis has started a campaign to get 1500 members before 1913. Only one-sixth of the city's automobile owners are members of the club. The membership now is 800 paid up.

COLE FACTORY CHANGES.

Henderson Motor Sales Company Joins Forces With the Factory and Plans Big Output.

A change has recently been made in the sales organization of the Cole Motor Car Company. Charles P. Henderson, president and general manager of the Henderson Motor Sales Company, general sales agents for Cole Motor Car Company of Indianapolis, on the first of July, becomes general sales manager for the Cole Company. The entire selling campaign will be directed by him under the firm name with J. J. Cole remaining as president. The organization of the Henderson Motor Sales Company joins the Cole forces.

The continuous growth of the Cole company has made this change necessary. It is only three years old and is one of the largest individual manufacturers of motor cars in Indiana. While the sales company was organized with stockholders and directors of the Cole company their entire efforts were devoted to the selling and distribution of the output, President Cole and his forces were attending strictly to the manufacture.

Under the new regime no change is to be made in the policy. The sales department will still retain its headquarters and the engineers and department heads will devote more attention to manufacturing. Henderson will have associated with him Homer McKee, who will have charge of the advertising. It has been intimated that R. P. Henderson, who has been vice-president of the selling organization, will soon announce a medium-priced car. It will be called the Henderson.

ANOTHER GOODYEAR BRANCH.

Another branch of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company will be opened in the western territory. This time it will be in Oakland and will be ready for their opening within the next thirty days. The increasing business of the rubber firm have made the installation of the new branch necessary. All arrangements have been made by N. B. Taylor, the district manager, and it is said that the Oakland office will be a hummer. They will carry a complete line including, automobile, motorcycle, bicycle and hard rubber tires. They will also have a full line of accessories and aeronautic supplies, and for the first time on the Coast they will introduce a full line of floor tiling.

MARMON WINS IN CUBA.

Shines in Big Race Meet Won by Bob Burman Drove His Benz for a Record.

The first race meet of the 1912 season was won by the Marmon car on March 10, at the winter race meet in Havana, Cuba. There were a number of American and foreign-made cars among the entries. Bob Burman drove his big Blitzen Benz for a record against time.

The meet was held at the Almendares Hippodrome, and the Marmon that won in its class was a 1911 speedster type. It had been shipped in the fall of 1910 to the local agent there, A. H. de Diaz & Co. The car was entered in two races. The driver was awarded the championship on both them both, and afterwards was awarded the championship on the basis of making the fastest time of any car during the entire meet. The track was one mile in length, and other cars entered were the Lancia, Chalmers, two Mercers, Locomobile and two Mercedes.

New Orleans dealers say they are surprised at the increase in the demand for electric cars.

TIMELY SWATS DEFEAT BENNY.

Henderson Touched by Angels at Right Times.

Leverenz Too Strong When Hits Mean Runs.

Big Crowd of Fans See Some Fine Fielding.

BY GREY OLIVER.

Los Angeles, 3; Portland, 2.

More good pitching by Leverenz kept the Beavers look like 30 cents' worth of dog meat yesterday and they lost because they could not hit the ball.

Nine hits were made off Henderson, who was put in to heave, but it might be said in justice to him that six of these were scratches. These things count, however.

Apparently the only trust in existence was when Henderson put his faith in his ability to beat the Angels. He could not get away with it. Of course, he had a chance, as all pitchers say they have, but when these chances came there was no one there to take them.

Four scratch singles in the fourth made two runs for the Angels and a triple by Boles and a double by Daley made the winning run in the fifth. Nothing happened either before or after these spasms to alarm the natives.

Dillon drew a big laugh in the second when after he had beaten out an infield bounce he was caught off first base. Henderson threw the ball to Rapps and Wild Bill made a motion to toss the pill back to the pitcher. As he did Dillon stepped off the bag, but instead of throwing the ball, Rapps held to it and touched out Dillon. It was as bad as the old hidden ball trick and the funny part of it was that an old player like Dillon should be caught by the trick. He would probably have fined any of his men for such a thing, but he was caught himself, and that doesn't count, of course.

Page made a fine jump in the sixth inning and grabbed Doane's high liner with his left hand and was enabled to double out McDowell at first. Metzger made a beautiful stop of Bancroft's high bouncer in the seventh and threw the runner out at first and Heitmuller ran fifty feet toward center field in the fourth inning and caught McDowell's long fly with his left hand in front of his face.

These were the real fielding features but there were a number of others worth noticing.

Leverenz was too much for Henderson again. He beat him Tuesday in the first game in practically the same kind of a contest.

The Beavers got their first run in the third, which Chadbourne started with a pass. He ran to second on Berger's out at first and scored when Rapps juggled Lindsay's grounder.

In the sixth Rodgers started off with a pass, got to second on Lindsay's out, stole third and scored when Rapps hit to left.

That was all for but one Beaver got on a base in the remaining three innings.

With two out in the fourth for the Angels Heitmuller, Dillon, Metzger and Leber hit scratch infield singles in succession and Heitmuller and Dillon scored.

Boles opened the fifth with a triple to right and then after the next two men had gone out, Daley doubled to left and Boles scored what proved to be the winning run.

VERNON HANDED TERRIFIC BEATING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, April 6.—Happy Hogan's Vernonites blew up today, Sacramento landing on Pitchers Raleigh, Reisberg and Hitt for a 10 to 3 victory. Rossback took the mound for the last two innings after the Senators had grown tired of running around the paths.

Arellanes, the Sacramento pitcher, retired the visitors without a man reaching first for the first four innings and gathered three of Sacramento's twelve hits. Swain drove out the longest hit ever made inside the local grounds to deep left center but was caught at the plate when he tried to stretch the three-bagger into a home run.

The Senators ran wild on the bases, Jimmy Shinn getting three of the eight purloined bags. Roy Brashear was charged with the first Vernon error of the season when he booted Sheehan's drive in the fourth. Score:

FOR SANE AVIATION.

Campaign Started by Walter Brookins at One Time the Wildest of all Bird Men.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 6.—Walter Brookins, who for many months held the record among aviators for such thrillers as the spiral glide, the ocean roll, and the dip of death, is the organizer of a new club of professional airmen, all members of which are pledged not to essay any of the aerial tricks and stunts for which so many lives have been the penalty. The members are further pledged not to permit, wherever they can prevent it, the attempting of follies of flight by other aviators.

The germ for the call for the formation of the club was the death of Calbraith P. Rodgers, who fell while attempting to do one of the Brookins tricks. It is now nearly two years since Brookins performed his last dip. He declares that he has settled down to be a steady and business-like flyer.

CITRUS HIGH SWEEPS FIELD AND WINS TITLE.

Southern Interscholastic Banner Rests Up Country This Year—Comstock's Men Win With Ease—Beebe, Whitted and Jackson Are the Stars of the Struggle on Y.M.C.A. Field.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

THE CITRUS UNION HIGH SCHOOL stars swept the field in the Southern California track championships, on the Y.M.C.A. field yesterday afternoon, by the score of 32 to 25, scored by the Los Angeles High School, the nearest competitor. The going in many of the events was thrilling, but the points spread out far more than was expected. It was thought that Citrus Union would win the meet, but that the Los Angeles High aggregation would be a close second, fighting for every point. However, Coach Comstock had his men right in the events that counted and therefore rolled up the winning score. We must slip it to Mr. Comstock, he knows how to condition men.

The affair yesterday afternoon, brought out a number of individual stars rather than a great showing on the part of any one team. The first surprise of the day was pulled by Beebe of Anaheim, who walked off with the mile run in 4m. 39s. He was the rankest kind of a dark horse before the race, but after the tape was broken he was counted one of the boys for fair. The fact that he ran Dodd and Tietsworth off their respective pegs in the race adds another large-sized plume to the bunch in his hat.

BEEBE REPEATS.

Later in the day this youngster came out and cleaned up the field in the half-mile, winning by a city block. His form is great and owing to the fact that he is at present but a second-year man in High School, we can look for some fast time from Anaheim in the next two seasons. There is only one man in the South today who could beat him and that is Bill Annin of the Occidental Academy, and Bill is the best half-miler in the South, in the writer's mind, right now.

The Oxy preps were ruled out of the meet, as they had been in competition with U.S.C., in regular intercollegiate work. There were not enough votes among the high schools represented on the field to admit the Tiger preps, so they had to stick on the side lines and cheer, but had they been in the running there would have been a different story in the total score.

Herbe Whitted of Citrus was the point winning star of the afternoon, annexing sixteen points for his school, winning the high hurdles, the broad jump, second in the low hurdles and second in the discus throw. This is a great day's work for the boy and the college who gets him for his freshman year this fall will be indeed lucky. He had a hard time in the low barriers. In the first place there was a great deal of gun jumping in this race and he lost some of "old pep." This jumping was one of the bad features of the meet. Any way Laird of Redlands came up in the last twenty yards and took the tape from Whitted in 26 1-5 seconds. Nobody but Frank Gorton had ever heard of Laird before, but he is the goods.

GORTON SHOWS.

While speaking of Gorton, we might say, that he is to be congratulated on the showing made by his seven men, who took third in the meet with a score of 14 points, one first and three seconds falling to their lot.

Stonewall Jackson of Citrus was the star of the sprints. He and Clemmer Johnson of L. A. High had a terrible time holding their marks with all the rest of the up-country bronchos jumping the gun, but hold they did and should get a world of credit for so doing, for there is not anything harder on the calendar.

Jackson won the 100-yard dash after a tight race with Johnson and then in the 220, ran away from the High School lad in the last fifty yards, finishing with a wonderful burst of speed.

SHOT DOPE SPILLED.

The track was slow owing to its new condition and for this reason no really fast time was recorded, in the field events. There was a big spilling of the dope in the shot. Bill McFie of L. A. H. S. and Clament of the U.S.C. Academy were not able to get into the finals, fouling on their best puts. The points went to Gill of Hollywood with 44 feet 8 inches, Coleman of L. A. took second and Gerry of Citrus took third.

The final event of the afternoon was awful. It was the 440 relay over the mile course. The Los Angeles High School took the $200 banner home after noses were counted at the finish, but this son of Ham, Stonewall Jackson, gave the local supporters an awful scare on the last lap, when he made up 25 yards on Berger of L. A. who was bringing home the bacon for the hilltop institution.

For the first two laps it was all Long Beach and L. A. with Citrus running a bad third. On the third lap Brooks of L. A. picked up his handicap and passed Long Beach and gave Berger a flying start of forty yards, while the Citrus man caught up to the Long Beach runner. Jackson started off, caught Long Beach on the curve and then went after Berger of L. A. with all sail set. Down the back stretch he was gaining all the way, but Berger was traveling at the same time and Stonewall failed to make the boat.

125 inch Wheel Base, 48 h. p., Equipped Complete $1900

This 6-Cylinder Roadster at $1900

—like all Mitchell Models, leads the whole tribe of Moderate Priced Cars—What we do the others follow

(R)

JUST note the features of this Six Cylinder Roadster. It is long, rakish and luxurious—125-inch wheel base, has 36-inch wheels, 36x4 tires with new and quickest demountable rims, with one extra rim.

Six cylinders—long stroke type, 3⅜x5½ bore, proven 48 H.P. A torque which is mechanically and scientifically correct, produced at greatest economy, not only in production of power from gas used, but conserves every ounce of power for most effective use. Lubrication self-contained in crank case. Full floating rear axle. It has an 8-in finish and upholstery as any car made.

Three years of road service under every sort and condition, proves the efficiency of this six cylinder engine.

In smart style and luxurious comfort, there is not another car made, at any price, to make this model go away back and be seated. It has every quality any man can ask for, except price extravagance.

It represents, at this day and date, the acme of automobile construction. It is not freakish, because Mitchells do not dissipate their time and money on fads—they have been one of the leaders in standardization, which accounts for the matchless values their plant produces.

(S)

THIS new six-cylinder Roadster is companion to the touring car, both of which are identical in mechanical features.

The two models are magnificently equipped at $1900. Splendid top with dust-hood, glass front, speedometer, lamps all around with generator for head lights, jacks, tool kit, horn, magneto. In fact, the car is ready the minute you pay the $1200 and put in gasoline.

If you are spending more than $1500 for a car, you'll make the mistake of your automobile life if you put your money into a four cylinder. Just as sure as the four cylinder out-classed and superseded the one and two cylinder, just so sure will the six cylinder car predominate, and you don't want to be a back number six months after you buy your car. We're coming to Sixes fast.

MITCHELLS make three regular models in four cylinders, which they sell at $1050, $1300 and $1500. These cars embrace the very last and best in four cylinder construction.

You recall that seven years ago, when we announced the first four cylinder fourital car at $1500, many of our competitors said it couldn't be done?—we did it, and we've been in the band wagon with every model we've made ever since. We are creating history with our "Sixes."

If you are a buyer of a four cylinder car, don't be as much as you need pay. Let's prove it, by a practical, personal, pleasureable demonstration.

Our phone is waiting. Call us up, and we'll come down for you. Our time is yours, and we will show you how to make profitable use of it—a money use to you.

RAINMAKER KELLY BUSY.

Hustling Overlands on the Double Quick Order.

More Cars Now for Hungry and Insistent Prospects.

Skeleton Attracts Much Attention in Town.

One of the real hustlers at the Overland branch is Gordon Kelly, the rainmaker, who is being praised by his friends for bringing us the first shower. Now with a stripped Overland chassis and with every part marked and in working order Kelly is the object of much attention on our streets, as he sits on the skeleton of the little thirty-horse-power car which he says is the best machine in the market.

Rainmaker Kelly knows a car. He also knows how to sell them, as his records at the John W. Leavitt Company will show. He says, however, that the Overland sells itself and if we must take his word for it the marks for the month of March show some interesting figures. The cars are being passed out in ever-increasing numbers.

With a working force that is ready to rush this campaign to a successful finish, the Overland branch is prepared for a business that should surpass that of any previous year. The lines of the car are pleasing. The thirty and forty-horse-power machines look good to a great many people and are moving even well enough to please the manager, Danny Whitman.

Now when Whitman gets into action something must happen. He is ready to spring a number of surprises now that he is getting enough cars. In the early part of this present season it was almost impossible to get machines, shipments were delayed and the local forces were literally up in the air. Now the machines are here and the prospects are to be satisfied for the first time this season.

HOT STUFF.

Plans for a campaign which will keep every man hustling faster than he has ever moved before have already been made. This means a business that should look good even to John W. Leavitt himself, the high Mogul in San Francisco, who sits at his desk and scans the reports and then proceeds to issue orders. His orders are usually obeyed.

Now just what he has outlined only one man knows, and that man is Manager Whitman. He is the captain in command of the local squad, each of whom has his individual duties. If it comes to catching a cow on the run with an Overland car Gordon Kelly is selected for the task. When it comes to making rain, Kelly is also the man. He has been given the task of providing interesting experiments which will please the prospects and he is making good in grand style.

The Overland is popular. The use of this car can be measured for the past three years and has been remarkable. The models have increased in size and in beauty each season and the number of sales has also reached a high figure. This is to be the banner year if the plans of the Overland people are carried out to the letter.

Popular Friction Drive.

CARTERCAR IS ECONOMICAL ACCORDING TO CANAVAN.

ACCORDING to J. J. Canavan, of the Vance-Canavan Motor Car Company, the simplicity of the Cartercar friction-driven truck is one of the great features of the vehicles, as in his opinion that is one of the essentials and is most desirable in any business machine that is placed in the hands of a novice. The Vance-Canavan Company received several carloads of the "30," "40" and "45" horsepower chassis and is busy building the delivery bodies. They are of the four cylinder type.

The Cartercar factory has been building the friction-driven car for ten years and is now one of the General Motors corporation. The motor in their truck is of the two-cylinder horizontal opposed type, rated at eighteen horsepower and is mounted so that by lifting the radiator and removing a few bolts the entire power plant may be removed.

"Simplicity is strictly achieved in gears," the Cartercar delivery wagon by the employment of the friction type of transmission," said Canavan yesterday in speaking of the product he sells. "This has long been a distinctive feature of the pleasure cars of the same make. By its use all transmission gears between the motor and the rear axle are eliminated and the only wearing part is the fiber filler of the friction wheel; the chain in oil drive is guaranteed by the Cartercar Company for the life of the car.

"Experience has shown that this type will run upwards of 61,000 miles and it can be removed without the necessity of dismounting the body or any part of the mechanism. It has been said that this type will not draw a loaded car through heavy roads or up steep hills, but this fallacy has been effectively proved by driving a Cartercar up a 50 per cent. grade in our own town. I believe that the Cartercar friction-drive is the most economical car on account of the absence of the clutch and transmission

Important Decision.

YOUNG RESIGNS TO DIRECT SANTA MONICA ROAD RACE.

A. M. YOUNG has resigned from the Grundy Motor Sales Company and will devote his entire time to the Santa Monica road race. His resolution was made after due consideration for the project, which he has undertaken and he will soon have an announcement which will mean much to the trade as he expects to take on the agency for a high-priced car. He has already secured suitable quarters, but is not in a position to announce the car nor the place in which the car is to be stored.

The attention necessary to pull off the Santa Monica road race, together with the final details for the big contest, are such that Young cannot afford to waste a minute between now and the start, Saturday, May 4. He has a large entry list to handle and the prize money is the largest ever offered for a motor meet in the West.

"This demands my entire time," said Young yesterday. "Of course, the details are fierce, but I can see one of the greatest races ever held and will be ready to take full charge of the big race on Monday. By that time my affairs at the Grundy Motor Sales Company will have been wound up and I will leave with the best of feeling on the part of all those concerned in the transaction.

"Yes, I expect to take the agency for a car. It is a good car and I have even gone so far as to outline the advertising policy, but I cannot now give out the name of the car, as it would not do just at this time. There is so much depends on the next few weeks that I must have a free rein to devote my time to the affairs at Santa Monica.

"When I get into the game after the race it will be with a car that will sell itself. I expect to devote my time to a line of cars that will give satisfaction and I will start a service department that will be unique. We will soon have a chance to tell our friends just what to expect."

The Santa Monica Road Race is to be the biggest ever. There is the best of feeling on the part of those who have anything to do with the big contest. The Los Angeles Motor Car Dealers' Association, while it is not conducting the meet, has sanctioned the affair and the entries are coming in fast.

WOULD PROTECT PEDESTRIANS.

Must Use Regular Crossings and Will Be Liable If Found Crossing Middle of Street.

In an effort to protect the pedestrian from his own impetuosity in crossing busy city streets, the Board of Alderman of Kansas City, Mo., has passed an ordinance making it unlawful for pedestrians to cross the streets in the "downtown" business section save at the regular crossings. The ordinance also regulates automobile and carriage traffic at such crossings, but its most sweeping requirement is that forbidding the pedestrian to encroach upon the territory of the horse and motor-propelled traffic.

This new ordinance is in line with the various legal decisions rendered in other parts of the country, according to which a pedestrian need not exercise special care—need not "stop, look and listen"—when crossing a street at the regularly established crossing, but which hold him responsible of contributory negligence when he dodges in and out of traffic.

NEW OVERLAND MODELS.

Handsome Special Makes Great Hit With the Motor Fans Who Admire Lines.

The Willys-Overland Company, makers of Overland motor cars of Toledo, O., has perfected two new delivery wagons. The Overland company is never behind, and believes in offering to the public a full line of both pleasure and commercial vehicles. Both the new models are mounted on the model "59" chassis and will be known as the "Model 59 Delivery Special," and "Model 59 Delivery Express." The former is equipped with a covered body, while the latter has an open body.

The covered "special" is of good appearance and finished in maroon with black trimmings. It is equipped with a thirty-horse-power motor, the same as is used in the $900 touring car, has 32x4-inch tires, center control, three speeds forward and reverse transmission, and is listed at $1000.

The open express is finished in the Overland blue and gold trimmings. The length of the floor is sixty-seven inches, width is forty-two inches. It has the same mechanical specifications as the "special," and sells for $950. The carrying capacity of both is 800 pounds. They have been designed for merchants who are in need of rapid delivery of small and medium-sized parcels. It will meet with the demands of the department stores and grocers.

High piston velocity has the effect of decreasing losses to the water-jacket, since the time the compressed charge is exposed to the cooling influence is reduced.

TWENTY-SCORE CADILLACS NINETEEN-TWELVE RECORD

FOUR HUNDRED Cadillacs have been sold and delivered in California this year. This stands as the record for this handsome line, and Don Lee is more than pleased with the success attained this season. The 1912 cars are more stylish than ever and are even more popular than they were last year and that is saying a great deal.

Following the remarkable run made in Los Angeles the Don Lee company is also establishing a record in San Francisco, where the cars have been sold in carload lots ever since the first of the season. It has kept Don Lee busy traveling between his two distributing points, but the business has been running so smoothly of late that he decided to make a trip East to the factory to discuss plans for an even larger business.

Every effort was made to secure an additional allotment. Don Lee succeeded in getting more cars for his territory only after an almost superhuman effort. Now he is ready to make deliveries and is over worrying about prospects who are more determined than ever to get cars.

For the first time this season the Don Lee Company, on account of the additional allotment of 150 cars for California, is able to make immediate delivery on all Cadillac models. The Cadillac sales during the last two months have been tremendous, over 400 cars having been sold and delivered in San Francisco and Los Angeles. This will probably stand as one of the most wonderful records in the history of motor industry on the Coast and speaks volumes for the popularity of the self-starting 1912 Cadillac.

The 1912 cars have now been in use over six months and the electric self-starter has demonstrated in the hands of all kinds of drivers it's an unqualified success. Stories are heard every day of owners who have driven their cars over 5000 miles and never had the crank out of the tool box, in fact so few Cadillacs have ever been cranked such an action is now looked upon as a great novelty. The electric light system has also proven a success and the special Cadillac globes which are used have given more service than the best of the old-time gas tips.

MANY CARS SHIPPED.

The high-water mark in the exportation of motor cars was reached in January, according to figures just issued, when 2047 machines, valued at $1,955,290, were shipped abroad. During the corresponding month of last year the number of cars exported was 924, valued at $969,930. During the seven months of the fiscal year ended January, 1912, the number of cars exported was 9944, valued at $9,789,894, while during the same period of last year the number of cars shipped abroad was 4817, valued at $5,845,222. Exports of parts, except tires, showed a big gain, the records showing a raise in value from $165,369 in January, 1911, to $472,601 in January last and from $1,063,124 to $2,030,299 during the seven months' period.

The Denver Motor Club will begin the publication of a monthly magazine about April 1. The former organ of the club was the Toot-Toot.

CONDUCTED BY

Sunday-School Meet.

The big Sunday-school athletic meet will be held at the Y.M.C.A. field next Saturday, April 13, at 2 o'clock p.m.

There are over 150 entries in the various events of the 85, 100 and 115-pound classes and a lot of good, clean competition should result, as some of the best grammar-school athletes in the south are already entered. Fred Haney and James Bluett, who were the "stars" in a recent meet in the Times Camp series, are entered under the colors of the University Methodist Sunday-school.

Paul Renton and Paul McWilliams are also entered for the entire programme. The unlimited class looks like a joke. A very beautiful cup has been put up by a local newspaper for the team in this class that scores the highest number of points. The team that is reported to be going from the Highland Park Presbyterian Sunday-school may as well get in order for the cup now and place it on exhibition at Occidental College. The entire entry list will be filled from the star first-place men on the Occidental College track team. Among the stars of this school who are being depended upon to get first places against a bunch of untrained and inexperienced "athletic babes" who happen to weigh over 115 pounds, are Ed. Foster, the renowned Tiger hurler; J. Raymond Hunt, Johnny Cash, Ernest R. Weller, the erstwhile high jumper of U.S.C., but present of Occidental College; Beckin and Anain. Weller is good for 5ft. in the high. Foster does the hundred in 10 1-5s. They should annex the cup with ease and comfort, and it is hoped that none of them will be obliged to hurry too much or strain themselves to win all the first places.

A four-day vacation at the Times Camp will be given to the fellow in every division who scores the highest number of points.

Broad Jump Added.

The broad jump has been added to the unlimited class and points will be allowed for the various prizes. This will make the unlimited competition more interesting. Occidental's man scores 42½.

San Fernando.

The boys in San Fernando are developing a lot of enthusiasm and interest in the coming Times Camp track and field meet to be held on the San Fernando High School oval Saturday afternoon, April 27, at 2 o'clock.

Every school in the towns of Glendale, Tropico, Burbank and San Fernando are to have full teams competing. The track at San Fernando is one of the fastest quarter-mile tracks in Southern California.

Morningside Wins.

The Morningside grammar school of San Fernando defeated the second High School team by a score of 42 to 41. If this is a sample of what the grammar school boys in that district can do, some one will undoubtedly win a trip to The Times Camp.

Santa Ana.

April 20 will be the big Times field day at Santa Ana. The boys from every grammar school in Anaheim, Santa Ana, Artesia, Westminster, Orange, Tustin, Buena Park, Fullerton and Garden Grove are eligible to compete in this big suburban track meet of the Los Angeles Times. The four boys scoring the largest number of points in this meet will be given a twelve days' vacation in the Times Camp, in addition to the red and white ribbons for first, second and third places in every event.

The meet will be divided into two classes, one for juniors to consist of boys under 5 feet in height, and one for seniors to include boys over 5 feet in height. From all reports, all the schools are getting into fine shape for the meet, and the boys who go to The Times Camp will know they have been in a meet when they get through. The four boys scoring the largest number of points may be in the senior division or they may be in the junior division. There will be but four trips to be won.

Monrovia Meet.

The Monrovia suburban district meet of The Times Camp series will be held in Monrovia Saturday, April 20. The boys in the grammar schools of Monrovia, Arcadia, Azusa, Duarte and Glendora are eligible to compete for the prizes of trips to The Times Camp and the first, second and third-place ribbons.

Whittier Meet.

The towns in the neighborhood of Whittier will hold a big track meet and field meet for trips to The Times

Sunday-School Meet.

The big Sunday-school athletic meet will be held at the Y.M.C.A. grounds next Saturday, April 13, at 2 o'clock p.m.

There are over 150 entries in the various events of the 55, 100 and 220 classes and a lot of good, clean competition should result, as some of the best grammar-school athletes in the south are already entered. Ted Haney and James Bluett, who were the "stars" in a recent meet in the Times Camp series, are entered under the colors of the University Avenue Sunday-school.

Raymond Hunt, Johnny Stewart, R. Weller, the erstwhile high jumper of U.S.C., but present star of Occidental College; Beckin and Weller is good for 5ft. 9 in the high. Foster does the 100 in 10 1-4s. They should annex the cup with ease and comfort. It is to be hoped that none of them will be obliged to hurry too much and thus themselves to win all the races.

A holiday vacation at The Times Camp will be given to the fellow in each division who scores the highest number of points.

Broad Jump Added.

The broad jump has been added to the unlimited class and points will be given for the various prizes. This will make the unlimited competition very interesting. Occidental's man will be there.

San Fernando.

The boys in San Fernando are developing a lot of enthusiasm and interest in the coming Times Camp series and will hold a meet to be held on the Fernando High School oval Saturday afternoon, April 27, at 2 o'clock.

All the schools in the towns of Glendale, Burbank and San Fernando are to have full teams compete on the track at San Fernando and some of the fastest quarter-mile runners in Southern California.

Riverside Wins.

The Riverside grammar school team of San Fernando defeated the accredited school team by a score of 9 to 7. If this is a sample of what the country school boys in that section can do, some one will undoubtedly get a trip to The Times Camp.

Santa Ana.

There will be the big Times Camp meet at Santa Ana. The boys from the grammar school in Anaheim, Santa Ana, Artesia, Westminster, Tustin, Buena Park, Orange and Garden Grove are eligible to enter in this big suburban meet of the Los Angeles Times Camp. The five best boys scoring the highest number of points in the meet will receive a twelve days' vacation at Times Camp, in addition to the red and white ribbons for first, second and third places in every event.

The events will be divided into two classes, for juniors to contest under 5 feet in height, and for seniors to include boys over 5 feet in height. From all reports, the boys in the Santa Ana and Anaheim districts are getting into fine shape for the meet, and the boys who win the Times Camp will know how to run in a meet when they get there. The four boys scoring the highest number of points may be from any division or they may all be from the junior division. There are three trips to be won.

Riverside Meet.

The Riverside suburban district of the Times Camp series will be held in Riverside Saturday, April 20. Boys in the grammar schools of Riverside, Arlington, Arcadia, Azusa, Duarte and Glendora are eligible to compete for the three trips to The Times Camp, to be awarded to the first, second and third-place winners.

Whittier Meet.

The boys in the neighborhood of Whittier will hold a big track meet for trips to The Times Camp that are offered to the two boys who score the highest number of points in the meet. The boys under 5 feet will be in the junior division, and those over 5 feet will be in the senior division. The boys in all the schools in Whittier, Norwalk, Downey and Rivera will be allowed to compete.

Learn How to Run.

The unprecedented enthusiasm with which grammar-school boys all over Southern California are taking up athletics as a result of the interest this newspaper is taking in their athletic welfare has been the cause of hundreds of inquiries on how to train. We believe that a healthy interest in all athletics by boys should be encouraged.

However, they should not try to do too much or get the idea that they have to train all the time in order to be in condition. A boy is usually in pretty fair shape physically and, with a proper knowledge of form in the various events, should be fairly successful.

The Times has made arrangements to secure a limited number of booklets entitled "Athletic Training for School Boys" from Spalding's athletic library. It is a dandy little book and every boy who aspires to win a trip to The Times Camp or to become an athlete should read and study this little book from cover to cover. It will be given free to all boys who call at this office with the attached coupon properly filled out. Out-of-town boys can have it also by sending a 2-cent stamp:

Scout Work.

At 8:10 last Saturday morning, fifteen of the boys in the drill team of the Sierra Madre public school took up the march from the school campus to the "Swilligan Camp," in the Big Santa Anita Canyon, several miles north of Sierra Madre. Each member of the company carried his pike, tin cup, and lunch.

Before reaching the Little Santa Anita Canyon, three more boys (who live quite a distance from the school grounds) joined the march, and when the company reached the fire break on the Sturtevant trail, three more boys were waiting to fall in.

E. W. Mead, military instructor for the Sierra Madre public school, was in command of the company, and Corporal McEdwards acted as sergeant and right guide. The company marched in column of squads until the Sturtevant trail was reached, after which the formation was first column of twos and then column of files.

Corporal Mitchell, with two men of his squad, were the advance guard until the fire break was reached; Corporal Evans, with two of his men, were the rear guard; Corporal McEdwards and Instructor Mead accompanied the main body until the "short cut" was reached. The main body halted at the "short cut" to the main trail. After the coast was reported clear, the main body marched to the fire break, where, after reports from the corporals, the company was reformed.

From the fire break until the "Swilligan Trail," Corporal McEdwards was in charge of the advance guard. Instructor Mead commanded the main body, while Corporal Mitchell brought up the rear. From the "Swilligan Trail" to the canyon, the company marched together, in file.

Upon reaching the canyon, plenty of good, hot coffee was made and two dozen eggs cooked. The coffee and eggs, judging from remarks by the boys, just fitted in with the lunches. After dinner there was a three hours' rest, during which rest, boy fashion, the members of the drill team did as many strenuous things as possible.

The return march was begun at about 4:15 o'clock, the company reaching Sierra Madre about supper time. The boys were wet, tired, hungry and sleepy, but voted the day as one of the best they had had in a long time.

During the Easter holidays there have been no drills; but on Monday, April 8, drill will be resumed, and for five days in the week until April 20 (the date of the Flower Festival parade,) the campus of the public school will present a very busy appearance.

The boys will soon have their uniforms, and in a short time the drill team of the Sierra Madre public school will be about as smart and neat a looking company as can be found anywhere. The uniforms will be khaki throughout—hat, coat, trousers, shirt, belt, leggins and handkerchiefs.

The Sierra Madre school has issued a challenge to the Lamanda Park school for a meet to be held April 13, and the boys are looking forward with great interest to that date.

On May 1, the Sierra Madre school holds its field day, and the boys will be very glad to have any of their friends come over on that date.

Baseball.

On the diamond at Avenue 24 and Pasadena avenue an exciting game of ball was witnessed by the spectatorp between the Chicago baseball team and their rivals, the Chicago Club. The game resulted in a defeat for the club team by a score of 9 to 4. Cheering was heard from the crowd whenever a spectacular play was made on either side, so it made things the more lively all around.

These teams will plays others in their class, and are willing to meet most any bunch of pill tossers.

Basketball.

Recreation Center got the honors in a game with Custer by scoring 22 to their 8. Custer did not stand any chance after the first quarter, as Recreation hit the basket pretty nearly every shot they had at it. The defeated team got their scores mostly by free throws.

Downey walked off with the game they played with the Echo boys, by a score of 49 to 1. Echo didn't stand a look in and their only score was gained by making a free throw on account of Downey fouling in the second quarter. The Downey bunch are pretty good at this game, and will give fight to any team that wishes to play on their grounds, or elsewhere.

Sparring Match.

Out on the Downey playgrounds one night last week a sparring match between two husky young boys took place. L. Hass represented Recreation Center, and Wolfron was the representative sent from Echo Park. The sparring was for points, and no hard hitting was allowed. During the evening some very fine exhibitions were witnessed by a crowded house. These boys are exceptionally good with the padded hammers.

Lecture.

A very interesting lecture will be given the boys and girls of the East Side by Dr. Ross. He will tell the children of his experience and travels in Alaska and thereabouts. Some thrilling stories are expected to be heard from this man, which will undoubtedly interest the young folks.

During the intermission, refreshments and music will be enjoyed, and all fun possible will be given to the listeners of this lecture.

Bowling.

Slauson and Recreation Center clashed on the alleys for a series of bowling games, in which the latter took two out of three bowled. The total for the Recreation Center team was 927, while that of Slauson totaled 789. Any team that wishes games with either of these teams will correspond with the managers, or make arrangements with the superintendent of these playgrounds.

Indoor Ball.

The Whites and the Mexicans met on the Recreation Center grounds for championship in a game of indoor ball, the Whites taking the plum with a score of 6 to 2. Although these players are amateurs it will be noticed that they can handle the big mushy ball with speed, and are also able to swat the sphere quite a distance, making lookers-on wonder where they capture their ability.

Basketball.

Slauson was again the loser in a good game of basketball, with its opponents Recreation Center, on the latter's grounds. The score resulted 10 to 14. Recreation Center has walked off with pretty nearly every game that they play with these boys.

Leaping.

Talk about skiing, this game the boys have made up has them all "skun a block." They pick out the best swingers and then go at it leaping from their swings as far as possible, without jumping off the earth. Ray Leonard got the championship by leaping from a flying swing twenty-five feet in distance and that is some jump when it comes to leaping from a joy swing.

Handball.

The Tenth-street juniors and the Pico Heights juniors met for a series of handball games, which resulted in an entire defeat for the Pico boys, the scores were 11 to 1; 11 to 9, and 11 to 0. The winners were Lawrence Anderson and Esequiel Trens. These young chaps formed the Tenth-street junior team, and they are the ones to which honor is due.

Baseball.

Mr. Arbury's young Tigers of the Ville de Paris won their third straight game by decisively defeating the Hamburger Juniors, 15 to 3, last Sunday afternoon at Exposition Park. The Ville boys lined up practically the same as they did in their last game, Cook and Himmilman composing their battery, while Fredericks and Harmell acted in a like capacity for the Hamburger team. The batting of the winners and the fine playing of Lawrence of the same team, at short, were the features of the contest. Murphy materially helped his team to win by making five hits, while Hanes, also of the Villes, proved to be a regular little robber, he stealing no less than four bases. This young center fielder continues to distinguish himself by all-around good work.

Cook, for the winners, pitched a very nice game, he allowing only seven hits and striking out eight men, while on two different occasions he pulled himself out of tight places by consecutively making batters hit the atmosphere. Fredericks of the losers, also fanned eight. This game was the first one the Hamburger boys have played this year, and they will likely make a better showing after they have played together a little longer.

Sterner's Starfish.

The Starfish Giants, under the management of Robert Sterner, defeated the Ocean Park team three straight games in a series that was pulled off this week on the latter's field. The plum-takers line up as follows: Chester Menzy, catcher; Ernest Shultzs, pitcher; Nat Thorlow, first base; Lucian Prudhart, second base; Bob Deshield, shortstop; Jack Sharp, third base; Robert Sterner, left field; Merrill Conoly, center field; Carlton Herrick, right field. These boys have organized a fast team and ought to make a good showing this season if they keep the baseball spirit in view.

Why the whole World pays tribute to the Cadillac car

What is the source of that mysterious enthusiasm which makes everyone speak in superlative terms of the Cadillac?

What peculiar qualities does it possess, which impel the public to dismiss impatiently the suggestion that other cars are "as good as the Cadillac?"

What advantages does the Cadillac owner enjoy, day by day, which convince him that his is incontestably the better car?

Why do Cadillac dealers everywhere encounter a lively disposition to compare the Cadillac with the costliest cars; but not with cars of like or halfway higher price?

On what basis can we explain the phenomena, encountered everywhere, of men reverting to the Cadillac, from cars costing two and three times as much money?

The Primal Cause of Cadillac Efficiency.

The subject is a big one; it cannot be compassed in a brief statement.

But the source of Cadillac satisfaction can be indicated.

We can trace the cause; and we can partially picture the effect.

Let us take, merely as an example, separating it from all the rest—one, big, little fact.

Every Cadillac piston and every Cadillac cylinder is interchangeable with every other Cadillac piston and every other Cadillac cylinder.

More than 400 essentially accurate dimensions in Cadillac parts are measured down to one one-thousandth of an inch.

Johannson of Eskelstuna, Sweden, is the inventor of the most wonderful system of limit gauges for infinitesmally fine measurements the world has ever seen—gauges which are accurate to the one ten-thousandth part of an inch.

The Cadillac Company is, and has been for years, the world's foremost exponent of its own; and of the Johannson system.

Cadillac adherance to unexampled accuracy antedates the Johannson discovery. It goes back forty years to its inception—ten years, in its application to the Cadillac car.

So here you have the primal cause—the source of that world-wide, mysterious, Cadillac enthusiasm — the despair of cars which may look like, but are not like the Cadillac; because they have not wrapped up in them the fervor and the lifetime devotion inspired by an ideal.

Effects Which Follow the Primal Cause.

And now as to the effect.

How is the inherent difference of the Cadillac expressed in its outward behavior—how does it differ and how does it surpass?

In a hundred ways; some of them intangible, but ever-present; many of them intensely practical—things you can see and feel and know.

The first fruit of fine measurement and perfect alignment is, of course, the reduction of friction to the closest possible approach to a theoretical zero.

Friction is the worst and most relentless enemy to efficient service in a motor car.

The defeat of this relentless enemy can be accomplished by no other weapon known to motor car manufacture than the most scrupulous and properly applied standardization.

Once accomplished, it carries in its train two other splendid victories.

Wear, tear and repair are the evil offsprings of friction.

And when friction is reduced to a minimum, their capacity for discomfort and danger, and damage is almost totally nullified.

At one and the same time, and from the same source, another splendid benefit is conferred upon the car.

Elimination of friction means extraordinary ease of operation.

It achieves that luxurious evenness which is supposed to be one of the chief characteristics in cars of the highest price; and the cardinal quality for which men are willing to pay that high price.

These extraordinary requisites—reduction of wear, tear and repair, and running qualities of velvety smoothness—are the distinguished characteristics of a frictionless car.

You have them in the Cadillac, because the Cadillac is the world's foremost exponent of anti-friction methods of measurements.

Advantages You May Enjoy and Disadvantages You May Escape.

The presence or the absence of the qualities described herein—qualities traceable to properly applied standardization and the resulting correct alignment; qualities traceable to skilful design and advanced manufacturing methods and the results of scientific research and development, explain:

Why the owner of one car has to crank and crank his engine to get it started, while the Cadillac owner gets into his car, presses a button, disengages the clutch and his engine starts.

Why the owner of one car, even with a so-called "self-starter" can start the engine only some of the time while the Cadillac electric cranking device is fully as efficient and fully as dependable as every other part of the Cadillac car.

Why the owner of one car must get out—often in the rain and mud—open his lamps, fumble for matches, turn on and regulate the gas and light up, while the Cadillac owner without delay or annoyance, simply closes the switches and the electric lamps are lighted.

Why one car starts with a jerk and a lunge, while the Cadillac can be started off with the smoothness of an ocean liner.

Why in one car, about all the driver's strength is required to operate the clutch and brakes, while with the Cadillac, slight foot pressure is all that is necessary.

Why in one car the change of gears is accomplished by a crash and a grind, while with the Cadillac the change can be made so that it is scarcely perceptible.

Why one car is difficult to keep in the road, while the Cadillac seems almost to steer itself.

Why in one car, with a steering gear which has no provision for taking up wear, lost motion develops, making steering uncertain and unsafe while in the Cadillac steering gear the adjustments provided are more adequate than will probably ever be required.

Why one car rides hard and stiff, the springs seem unyielding and the car is less comfortable to ride in over a paved street than is the Cadillac over an ordinary road.

Why one car may run quietly and smoothly when new, but soon becomes noisy and shakes and rattles while the Cadillac often after years of service, runs as smoothly as when new.

Why one car runs all right on level roads, but when it comes to sand and hills it has not the power to make the pulls, while the Cadillac has an abundance of power for all reasonable requirements and with its standardization, the correct alignment and the substantial construction, the maximum of that power is delivered at the rear wheels.

Why one car shows only 8 or 10 miles on a gallon of gasoline, while the Cadillac averages 60 to 80 per cent. greater milage.

Why one car, after a few months begins to evidence a loss of power, while Cadillacs frequently show an improvement.

Why in one car the engine overheats and the water boils, while with Cadillac construction and the Cadillac cooling system, the causes of overheating are practically eliminated.

Why one car emits volumes of smoke and it becomes necessary to clean the engine and especially the spark plugs every few weeks, while the Cadillac with its efficient lubricating system and the accurate fit of the cylinders, pistons and rings, emits no smoke at all and frequently runs for a year or more without even having a spark plug removed.

Why the oil consumption of one car is from two to four times that of the Cadillac.

Why the owner of one car must be continually tinkering with his car to keep it going, while many Cadillac owners rarely open their tool kits.

Why one car, after a few months' use, depreciates in selling value to half of its original cost or less, while depreciation in the Cadillac is reduced to an absolute minimum.

So many "Whys" indeed, which evidence the pre-eminence of the Cadillac that we cannot here cite even a tenth part of them.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

A Thousand Thousand Have Been Used

A million tires—used on some 200,000 cars—have taught the world that tire bills can be cut in two.

And the tires which proved it—No-Rim-Cut tires—have come to outsell all others.

If you pay tire bills, please find out what these 200,000 know.

Now King of Tires

In 24 months the demand for this tire has multiplied six times over.

In the last 12 months we have sold half a million.

No Rim-Cut-Tires have become the sensation. But we spent 13 years in ceaseless improvement to give you a tire like this.

The Savings

No-Rim-Cut tires end rim-cutting forever. Statistics show that 23 per cent of old-type tires become rim-cut.

No-Rim-Cut tires are 10 per cent over the rated size. They give you that added capacity.

And 10 per cent oversize, with the average car, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

So the average saving from this patent tire is 23 plus 25 per cent.

No Extra Price

These patent tires now cost no more than other standard tires. The savings are entirely clear.

200,000 motorists have already come to them. 127 leading motor car makers have this year contracted for the Goodyear tire.

One-third of all show cars were this year equipped with them.

Won't you find out why?

The Pretty Pink Lady, Miss Olga de Baugh, Cranking the Oldsmobile Autocrat.

This is the car with which the interesting visitor and a party of her friends were whirled over the city streets on Tuesday by "Cap" Harmon D. Ryus, the local Oldsmobile manager. It is one of the latest model Oldsmobiles.

Out for a Jaunt.

LADY OF PINK IN AN OLDS.

Cap Ryus Pilots Novel Motor Pageant.

Autocrats and Limited Cars in Tour to Beaches.

Hill-climbing Stunts Surprise Young Co-eds.

"Cap" Harmon D. Ryus started his Oldsmobile autocrat on an ocean-to-ocean tour Monday and won the affection of every girl in the "Pink Lady" company. He showed the beauties of the Angel City to Miss Olga de Baugh and her chorus, from the cushioned tonneaus of seven Oldsmobiles.

At 2 o'clock the auto train, headed by the big "limited" 6-60, came to a halt in front of the Mason and the beauty brigade was soon comfortably settled in the big machines. Ryus was at the wheel of the little "autocrat" and the "limited" was piloted by H. Fernando. The afternoon's ride was not a parade.

The drivers were instructed to take their passengers to Chester place, where the first stop was made. Then a few hill-climbing stunts were enjoyed.

All the cars arrived about the same time at Westlake Park, after covering some of the most beautiful sections of the city. On this division of the tour the "Pink Lady" forsook the "limited" and rode with Cap in the "autocrat." Miss de Baugh is an automobile authority.

The "autocrat" made a decided hit with the actress, but when the big 6-60 arrived at Westlake and she took the wheel she almost forgot the smaller machine.

Several of the cars were driven to Venice, others to Pasadena and the big one, with Fernando at the wheel, was sent out to a place on the road where the Pacific Ocean could be viewed and then was driven to Hollywood.

From Hollywood a trip to the summit of Lookout Mountain was made. At times the big car could hardly be sent around the narrow turns, and once it was necessary to back down the grade seven times in order to edge through the narrow pass. From the mountain top the theatrical women looked over the city and saw the cars running out to the beaches and over to Pasadena. The mountains, capped with snow, were also an attraction.

"Simply grand," said the clever little lady from Chicago. "It beats anything I have ever seen." Miss De Baugh is a graduate of the University of Chicago, and claims the Windy City as her home, but she confessed to the driver of the big car that there is no place to her like Los Angeles.

Miss Roderick also fell in love with the city, and confided to The Times man that she hoped to make Los Angeles her home soon. Miss Zell went into ecstacies over the beauties of "our home town."

The next sensation was speeding over the Lankershim boulevard. Miss Olga was delighted with the mile-a-minute clip, staged by young Fernando, and said she was sorry that her automobile education had not reached the State where she could be trusted to guide the monster.

A ride through Elysian Park was the last chapter of the Oldsmobile tour. The Pink Lady was returned to her hotel after 6 o'clock, and as she stepped to the sidewalk she told a friend that she has spent the most enjoyable day of the season in an Oldsmobile.

EASY MONEY FADES.

Conditions change quickly in boxing. Three weeks ago three New York boxing clubs were offering purses ranging from $10,000 to $13,000 for a bout between Carl Morris and Al Palzer. Today a manager would be regarded as insane if he offered $3000 for such a bout. The opportunity that wore out the bell on Tom O'Rourke's door has flitted away, and the chance to pick up thousands in easy coin has vanished. If Palzer had been the man to lower Morris's colors, coming so soon after his victory over Al Kaufman, he would be the most advertised white hope in the game, far eclipsing Jim Flynn and others. As it is Stewart is getting considerable notoriety, but he is not seriously regarded as a coming champion.

Old oil should be allowed to drain from the crankcase about once a month, or every 700 or 1000 miles. Before putting the new oil in, the crankcase should be flushed out with kerosene. Pour the kerosene into the crankcase and run the engine for about 15 seconds. Drain the crankcase and refill with new oil.

DE WITT VAN COURT'S COLUMN.

Whenever an important fight is on hand, the different training quarters are visited daily by hundreds of people. Jack Doyle's at Vernon is better known than any in Southern California.

Jack is often called "Genial Jack" and sometimes "the Mayor of Vernon." He started his first training quarters out at Arcadia in 1907, and the great lightweight, Joe Gans, was the first man to train there, when he fought George Memsic.

He later had Battling Nelson, Jack and Mike Twin Sullivan, Boer Unholz and Abe Attell. Then he sold out and moved to Vernon, his present quarters.

About the time Baron Long opened up the Vernon Arena, it struck Jack that it would be a fine thing to open a camp out there. His present quarters was a pasture at that time, so he erected a tent and went into the training camp business, and has been constantly improving it ever since.

The first man to train at Vernon was Mike Twin Sullivan, when he fought Jimmy Gardner, at the opening of the Vernon Arena, at that time known as Jeffries Arena. Packy McFarland, Stanley Ketchel, Ad Wolgast, Abe Attell, Jim Barry, Johnny Kilbane, Jim Flynn, Joe Willits, Jack, Mike, Gene, Dan, Montana Jack and Peter Sullivan all trained there. Monte Attell, Frankie Conley, George Memsic, Boer Unholz, Joe Rivers, Sandy Ferguson and dozens of preliminary fighters have put themselves into condition at Jack's famous place.

Some people seem to think that a fighter's training camp is a pretty tough place to visit, and that it is usually surrounded by a lot of roughnecks.

There are few fighters that do not take the best of care of themselves at all times, and they always do at Jack Doyle's. He will stand for nothing else. The boys are usually full of vitality and fun when in training, and often pass their spare time in playing practical jokes on each other, but it is never any more than a little harmless fun. Doyle tells of many of these experiences of the different fighters.

The biggest eater that he ever had at his camp was Jim Barry, the big heavyweight who fought Sam Langford in Australia a few days ago. Jack sets a fine table, and most fighters have good appetites, but Jim is the champion with the knife and fork. At one sitting Jim got away with three wild ducks, one-half a chicken, one custard pie, three plates of cream and sixteen ounces of milk, not counting the trimmings that go with a meal of this kind. When he got up from the table he said that he did not feel very well.

Harry Foley was the biggest joker that ever visited Doyle's. He would lay awake nights thinking of something to spring on the boys, and they were constantly watching for something for him to spring on them.

Packy McFarland was almost as bad as Harry Foley. One night, about 1:30 o'clock, he and his trainer Kennelly got up and decided to hold up Jack's saloon, just to scare Jack McDonald, the barkeeper, and a Jap who was sleeping in the bull ring.

They broke in through a screen window and just as they were crawling through, Mac and the Jap woke up nearly scared to death. Mac had a gun in his hand, but was too scared to use it, and lucky for Packy, he was. They all had a big laugh, and they "kid" Mac to this day about his bravery.

Ad Wolgast was always looking out to help Jack in some way. When he would get through his training, he would invite a bunch of his friends in to have a drink, then get behind the bar and never give any change back. This usually caused a lot of fun that Wolgast enjoyed more than anyone else. Ad would never touch a drop while in training.

Fighters, as a rule, seldom have any feeling against each other before or after a fight. It is taken as a matter of business with them, and think nothing of the hard blows that they sometimes get from each other.

When Ad Wolgast was training to fight Danny Webster, they met on the road one morning, and Ad offered his hand to Danny, which Danny quickly grasped. Wolgast said: "Danny, I am shy of boxing partners and I wish you would come out and box with me." Danny extended the same invitation to Ad, and they shook hands and parted good friends, as they always have been.

On another occasion when Harry Gillmore was managing Packy McFarland, Harry came downtown to attend the theater. Just before he got back to the training quarters Packy opened a bottle of ink and emptied the bottle in Gillmore's bed. Harry jumped in, but right out again. It was several days before he got clean of the ink.

The proof that Jack Doyle is thought well of by the fighters is in the fact that in the last six years that he has been running a training camp he has never lost a single dollar from any fighter for his board or anything else. Jack says they are all good pay, and take a pride in being so.

The training quarters cover about a half acre of ground, and is surrounded by a high board fence with raised seats all around. It is a common thing on a Sunday to see from 1500 to 2000 people watching the boys at work, and the best of order is always kept. The entire camp is as neat and clean as Jack is handsome and stylish, and he is known to be the handsomest man connected with the fighting game.

His accommodations are as nearly perfect as it is possible to make them. He can accommodate five fighters at one time, each having a clean dressing-room and shower to himself. He also has twenty-two living-rooms in connection with the camp, and they are generally full. Doyle prides himself that there are never any women allowed near the camp except on visiting days, and every man not in training has some employment to occupy his time.

Up to the last fight at Vernon some of the fighters were a little superstitious about training there. Jack had not a winner train at his place for some time, so he decided to burn the jinx. He invited several newspaper men and a few friends to a banquet, and, after finishing a big turkey and other things good to eat and drink, the jinx was taken out and burned after a very impressive ceremony.

Jack has been happy ever since. The first two men that trained at his place after the jinx was killed won their fights. All these superstitious fighters will be rushing back to Jack's to train now.

Long Power Test.

WIESE READY FOR WILD BILL.

BLOWING CONTEST PLANNED BY THE OLD HAS BEENS.

Exciting Match in Prospect for Summer Months When the Two Vets Get Into Action—The Pope-Hartford Man Has a Long Lead, and Is the Favorite.

John Wiese, the local manager for the United States Tire Company, has started training for a return match with Wild Bill Ruess. The return race is not to be a bicycle contest, but should be fully as exciting.

On account of their wonderful showing on the track when these huskies raced on bicycles the question has arisen as to which had the greatest lung power. For a while it was a question as to how this should be settled. Wiese wanted to have a cornet blowing contest, but Bill objected, claiming the tire man was a musician.

W. H. Halliwell finally came to the rescue, with a proposition that they have an aerometer blowing contest. An aerometer is a Warner instrument which is attached to aeroplanes to show the velocity of the wind. They have four concave cups, which catch the wind and into these cups Wiese and Ruess will test their lung power.

Ruess has named Frank Young as his judge and Wiese has selected Roger Stearns. The third judge is yet to be selected.

Didn't Look the Part.

[New York Sun:] Native wit received its just reward yesterday at the Pennsylvania station. Sam, one of the colored porters, espied a tired-looking colleger bearing a heavy English bag, and sliding alongside, proffered his services. The weary traveler accepted the assistance, but not without all the reluctance natural to an able-bodied man. As they walked along he looked down at the small darky straining under his burden and his misgivings seemed to get the better of him.

"Here," he said, reaching out a hand, "you'd better let me have that. I am stronger than you are."

But Sam slided off, protesting. "Yes, boss," he admitted, hastily, "you is stronger than me; a heap stronger, but, you see, boss, you ain't dressed for the part."

Needless to say he kept the bag and, when he returned, his expressive countenance was lighted by a 25-cent grin.

The Car That Marks My Limit

By R. E. Olds, Designer

I have no quarrel with men who ask more for their cars—none with men who ask less. I have only to say that, after 25 years—after creating 24 models and building tens of thousands of cars—here's the best I know. I call it My Farewell Car.

I claim for this car no great innovation. The time is past for that.

Thousands of good men, for two decades, have worked at perfecting cars. No man can ever go much further than the best these men have done.

I believe that Reo the Fifth, in every feature, shows the utmost these men have accomplished. It represents, in addition, the best I have learned through 25 years of continuous striving. So it comes, I believe, pretty close to finality.

It shows what can be done by modern facilities, by boundless experience, by honesty of purpose, by the genius for taking pains. And that is all that any car at any price can offer.

The Lessons of 25 Years

Where this car excels lies in what I have learned in 25 years of car building.

I've been learning longer than others. I have learned faster than others, because I had more cars out.

That's my chief advantage.

What some think right, I know to be wrong. What some think sufficient, I know to be reckless.

Myriads of cars used by myriads of owners have taught me every possible weakness. They have shown the need for big margins of safety, for exactness, for careful inspection, for laboratory tests.

1 Go to Extremes

For every part I know the best steel alloy. To make sure that I get it, I analyze all my steel.

I built a crushing machine of 50 tons' capacity just to test my gears.

My axles have twice the needed strength. My bearings are Timken Roller and Hyatt High Duty.

My carburetor is doubly heated, and adapted to low-grade gasoline. That makes the commonest troubles impossible.

I carry tests and inspections, throughout the construction, to what men call extremes. Those 25 years taught me the need for precautions.

They also have taught me that men love beautiful cars. My bodies are finished with 17 coats. My lamps are enameled—my engine nickel trimmed.

The upholstering is deep, and of hair-filled genuine leather. The wheel base is long, the wheels are large, the car is over-tired. I avoid all the petty economies.

New Center Control

The gear shifting is done by that center "cane handle." It moves only three inches in each of four directions to change to every speed and reverse.

There are no side levers. Both of the brakes, also the clutch, are operated by the foot pedals. The doors are free from obstructions.

The driver may sit—as he should sit—on the left hand side, close to the cars which he passes. With the old lever controls this was impossible, save in electric cars.

Price, $1,055 the Only Sensation

My greatest achievement, in my estimation, is the price on this new car. No other car begins to compete with it.

This is due to automatic machinery—to enormous production—to making all parts in one factory. It is due to building only one chassis in all this great plant. It is due to small selling cost, and to a very small profit.

But this price is not fixed. This initial price of $1,055 is the minimum. It is based on today's low cost for materials. It is figured on a doubled output, due to this new creation.

If costs advance our price must advance. But we shall keep it this low just as long as it possible. That is better, we think, than fixing the price for six months in advance, and leaving big margin to do it.

My Supreme Effort

Reo the Fifth marks my limit. Better materials are impossible, better workmanship out of the question. Better features or devices, if they exist, are still unknown to me.

More care or skill or quality is beyond my capability. At twice the price I could build no better car. If others can, they are better men than I.

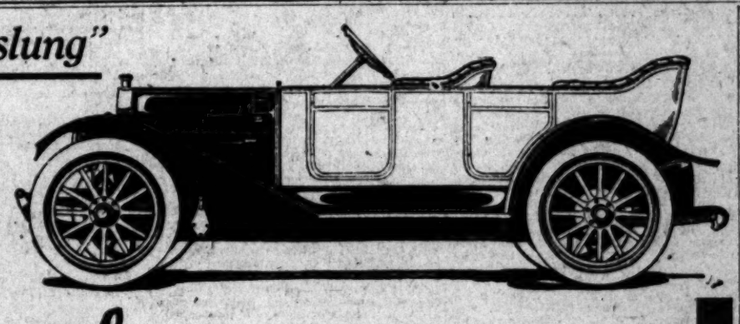
"Underslung"

Means Beauty, Safety, Comfort and Economy.



Regal

The word underslung has made automobile history. This new principle of construction has brought an insurance against "turning turtle,"—the cause of 75% of all automobile accidents; it has practically eliminated skidding—you can drive the Regal as fast as you like and it will stick to the road. The low center of gravity gives this car an ease of suspension that is almost perfect.

Don't consider buying a motor car until you know more about underslung construction as applied to the Regal. We want to demonstrate to you that the Regal is the biggest motor car value of the day—no matter what price you pay.

Jurors Must Be Honest.

[Philadelphia Inquirer:] Col. Roosevelt was rejected yesterday as a juryman by counsel for the prosecution in the case of a boy whose legs had been cut off in an accident and who is suing a railroad for damages.

"I am ready to do my duty," the colonel rather plaintively remarked after the incident, "but I don't see why I should have to come here day after day if nobody wants me as a juror."

Is it possible that the colonel does not yet understand that when a man deliberately breaks his own pledge, plays false to his friend and connives to obtain underhandedly what he has publicly declared he would not have under any circumstances he is regarded with suspicion?

Of course nobody wants the colonel as a juror.

Couldn't Serve It.

[Washington Star:] Mrs. Burton Harrison, the novelist, was discussing at a dinner in New York American French.

"Our French is very remarkable," she said. "Some of us will go to a French play and laugh boisterously at the subtlest and most idiomatic jokes, but when it comes to ordering dishes from a simple French menu we are all at sea."

Mrs. Burton Harrison smiled.

"A multimillionaire in a fashionable restaurant," she said, "pointed to a line on the menu and said to the waiter:

"'I'll have some of that, please.'

"'I'm sorry, sir,' the waiter answered, 'but the band is playing that.'"

Hopes Dashed.

GOTCH BEGAN AS FIGHTER

Great Wrestler Had Ambition to Be a Pugilist.

Slavin Changed the Dream to a Nightmare.

Champion Says His Game Best of the Two.

Along with other boys who have read the lives of champion fighters my ambition was to be a prize fighter. While working hard on a farm in Iowa I was always dreaming of the time when I might be a renowned boxer. But I had that desire taken out of me one fine day in Alaska.

All during my youth I had labored at tasks that made my health good and my muscles strong. From morning to night, in the open air, I got the constitution that has stood me in good stead ever since. Along with other lads of my own age I used to box and take part in athletic contests of one sort or another. And the older I grew the more I had the longing to become a fighter.

During the gold fever up in Alaska the fever caught me hard—in 1898 I was in Dawson City. Yet even then, although the thirst for nuggets had me the same as it had others, I still hankered for the ring and padded gloves. Finally my chance came. There was a boxer of some note there named Frank Slavin. He really was an excellent fighter, not a champion by any means, but one who had considerable experience and a punch that would have done credit to the best of them.

One fine day—how well I remember it—they were looking for a man to face Slavin. The news reached me and I leaped at the chance. At last I had the opportunity of engaging in a real bout. My dreams of a brilliant pugilistic career crystallized into concrete form. Already I saw myself known to fame as a rising young beltwearer. I landed the battle—and we met.

I'm a pretty big fellow myself, but I don't think I ever saw a man who looked huskier to me than Slavin did that night. I've heard the story of the second time Jim Jeffries fought Monroe out on the Coast. Monroe had held Jim to a standstill in a four-round exhibition some time before up in a Montana town, and the miner really thought he had a chance of beating the champion, especially after Jeff had held off fighting him. The truth is that Jeff's wife objected to him boxing any more, but the report spread around that Jeffries was afraid of Monroe. Well, they finally met. As Monroe climbed into the ring he sat down in his corner. But when Jeff climbed up the champion looked so big and powerful they actually held a towel in front of Monroe's face. Jeff, you may remember, jerked the towel away and yanked Monroe to his feet to shake his hand. I've been told that Monroe was beaten before the scrap really started.

It wasn't that bad with me when I fought—if I can use that word—with Slavin. For I really imagined I could wallop him. I had another guess coming, however.

Two blows were struck during that fight—once when Slavin hit me and once when I hit the floor. Never afterwards did I have the desire to be a fighter. All I can remember is that I got up when I could, a wiser man. After that I took to the wrestling game.

As far as wrestling goes, I had the good fortune to have Farmer Burns as a teacher. If there ever has been as crafty a wrestler as Burns on this earth, I've not been informed about it. He has taught me many of the best things I know about the game. Of course, a fellow had to have the stomach and an average amount of brain work to go along with it.

To the ordinary wrestling fan most of the game is when the contestants are actually working on the mat, while one is down and his rival is trying for a hold. But, really, a large part of the finer part of wrestling is when the men are "bulling" around on their feet. Here is when the man with the stronger hands and the plan of action mapped out has the advantage. A top-notch wrestler, with his head, can wear down an opponent even before they hit the mat. It's a lot the same as in prize fighting, when a boxer like Bat Nelson could tire out an opponent by roughing it around with him. Johnny Coulon does the same thing. In wrestling you have this added advantage of getting your hands on your rival.

In many ways I'm glad those two boys were struck that day in Dawson City. There are, in my opinion, several points where wrestling is superior to boxing. In the first place, a man is still in his prime when past forty in the mat game, while a boxer is about through when he reaches the same age. There are scores of examples. Farmer Burns is still a mighty good wrestler, and can hold his own with most of them. In fact, there are few of the really high-class wrestlers who are not near the age, and even past it. But you can't say the same about the fighters. McGovern, Kid McCoy, Young Corbett, in fact most of the dethroned champions, are still comparatively young in years, although rated as back numbers.

In addition, wrestling does not drain your strength and vitality the same as boxing does. A wrestler can go on the road, travel for weeks and take a hard exhibition bout practically every night. Then, with a week's training or so, be ready for a championship match. The boxers can't do that.

Then a wrestler can make a good deal more these days, while the fighter gets only a comparatively few places where he can box. Wrestling, as a sport, is coming into its own, and is getting a strong hold on public favor in the Coast or certain specific cities. Instead of having to go everywhere, we have the whole country open to us.

Hopes Dashed.

GOTCH BEGAN AS FIGHTER.

Great Wrestler Had Ambition to Be a Pugilist.

Ruin Changed the Dream to a Nightmare.

Champion Says His Game Is Best of the Two.

Along with other boys who have read the lives of champion fighters my ambition was to be a prize fighter. While working hard on a farm in Iowa I was always dreaming of the time when I might be a renowned boxer. But I had that desire taken out of me one fine day in Alaska.

All during my youth I had labored at tasks that made my health good and my muscles strong. From morning to night, in the open air, I got the constitution that has stood me in good stead ever since. Along with other lads of my own age I used to box and take part in athletic contests of one sort or another. And the older I grew the more I had the longing to become a fighter.

During the gold fever up in Alaska the fever caught me hard—in 1899 I was in Dawson City. Yet even then, although the thirst for nuggets had as the same as it had others, I still hankered for the ring and padded gloves. Finally my chance came. There was a boxer of some note there named Frank Slavin. He really was a excellent fighter, not a champion in any means, but one who had considerable experience and a punch that would have done credit to the best of them.

One fine day—how well I remember it—they were looking for a man to box Slavin. The news reached me and I leaped at the chance. At last I had the opportunity of engaging in a real bout. My dreams of a brilliant athletic career crystallized into concrete form. Already I saw myself known to fame as a rising young heavyweight. I landed the battle—and we met.

I'm a pretty big fellow myself, but I don't think I ever saw a man who looked huskier to me than Slavin did that night. I've heard the story of the second time Jim Jeffries fought Tommy Ryan out on the Coast. Monroe had led Jim to a standstill in a four-round exhibition some time before up in a Montana town, and the miner fellow thought he had a chance of beating the champion, especially after he had held off fighting him. The fellow is that Jeff's wife objected to him being any more, but the report spread around that Jeffries was afraid of Monroe. Well, they finally met. As Monroe climbed into the ring he sat down in his corner. But when Jeff climbed up the champion looked so big and powerful they actually held a towel in front of Monroe's face. Jeff, as many remember, jerked the towel away and yanked Monroe to his feet to shake his hand. I've been told that Monroe was beaten before the scrap fairly started.

It wasn't that bad with me when I fought—if I can use that word—with Slavin. For I really imagined I could wallop him. I had another guess coming, however.

Two blows were struck during that fight—once when Slavin hit me and once when I hit the floor. Never afterwards did I have the desire to be a fighter. All I can remember is that I got up when I could, a wiser man. From that I took to the wrestling game.

As far as wrestling goes, I had the good fortune to have Farmer Burns as a teacher. If there ever has been as clever a wrestler as Burns on this earth, I've not been informed about it. He has taught me many of the best things I know about the game. Of course, a fellow had to have the weight and an average amount of strength to go along with it.

To the ordinary wrestling fan most of the time is when the contestants are working on the mat, one is down and his rival is trying to pin him. But, really, a large part of the finer part of wrestling is when men are "bulling" around on their feet. Here is when the man with stronger hands and the plan already mapped out has the advantage. A top-notch wrestler, with his ability to wear down an opponent even if they don't hit the mat. It's a lot the same as in prize fighting, when a fellow like Battling Nelson could tire out his opponent by roughing it around a bit. Johnny Coulon does the same thing. In wrestling you have to adapt advantage of getting your hold on your rival.

I always say I'm glad those two Scots were struck that day in Dawson. There are, in my opinion, few sports where wrestling is superior to boxing. In the first place, a man is still in his prime when past forty in the mat game, while a boxer is through when he reaches the age. There are scores of examples. Farmer Burns is still a mighty good one, and can hold his own with most of them. In fact, there are few really high-class wrestlers who are not near the age, and even older. But you can't say the same about the fighters. McGovern, Kid McCoy, Young Corbett, in fact, most of the dethroned champions, are comparatively young in years, although rated as back numbers.

Besides, wrestling does not drain one's health and vitality the same as boxing does. A wrestler can go on for weeks and take part in a good exhibition bout practically every night. Then, with a week's rest or so, be ready for a championship match. The boxers can't do that.

Also a wrestler can make a good living for many years, while the fighter has a comparatively few places where he can box. Wrestling, as the game is coming into its own, and is getting a strong hold on public favor is the best instead of having to go to Coast or certain specific cities for matches, we have the whole country to work in.

W. Curtis, Pacific Coast traveling representative for Apperson Bros.' Automobile Company of Kokomo, Ind., is in the city making his headquarters at the local Apperson agency. Curtis will be remembered as a former manager for Leon T. Shettler, driver in the Phoenix road race a few years ago.

Curtis, covered by the factory team, left Salt Lake City to-day through Los Angeles for San Francisco. His duties are to visit dealers and assist in developing the automobile game on the Coast.

Ad May Meet Rivers.

WOLGAST AND M'CAREY NOW KISS AND MAKE UP.

BY R. A. WYNNE.

Adolph Wolgast,

Who arrived in Los Angeles yesterday and immediately reopened negotiations for a contest with Joe Rivers on Independence Day.

ADOLPH WOLGAST, lightweight champion of the world, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday accompanied by his manager Tom Jones.

When this information reached the local fight headquarters at No. 107 South Spring street there was a deal of nervous preparation.

Uncle Tom McCarey was early on the scene and waited patiently for the expected clash.

It was 12 o'clock sharp when Wolgast with his egg sized diamond blazing from his shirt front and his newest cane walked into the fight headquarters. Tom Jones accompanied him.

There was no attempt to [illegible] either one of the new comers for stray guns although there were a few who would have fathered the act.

Uncle Tom McCarey was standing in the rear of the shop.

"Hello Ad" cried McCarey with a welcoming smile and he seized the lightweight champion's hand and shook it vigorously. Immediately over Wolgast's shoulder was Jones.

For a few seconds McCarey and Jones looked at each other witheringly and then both hurriedly began conversations with others of the welcoming circle.

Wolgast looks the best he has since a month before the operation at the Clara Barton Hospital. He is leaner and has a better color. He says that he weighs more than he did when he left here and his face appears cleaner. He explains this by calling attention to the daily boxing bouts he has indulged in during the last month or so on the vaudeville stage and for which by the way he received $1500 per week.

Uncle Tom and Tom Jones had become happily separated and those present breathed easier.

"Everything that we have said goes now and we have the money to do it" bellowed Jones. "We will make any weight for this bird Rivers from 122 up and let him name the weight. Everyone is calling him 'Little Joe.' Why he is a bigger boy right now than Wolgast. We said that Wolgast would take on any four of the men Rivers has beat in the same afternoon and we stand by that. In Wolgast's opinion Rivers never beat Kilbane in that first fight so Kilbane is eliminated.

"We are going to work on the Fourth of July and we would rather work here than any other place. We would like to get Rivers as it would be a great contest, but Rivers is only one of a half dozen challenges."

Just then Uncle Tom came to the rear of the shop where the big talk was being made.

He had scarcely joined the circle until Jones and he clashed.

"Any man that sends me an insulting telegram—" began Uncle Tom as he waved his arms toward Jones.

"Nobody sent you an insulting telegram and if we did we did not mean it," roared Jones before McCarey could finish.

"I think that my record in the fighting game has warranted that I should be treated with respect," snapped McCarey.

"My record is just as good as yours and don't you forget it," howled Jones.

Just then the deep even voice of Wolgast came between the two scrappers like a cool wedge:

"I told Jones to send that telegram and we both sent it as a joke" he said. "I thought that we knew each other well enough for both of us to understand it."

Wolgast in his earnestness had thrust out his hand to Uncle Tom McCarey and placed it on the promoters knee as the latter stood with one foot elevated on the seat of a chair.

McCarey instinctively thrust out his hand and while no one in the circle paid the slightest attention to it, McCarey and Wolgast were holding hands like two schoolboys and yelling at the top of their voices their own version of the difference that has come between them.

Jones had discreetly kept silence. He saw how things were trending and that the whole thing was but a tempest in a teacup and had arisen through each side being keyed a little too high and each had made hasty statements which in the light of cool judgment they regreted.

"I would like to take the match off your hands Uncle Tom," said Wolgast "and will pay you $5000 for the privilege."

"A fighter cannot run a match in which he is a principal or I would take you up," said McCarey.

The edge had been worn dull by this time and there was a deep seated desire on the party of McCarey, Jones and Wolgast to get together and it is a very safe prognostication that Wolgast will meet some good boy in a bout during the next month, to try himself out and that on Independence Day he will face Joe Rivers the Mexican Wildcat and defend his title as lightweight champion of the world as he never has before.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

Building a national highway is not the easiest task on earth. The road is to be built but it is a question of how much energy the men of the West put into the matter as to whether the highway is completed in three, five or ten years. Money is being raised in thousand-dollar lots. Now is the time to subscribe to the ocean-to-ocean highway fund.

The Automobile Club of Southern California is planning an automobile tour over almost the same route as The Times last year. The run to San Diego and then to Lakeside has been mapped out by Stan Mitchell, who says the entry list will surprise the most sanguine. He declares the run is to be the greatest ever.

The Los Angeles Athletic Club is the Mecca of motorists. It is easy to count from a dozen to a score or more at the tables during the lunch hour almost any day. There are only a few dealers who do not belong to the club. Even James J. Canavan, the Cartercar man, has determined to reduce his weight and is working hard with the dumb bells only to find he is heavier than ever.

The Michigan "40" was put to a practical test Thursday afternoon, when R. P. Pennock of the local agency, drove the car over the twelve-mile course of The Times modified Marathon, on the "high," keeping the engine throttled down to a slow pace for the sake of the runners, who were trying out the roads.

There are several heavy grades on the course and the performance of the Michigan attracted much favorable comment from the members of the Marathon Committee, who were being driven over the twelve miles as guests of C. L. Perrin, manager of the Michigan Motor Sales Company.

Pennock, the man who did the piloting, came to Los Angeles three years ago direct from the factory at Kalamazoo, and on this important test run, was put in charge of the car.

At the start there were eight passengers in the five-passenger car, and at the five-mile post, two more were added, which taxed the capacity of the car to the limit.

For the first time in many years, the opening of the trout season failed to find Ralph Hamlin camped on the banks of one of Southern California's streams.

The Franklin agent has been so busy during the last two months that it was impossible for him to get his kit together and run away to the fishing streams with the other nimrods from "gasoline row;" but it is safe to predict that before the first of May, Hamlin will have caught the limit several times, up in his favorite waters of Big Bear Valley.

As fast as the Franklins arrive, they are delivered to customers who have been waiting for some time. "It is easier to sell the cars than it is to get them," said Ralph yesterday morning. The three cars which arrived Tuesday were delivered at once and the floor of the Franklin home was again bare.

Senator Robert N. Bulla received his second Franklin last week, this time a big "six." The Senator is a great Franklin booster and is delighted with his new car.

Another "six" was delivered to the B. F. Ball Estate of Pasadena, while Percy H. Clark received a "four" touring car.

When Leon T. Shettler took the Apperson agency in 1908, there were not ten "Jack Rabbits" on the Pacific Coast, but the factory shipped 150 cars to the Coast distributors during the months of February and March of this year.

The increasing popularity of the Apperson and the proof of increased activity in the automobile business generally, is evidenced by the report from headquarters to the effect that already this season the factory has bettered last year's output by 27 per cent.

The first Flanders "Twenty" delivery wagon to reach the city arrived Friday morning and was at once turned over to the Home Laundry Company. E. A. Morrill, manager of the laundry, was well pleased with the wagon, and stated that he expected to see the Flanders become very popular with the laundry companies and department stores where light delivery cars were needed.

There are three Apperson "Fifty-five" 1908 models used to carry the United States Mail from Guymas across the desert to Blythe Ranch. The lowest figure on the speedometer of any one of these cars is 135,000 miles, yet the Jack Rabbits are in good running order and the upkeep expense is less than the cost of feed for four horses.

Wind driven sand has robbed the cars of their coats of paint and they present a far from attractive appearance, but the automobile does the work just the same.

Two five-ton Packard motor trucks operated by the Union Oil Company are establishing a day and night record by making day runs to the suburban towns and delivering oil to the hotels and office buildings of the city at night.

A driver will take a truck out in the morning and as he steps off at the end of his shift his place at the wheel is taken by the night man, who runs over to the storage tank and after taking on a full load rumbles up into the city.

The Packards are gauged at twelve miles an hour, which speed is made with a full load through the city streets. An average of eighteen loads of oil are delivered within the time limit of the night shift.

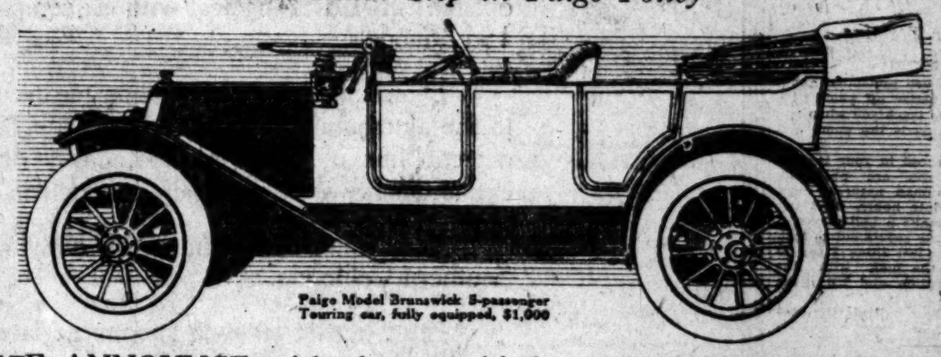
Mrs. Volney S. Beardsley, one of the pioneer woman automobile drivers of Los Angeles, was unfortunate enough to have to undergo a serious operation at the California Hospital yesterday.

While the operation was successful, she probably will not be able to drive a car for several months. It was a sorrowful place around the "Society Garage" yesterday as Mrs. Beardsley is a great favorite among all the employees of the garage.

PAIGE

Regular Equipment Now Includes Top and Wind-shield

The Final Step in Paige Policy



Paige Model Brunswick 5-passenger Touring car, fully equipped, $1,000

WE ANNOUNCE with pleasure this last great addition in the equipment of the Paige car. We believe that every prospective purchaser of an automobile, conversant with what the market offers in motor cars at Paige prices, realizes the importance of this step—realizes the tremendous lead the Paige car now has, fully equipped with top and windshield included—realizes that in order to include this equipment with the already 100% value of the Paige it has been necessary to put a part—and a large part—of our profits back into the car.

It wasn't necessary to add either the top or the wind-shield to Paige equipment to make it the best value in its field. No one complained because they were not given with the Paige. Purchasers of thousand-dollar cars realized that the Paige gave the essential automobile values. They have shown preference for the Paige in the face of all the alluring equipment offers of other manufacturers—shown such a preference that they have already bought thousands of Paige cars and been satisfied to pay extra for the top and wind-shield. Our estimated and announced production of 3500 cars for this year has already been exceeded. That's indisputable proof of Paige quality. Now—with the top and wind-shield added to Paige equipment without extra cost—carrying out our fixed determination of giving more and better than any other manufacturer—the Paige offers motor car value not even approached by any other car at its price.

The Paige policy in manufacturing and selling has always been to put back into the Paige car every year part of the Paige profits, but this year there is nothing we can do to better the car down inside. It is built as well as we or any other manufacturers can build a car of its size and its power. The materials used are as good as can be bought. The workmanship is the best that can be employed. There is no way to put more service value into the mechanism of the Paige. The only thing we can do is to increase its equipment. So now we are adding as a part of the regular equipment of every Paige Model the top and single-vision wind-shield, two items of equipment which previously we have sold to Paige purchasers as extra equipment.

The Paige is the best automobile you can buy anywhere for its price. A well designed, well constructed car—comfortable, enduring and with more speed and power than its owners ever need. And beyond its quality merely as an automobile—this point is important—the Paige is built by an organization of the most experienced and reputable executives, behind whom is a directorate composed of some of America's biggest business men who hold themselves responsible to every Paige owner for their product.

There could not be a better guarantee of the honest construction of every Paige car.

See the Paige car—examine it in every detail of construction. Compare it with other cars selling at Paige prices—or more. Ride in it—test its power, its speed, its easy riding qualities, its simple operation. Note the sure, smooth engagement of its cork insert multiple disc clutch—a clutch found elsewhere only on cars selling for $1600 and more—study the many other BETTER features of the Paige. Consider it just as an automobile, then consider the organization which produces it and the men back of it and make your own conclusions.

Something Good.

DRINK RUINS BALL PLAYERS.

Such Is Sage Advice Given by Mugs McGraw.

College Boys They Know All There Is to Learn.

Opposed to All Kinds of Winter Training.

Well, the less you remember about the game, the better off you'll be. What we want to teach you when you try for the Giants is the game and how to play it.

If you have speed in your legs, in your arms, if you are physically strong, know human nature, don't drink or keep late hours, don't use tobacco, you'll make a ball player.

When I send my scouts out to look for material the last thing I say to them is: "Get the men with the physical qualification and I'll make the players out of them."

Some of the best ball playing material is found in the small towns. I would rather have a steady player than one who spurts and plays to the grand stand. A player recruited from a college or high school usually thinks he knows enough about the game already and needs no further tutoring. The country boy, as a rule, wants to learn and is willing to be taught. However, college men often make good players.

Drink is the bane of baseball. It has ruined some of the best players—Bugs Raymond, for instance. There is the best man that ever donned a suit. Drink ruined him. When I heard Bugs was drinking I put a detective on his trail. He made daily reports. His first report was that Bugs drank twenty-four glasses of beer before dinner. I fined Bugs $100. The next day Bugs drank twenty-six glasses of beer. I fined him another $100.

Then Bugs came to me and said: "I'm getting so much in debt to you that it won't pay me to play ball." He quit. And so on down the line of other players who have drank themselves to ruin. However, sometimes when a player is getting "stale" I give him a little ale after his meals. Smoking, also, is bad for the wind.

Another trouble we have with players is drinking water on the field. This is what we call the "water habit." Drinking water while playing makes a man bulky and may result in cramps. If a player gargles his mouth while playing it really does him as much good, if not more, than to swallow it.

I advise my players to eat only two meals a day and never eat lunch. I have not eaten lunch for ten years, even during the winter months. If one must eat, it should be a sandwich or light lunch before playing; a hearty dinner may result in cramps the same as drinking water.

I am not in favor of this winter training. The less training a player does in winter the better off he will be for the season's work. I'm not in favor of indoor training of any kind. This is where the country boy has the advantage. He works in the open air and can stand harder work than the city boy. If one must have winter exercise play handball for the wind. However, if possible, running should be practiced on the roads.

On an Outing.

TROUT BITING IN THE MALIBU.

FISH ARE HOOKED BY AUTOISTS IN MOUNTAIN STREAMS.

Judge Rose and Party Drive Into the Hills in a Mitchell and a Chalmers "Forty" and Invent Novel Plan for Enjoying Camp Life Among the Rocks.

Last Sunday, Judge Rose and a party of well known members of the easter's order, went up on the Malibu for the opening of the trout season and returned Tuesday evening with the limit and reports of a perfect trip.

The run from the city was made by automobile. The judge was at the helm of the Mitchell, and Gus Rose drove his Chalmers "40." During the full time of the pleasure jaunt, there was no delay of any kind.

A right-angle triangle was formed by the two cars, and this space was covered with a tarpaulin. This formed a novel and cosy camp, and the Nimrods then secured the Elliott gas generator and with about twenty-five feet of tubing soon had sufficient light to read by and cook a good meal. The camp equipment was as complete as Judge Rose enjoyed during his trip last summer to the Yosemite and Northern California hunting grounds, where he secured limits of game and fish.

JOE JACKSON AFTER ONE BATTING HONOR.

Joe Jackson hopes to take down an honor this year that has gone but once to a big league player playing 100 games or more a season. He wants to be the second man who, playing that number of games, has batted .400 in two consecutive seasons.

Jesse Burkett, of the Cleveland National League Club, back in 1895 and 1896, batted .423 and .410. Since that time no big leaguer has batted over .400 in two consecutive campaigns. Inasmuch as Jackson and Cobb were the only two to beat the .400 mark last year, they are the only ones who have a chance to tie Burkett's record this season.

That Cobb has not reached his limit is believed from the manner in which the Georgian has increased his batting record each year. Batting .324 in 1908, he boosted it to .377 in 1909, .385 in 1910 and .420 in 1911. With Joe Jackson to again set him a pace, there is no telling just where Cobb will land this year.

The first motor 'bus was put on London streets in the summer of 1903, and was received with jeers by both the horse-'bus drivers and the populace. Today there are no horse-'bus drivers and the populace rides to work in the motor 'bus, while $20,000,000 are invested in them in London alone.

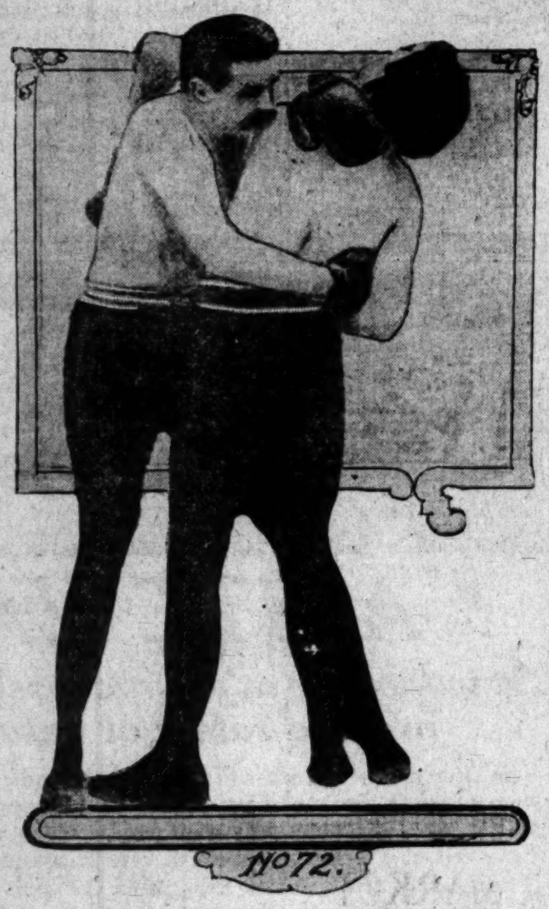
Van Court's Boxing Lesson.



No. 72—Backheel No. 2.

This is the same as in No. 1, with the exception that your left arm is across his neck. You should endeavor to bend his head as far back as possible, because if you are not strong enough to throw him, it will be impossible for him to throw you, for when his head is pressed back he has no control of himself. It is also a good way to break a clinch.

EASY WAY TO MAKE MAC ROAR.

If you want to get McCredie so mad today that he will bite some horse's ear off and chew it savagely just go up to him and say "Hunch." There is at least one reason why.

He intended to pitch Temple in Friday's game, but that morning he got a telegram from some Portland fan telling him to pitch Steiger, because the fellow had a dream the night before that Steiger was to have a glorious victory.

Accordingly Mac stuck Steiger in the box on such a good hunch, and everyone knows what happened to him.

Evolution of Language.

[London Chronicle:] The Australians are evolving a new English language of their own. With three of their words—"barracking," "larrikin" and "kangaroo"—we are all familiar, but there are hundreds of others to be found in the dictionary of Australian-English, compiled by Prof. Morris. The Sydney Bulletin is offering a prize for the "best sonnet written in the Australian language." That is to say, a sonnet that would not be understood outside of Australia.

EASTERN BOATS FOR PACIFIC.

Canal Will Coax Yachts to Western Coast.

Los Angeles Harbor May Be Great Anchorage.

New Yorkers Already Planning for Winter Trips.

BY STINSON JARVIS.

No one can imagine the changes to be made by the opening of the canal better than he has lived on the Atlantic coast and seen the vast fleets of pleasure vessels which every eastern seaport turns loose. In just one class of boats, the annual cruise of the New York Yacht Club, starts about a hundred and fifty schooners, to say nothing of other classes, and it often happens that just after the get-away gun is fired, the whole landscape is blotted out with towering canvas—one great mountain lapping the other—till the more distant vessels cannot be timed because they are not seen at all as they cross the line. Now, all the large fleets of these fleets have been so often in the different harbors along the east coast, that the owners are tired of them, and the cutting of the canal into the Pacific is the opening of a new world to the whole of them. Already the members of the New York Yacht Club have procured their Pacific charts and are now studying out the routes that may be taken in a two-month holiday. Those who can get away for three months, are proposing to see something of the Gulf of California and then take the coast all the way to San Francisco, with calls at San Diego, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and Monterey. With the long and short leg which the westerly trade winds provide, a large and fast cruiser can beat up our coast almost as fast as a small yacht can sail down it, and the prolonged ratching that had to be endured in the old tubs of Noah's days has been almost reduced to a cipher by modern designing and good sails. Even a small 60-footer like the Mah-pecan come to Oxnard from San Diego to the Port of Los Angeles in a way to make Noah's grouch seem almost funny. The cruisers who are limited in time, will make the shorter triangle from the Pacific end of the canal to Los Angeles and across to Honolulu, and back with a fair wind to the canal.

WILL WINTER HERE.

But it is a fair proposition that many of the vessels will never go back through the canal. My reason for saying so, is that I know the waters of the islands, and what yachtmen they wish they go aboard for pleasure. They want fine, steady, strong breezes and waters that are always smooth. They don't want to sit all night at the halliards watching for squalls nor to have the anxieties regarding the moons, lightnings, collisions and bad currents which they have endured through all their sailing experience. When they here find conditions such as they have dreamed of but never realized, except perhaps for one day at a time, they will lay up their yachts at Los Angeles or San Diego where they can be within easy reach by rail and for the southern cruising can be used at all times of the year.

But even if laid up in these harbors for six months, and with two caretakers on board, there would be a large saving of money through avoiding the expenses at New York. The cost of keeping a large yacht in idleness through the Boston or New York winter is something fierce. In a "yacht yard," like Tebo's for instance, the vessel is charged according to her tonnage, and after everything is removed except the masts and standing-rigging, the material is stored in warehouses. All the fine mahogany deckhouses, hatches and skylights have to be entirely covered with canvasses and board, while over the whole ship, a wooden shed is built to protect the decks from heavy snows, and the decks themselves are covered with canvas. All through the winter, the ice surrounding the vessel has to be kept chopped away, to prevent the ice squeeze on the hull. Add to this that the sleet plays old Tommy with the outside painting, which in the spring must be chipped or burnt off, and some vague idea may be formed about the cost of wintering a yacht in New York. Rich as he is, even Col. Oliver H. Payne will probably consider the difference between New York and California, because, with his Aphrodite, 654 tons, and 306 feet long, the difference amounts to a small fortune.

BANNINGS BALKED.

As the climatic disabilities of New York are as permanent as the good weathers of Southern California, anyone can see, without argument, that a business now unknown in California, must soon become necessary, namely, the business of the "yacht yard," in which provision must be made for the care and protection of deep-draught yachts which will make their refits and lay-ups in Wilmington Harbor. But this valuable business can never add its wealth to the general prosperity of this city, till the moneyed men of the Atlantic seaports know that they can have ample dry-dock facilities in this neighborhood. Every yacht must go to dry dock at least once a year, but there is no use talking about big marine business as long as the authorities act like village politicians. The Bannings proposed to provide all the docking facilities that would be required for fifty years, and started the work on same. Later on, their title to tide lands in Wilmington Harbor was questioned, and part of the old common law of England was dragged in, namely, that the time for acquiring title through adverse possession does not begin to run as against the King. I understand that this ancient law was upheld in the courts, but much law which is called "good law" because it is in accordance with precedent, has infernally poor justice in its results. Phineas Banning, almost a prophet in business outlook, acquired these waste tide lands when they were utterly valueless, and his family has spent money on them ever since and have been the only people who made great improvements in Wilmington Harbor. With their pleasure trips and submarine gardens, they advertised this locality over the entire world and brought millions of people here as visitors—the wise ones becoming residents. Yet the only persons who have a right to be considered, the only people whose marine abilities and profits are identical with the seaports's abilities and profits, have been hindered in their general advance by a legal hold-up, and the advantages for yachts which I have clamored for in the last eight years seem to be indefinitely postponed.

If the village politicians could only see that the canal must make this seaport a western half of New York City, and that the millionaires of the whole Atlantic seaboard must have the conveniences which their yachts require, then they would say to the Bannings: "Go ahead. You have the money. Build what the country requires. Your title is clear!"

Liquid Thrills.

REDONDO SWIMMING MEET PROMISES CLASS.

On Friday and Saturday evenings of this week the Southern California Swimming Association will stage an Olympic games tryout meet at one of the best aquatic sport centers of the past decade is lined up for the Redondo tank therefore. Entries are coming from all over the state and the South will be well represented, as all the local stars have been in hard training for the event ever since the last tournament, which has held last month in the L.A.A.C. tank.

One of the features of the meet is the fact that director Coffman of the San Francisco Y.M.C.A. Swimming Association, is coming South with four picked men to take all the honors he can. These northern men are good, as is shown by the fact that they ran the Olympic Club ducks ragged in a dual meet some time ago. There are some stars on this water aggregation that are worth a few lines.

The first is Lincoln Johnson, who is a wonder in view of the fact that he has only one leg, having lost the other in an accident in his youth. However, he can tear off the time in the liquid. His time for the 440 is 5 minutes and 57 seconds flat and in the 220 he has an equally good mark of 2 minutes and 44 seconds. This lad will make Ludy Langor, the Redondo idol, travel for the 440 as this is some time for the events.

The next bright light goes by the name of Ernest Smith, who clipps the 100-yard dash in 1 minute, 1 and 1-5 seconds and the 220 in 2 minutes and 45 seconds. He will be first class competition for Bill O'Malley of Ocean Park, who has been winning all the 100 and fifty-yard dashes in these parts for the past two years.

We would like to see Bill shoved a little to see how really good he is. Bill will also have a little trouble with Nixon of the north in the fifty-yard dash, as he does it in 26 and 2-5 seconds. The twenty-five-yard dash does not enter into this figuring, but Nixon has a record of 11 and 3-5 seconds for the event, which all goes to show that he is there with both his paddles.

Charlie Grimes, will work over the middle distances and should give the local fraternity a hard run in the 880 and 440.

There are thirteen events scheduled for the two nights of sport and they cover a large field. The first event is the fifty-yard dash, which will be run off in heats. Then the 220 will be taken care of in one race, followed by the diving contest for boys under 12 years of age. The fifty-yard finals will be next on the bill of fare. The fair ones will now have a chance to dazzle the fans with 100-yard dash for women. Men's diving will be next and following the 880-yard swim which will close for Friday night.

Saturday, the hostilities will be opened with 100-yard dash, which will be run off in three heats one after another. The ninth event on the programme is the 440-yard swim, followed by 50-yard dash for boys under sixteen years of age. The finals of the 100-yard dash come next, the twelfth event will be the women's diving contest and the tournament will close with a 220-yard relay. Teams of four will swim here each making his distance and touching off his team mate. These water relays are becoming the real thing now a days and there should be a great deal of excitement attendant in this affair.

W. K. Cowan announces that George M. Berry, secretary of the Jeffers Manufacturing Company of Kenosha, Wis., will arrive in the city the latter part of the week to tour the State in the interests of the Rambler factory and to look over the automobile field generally.

While the trip is mainly one of business, the visitor will be afforded much pleasure. The good roads of the State will be covered and according to the local Rambler agent, Berry will return to Wisconsin full of love for Southern California and will at once start a wide-sweeping good roads campaign.

On out-of-date cars, depreciation—naturally—is tremendous. Depreciation means actual loss of cash. Howard E. Coffin—acknowledged the world's greatest engineer—is the HUDSON'S Builder. Mr. Coffin built five famous cars—several of them, built years ago, sell today as leaders in their class. These cars when announced, astounded the automobile engineering world—they were so far ahead of contemporary cars.

His sixth and greatest car is three years in advance of others. That is why the safe investment is the

New Self-Starting HUDSON "33"

Howard E. Coffin's latest car starts at the push of a button—as easily as ringing an electric bell. It starts from the seat—cranking need cause no more lame backs, sprains or broken bones.

It is the simplest, most effective self-starter known. For it weighs but 4½ pounds and has only 12 parts.

The New Self-Starting HUDSON "33" is a quiet automobile. It has power that will shoot it—with full load—up the steepest mountain roads through sand and mud and always with the sensation of flying that is utterly lacking in other cars.

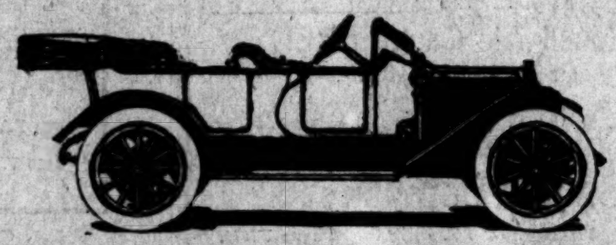
The New Self-Starting HUDSON "33" is surprisingly simple—it has nearly a 1000 less parts than the average car. It is dust-proof—the motor, valves, transmission and all moving parts are enclosed so dust and dirt cannot get in.

Here are a few facts to consider: Demountable rims, which make tire changes the matter of a moment—BIG tires—accessibility that makes adjustments simple, thus saving cash—the simplest, most effective self-starter—high grade equipment—soft, easy riding qualities—a mechanism acknowledged by all to be the latest and cleanest in design—the high character of material and workmanship—a clutch so good that drivers never know they have a clutch.

You will marvel at the value Howard E. Coffin has been able to put into his greatest creation. It ranks in the $2,500 class of automobiles.

Haven't you at least a curiosity to see Howard E. Coffin's latest car?—the safe purchase.

Today, while the subject is up, kindly come in and see the car. We will also give you a book of vital automobile facts and pictures of the car in several colors which will help you to choose. If you can't come in today, write.



The price for either of three models—Touring, Five-Passenger; Torpedo, Four-Passenger; or Roadster, Two-Passenger—is $1750. COMMERCIAL CAR MARKET PLEASES PACKARD MAN.

THE Pacific Motor Lines, which is now a holding company and will be incorporated in the near future for $200,000, promises to do much for the motor truck industry.

It is expected that this syndicate will have over one hundred motor trucks in operation in Southern California and Arizona, before the close of the year. Contracts for enough freighting to keep thirty trucks busy have already been made, and the big carriers will be at work in a short time.

Trucks operated by the Pacific Motor Lines will make runs to mining camps and to towns off the railroads, under special contracts with railroad companies. Western Arizona offers a great field for the activities of this concern, and a contract with one copper company calls for the hauling of fifty tons of ore a day, a distance of eight miles to the railroad, where it will be loaded into cars by patented dumpers.

W. F. Wood of the Packard agency is interested in the project. He expects to place a number of Packard cars in operation hauling the ore. He has demonstrated the worth of the high-powered commercial cars and says he expects to show the officials of the concern that the Packard will do the work of many horses at a far smaller cost.

This big field offers a market for the motor car dealers which has practically been untouched. The trucks will haul tons and tons of rock and ore at a cost that will surprise the mine owners, declares Wood, who has been studying carefully the problems which confront the men of Arizona who are seeking a solution of the difficult traffic question, which face the men who wish to operate mines far from the railroad centers.

BIG SUM PAID FOR NOTED NAGS

Sweet Marie and Bingen Are in List of Equines.

Old Stallion Is Now Almost Twenty Years Old.

Stable Is to Be Transported to Old Keene Ranch.

By one of the most important transactions in trotting horses that has taken place in twenty years Daniel M. Look a member of the Union Club, has bought of William Bradley the renowned trotting stallion, Bingen (2:06¼,) sire of Uhlan (1:58¾,) and all the brood mares and colts at Ardmaer Farm, near Somerville, N. J.

Among the brood mares were Sweet Marie (2:02,) Consuela S. (2:07¾,) Blondell, the dam of Uhlan, and many other noted performers and producers. All told, forty-nine head changed hands. The price was not made public, but it was believed to be in the neighborhood of $75,000.

Not since John E. Madden, in 1895, purchased the entire stud of W. C. France, embracing Red Wilkes, Allie Weeks (2:15,) Sentinel Wilkes (2:20¾,) Martha Wilkes (2:08,) and other equine celebrities, has so large a deal in trotters been effected at private sale. A notable feature of the transaction was that Mr. Look bought the horses on the representations of Mr. Bradley and his agent before seeing the animals.

The deal was made in less than five minutes in the morning and the new owner spent the afternoon looking them over at Ardmaer Farm. He was more than pleased with the condition of the stallion, mares and colts and declared after inspecting them that they were even better than represented.

A special train will transport Bingen and the rest to Kentucky. Their future home will be at Castleton, the 1000-acre farm near Lexington, purchased by Mr. Look last fall from James R. Keene for $225,000.

Bingen, now at the beginning of his nineteenth year, is the sire of about one hundred trotters and pacers in the 2:30 class, and of more than a dozen in the select 2:10 list, while his sons Todd (2:14½,) Bingara and the rest are already the sires of 150 more. His wonderful success has been accomplished in the North, where no trotting sire since Rysdyk's Hambletonian has left such an impress on the breed.

WHAT CLARENCE DID NOT KNOW.

"Say," remarked Clarence Berry to his brother, Henry Berry, on Wednesday evening after the Angels had won two straight games,

"Say, Henry," he continued, "you say you have a percentage of 1000 now for winning two games. If you win another game without losing would you have a 2000 percentage?"

And then Henry says he had to explain to the family that according to the new rules adopted last winter a team could not get more than 1000 per cent, even if it won all the games it played. Which does not seem to encourage a team to play its best at all times.

Officials of the Motor Club at York, Pa., have taken up the matter of abolishing tolls on the bridge from Columbia to Wrightsville.

FINE BOWLING BY JAMES SMITH.

BROOKLYN EXPERT SHOWS REAL CLASS AT CHICAGO.

Wins Two Easy Games Against Good Shooters and Then on a Wager Makes a World's Record for Ten Games—Gets Four Perfect Scores and an Average of 265.

Probably the greatest bowling ever seen on any alley was that of Jimmy Smith during one of his trips to Chicago. Smith had two matches with local champions, with stakes of $1000 a side, six games out of eleven to win.

He captured both series, rolling just enough to win safely in each. During the second series the local crowd, which had been plunging on the Chicago champions, made some rather unsportsmanlike remarks to Smith. The Brooklynite apparently lost his temper, and replied shortly that there wasn't a bowler in Chicago worth rolling against.

"Why," said he, "I don't have to roll to trim you fellows. I'll bet $500 to $1500 right now that I can roll an average of 250 pins a game for ten straight games here on your alleys tonight."

The local sharps hustled around and raised the $1500 in a few minutes. Smith put up his money and a stakeholder was chosen.

Then he began. He started out with 280, dropped to 265, and then rolled 300. The second game after that was a 300 game, too. In all, he rolled ten games with an average of 265, and four games of the ten were 300 pin games.

NEW RULE ON TWELVE INNINGS.

As Henry Berry was sitting peacefully in his private box at the game Friday a fellow walked in and sat down beside the fat manager.

"Say, mister," inquired the fellow, "how many innings is the game going to be today?"

Berry glanced out of the corner of his eye at the intruder, and replied that they were to have twelve innings.

This is no kid, for after remaining a few minutes in the box the fellow thanked Berry and got up and walked out into the grand stand. Which leads one to think that if baseball is a great institution there should be some prep schools established for it to teach the young.

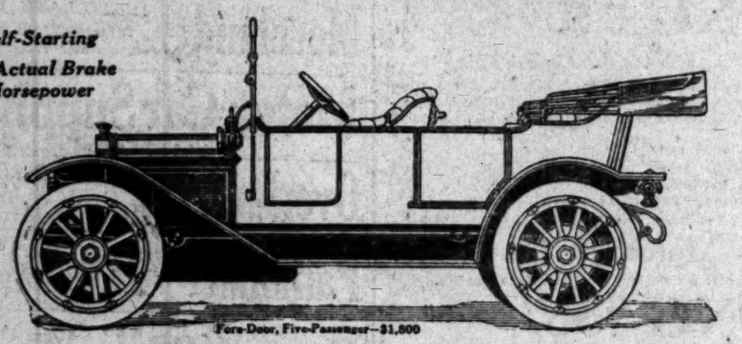
MOON

THE CHARACTER CAR

Self-Starting
46 Actual Brake Horsepower



Fore-Door, Five-Passenger—$1,800

Our Test for Noise

Noisy cars are no longer tolerated. There are so many good (practically) noiseless cars that the experienced buyer won't take the buzzy ones at any price. But the new Moon "40" (price $1,800) is the only car, to our knowledge, that must survive an actual factory noise-test before shipment.

All careful manufacturers test the motor—many test the completed car itself by actual road work. Every high-grade firm encloses the valves—that's primary.

We do all these things—but we also put each new Moon motor car through a special four-hour noise test in a special factory department devised for that purpose. Alignments must be true; bearings must work without friction; joints, nuts, screws must be tight and properly put together for a motor to be noiseless, irrespective of its type or price.

Our 4-hour factory test is the buyer's perpetual insurance against noisy going—in the new Moon "40."

The now famous T-head long-stroke motor—the 120-inch wheel base—the transmission and steering gear, universal joints, back axle and propeller shaft all guaranteed for 60 horsepower instead of the 40 horsepower you pay for, and the 46 horsepower we actually deliver. That's power insurance—and then some. The smart, stylish outlines of the new Moon "40"—the all-metal black and nickel finished body—the 10-inch upholstery—the unusual number of "little" conveniences—are special reasons why women favor "The Character Car."

Let us demonstrate this $1,800 car for you today. A phone will bring the car and a reliable demonstrator to your door.

THE JUMP-UPS

VERSES BY PAUL WEST
DRAWINGS BY WM. H. LOOMIS

1—So occupied was Genevieve—teas, meetings, calls all day—
That Jim was left for weeks alone to go his own sweet way, Until at last she thought, "Poor boy! I've laid him on the shelf,
To find how he's existing I must interest myself."

2.—She summoned Jimpson to her and inquired, "While I'm away, Just what does Mr. Jump-Up do, how does he spend his day?"
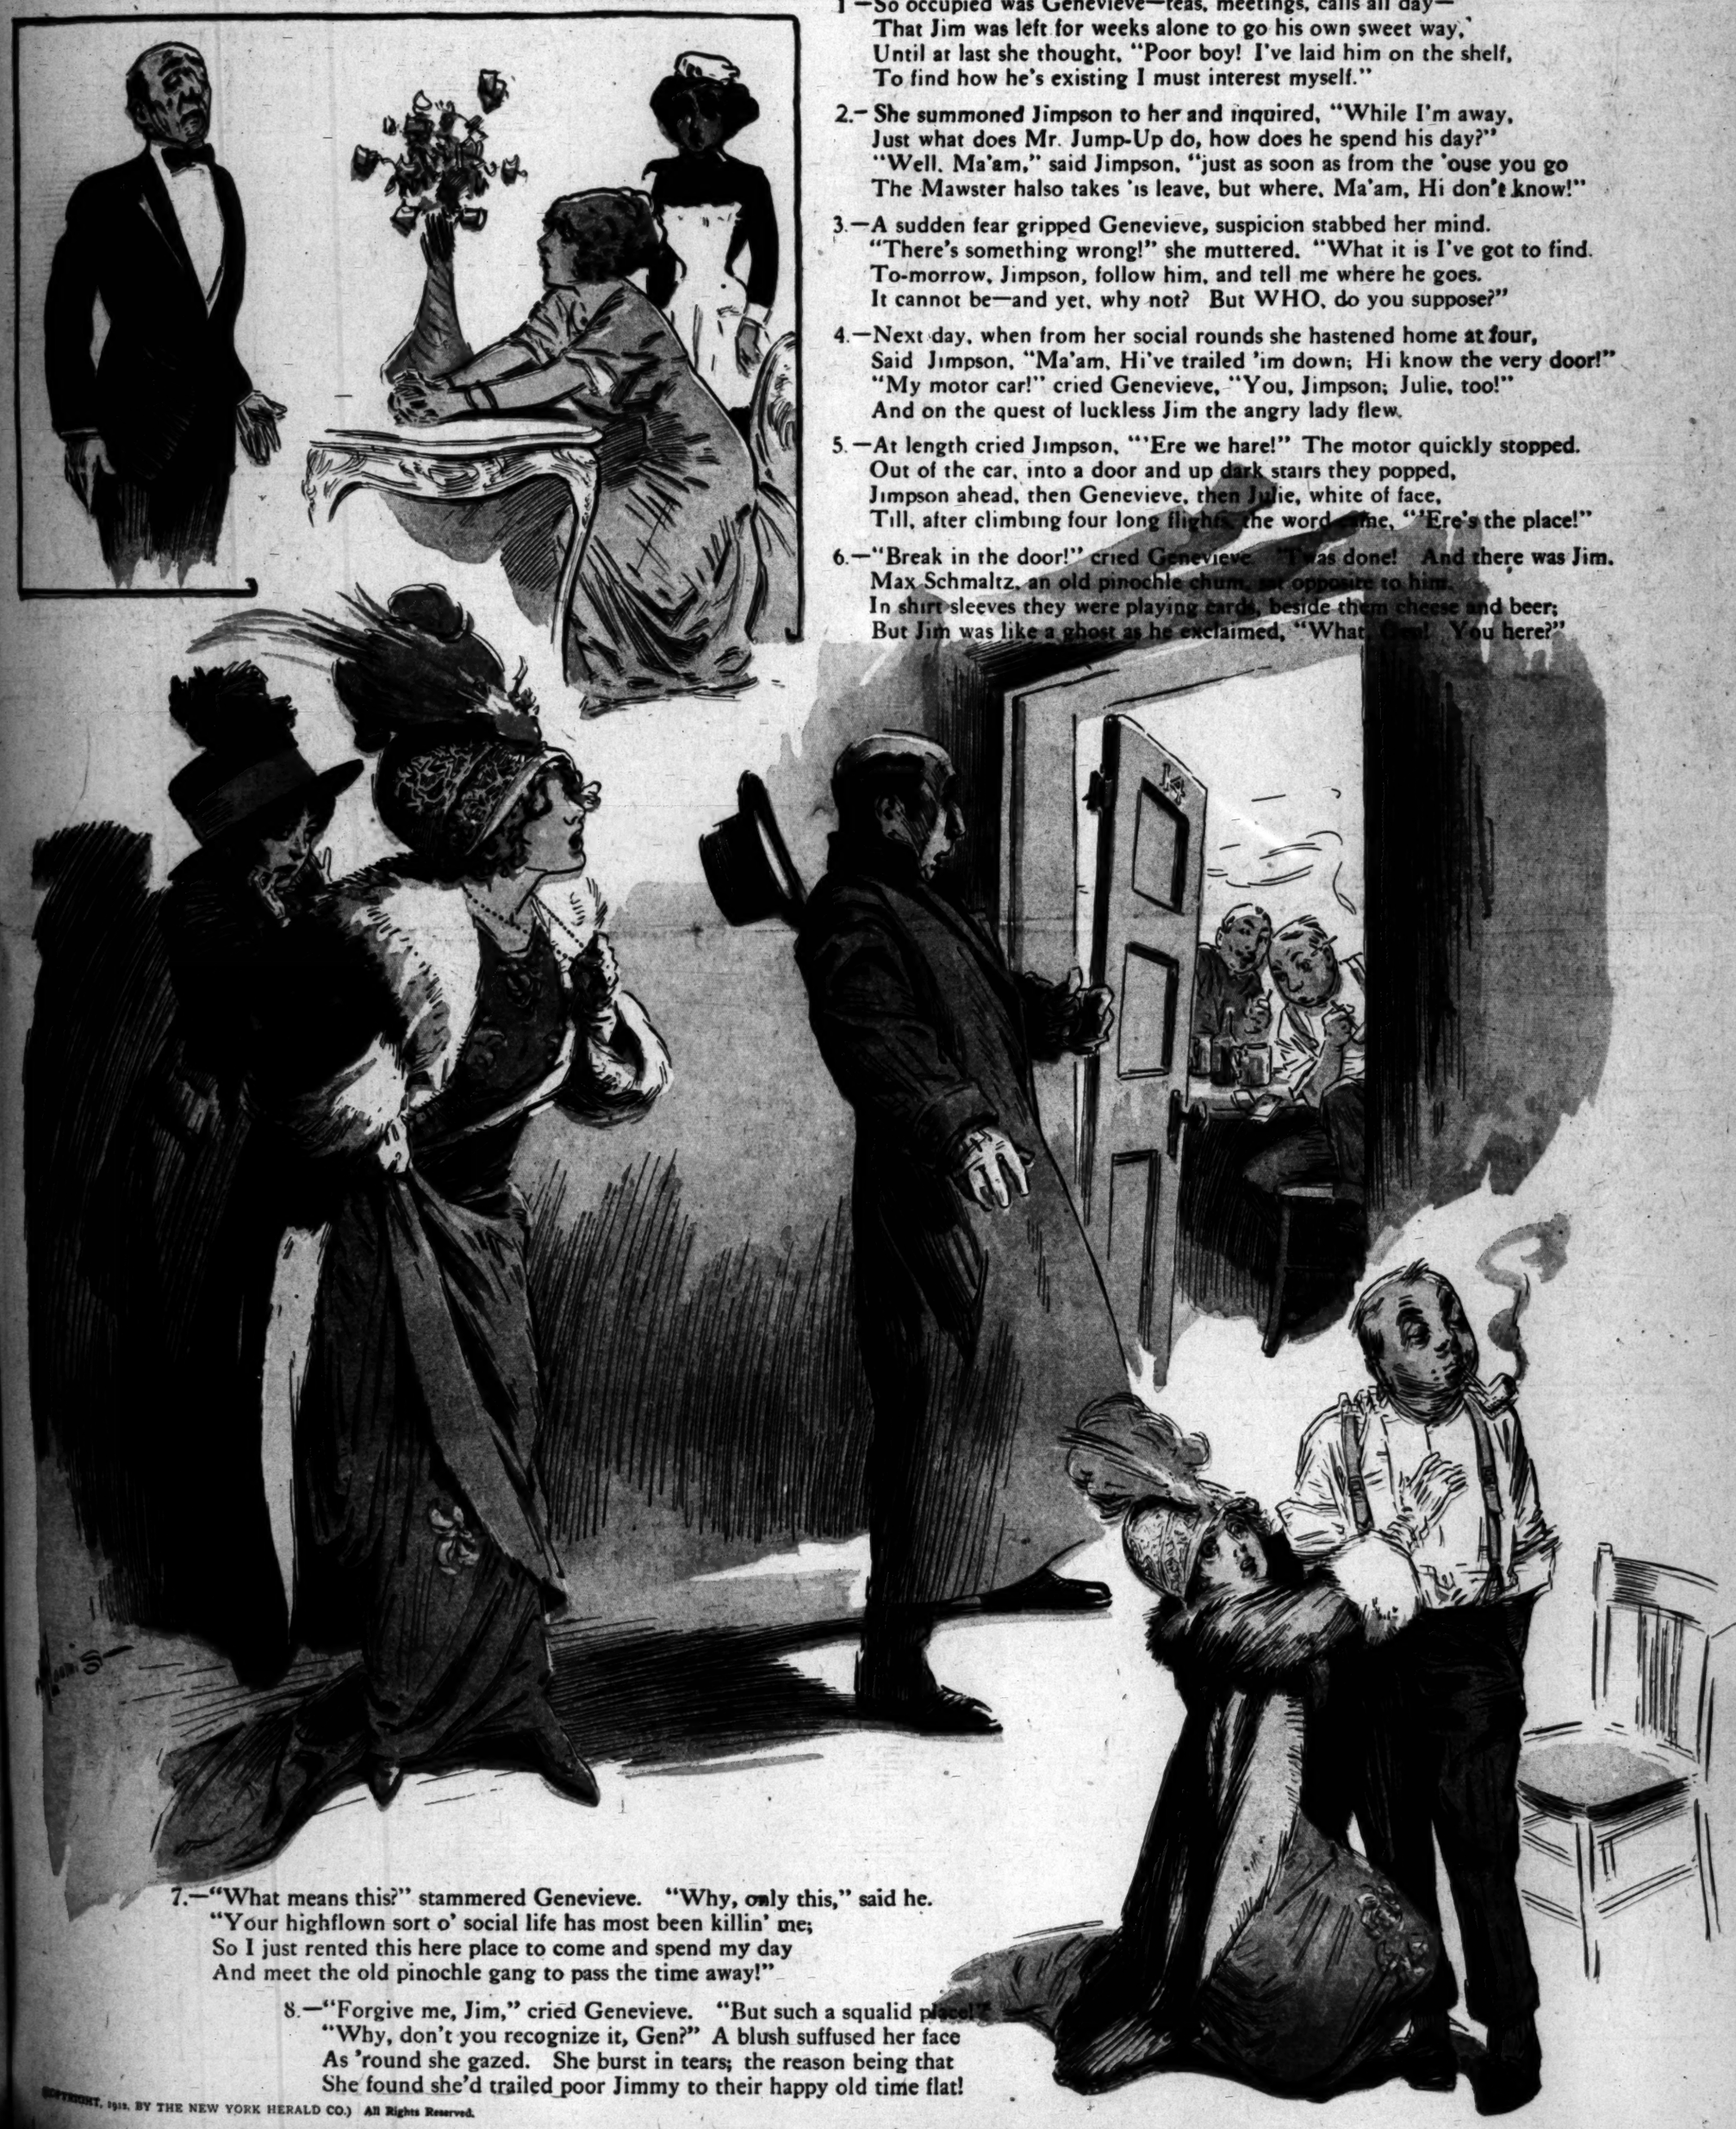
"Well, Ma'am," said Jimpson, "just as soon as from the 'ouse you go
The Mawster halso takes 'is leave, but where, Ma'am, Hi don't know!"

3.—A sudden fear gripped Genevieve, suspicion stabbed her mind.
"There's something wrong!" she muttered. "What it is I've got to find.
To-morrow, Jimpson, follow him, and tell me where he goes.
It cannot be—and yet, why not? But WHO, do you suppose?"

4.—Next day, when from her social rounds she hastened home at four,
Said Jimpson, "Ma'am, Hi've trailed 'im down; Hi know the very door!"
"My motor car!" cried Genevieve, "You, Jimpson; Julie, too!"
And on the quest of luckless Jim the angry lady flew.

5.—At length cried Jimpson, "'Ere we hare!" The motor quickly stopped.
Out of the car, into a door and up dark stairs they popped,
Jimpson ahead, then Genevieve, then Julie, white of face,
Till, after climbing four long flights, the word came, "'Ere's the place!"

6.—"Break in the door!" cried Genevieve. 'Twas done! And there was Jim.
Max Schmaltz, an old pinochle chum, sat opposite to him.
In shirt sleeves they were playing cards, beside them cheese and beer;
But Jim was like a ghost as he exclaimed, "What! Gen! You here?"



7.—"What means this?" stammered Genevieve. "Why, only this," said he.
"Your highflown sort o' social life has most been killin' me;
So I just rented this here place to come and spend my day
And meet the old pinochle gang to pass the time away!"

8.—"Forgive me, Jim," cried Genevieve. "But such a squalid place!"
"Why, don't you recognize it, Gen?" A blush suffused her face
As 'round she gazed. She burst in tears; the reason being that She found she'd trailed poor Jimmy to their happy old time flat!

Where Shall We Place The Plumes?

Coming From the Crown

THE millinery story has an interesting chapter this spring. Time, thought and energy have been devoted to the placing of plumes on straw and fabric shapes. The mark of the artist and the professional is discernible in the line, adjustment and general sweep of all plumes. The touch of the master hand makes the hat; the lack of knowledge concerning the new phases in construction and decoration will mar the most expensive shape.

Just a hint about plumes: The general line of any feather can be changed by sewing on the under surface flat milliner's wire. This enables the trimmer to bend the plume in any desired curve and insures the retention of the line.

In the supple model with the lace facing, the brim has been turned up from the face. At the right side, toward the back, are placed white plumes in a high, straight mass. These successfully carry out the white note of the lace trimming.

The long straight plume is placed at the front of the large model that shows a puffed edge of taffeta. There is undoubtedly a slender wire on the back of the feather, extending three-quarters of the length of the plume and giving the smart, stiff line so noticeable this season.

The shaded plume in pink and gray rejoices in two full ends. This type of feather is fastened in the center and the ends allowed to droop over the crown and brim. The plumes fall toward the back of the straw model.

Coming from the crown of the fitted model are green feathers in a soft mass. The oriental embroidery above the silver fringe has emerald green in its scheme, and the plumes, fastened securely on top, echo the brilliant note. For short tips or feathers this plan is excellent.

Uncurled ostrich plumes can be wired and placed as shown in the white chip model. The ends are caught at one side, and the long feathers are curved over the round crown and hang over the brim. The back of the hat is thus decorated.

Plumes in the wired brush are shown in the lace-trimmed bonnet. These are caught beneath a deep velvet collar that surrounds the bonnet crown. They stand straight out at the back—the bases very slender and the tips pointing in different directions.

On the small hat of gray is placed a gray-and-yellow plume, with a cavalier line of adjustment, ever attractive to the majority of pretty faces. It is attached to one side of the low crown and droops over the turned brim and falls below the hat toward the shoulder.

Lines are straight, drooping, dashing, severe or picturesque. There is a leniency that is shown by Dame Fashion which will result in becomingness for wearers. Plumes, always beautiful, can be made to be doubly important in contributing to the ensemble of a hat. Where are you going to place yours?

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

"VARIETY THE SPICE OF LIFE."

MONOTONY is violence done to natural laws.

If you question it look for two forest leaves that are facsimiles, a flower that is the precise image of another, two sentient creatures that are in every respect exactly alike.

When man, woman, or child rebels against the dead level of a life devoid of change, he or she obeys a law of his or her being. Stagnation is death. Circulation and activity are essential to real living. When the continued languor and steady decline of a patient refuse to yield to the most potent drugs in the pharmacopeia what is the invariable ultimatum of the shrewd doctor the civilized world over?

"He must have a change. Nothing else will reverse the downward current."

This is not a metaphysical essay. I am trying to dignify and to justify in the eyes of my sister housemother the proposition that a varied dietary is absolutely necessary to the comfort and health—hence to the usefulness and happiness—of her family.

I am told that I attach too much importance to what I conceive to be the bounden duty of the one who caters to the appetites of growing children and working men. I have been treated a dozen times or so to the story of the Highlander, who, when asked what he had for his breakfast, answered "Brose," the generic name for porridge of any sort.

* *

Story of the Highlander.

"And for dinner?"

"Brose, of coorse."

"What will you get for supper?"

Again the reply was "Brose," now accentuated by surprise.

"Don't you get tired of eating the same thing all the time?"

The puzzle raised his brows in slow disdain:

"An' why build a mon quarrel wi' his meat?"

I am confronted, moreover, with the fact that sheep, cows, and other beasts of the field are contented with cropping the same herbage year after year and thrive upon it. When I point to the greedy delight with which the horse released from harness and stall devours lawn grass, the tender shoots of trees, and every other bit of greenery within reach I am informed that, being a domestic animal, he has lost native instinct. In other words, he is living in a state of artificial civilization.

Which is just the point to which I would bring the disputant. We—who wear modern clothes, live in heated houses, sleep upon mattresses and sit at tables three times a day to take our meals—are living in a state of artificial civilization. The laws governing the Highlander and wild cattle cannot be applied to us. Let our habits be never so simple, we are the slaves of conventions from which it is folly to try to escape. In listening to the arguments of the advocates for the "simple life," I am always reminded of the quiet sarcasm of Thoreau's nearest neighbor, who had "observed that, much as Henry despised the 'bondage of custom' and loud as were his praises of the Arcadian simplicity of his hut habits, he somehow contrived never to be out of hearing of her dinner bell when he strayed from home." We read, furthermore, that while professing to be satisfied with a diet of berries and nuts, he now and then carried off a mince pie to his hut in the wood and lived upon it for twenty-four hours.

Variety of Small Moment?

I am persuaded better things of the most "advanced" of my readers than to suspect her of prejudices upon this head which would carry her further than an expression of indifference as to what she eats herself, and the belief that so long as wholesome food, well cooked, is set before her household it is a matter of small moment whether it is the same the week through or different fare each day.

Charlotte Bronte's biographers maintain that her father's whim of feeding his children almost exclusively upon potatoes had much to do with the ill developed physique of sisters and brother, and the untimely deaths of the six. This may or may not be another illustration of the truth I am trying to drive home to the conscience of sensible women who have fallen into the habit of bestowing less and less attention upon daily meals as the rushing age forces upon their eager minds topics of social, civic, and national interest.

One confessed to me frankly that she has "too many things of real consequence upon her mind to clutter nervous force and waste gray brain flakes in composing bills of fare. I see to it that my butcher and marketmen serve me with wholesome food of good quality. The cook does the rest. She has been with me fifteen years and is 'set in her ways,' the children say, but so long as they are right ways that doesn't matter. I have trained my boys and girls to eat what is set before them, asking no questions—not for conscience's sake, but because I won't be tormented by complaints. We have the same breakfast every morning—stewed potatoes, beefsteak, and toast, with coffee. It is good enough for anybody! Mary is too old to learn new tricks. Why should she learn them?"

* *

Children Candid in Disapproval.

I had heard of Mary's "ways" before and how the children who were babies when she entered upon her term of service make no secret of their dislike of her "plodding along in the same old rut." One outspoken boy told one of my flock that they had had apple sauce ten times in one week this winter and that "Mary would throw up her place if she were not allowed to have plain rice pudding with raisins in it twice a week."

"Why should she learn new tricks?" asked her nominal mistress. Hundreds of women, some more refined and some less intelligent than she, are putting a like question to themselves as they read this page.

Farmers' wives and the dwellers in suburban townships where the butcher calls twice a week and then—as one says truly—she must take what he happens to have on the cart—would seem to have most reason to grow indifferent as to the quality of the "table she keeps." That is the way we put it. Unless she have a taste for cookery approximating genius she must drop into Mary's rut.

"What's the use of buying cook books?" she pleads when a city relative urges upon her the claims of new methods. "It's easy talking for you who can telephone day and night for anything you want to cook. Here we have just the same all the winter through. Canned goods, potatoes, apples, salt pork, and on Wednesday and Saturday tough beef and mutton, with chickens at city prices."

"Milk, butter and eggs!" suggested the sister.

Cause for Lost Appetite.

"Yes, and just the same everlasting combinations of them! For myself, I own it makes mighty little difference what we have on the table. I have no appetite except when I run off to town for a day. Neither have any of the rest of us by the time spring comes. I told John the other day it was just as well I care so little about getting up new dishes. It's all one to him. Half the time I don't believe he knows what he's eating."

When the sister reported the interview to my sympathizing self, I longed to ask why he should trouble himself to inquire into the identity of what he had taken into his mouth every day for three months. I fancied how listlessness would pass at a bound before the sensation of tempting unfamiliar viands and dainty desserts.

I do not know who first said "Variety is the spice of life." He might have added as truthfully, "and the spur of appetite."

The most healthy and the least fastidious of us sicken into deadly disgust of repetitions of any article of food. I believe the man has never been found who was brave enough to test for himself the truth or falsehood of the assertion that it is impossible for one to eat thirty quails in thirty consecutive days. A Bible student wondered in my hearing if the suggestion might not have traditional connection with the surfeit of quails recorded in the history of the wanderings of the Hebrews in the wilderness.

* *

Sustained Relish a Miracle.

I answered that it is probably based upon the natural aversion of the human race to continued monotony of diet. We all comprehend that the Jews' sustained relish for manna through those forty years was as truly a miracle as the fall of the daily bread from heaven. Once or twice nature got the better of grace, and they complained aloud that they were sick to death "of this light bread."

Returning to our text: Study variety in arranging family meals.

A popular little book brought out in England nearly fifty years ago had as a title, "What to Do with the Cold Mutton." I may interject, in passing, that I know of no cooks who need to learn the lesson in all its phases more than the English. The monotony of hot joints and cold cuts from day-old joints is a depressing memory to this hour. The only advantage to be extracted from the dreary experience was that it was a fine preparation for the enchanting exchange to the fare one finds on the other side of the channel.

Cold mutton, cold beef, cold poultry—each and all are amenable to changes of flavor and appearance that reflect credit upon the artist in culinary transformations. A cold cut is not amiss in warm weather or when it is prefaced at luncheon or dinner by soup or accompanied by a soufflé. Cold turkey and really prime cuts of cold beef are preferred by some judges of good living to the hot bird or sirloin. They should be garnished and flanked by harmonious condiments—cranberry sauce for one, French mustard or pickles for the other.

* *

Corned Beef Best in Hash.

Corned beef is quite as good cold as when served as it came from the pot. It is better still made into hash, with an admixture of mashed potato whipped soft. If onion be added, let it be in the form of a dash of strained onion juice. If the hash be then molded into a "cannelon," washed with yolk of egg, and coated with fine crumbs, set in a cold place to stiffen, and lastly baked in a steady oven in a covered roaster for forty-five minutes—John, tired and hungry after a hard day abroad, will not carp at it as a "leftover."

Veal is hardly a second best luncheon dish when cold. It makes a delicious scallop. One man I know declares that he buys veal for a Sunday dinner because he makes sure in doing it of a scallop on Monday night. Cut it with a sharp knife into small cubes, season with pepper and celery salt, put a layer in the bottom of a buttered pudding dish; upon this a stratum of bread crumbs, very fine and dry; dot these with butter and pour in a few spoonfuls of gravy. Proceed in this order until the dish is full or you have used up all the materials. The top layer should be of crumbs wet with cream and dotted with butter. Bake, covered, half an hour; uncover and brown lightly. Pass stewed tomatoes with it.

You may make this dish more elegant by cutting into quarters French mushrooms and soaking them in the strata of veal after the manner of truffles.

Should there be a cupful or so of the scallop left, vary the week's menus by adding to the veal a few tablespoonfuls of chopped cold boiled ham. Mix thoroughly and mold into croquettes. Set in the ice to get firm, leaving them there until you are ready to cook them. Sift fine cracker dust over them after rolling them in raw egg. Fry in deep fat. Send around tomato sauce with them.

* *

Second Dish More Appetizing.

BOILED MUTTON.—A second appearance of this somewhat insipid dish may be more appetizing than the first. Cut the meat, which should be perfectly cold, into rather thick slices and lay these in the caper sauce which went around with them yesterday, or when the meat was hot. Heat slowly to a boil and send to table together in a hot platter. The sauce imparts richness to the meat.

Or—Lay the sliced meat in a mixture of lemon juice and salad oil—"a marinade," as the French call it—and leave them there for an hour. Then roll in fine crumbs. Set in ice for another hour and fry lightly. Drain off every drop of fat before serving. The meat should be salted and peppered on both sides before it is marinaded.

COLD BEEF STEAK forms the "motif" of a dish that is greeted with lively applause whenever it appears upon my table. It frequently happens that a large sirloin steak is pruned of the more tender portions which prove enough to satisfy the family appetite, leaving perhaps a pound and a half of juicy solid meat that is yet too tough to please those who know what a good steak is. I have heard house mothers object to buying steak because they "can do nothing but make hash or stew of what must be left."

Set every scrap aside until next day, or in winter the next day but one. Trim the meat away from the bone; crack that, and cover with cold water, and set over the fire to simmer into gravy. Do this some hours before you are to use the meat. When all the "goodness" has cooked out of the bone, drain off the broth; set the pan containing it in cold water to throw up the grease to the top. When it is nearly cold skim off the fat; put the liquid into a sauce pan and lay in the cubes of meat. Season with a teaspoonful of onion juice; cover closely and cook tender slowly. In another sauce pan cook six lambs' kidneys, halved. In still another stew in just enough water to cover a squab jointed as for fricassee.

* *

Beef First Over the Fire.

The beef should go over the fire an hour or more before the kidneys and squab are set on. When it is tender drain off the gravy and season well. Into a larger vessel lay the kidneys (drained), the squabs with the liquor in which they were stewed, half a can of French mushrooms (drained and cut into halves), then the beef. Mix all lightly with a fork, taking care not to break the pieces, and when you have thickened the gravy with browned flour rubbed up with a spoonful of butter, pour over all. Cook for one minute, and turn into a deep pudding dish.

Set in the oven for five minutes. It will be then bubbling hot. Have ready a batter rather thicker than for a cottage pudding and softer than a biscuit dough. Draw the pudding dish to the door of the oven and pour this batter upon the heaving surface of the meat and gravy. Press down the sides of the dough as you would the edges of pie; trim smoothly and set up in the oven, laying buttered paper over to keep it from browning too fast. The crust should be nearly two inches thick. Remove the paper in fifteen minutes. In half an hour the pudding should be done.

This is an American edition of the famous "beefsteak pudding" which is still served in the season, in the Old Cheshire Cheese, Wine court, Fleet street, London, as it has been cooked and served for 200 years and more. Dr. Johnson ate it like a hungry bear, and Goldsmith sat under Johnson's elbow while he devoured; Charles II. brought Nell Gwynne here on "Pudding day," and a host of other dead and gone celebrities frequented the old chop house. No American who visits London should miss seeing it.

If you would have this noble variation of family fare more nearly like the celebrated original, substitute small birds for the squab. In London they get larks for the pudding. Then buy a marrow bone and cook it. It should be well cracked so that the marrow may be easily extracted. Added to the meats, the marrow lends richness to the compound.

"Expensive?" Compute and see if you cannot set the royal pudding, which is truly "A dainty dish To set before a king," before John and the delighted boys for less than a dollar.

And there will be enough left for one day's luncheon.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the department I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them.

Marion Harland.

AN esteemed member of our chemical corps comes to the front in response to a request printed some weeks ago. Men of his nationality are usually authorities in the matter of "soft drinks."

"GINGER ALE AND GINGER BEER.—There is no essential difference, the application of the terms 'ale' and 'beer,' and the especial form and 'twang' of each depending upon local custom.

"Broadly, though, one may say that the clear, lemon flavored, air charged bottled beverages are called 'ale,' and the home brews, variously flavored and colored, are called 'beer.' You published several months ago, a good specimen of the latter. Here is another, without the honey:

"GINGER BEER.—Boil one and a quarter ounces of bruised ginger (Jamaica or African) in twenty ounces of water for half an hour. Add then a pound of brown or white sugar and seven pints more of hot water. If you choose you may put in from one to four ounces of honey. Strain, and stir in an ounce of lemon juice, or the same of cream of tartar, or half an ounce of tartaric acid.

"When the mixture is cold clarify with white of egg, then add half a dram of the finest essence of lemon—or the grated peelings of the lemons, the juice of which you have used. Set the liquid aside for three or four days to ferment. Some add a little trace of capsicum.

"SIMPLIFIED IMITATION OF GINGER BEER—Seven ounces of tincture of ginger, three and a half ounces of tincture of capsicum, one dram of the purest fresh oil of lemon, one to one and one-half ounces of citric acid, ten pounds of sugar, ten gallons of carbonated water. ADOLF V."

Pork Cake Recipe.

"In looking through the Helping Hand a while ago I saw that somebody had asked for a recipe for pork cake, and that the person who supplied it did not know whether salt or fresh pork should be used in it.

"I am taking the liberty of sending my own recipe which we consider good:

"PORK CAKE—One-half pound of salt pork, ground fine; two cups of boiling water poured over the pork; two cupfuls of molasses; two teaspoonsful of soda, dissolved in water; two cupfuls of sugar; four eggs; six cupfuls of flour; one pound of raisins; one pound of currants; two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon; two teaspoonfuls of cloves, and 10 cents worth of chopped nut meats. Bake for one hour. B. S."

May I ask if the oil of the nut meats, added to that of the pork, does not make the cake too rich for the ordinary stomach? The acid in the fruits and molasses may counteract the one, but I am doubtful about that half pound of nut meats. Would not the cake be as good without them?

* *

Recipe Worth Trying.

"AN INDIANA PIE—We are fond of it and are sure it will be popular with all who eat it when it is properly made.

"One cup of granulated sugar, two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, a piece of butter the size of a walnut, yolks of two eggs, one cup of cherry juice.

"Beat the ingredients well together, set over a slow fire in the inner vessel of a double boiler and boil until thick, stirring all the time. Pour into a piecrust that has been previously baked. Beat the whites of two eggs to a standing froth with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and spread over the pie when it is done. Set in a quick oven until lightly colored. Then you have a pie fit for a king.

"Any kind of fruit juice may be substituted for the cherry. Mrs. T. L. S."

We can easily credit the confident assurance of the author as to the popularity of a recipe that hangs so well together.

I predict that a fair percentage of readers will vary the treadmill round of familiar desserts by trying this.

* *

Some Danish Dishes.

"Having seen requests in the Helping Hand for Danish dishes, I offer a few. One of them is the srishe (or prune) tart, for which particular inquiry was made.

"SRISHE TARTS—Make a good pie crust, using butter for shortening, also a little baking powder. Boil and stone enough prunes to fill the crust, and sweeten to taste. Roll out half of the crust and spread thickly with the prunes. Roll out the rest of the crust; cover the prunes with it and cut into any shape that may be desired. Bake.

"DANISH SWEET SOUP — Put over the fire two quarts of water, one cupful of pearl barley, two sticks of cinnamon bark, and half a cupful of vinegar. Let all boil half an hour; then add one cupful of prunes and cook until they are well done. Sweeten to taste. Oatmeal may be substituted for the barley.

"SAGO SOUP—Two sticks of cinnamon bark, two quarts of water, one cupful of sago, one cup of prunes or raisins. Let all boil together until the sago is transparent. Then stir in a cupful of sugar.

"STUFFED CABBAGE—Cut off the root and dig out the center of a large, firm head of cabbage. Fill the cavity thus made with this mixture:

"FILLING—Two pounds of Hamburger steak, one teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper, one tablespoonful of flour, and a cupful of water. Mix all thoroughly and stuff in firmly. Cover the top with the cabbage dug out of the heart, bind in a clean cloth sewed in the shape of the cabbage, and boil two and a half hours. Put a stout plate in the bottom of the pot to prevent scorching. When it is done undo the cloth, put the cabbage upon a heated platter, and serve immediately.

"Mrs. C. C."

To whom a vote of thanks is awarded for supplying what has been sought for long and earnestly. Those who have eaten prune and sago soup in the land to which they are indigenous assure us that they are as palatable as they are nutritious. Having eaten a soup in Germany that had rose-hips floating on the surface and the next day a chocolate soup—and relished both—I incline to think that certain dishes suffer in the transplantation to other climes. Environment has much to do with the right appreciation of foods.

Two Cleaning Queries.

"Please send directions for dry cleaning a blue velvet hat.

"(2) Also tell me what will clean the leather collar and cuffs of a long coat.

"CARRIE M. S."

Imprimis: We do not send recipes by mail. Were we to begin it we should speedily be swamped by work which would leave us no time for anything else.

As to dry cleaning a velvet hat—I doubt if I would dare to attempt it. Yet I have cleaned velvet with boracic talcum to which had been added a teaspoonful of fine dry salt to the cupful. I rubbed the salted talcum gently but faithfully into the velvet with a clean complexion brush—first against the nap, then with it. Blowing this off when it had reached every thread, I sifted a fresh supply all over the surface and laid the velvet in a box, leaving it there two days before blowing and brushing out the powder. If you think you can clean the hat in this way, try it.

(2) A correspondent says: "Wipe off soiled leather with sour milk." Then rub with chamois skin. Try this, if you will. Or wipe with a cloth and go over it with a bit of flannel wrung out as hard in kerosene. Dry in the air, but not in the sunshine. Lastly, wring out a third bit of flannel in neat's foot oil and rub the leather well with this. Cover to exclude dust and leave it for three hours before polishing with chamois skin.

To Preserve Birds' Wings.

"A hint to the wearers of birds' wings. Some think it a sin and barbarous. I don't! But let that pass!

"To prolong the usefulness of a wing, keep a lookout for the loose feathers and fasten them in neatly with liquid glue. If deftly done, it acts like a charm.

"G. R."

While women will wear feathers, it is merciful to let the tender hearted know that a large proportion of those which ornament hats are manufactured from the plumage of ducks, chickens, and game killed for the table, and not ruthlessly slaughtered to supply the milliners with trade.

I said as much once to a woman who attacked another savagely for sporting a wing. I was positive was cut from a gold duck. Whereupon she retorted that she "could not see the difference between killing an ostrich to minister to a woman's vanity and killing a chicken to feed her husband's brutish appetite!"

I was too much amused to remind her that ostriches are not killed for their feathers any more than geese are for the wholesale to fill our pillows.

I pass on to more reasonable themes the consoling thought that the ostrich plumes are picked, year after year, from the bird without injuring him.

Preserving Grapefruit.

"I have noticed two or three inquiries for preserving grape fruit. The recipe I enclosed may be of service to some sister.

"GRAPE FRUIT AND ORANGE MARMALADE—Juice and peel of two grape fruit; the juice of twelve oranges and the peel of six.

"Squeeze out all the juice and set aside in a cool place. Cut the peel into narrow strips, soak all night in cold water. Next day cook the peels tender, changing the water several times. Put through a food chopper with a coarse cutter on; add the pulp and measure all ingredients. Allow a pint of sugar to a pint of pulp and peel. Cook slowly until it is of the right consistency.

"The object of soaking the peel is to get rid of the bitter oil. It is not necessary to soak it in salt water.

"CANDIED GRAPE FRUIT—The peel of one grape fruit makes an even dozen when candied. Cut the peel into strips of any form size and soak it in cold water over night. Cook tender, changing the water three times. Let it get perfectly cold when done. Squeeze the water out of the peel. Put over the fire—a layer of peel, one of sugar alternately, and bring slowly to the boil. Cook gently, stirring carefully and often, until the syrup is entirely absorbed. Drain, and when cold dip in the sugar [granulated]. Spread in the sun upon broad platters.

"A FLORIDA HOUSEWIFE."

Who speaks by the card in dealing with oranges—perhaps with grape fruit.

She omitted to tell us that the candied peel should be packed lightly, each layer sprinkled with sugar, and the jars be kept in a cool dry place.

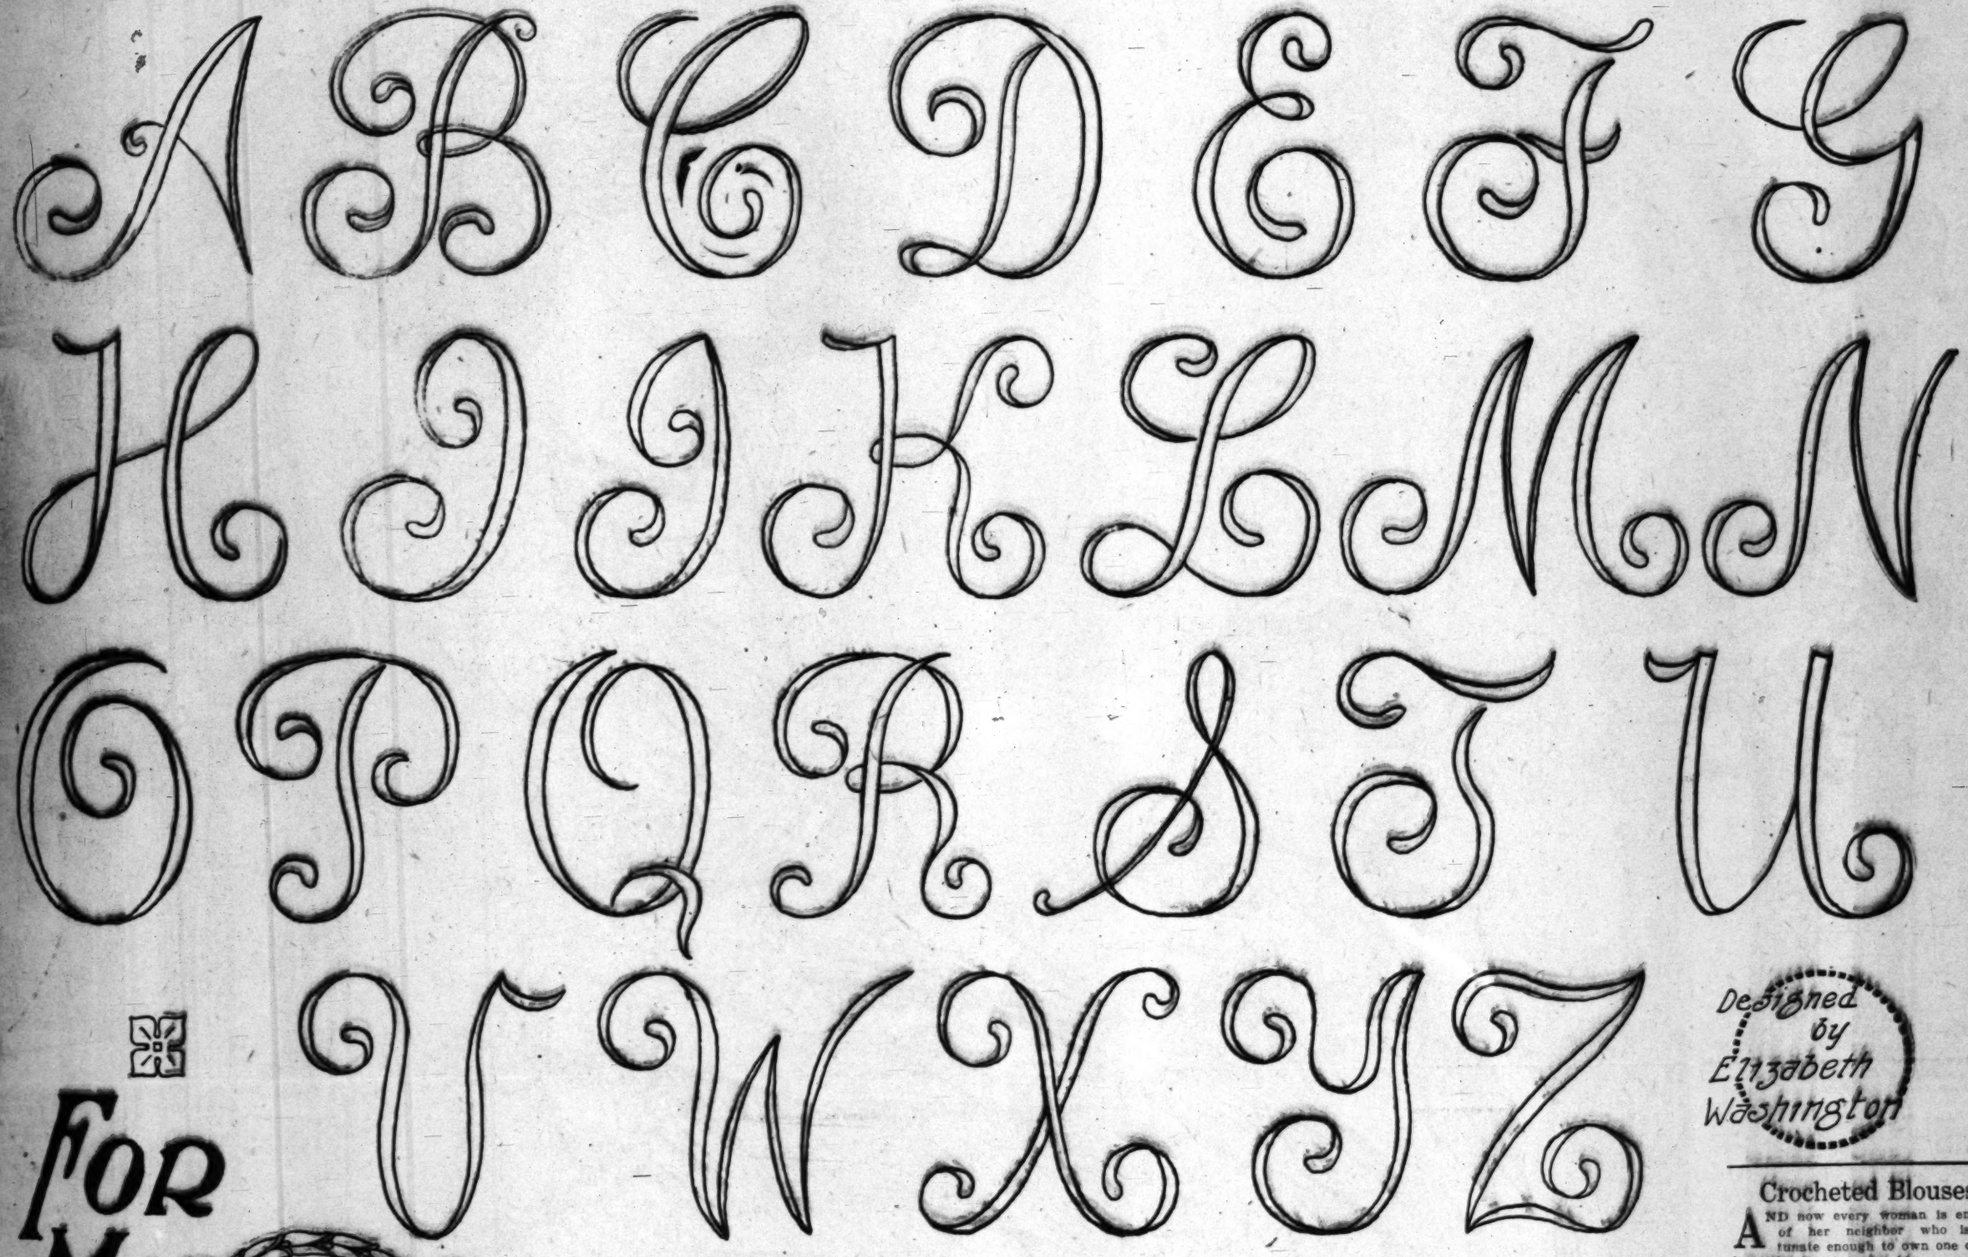
For the INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

By ADELAIDE BYRD



FOR MARKING LINEN

FOR the many embroiderers who have asked for initials, I am giving an alphabet today that has many uses.

It is complete and the two-inch letters are convenient in size. They are large enough to be used on tablecloths, lunch cloths and even breakfast cloths. Laundry bags, large towels and separate bags can be given your own initial, and if you are clever at all you can combine the initials of your first, middle and last name by overlapping the forms or by running them in a straight or slanting line across the material.

The letters can be traced according to directions found on another part of the page.

Fill with darning cotton and work in solid stitches with soft mercerized cotton. A little extra care in making perfect stitches will repay you in the end.

If you care to vary the effect, especially in a monogram treatment, outline the letters and fill in with back stitches, which are treated as seed stitches. Another method is the filling in with fine French knots.

Initials are as fine in white on white. They are effective if there be any other opportunity to introduce color on the article. White and colored thread can be combined to give a mottled effect. If they are surrounded by a wreath of leaves or flowers, they are doubled in lavish effect.

Besides the alphabet, I am offering a fancy design for an odd dish. It may be used also for a pincushion if you will cut linen and work in eyelets through which the ribbon can be run. A dish piece with a similar edge will serve for the under surface of the pincushion.

Work the spiral in French knots. Use outline stitches for the stems and the padding the leaves work in solid stitch. The whole design is very simple and the descriptive story is therefore very plain.

Work the scallops and buttonhole the edge.

The loop of the design is swung around in the opening and the design is easily reversed.

I shall get a task for your busy fingers that simply cannot escape, for the centerpiece and initials any housewife should be satisfied.

The Newest Jabots

PLAIN white linen or lace jabots have become rather monotonous, since they have been in popular favor for so many seasons past; but we cannot do without some lacy adjunct to take their places.

A new and decidedly pretty substitute for the lingerie jabot is one made entirely of finely pleated net.

Make two sections, one above the other and exactly the same size, the under portion being of black net and the upper of white net. These should be seven inches long and fourteen inches wide. The width is laid in fine vertical pleats and with a warm iron pressed into place.

Directly down the center front sew a piece of black velvet ribbon 1½ inches wide. Point it at the lower end and at intervals attach to this three handsome paste buttons, mock gems or small rings of coral with a pendant drop on each.

The combination of black-and-white is very fashionable; but if you desire to make this type of jabot to match any particular costume you can make the under portion of any color or shade you wish. China blue or old rose is especially attractive under white. A flat bow of velvet or pleated net may be added to the top of the jabot. In the center of this place a fancy button.

TO MAKE SUMMER CURTAINS

THE woman who has original ideas and is clever with the needle can make herself summer curtains which will be the envy of all her friends—curtains which will cost less than very ordinary ones bought at the shops ready.

For the summer home, the little bungalow nestled among the hills or, perhaps, down by the sea, short curtains are more advantageous than long ones, because they launder easily and can be done up at home.

The long curtains which in past years were universal with all classes have, fortunately, lost some of their popularity. At best they were inartistic, rather spoiling the looks of a room, while the short curtains are not only practical, but, if chosen carefully, add materially to the beauty of an apartment.

Curtains should be pleasing to the artistic sense, attractive to the home lover and inexpensive. When choosing curtains always consider the room which they are to grace. Do not hang dead-white curtains in a cold north room.

An inexpensive quality of dotted swiss makes very dainty curtains for the bedrooms of your summer cottage. These can be made at home, the inner edge and bottom finished either with a frill of the plain swiss or a straight edge of coarse linen lace. The latter is newer and costs very little more than the frill.

When making the curtains, be sure you cut them long enough to not only cover the entire window, but also allow an inch or two for shrinkage. It is most distressing for the good housekeeper to find after her pretty curtains have been washed that they do not come to the bottom of the window, but look rather as if the windows had outgrown their dresses.

A heavy quality of ecru net suits well the living room and dining room. Linen torchon lace is an admirable trimming for these. It can be applied to the edge; insertion may be run an inch or two inside the edge, or you can set in several lace motifs, cutting out the net underneath and sewing them in place by hand.

Scrim, in all its various degrees of transparency, can well be adapted to curtains for the summer home.

These are made usually with a narrow lace edge, the scrim being too stiff to make a graceful ruffle on the side.

Fancy nets are used, but they are more or less expensive and do not wear as well as plain net.

Curtains of cretonne, chintz and allied materials are immensely successful in sunny rooms. These are sometimes used as inside curtains, with a sash curtain of thinner material next the window.

Casement cloth is another favorite and looks very well if embroidered or appliqued with bright-colored flowers or conventional figures.

Perhaps the most inexpensive of all curtains, which, however, wear well and always look fresh, are those made of unbleached cheesecloth. When bought by the piece (12 yards), it costs but a few cents a yard, and always cuts to better advantage.

The soft ecru color of the cheesecloth seems to demand a border done in stencil, and in this may be introduced any color or colors desired. Of course, you must be careful to have the color in the border harmonize with the furnishings of the room in which they are to hang. An entire house may be curtained with cheesecloth when the color scheme in the borders differ to suit each particular room. Finish the edges with wide hems, then carefully apply the stencil design. It is easy and fascinating work, costing very little.

If you wish, use the same design on all the curtains, only changing the color of dye used in the stencil for different rooms. These curtains wash beautifully; when treated with a very thin starch and ironed when they are quite wet they will keep their freshness for a long time.

If, then, you have to fit a summer home with curtains, try this plan of cheesecloth and rejoice at little money well spent.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design down on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The pattern will be transferred without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

Crocheted Blouses

AND now every woman is envious of her neighbor who is fortunate enough to own one of the beautiful Irish crochet blouses.

The shops show these in many lovely designs, but, unfortunately, they are far beyond the reach of the woman with a limited purse. This need not prevent her from having one of these fascinating bodices, however, for there is no difficulty in making one yourself if you can use a crochet needle. Irish crochet is quite easy to make. One can receive full instructions from the many books and pamphlets on the subject, and the making of a blouse successfully depends entirely on the pattern used. The best way to do is to take an old blouse that fits exactly, rip it up and from that cut a pattern out of strong muslin or linen. Use colored basting cotton to trace the seams, lay the pattern flat on a table and from that let your judgment dictate the size and shape to make the crocheted work.

Nearly any pattern of crochet may be adapted to the blouse if it be a light, lacy design. Heavy crochet is not at all suitable; do not attempt it.

For a beginning it is best to do the work in strips like insertion and join them after you have enough to form the entire blouse. The strips should be about 1½ inches wide when finished. Make the collar first, then the center strip, and continue until you have sufficient strips of the proper length to cover the pattern. Now join them together with a lacy stitch and you have a complete blouse of lace that, if bought, would cost many, many times the price of the materials consumed in making.

Line the blouse with chiffon or a fine quality of net; some women prefer a thin quality of messaline or colored china silk.

If you wish to make the blouse all in one without using strips of crochet, select any good magyar pattern and, laying that flat on a table, crochet a covering for it, beginning at the neckband and working around and around, increasing or diminishing for fullness and sleeves as the pattern requires. Join the seams with a loose chain stitch and make cuffs and collar in a slightly different design.

Black chiffon cloth or net makes the most effective lining for these blouses of lace. Besides giving a decidedly French touch, it brings out the design in a remarkably beautiful manner. With a touch of some vivid color and a bow or chou of black maline at the throat, such a blouse is quite elegant enough to wear with a tailored suit to any afternoon or informal evening occasion.

Let me advise every woman who enjoys the charm of the crochet needle to make herself one of these blouses for the coming season, for they will be even more fashionable than in seasons past.

Embroidered Scallop

WHEN embroidering scallops on the edge of doilies, centerpieces or any linen, silk or cotton material, cut out the scallops one-eighth of an inch from the stamped line, turning back the material on the right side of the stamped line and sew it in place with very small stitches.

Over this turned-in edge fill in the scallops with darning cotton in the usual way, then embroider or buttonhole the scallops with silk or mercerized cotton.

By turning in the edge this way you avoid all possibility of the material fraying after the scallops are cut out. The turned-in edge also helps as filler.

Experts in the art of embroidery declare this to be the very best method of working a scalloped or uneven edge.

Try it, and see for yourself.

AN EASTER SONG

MY DEAREST MADGE:

On this glorious day my heart is still thrilling with peace and happiness that spring with its rebirth in nature always brings to mortals. I can see you, dear, sitting with your child at your knee, an appropriate addition to the song of the day. How lovely is the dress that I know you will wear. Verily, there are many kinds of symphonies! Your costume is art that redounds to the credit of your clever fingers and to your good taste. I cannot but compare you with the blossoms which have put on their best raiment in honor of the happy morn. How powerful and restful is beauty. This is just an Easter greeting, dear one, from one who is with you in spirit.

With love,

ELEANOR.
